Supporters of a millage increase for the Wayne-Westland schools are predicting that a renewed campaign will succeed in the June 10 election, despite three failed tax-like attempts in 16 months in the embattled district.__

Millage proponents are hoping that recent developments - such as a pro-millage rally staged by hundreds of John Glenn students and Mayor Robert Thomas' appointment of a panel to study school needs will help sway voters.

Though Thomas has cautioned panel members to avoid making the committee meetings a battleground for the millage issue, some members nonetheless hope the panel's work will boost support for a 7.75-mill tax increase proposal.

"I'm hoping that the mayor's blueribbon committee will have an affect on that millage," said panel member Margaret Harlow, who also serves as co-chair of the pro-millage Save Our Schools citizens group.

"I'm hoping that we can get across the importance of the millage - the timely importance of passing it before September," she said. If the millage fails to pass before then, she said, "the kids are going to lose an entire (fall) semester of programs that will be cut."

School officials have ordered deep budget cuts, such as eliminating busing, sports and other extra-curricular activities, unless voters pass the millage that would be levied over a two-year period and pump an additional $23 million into district coffers.

A second Canton Township neighborhood has decided to try to secede from the Wayne-Westland school district, despite county school officials' decision last week to deny a similar request.

Residents of River Park subdivision, near Palmer and Sheldon, have asked county school officials to let them switch to the Plymouth Canton district.

The request will be heard May 30 by the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency Board of Education, which last week rejected a similar attempt by residents of Canton's Greenbrook Village subdivision.

Wayne-Westland Superintendent Dennis O'Neill vowed that the district will oppose the latest secession attempt, just as it fought the move by Greenbrook residents to switch districts.

O'Neill appeared optimistic that last week's decision has set a precedent for other neighborhoods trying to pull out of the beleaguered Wayne-Westland district.

Karol Williams, a River Park resident, said the latest secession attempt emerged for reasons similar to those given by the Greenbrook neighborhood. Both groups live in Canton, receive the township's police and fire services, and want their children to attend school in their hometown community.

HOWEVER, O'NEILL has accused the residents of trying to bail out of the Wayne-Westland district amid a severe financial crunch

ON THE TOPIC of money, the Westland City Council will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m., Monday, May 20, on the proposed city millage rate for the upcoming fiscal year.

The proposed millage rate is $7.40 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, nearly 1 mill more than the current year's rate of $6.52.

State law requires local governmental units to hold a public hearing if they expect to. receive more property tax revenues through an increase in the state equalized valuation of the community

The council is also expected to adopt an operating budget for the new fiscal year May 20. The fiscal year is for the 12 months starting July 1.

A 37-year-old motorcyclist, struck broadside by a carload of school prom-bound teenagers, died Wednesday after his condition worsened following the accident at Warren Road and Merriman in Westland.

Timothy Jay Donlon, a Plymouth resident who had been staying with friends in Livonia since his house recently burned, died after he suffered two heart attacks at the University of Michigan Hospital, said Westland police officer Steven Frazer.

Donlon, whose injuries had included a nearly severed right leg, appeared to be recovering until he died about 2:45 p.m. Wednesday five days after his motorcycle was. struck by a car driven by a 17-yearold South Lyon male on his way to a Livonia prom with three friends.

Toxic fumes released in fire; workers treated By Dartell Clem staff writer

A Westland industrial fire released toxic fumes, including cyanide, that sent 13 people Tuesday to Annapolis Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation and other related complaints.

The blaze at Van Dresser Corp., 1515 S. Newburgh, crupted in an indoor dumpster shortly before 5 p.m.

Eleven workers were treated and released from Annapolis, and two others remained overnight for further observation.

An estimated 125 people were in the auto-parts supply plant when the blaze crupted, Lane sald.

Resident involved in fatal I-275 crash

A Canton Township woman and a Shepherd, Mich., man were killed Friday morning in a rush-hour crash on I-275 in Livonia.

Police said Friday they plan to issue warrants charging a 22-year-old Westland man with two counts of manslaughter.

THE CHAIN-REACTION collision at 7 a.m. backed up traffic on three of four southbound lanes of the freeway near Six Mile for more than two hours.

Killed in the head-on collision were Mrija Kalaj, 47, of Canton and Karl Jay Beebe, 34, of Shepherd.

Both victims were pronounced lead at the scene from multiple injuries, said Sgt. Larry Richardson of the Michigan State Police. Both

Trial set in fatal accident Case stems from deaths of 2 teens

By Darrell Clom etall writer-

A Detroit Recorder's Court judge Friday denied an attorney's motion that could have resulted in a dismissal of charges against Alita Bell, the Romulus woman accused of killing two teenagers in a headon collision in Westland.

Judge Thomas Jackson denied attorney David Blake's motion to quash information about Bell's - a move that could have. prompted Jackson to dismiss a charge against Bell or reduce it.

Blake said Friday he had hoped his motion would at least prompt Jackson to reduce the charge. against Bell from vehicular manslaughter, punishable by up to 15 years in prison, to negligent homicide, which carries a two-year term:

After denying the motion, Jackson set a July 17 trial date for Bell, a 21-year-old, pregnant Romulus woman accused of driving the car that slammed into a vehicle carrying Amy Lynn Alexander, 18, of Westland, and Frances Carol has not been proven that Bell was Rochl, 19, of Waterford.---

Both teenagers died in the 2:20 a.m. Aug. 8 collision on Hines, Drive, near Merriman.

Bell, who remains free on a +$5,000 personal bond, has pleaded not guilty to the negligent homicide charge.

PROSECUTORS ALLEGED in District Court that Bell had drunk beer and had been driving at 79 mph in the 40-mph zone when she. crossed the center, line, and slammed into the other car.

However, Blake has contended it driving the 1983 Pontlac Firebirdthat belonged to 23-year-old Stephen Delossantos of Livonia, whom prosecutors have said was a passenger when the accident occurred. Blake has indicated that Delossantos possibly drove the car, though witnesses who testified during an earlier hearing in West-Tand's 18th District Court said they saw Bell take the car, keys from Delossantos and get behind the wheel.

Witnesses also testified that Bell had drunk beer before she drove the car.

On Friday, Blake said koy issues in the trial will focus on whether Bell actually drank beer and whether she drove the car.

The case has drawn attention from Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, which has sent a representative to accompany the victims' family at court proceedings. The mothers of both teens also have repeatedly carried photographs of their daughters into the courtroom.

the building by the time firefighters arrived on the scene, Lane said in a prepared statement.

Firefighters brought the fire under control in about 20 minutes, he said.

Fire officials continued to investigate the cause of the fire on Friday. though Lane said it appears the fire was accidental. The fire-was contained to the indoor dumpster area in a manufacturing section of the building.

There was no structural damage to the building at all," Lane said. In bringing the blaze under control quickly, firefighters averted what could have been a major fire. "It's a good-sized plant," Lane said.

The building, a former General Motors Corp: parts warehouse before it was bought by Van Dresser several years ago, houses several industries, including the Van Dresser Corp. and a movie video warehouse. Lane said.

Preliminary medical reports indicated that Donlon's condition deteriorated after blood clots caused two heart attacks, Frazer said.

Donlon, headed westbound on Warren, had been making a left turn onto southbound Merriman about 6:11 p.m. April 26 when his motorcycle was slammed by the 1989 Pontiac traveling eastbound Warren, Frazer said.

DONLON, WHO appeared alert and conscious immediately following the collision, had asked police to tell the teenagers to go to their prom and enjoy it, Frazer said. "He was just a really nice guy."

Police continued to investigate the accident late last week, and Frazer said charges may be filed against the teenager this week. Eyewitnesses had indicated the teen's vehicle may have ignored a traffic light, he said.

The teenagers, who had been wearing seatbelts, were not injured during the accident.

Immediately following the crash, Donlon was taken to Garden City Hospital and then flown by a rescue helicopter to the U-M Hospital in Ann Arbor, Frazer said. Donlon's death marked the fourth traffic fatality - and the first on a motorcycle - in Westland in 1991.

Meanwhile, Westland police are urging all drivers to remain especially alert to motorcyclists during the warmer seasons, when more cyclists are on the roads.

Sgt. Peter Brokas also warned motorcyclists to avoid riding between two lanes of traffic and to be sure to use traffic signals to alert other motorists to their turns.

Brokas also urged motorcyclists to make sure all oncoming traffic has stopped before they attempt to make turns.

In Donlon's case, he apparently could have done little to prevent the accident, Frazer said. "But if he had been in a car, he would still be alive today."

were wearing seat belts, Richardson said.

The accident began on the freeway's northbound lanes when the Westland man, driving a Toyota Celica, clipped the left rear of Kalaj's Ford Tempo while changing lanes, Richardson said.

"He was in a hurry to get where he was going and he was dodging back and forth through traffic," said Richardson.

Richardson, using the driver's statement, estimated the Celica was traveling 60-65 miles per hour.

KALAJ LOST control of her car and crossed the 52-foot-wide grass median, police sald.

Her car struck the rear of a Pontle Lewians before hitting the For pickup truck driven by Beebe, police said.

"It's unusual for someone to cross over like that on that freeway, but hot unique when you consider the volume of traffic every day," Richardson said.

Richardson said there was a "moderate" traffic flow at the time of the accident and noted that the LeMans had crossed over two lanes_ in trying to avoid Kalaj's out-of-control car.

Neither the driver of the LeMans nor the Westland man were seriously injured, police said.

Romney challenges SC grads to get involved

Kenneth Wutka of Livonia figured that tying a balloon to the back of his cap and gown would make him more visible to friends and family. Even if it didn't work, it made him unique among the 300 graduates at Saturday's commencement.

It was, a time for smiles and speeches, hugs and videotape at Schoolcraft College commencement activities Saturday.

Nearly 300, of this year's 840 Schoolcraft graduates crowded into the college gymnasium to receive congratulations from Schoolcraft President Richard McDowell as well as a challenge from former Michigan Gov. George Romney.

"Each of you is special," said McDowell, welcoming students and their families to the gym.

Commencement speaker Romney challenged students to become more involved in their community.

"I've concluded we're all going to have to pitch in if America's going to continue to be great," said Romney, sounding themes similar to those expressed by President George Bush earlier that day in a commencement address at the University of Michigan,

The Bloomfield Hills resident, Michigan governor from 1963-69, has long been involved in volunteer causes and is a founding director of the president's volunteerism-oriented Points of Light Foundation.

ROMNEY CHALLENGED students to no longer think merely of Schoolcraft or its surrounding communities, but to think of the Detroit area as a whole.

"You can't solve the problems of this area under the present fragmentation (of competing suburban and urban communities) any more than the U.S. could survive under the Articles of Confederation," Romney said.,

Earlier, a special patriotic musical tribute was offered by the college wind ensemble on behalf of those Schoolcraft students who volunteered for military duty in the Persian Gulf.

Honorary degrees were awarded to Betty Jean Awrey, vice president of Awrey Bakeries, Livonia; former county Commissioner Mary Dumas of Livonia; Charlotte Adams of Westland, a member of the college's Women's Resource Center Advisory Board; and Fred Kerr of Northville, a member of Schoolcraft's lifelong learning program since 1978.

District Judge Thomas Smith (back to cam- about court proceedings. It was all part of the era) holds court in the John Glenn High court's annual Law Day program. School auditorium to let students learn more

Learning about law

Students get firsthand look at court

By Darrell Clem staff writer

John Glenn High School students learned Wednesday that a bottle of beer consumed in Hines Park could cost them $50.

The lesson had nothing to do with the brand of beer or rising liquor taxes. It had everything to do with ignoring the law.

Students attending the school-based "Law Day," sponsored by Westland's 18th District Court, watched grams included mock trials. Wednesday as Judge Thomas Smith fined a 20-year-old male $50 for drinking alcohol in Hines Park.

Smith later warned that the offender, had he been younger, would have been forced to attend an alcoholawareness program.

Smith and District Judge Gail McKnight brought their caseloads to John Glenn's auditorium for the annual "Law Day" program aimed at giving students a firsthand look at the judicial system:

before this," Smith said.

Smith heard the morning cases, and McKnight sat on the bench in the afternoon as hundreds of John Glenn "By pringing the court to the students," Smith said, students observed justice in motion.

"I THINK it was good for the students to see how the court actually works," said junior Ryan Long, 16. "A lot of people don't visit the court unless they are charged with something."

Students observed cases ranging from alcohol offenses to shoplifting to driver's license suspensions.

"There were some benefits" to bringing the court to the school, Long said.

The court has been sponsoring "Law Day" since the late '60s, Smith said, though some of the earlier pro-

Prior to "Law Day," the court sent packets of infor-mation to the students to help them learn in advance about the district court and its operations.

The packet explained the difference between criminal and civil cases, and it contained information explaining the entire Michigan court system:

and three failed attempts to pass a school millage increase.

Another millage proposal - this one for 7.75-mills for a two-year pe-riod -- has been plas d on the June 10 ballot, and O'Neill has called on the Canton residents to support the plan.

-Though the Greenbrook subdivison's secession attempt would have affected 113 students, the River Park move for now would affect only 14 students, O'Neill said.

However, Williams said there are "a lot of very, very young children" in River Park who will be approaching school age in coming years.

Some 75 River Park residents have signed petitions requesting to switch to the Plymouth Canton district. The larger, adjacent Greenbrook subdivision collected 247 signatures.

In denying Greenbrook's request last week, county school officials cited concerns about the $500,000 in state aid that the Wayne-Westland district would lose because of the secession.

Moreover, county officials noted that Plymouth Canton schools are overcrowded and that Greenbrook parents had failed to prove that their children would receive a better education because of the switch.

Greenbrook parents have indicated they will appeal the county decision to the Michigan Board of Education.

UNDER THE latest attempt, Wayne-Westland schools would lose $60,000 to $70,000 in state aid -- far less than the amount the district would have lost if Greenbrook students had switched districts.

Nevertheless, Wayne-Westland officials will oppose the secession, O'Neill said.

In trying to win county school officials' approval, River Park residents may try a different approach than did the Greenbrook group, Williams said.

River Park residents may try to prove the academic benefits of switching to the Plymouth Canton district - a focus the Greenbrook parents didn't push, Williams said.

Rumors have emerged that even more neighborhoods may try to secede from the embattled Wayne-Westland district, though O'Neill said Friday that he is only aware of the attempts by Greenbrook and River Park.

HARLOW SAID she does not intend to try to make the mayor's panel a forum for the millage issue. The mayor has said he' wants the committee to study school district's needs and make recommendations to the school board. 😁

However, Harlow did say she hopes information will surface dur-. ing the panel's discussions that convinces some millage critics that the district edesperately needs more money to halt a budget crisis.

"I'm not really trying to switch anybody's opinion," Harlow said. "I'm just trying to bring forth some facts to clear up some misunderstandings. Sometimes I feel like I'm in the middle of the Hatfields and . . ! the McCoys."

and critics said their strategies in the June 10 election are not expected to change dramatically, from those used prior to the March 13 election, when a 7.75-mill proposal was defeated by a mere 3 percent. Two millage proposals also failed - by much larger margins - in February and June of last year.

Some differences, however, will be noticed in this election. Wayne-Westland Superintendent Dennis O'Neill said the pro-millage camp will not renew its telephone push to . win support for the tax hike. Instead, the Save Our Schools committee will use the newly collected 5,835 petitions of support it obtained as a campaign tool.

· O'NEILL SAID he hopes a 13-hour rally held April 16 at John Glenn will help sway some voters. Students Meanwhile, millage, supporters , who participated in that "lock-in," which caught the attention of television stations and newspapers, pleaded with voters to support a tax increase.

Meanwhile, members of the antimillage Wayne-Westland Citizens for Education Committee also said their campaign efforts will be renewed, but not altered. The panel is expected to send out more filers opposing the tax increase plan.

Anti-millage forces have blamed the district's money-problems on what they call an inept school administration and school board. Some critics have indicated they will try to recall board members and push for a new administration,

Thomas has said he hopes his blueribbon panel will bring the two opposing sides together to seek solutions for the school district's problems. However, most of those recommendations are not expected to emerge prior to the election. ••.

SC offers summer TV classes

By Darroll Pressley staff writer

Who said there isn't anything educational on television?

Students at Schoolcraft College are learning lessons from the tube by taking telecourses at Schoolcraft this summer.

For students who have a difficult time commuting to college, telecourses allow them to earn credit toward their degree at home.

The courses are geared toward students who are working full-time and have other responsibilities, said Jeanne Bonner, assistant dean for learning resources.

Classes are presented on Channel 56 and on local cable stations throughout the week in the mornings and again on the weekends.

Students watch the programs, read the course textbooks and use a study guide to the important parts of the text. Students have to be selfmotivated to be successful with telecourses, Bonner said.

"The students who are independent workers who can study well on their own, those are the people who do the best in these courses," Bonner said.

A Schoolcraft instructor is available for students and conducts several on-campus meetings for a review of the material. Exams are scheduled for an entire week and on the weekends for the students' convenlence.

Telecourses have been a part of Schoolcraft's program since the 1980s. About 12 courses are offered during regular school term, Bonner said. This is the first time, however, that telecourses have been offered during the summer session.

The dean said 150 students have signed up for the five telecourses this summer, which is expected to be enough to fill each class.

The telecourses are nationally _produced programs with actors who are used as the instructors. Colleges across the country use these tapes, Bonner said.

"It's a growing trend," she said. Telecourses offer a valid and valuable outreach to a population that . may not be able to receive a college education otherwise, said Jim Walling, the instructor for the sociology. telecourse.

An advantage is that through technology, there is more of an opportunity to provide information in these programs than an instructor can in a lecture, Walling said.

"They (the courses) can go way beyond what a instructor can do in the classroom."

With only a few on-campus meetings between instructor and students, Walling said, newsletters and telephone calls keep the lines of communication open.

Students not only get a chance to learn at their own pace, but they also get the personal instruction, "which makes learning for them that much better" Walling said.

What might be considered a disadvantage for teachers is that they may have to invest more time coordinating and preparing for the classes. And students need more self-discipline for the courses, Walling said. "You have, to remind yourself much more responsibility is placed in the hands of the students."

Working at your own pace and not having to go to the campus every day is definitely an advantage, said Joyce Tellitocci, a second-year student majoring in accounting.

'It was so nice not having to come on campus two or three times a week," Tellitocci said, who added it is also nice not to have as much homework and tests to take.

In the future, telecourses will play a big role in providing education for younger students and for adults who want to continue their education. 'It fills the vacuum for them to gain an education." For more information, call the

Pollution law has unintended consequence

IT CAN'T BE true! It must be propaganda from those awful corporations, bloated with profits and greedy for more.

The "Polluter Pay" law couldn't be backfiring on us. The purest, noblest, most courageous defenders of the babies of the 21st century fought long and hard against the filthy lucre of Corporate Michigan for that law, " The "Polluter Pay" bill was debated to death once in the state Senate in 1990. But "Polluter Pay" was an idea whose time had come, and bags of corporate gold couldn't sink it.

And some folks say it's backfiring? Horrors!

THE FLAW, it seems, is that when you require the new owner to pay for cleaning up the mess left by a longgone owner, you make it worth while for the new owner to move on to virgin territory.

It's known as "urban sprawl." You eat up farm land, meadows and forests for new development for a shifting,- but not growing--population. You gobble tax money for new roads, bridges, sewers and water lines and abandon old facilitles in older citles.

"Urban sprayl" is an environmental no-no, too.

WAYNE STATE University president David Adamany last week touched on the subject before a Senate appropriations subcommittee on higher education.

Adamany was explaining why the WSU campus in Detroit has such high costs. Obviously, its medical and engineering programs cost bigger bucks than courses like history where you read books.

But WSU is landlocked, penned in, and land costs are high, Adamany said.

"We are built over an old city neighborhood," he said. Utilities reserve the right to dig, and the university pays the cost. They run into old foundations. In one case, a medical school parking lot, the diggers ran into a bunch of old tanks from a dry cleaning establishment.

That's potential pollution, brothers and sisters. The owner pays to clean it up before the land can be given a new use.

A CONFERENCE on regional redevelopment, sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, heard the message another way, from attorney David Bruegel of the Detroit-based firm of Dickinson Wright. That was in February.

The law's criminal sanctions - including fail terms and fines - are "a potential disincentive to the business person to be creative and find a new use for land," Bruegel told the shocked assemblage. Thus, investors will opt for undeveloped land - urban sprawl - rather than communitles where the infrastructure is in place.

The third speaker, at a SEMCOG conference last month, was one of the regional planning agency's own graduates - Gary Krause, now a vice president of Stroh Properties. Stroh is redeveloping some Detroit riverfront land once occupied by a pharmaceutical firm.

It seems a garden that once beautified this industrial site was watered with stuff from the Detroit River. The state Department of Natural Resources feared the water table had been contaminated by pollutants from the river. Gary Krause, one of the world's nicest nice guys, put up with a lot of hassle from DNR in his effort to do good.

I HAVE omitted one key fact. The "Polluters Pay" law doesn't take effect until this July 1. These situations occurred under existing state utes, which, environmentalists' tellus, are weak and cumbersome.

The moral of the story is that environmentalists aren't all Robert Redfords in white hats, and corporations aren't all Lee Van Cleefs in black hats. In politics, most hats are gray. Laws can have unintended consequences.

It would be good for all sides to be cautious and humble. Especially, your side.

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and reaional news.

Diapers, child-care don't mix with men

ON A RECENT trip to northern Michigan, I made a quick stop at a rest area and noticed a weird contraption in the mens' room.

It's not exactly that I spend a lot of time in public rest areas . . .

But still, I wasn't so hurried that I didn't notice the contraption that, looked like an old-fashioned built-in ironing board.

In the car I explained the device to my wife, and she told me it was a changing table. It made me envision some trucker changing his clothes in the mens' room. But then she went on the explain it was a baby changing table, as in changing diapers.

I 'WAS astounded. It made me wonder what politician voted to pay money to put such a thing in a mens' restroom. Let's face it, women probably change most diapers in this country, and putting such tables in mens' rest rooms is a waste of taxpayers' money.

For a short time I thought about writing a letter to my state repre-would never notice because despite having two sons, I had rarely, if ever changed a diaper.

I don't even remember changing one on a camping trip to the Upper Peninsula during which my wife had a broken arm: I can still see her changing the kid's diaper on a picnic table with one arm.

One of my prime excuses was that I couldn't manage to get the pin closed. However, my wife gently pointed out a tremendous contradiction: "How the hell can you manage to tie those stupid flies on your fishing line and not be able to but a pin on a diaper?"

IGNORANCE IS NOT only bliss sentative, refusing to pay my portion when it comes to diapers, it's a lot-little, so I didn't have to do it.

Bonding is really a scam word to entice men to take care of children. If it sounds sensitive, every dope in the world wants to do it.

When I see men changing diapers and pushing baby carriages, I can't help but wonder why they're doing it. I guess the two buzz words are sensitivity and bonding.

But I've got another word, pride. Men want to appear to know what they're talking about when it comes to taking care of kids, even though most of them really don't know the correct side of a diaper to use, if there is one.

And because pride gets in the way, they don't know how to pretend they can't perform the required child rearing task. They don't know how to screw it up so that they won't be asked to do it again.

Here's a list of ways to screw things up or ways to generally avoid taking care of kids:

• I'm afraid to hold the baby, I may drop him on his head and he'll time you'd see him was on a milk carton.

• Take him to a bar to watch a game on television. The kid will come back smelling of stale beer and smoke.

• The chemicals I'm spraying in the yard, if inhaled will cause the kid to be retarded. This one only works if you haven't dropped him on his head.

• Let the kid do something stupid on a play ground so that he gets cut and dirty and is crying when he comes home. Make sure it's not a serious injury or else you'll end up wasting your afternoon in an emergency room.

The list is endless, once you get the hang of it. And the rewards are great. You'll have had plenty of rest by the time the kid gets to be about six or seven and you'll be ready to teach the kid how to fish.

MADD proud of its work

To the editor:

As a former president of the Wayne County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (1989-90), I must share a different perspective regarding this organization's growth than that presented by Helen Molnar ("Ex-MADD president questions changes," April 18, 1991).

This chapter has become, in my opinion, one of the outstanding ones in Michigan and indeed in this country. Its growth during these past years has been steady and positive. Wayne County MADD is seen in this area as the front line leader in the fight against drunk driving. Its record is outstanding.

Our services to the community -victim support group, Project Graduation, Project LifeRide, red ribbon campaign, public speakers bureau, victim impact panels, court monitor-

I reject Helen Molnar's assertion that too much funds are used for staff and victims are not being served. Our work could not be achieved without the three paid staff employed by our chapter (administrator, victim advocate and secretary). Volunteers are our backbone but our growth has required a paid staff to coordinate our increasing activities. Their expertise is an asset and has been recognized as such by other groups with whom they work toward common goals.

Our primary purpose is to reduce the crime of drunk driving and to support the surviving victims. Statistics show that we are winning in our first goal. Our victim members receive ongoing help as they grieve and negotiate the court process when the drunk driver is brought to justice.

Wayne County MADD remains a group of individuals - victims and nonvictims, volunteers and staff, men and women - solidly dedicated toward reducing the terrible toll caused by the drunk driver. I am proud of its work. Stapley Goldberg, Livonia

THE BILL'S contents got an "80 to 90 percent" endorsément from Dennis Stockemer, president of Dorsey Business Schools in Madison Heights.

Because of time constraints, Stockemer didn't list what he disagreed with. Kosteva's panel will meet again this week to hear more testimony from private vocational school operators. Meeting time is . 3:30 p.m., or after House session, on Wednesday's on the fourth floor of the Capitol.

, Stockemer said a survey answered by 4,700 students at 42 schools showed 91.5 percent thought they were "satisfactorily progressing."

Some 75 percent are women. Whites are 57,5 percent of the student body; blacks, 38 percent: Hispanics, 2.3 percent.

"Student loan default rates have become a barometer to judging schools," Stockemer said. "But they (default rates) are more a barometer of the economy. In a poor general economy, the default rate is greater. "Private schools help those who

Michigan berries on way

If there was just one reason to herald spring, it would be saying farewell to the tasteless, fibrous and exorbitantly priced imported or hothouse strawberry. Better yet, it's probably chopping into that first fresh Michigan berry bursting with juice, sweetness and flavor.

; I love strawberries! I can eat them like popcorn. Why not? They are great sources of fiber, iron, potassium and Vitamin Ca natural health food.

Dip them in chocolate and I feel seductive. Swirl into a malted and I feel like a kid again.

Whether they're sitting on a sundae or a waffle, surrounded by whipped cream or encased in Jell-O, I seldom turn down anything made with fresh Michigan strawberries. As you read this, 95 percent of the strawberries available over the counter this week are hailing from California. As a matter of fact, more than 80 percent of the entire United States crop hails from La La Land. Have patience, dear readers, for in a matter of 30 days or less, Michigan berries will be flowing abundantly.

RECENT DROUGHT conditions on the West Coast might push strawberries to nearly $2.75 per quart. In the " middle of January, I paid pretty near $4 per quart for berries tha tasted like leftover Christmas ornaments. Let's face it, air freight is expensive. . The freshest Michigan berries, barring any more adverse weather conditions, should maintain their pricing levels from last year and hover around $1 per quart, especially at your local farmer's market. There is little questioning the excellent taste of fresh strawberry shortcake or even a frosty frozen strawberry daguiri, but today's trendy cook is always looking for new ways to use basic take-them-for-granted strawberries. Yours truly has experimented with strawberry vinegar, strawberry brandy and the classic strawberry jam or felly. The freezer always gets aworkout, keeping a constant supply for my cheesecake, French toast, sundaes and beverages. Unfortunatley, strawberries aren't all they are cracked up to. be. Anything this good has to have a catch. Anyone who has purchased strawberries only toget them home and find a heaping basket of moldy fuzz will sooner forget them than praise them. I can attest to this, especially during hot summer months when a three-hour visit to the farmer's market ended up with a redstained paper bag and a mess all over my car seat. For optimum results, fresh strawberries should be kept in the refrigerator. Purists say to remove them from their store containers and place them in a colander in the crisper section of your refrigerator. Never wash them until ready to use and then simply rinse them under a gentle stream of cool water. After washing, the stems and caps can be removed and, if necessary, the berry can be patted dry. Washed berries should be used within 24 hours.

You do not need two years at a major culinary institution or, for that matter, be a graduate of Miss Cindy's Chocolate Chip Home Economics School to make a decent Mother's Day brunch. Granted, we will assume that you are not the offspring of Julia Child or Madeline Kamman, but we do realize that some moms can be critical, especially when recipes don't turn out just right.

We also know you want everything to be as perfect as it can be. Most importantly, you want to come out of the kitchen smelling like a rose.

Knowing this, I have compiled literally foolproof recipes, along with shopping needs, equipment lists, presentation suggestions and even ways to get the kids involved without major complications.

BEFORE YOU BEGIN to clip these tried and true recipies and lists, we must begin with "your mind." If you are, indeed, one of those people with five thumbs, this is being printed six days in advance so that you can make daily affirmations about your upcoming success. Don't wait until after watching "The -Golden Girls" on television Saturday night to read the shopping and equipment list. Practice in advance.

Store herbs for winter

By Marty Figley special writer

I am expecting a good harvest from the herb garden so I can make many herbal concoctions to use when winds howl and the garden is asleep for the winter.

Like a squirrel storing nuts, we herbarists must store our bounty when it is at its peak in the herb garden.

Tarragon, thyme, basil, chives, lavender (for an exotic flavor) savory and mints are other. herbs that can be made into vinegar.

For a different flavor 1 will spear a clove of garlie with a toothpick and put it in the bottle along with the basil as it steeps.

VINEGAR IS very easy to make, for use in salads and marinades. After picking the herbs I. will wash them well and twirl them in a salad spinner to dry, fill a glass container at least twothirds full, twisting the stems and leaves to release the olls.

Then the container will be filled with a fivepercent-acidity vinegar (white if I'm going to add an herb for decoration or if I'm making coal or chive blossom vinegar and regular cider vinegar for the others), cover with a non-metal lid rosemary, tarragon, thyme and mints, are particularly successfully dried this way. As soon as they are dry, I will lightly roll the bag so the leaves fall to the bottom of the bag. By this time, they will be corn-flake crisp and won't mold when put into jars for further use.

WHEN I HAVE a small quantity, I put the leaves on a paper towel on a flat dish and set it uncovered in the refrigerator. They are dehydrated in a few days, and the color is good.

Fifty-percent power is recommended, and a glass of water in the corner will protect the element.

Do not dry them to the very crisp stage because of the threat of fire and loss of oils. I will finish the drying in a basket set in a warm place.

Oven drying is a pretty quick method with the pilot light only, or set the temperature in an electric oven very low (180 degrees). If I can smell the herbs, it means the oils are evaporat-Ing and the oven is too hot.

Sometimes I freeze the leaves on a tray and package them in small containers, or blend about one and one-half cups of water to a cup of loosely packed leaves, whir them in a blender for two minutes, then freeze in ice cube trays.

A MIXTURE of eight ounces of soft margarine and about one-half cup of a preferred herb,

CHICKEN BREASTS WITH GARLIC AND BALSAMIC VINEGAR

Low in lat and calories, this chicken recipe is quick and easy to make and loaded with flavor. It can be made in advance and then reheated just prior to serving

Balsamic vinegar, the ingredient that gives the sauce its particular flavor, is made from Trebbiano grape juice and gets its dark color and pungent, sherrylike taste from years of aging in barrels of various woods and graduated sizes. This recipe serves 4:

4-skinless, boneless-chicken breasts, halved, about 11/4 pounds in all

- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 3/4 pound small-to-mediumsized mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons flour 2 tablespoons olive oil 3 cloves or more of crushed garlic, depending on your taste
- 1/4 cup balsamic vinegar 3/4 cup fresh or canned chicken broth
- 1 bay leaf 1/2 teaspoon minced fresh
- thyme or 1/4 teaspoon dried

If the chicken breasts are connected, separate the fillets and cut away any membranes of fat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Rinse the mushrooms, drain and pay dry. Season the flour with salt and pepper and dredge the chicken breasts in the mixture. Shake off the excess. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet over medium-high heat and cook the chicken breasts until nicely browned on 1 side, about 3 minutes. Add the garlic cloves. Turn the chicken pieces and scatter the mushrooms over them. Continue cooking, shaking Swirl in the butter. Discard the bay leaf. Pour the mushrooms and sauce over the chicken and serve with nocdles.

California's Pepi Winery leads revolution

California winemakers have what it takes to make great wine. They are the best educated winemakers in the world. They have the best technology, and they have the money to purchase the high-tech equipment required.

At present, increased quality of California wine is a result of improved vineyard techniques (viticulture) rather than winemaking skills (viniculture). As many California producers contend, "Wine is made in . the vineyard."

One of the leaders in this viticultural revolution is Robert Pepi Winery in Napa Valley. Pepl is a specialist in sauvignon blanc production. He altributes the success of his wine to what he has learned in the vineyard. "Herbaceous, grassy sauvignon blanc is a result of uncontrolled vegetative vigor," Pepi explains. Excessive vine growth prevents direct sun exposure on the fruit and reduces air flow through the vine that helps balance the fruit." SAUVIGNON BLANC grapes that are shaded from the sun do not ripen completely, giving a vegetable rather than fruit character to the wine.

To improve sun exposure and air flow, Pepi has developed a new vine-trellising system that he calls the 'Two-Heart Canopy.'

To improve sun exposure and air flow, Pepi has developed a new vinetrellising system that he calls the "Two-Heart Canopy." The canopy is a term for the upper vine and leaves that shade the fruit from the sun.

Pepi has divided the canopy by separating the trunk of the vine into two major branches that are trained upward in a wishbone design, as if each vine is split in two. This method opens the canopy and exposes the fruit to direct sunlight.

"The wide trellis is the single most important factor to us viticulturally," Pepi says. "It's not only giving us better quality fruit, but it is enabling us to directly style the wine in the vineyard.

"Allowing more filtered sunlight affects the development of the floral, perfumed, citrusy aroma and flavor elements of sauvignon blanc with the elimination of one-dimensional herbaceousness so common in the variety."

THE WIDE TRELLIS system can be described as a stake with a fourfoot cross arm at the top. Consider 'the head of the vine as a "Y" that is split in two, then every vine has two heads and four canes.

"We're trying to achieve as much complexity in aroma and flavor as possible without any markedly assertive character dominating," Pepi explains, "Essentially, we're striving for a style that showcases the best qualities of a white Bordeaux and, therefore, blend with just under 20 percent semillon, an amount that

Eleanor and Ray Heald to have direct contact with the fruit adds complexity, viscosity and body without being obvious or dominating. "We don't want a lot of oak in our sauvignon blanc. In addition to flavors developed through our training and trellising system, we age sauvignon blanc in large, five-year-old oak casks. This helps us achieve oak subtlety as well as providing a place for the flavors to marry."

Although Pepi considers optimum consumption time three to five years after harvest, he qualifies this by Waying, "'A lot depends on personal preferences for the way sauvignon blanc changes in the bottle."

Pepi recommends grilled swordfish, sole, and white meat fish to accompany the Pepi style of sauvignon blanc. He also likes it with spicy Cajun dishes because of the wine's clean, refreshing acidity.

Breakfast starts you off right

What's the first thing on your mind when you wake up in the morning? If it's preparing a healthy breakfast, you're off to a great start.

6B 📩

After a good night's sleep you need to "break the fast" and recharge your body with nourishing food, Nutritionists agree that eating breakfast is necessary for well-being. Yet the breakfast debate continues.

Many use the excuse that there just isn't enough time in the morning to fix breakfast or that they're trying to cut calorles and will just ship the morning meal. But skipping breakfast often leads to tripping up throughout the day.

Bypassing breakfast may actually be one of the worst moves to make when you're trying to lose a few pounds: Most people don't even make it to lunch time if they miss breakfast. They simply give in to hunger and grab a mid-morning snack. The problem is, the snacks chosen are often higher in fat and calories than a home-prepared breakfast.

IF YOU DO make it to the lunch hour on an empty stomach, you may tend to overeat because by then you are famished. Give your body the fuel it needs first thing in the morning and you will be less likely to crave something before lunch or later in the day.

Now that we've determined the importance of eating breakfast, the next step is making sure you eat the right breakfast. A breakfast that includes low-fat versions of dairy products, breads, muffins and whole grain cereals, as well as fresh fruits, is healthiest for you. High-fiber foods are ideal. They give you a feeling of fullness, making you less tempted to overeat.

Rocks, Glenn 1-2 at Observerland

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Plymouth Salem had the best of both worlds in boys-track and fieldlast week.

After putting all of their energy into beating Westland John Glenn Ina key dual meet Thursday, the Rocks had enough left to come back two days later and win the Observerland Relays.

And their main competition again was defending champion Glenn. Salem scored 83 points to win its second title in five years Saturday at Livonia Churchill, and the Rockets finished second with 70.

"We felt-if-we could beat John Glenn in the dual we would be in the driver's seat coming into this meet," Salem coach Gary Balconi said.

"We came in believing we were the best team. Their record demonstrates it. They've had three good weekends (winning three straight relay meets), and they've won their duals. "THESE KIDS love track and field. At the Elks meet, when the weather was so bad, Jim Ramsay said: 'As long as we're here, we might as well win it,' and we've adopted that as our motto."

The Rocks won five events and scored in all but three of the 16. Salem's last victory came in the 1,600meter relay, and the Rocks needed a good showing to hold off Glenn.

The Rockets trailed Salem by only five points (73-68) entering that final event. Salem's Joe Pawluszka, Jake Baker, Mike Patterson and Andy Rojeski fought off a challenge from Northville to win it, while Glenn was

"We had four seniors in there," Balconi said. "We talked ahead of time, and I said 'This is it, guys. This is the greatest event in track; go get medley, and it was sixth in the 100 dash with Matt Perron and the 400. relay. The 1,600 run and shuttle hurdle relay were the only track events in which Salem didn't score.

"It's been a real pleasure to coach this team," Balconi said.""Any time you score 83 points in a meet as tough as this one, all of them con-" tributed."

GLENN'S LONE victory was in the high jump with Chris Vanderburgh, Terry Hewer and Bill Griffiths, but the Rockets had four seconds and scored 30 points in the last five events to narrow the gap between themselves and Salem.

"We were a little spent at the end," Glenn coach Jess Shough said. "We moved on them but not enough." They had us by 18 at one point.

"The difference in the meet is that Salem has real depth. But our guys still did what they could. They gave it all they had, and I'm real proud of them."

Wayne Memorial was third and had five first places, including a meet record of 14.6 by James Grady in the high hurdles. Paul Bialowicz (Redford Bishop Borgess), Mike White (Salem) and Jason Belaire (Churchill) shared the old record at 14.7.

The Zebras, who won the title in 1988, also were first in the 800, sprint medley and 400 relays, and Alan Buford anchored all three of those teams and won the 100 dash in 11 seconds.____

"For having only 14 people, it was an excellent performance," Wayne assistant coach Ken Szmansky said. "Buford_and Grady_are_excellent leaders on and off the track. They work hard and it shows. Buford is just a workhorse, and Grady doesn't elack off either "

The Rocks started with two victorles in the field events, winning the discus and the long jump, and they were tied for third in the shot put and fourth in the high jump. Salem never competes in pole vault.

Rob Casler, Steve Balog and Brian Schumacher won the discus while Leon Hister, Jim Ramsay and Don Johnson captured first in the long jump.

"We knew we had to get off to a running start and we did," Balconi sald.

"IT GOES back to being a balanced team. Where we don't have anybody outstanding, we have three good kids in every event. If you have one good one, you might beat us. But if you don't, all three of ours are going to beat you."

Salem started the running finals by winning the 6,400 relay with the team of Steve Boudreau, Derek Cudini, Jason McDonald and John Thomas.

Ramsay got third place in the open high hurdles, and the Rocks were fourth in the distance medley and 800 relays before winning the 3,200 relay with the team of McDonald, Cudini, Thomas and Patterson.

"The base of our team is the distance kids and we work from there," Balconi said. "We wanted to be in the hunt in every event, and there wasn't an event we didn't think we ·could score in."

Salem also was third in the sprint

Redford Catholic Central was fifth and did best in the pole vault and three distance relays, with second place in all four events.

"WE HAD some young kids who ran-really-well-(in-the-distanceevents), but we got no points in the sprints," CC coach Tony Magni said. "We scored in the pole vault, and it's not even an event for us (in the Catholic League)."

Farmington was sixth and scored 46 points without all-state distance runner Ben Goba. The Falcons, who were in second place halfway through the meet, won the shuttle hurdle relay and the pole vault, and Jason Tucker had the best individual high jump at 6-4.

"We did real well in the field events," Farmington coach Jerry-Young said, "and our vaulters were probably the biggest surprise. (Chris) Marting is a good vaulter but he hasn't done much this year, and we switched one of our distance kids (Ryan Adams) over to vaulting this year. We put him there a couple weeks ago because we needed somebody and it worked out well

"We thought we would do well (in the hurdles), Joe Miller ran well-allday. He anchored that event, ran the open highs (second) and was on the-400 and 800 relays."

Farmington Hills Harrison won the shot put for the third consecutive year with the trio of Tony Shaleb, Blazo Sarcevich and Leon Jefferson. Canton won the distance medley, and Livonia Stevenson's Rodney Westlake won the open 1,600 run.

Verdict still out on former unbeatens

Westland John Glenn marred Plymouth Salem's perfect baseball record with a 10-1 victory in the first game of a double-header Thursday.

2C(L;W)*

But the visiting Rocks turned around and did the same to Glenn in the nightcap, rallying to win that game 4-2.

The battle of the undefeated and state-ranked teams was a draw with both now 5-1 in the Lakes Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association. The No. 2-rated Rockets are 12-1 overall, the No. 6 Rocks 11-1.

Aaron Scheffer pitched a complete game and scattered five hits in the opener. He kept the Salem batters at bay, according to Rocks coach John Gravlin, as he struck out one and walked none.

Salem starter Scott Rodgers pitched five innings and suffered his first loss after five wins. He had to be pulled with the Rocks trailing 2-1, having received a gash on his left ankle while breaking up a double play at second base in the fourthinning.

"He started landing on it (following through on his delivery) and it started hurting him," Gravlin said. "He wanted to stay in the game."

Gary Pierce was on base five times for Glenn and had three hits as did teammate Rob Filary. Ed Gundry's RBI double drove in Salem's lone run. The Rockets had 11 hits and scored seven runs in the top of the seventh to pad a 3-1 lead. In the second game, RBI singles by Eric Nielson and Scott Bright broke a 2-2 tie and accounted for Salem's winning margin. Jeff Coleman's two-run single, after Glenn starter John Ward walked the bases full, gave the Rocks a 2-0 lead in the second, but the Rockets tied it in the third. Andy Gagne had two hits for Glenn.

Dan Hutchinson was the winning pitcher in relief of starter Jeff Belisle. Hutchinson pitched the last 33% innings, allowed only one hit and no walks.

- Ward worked into the fourth inning and gave up three earned runs. Lawrence Scheffer pitched the final four innings.

CANTON 9-8, FRANKLIN 4-10: Livonia Franklin and Plymouth Canton also split a doubleheader Thursday, the host Chiefs winning the first game 9-4 and the Patriots the second 10-8 in six innings.

Canton starter Dan Conrad got seven runs of support in the first inning of the opener and pitched six.-He struck out five and walked four. Frank Learned worked the last inning.

Livonia Stevenson junior Megan Johnson comes from a family of fine golfers, but she is quickly making a name for herself.

Crusaders' tourney run is brief

By C.J. Rleak staff writer

There was no way Madonna University could lose.

After all, the Lady Crusaders' softball team had reached a pipe dream goal. This was their first season of existence - what could be expected of them? Then came a hatful of problems, with four key players - including the team's top two pitchers - sidelined by a variety of academic woes,

It did not bode well. With a limited roster (13 players), any injury would be devastating. Even if the Crusaders were fortunate enough to avoid injuries (and they were), success scemed remote. After all, they were a first-year team anchored by the third-string pitcher.

That pitcher, Joann Donehay, proved more than good enough. She was instrumental in getting Madonna to the NAIA District 23 playoffs with a 7-5 district record and a fourth-place finish.

OK, so the Crusaders didn't get any further. They lost their first two district playoff games to regularseason champion Siena Heights, 6-0, and to Aquinas, 5-2, last Thursday in_ Spring Arbor.

Madonna sports

EVEN THOUGH their stay in the double-elimination tourney was short, coach Dave Racer wasn't displeased. "It was kind of hard," he said. "The girls thought we could stay in the game with Siena Heights and we did. It was scoreless for three innings."

One miscue and a few bad breaks beat Madonna. The miscue was Donehay's; after giving up a single in the third inning, the next batter grounded back to Donehay. It was an easy play, but she threw errantly to first. Instead of two out and one on, there were runners at second and third with one out.

Three singles from the next four batters resulted in three runs for the Saints. "We could have easily been out of the inning having given up just one run," said Racer.

The Crusaders missed some ecoring chances of their own against Siena Heights' all-district hurler, Shelly Lizyness. In the first inning, Megan Armstrong singled and was sacrificed to second. Jenny Marquette followed with a hard liner, but it was snared and converted into a double play.

MUCH THE SAME happened in the seventh. Trailing 6-0, Madonna loaded the bases for Mandy Armstrong with one out. She, too, hit it hard, but again it was caught and turned into a double play.

1. Sieha Heights' fortunes were quite the opposite. With two runners onand two out in the fifth, Tanya Dickerson blooped a single that fell just out of reach of Madonna's infielders, allowing two more runs to score to make it 5.0. "That kind of broke our back," admitted Racer.

Megan Armstrong gut on base four times for Madonna, collecting three of their four hits. Kim Rector and Chris Strehl had two hits apiece for Siena Heights, with Rector scoring twice.

The difference, however, was Liz-yness. She, struck out four and walked three in guiding Siena Heights to its 30th win in 42 games, Madonna's Donehay allowed eight hits and three walks, fanning three.

THE CRUSADERS' hitting troubles continued in the game against Aquinas. Again, they were limited to just four hils, this time by Aquinas' Jodi Borowiez, who dld not-walk a batter while striking out five. Donehay took the loss, surrendering nine hits and two walks, fanning two. Madonna scored in the top of the first on Jill Burt's two-out double, scoring Megan Armstrong. But Aquinas struck for two runs in the first, one in the fourth and two more in the fifth before a Burt single and a Stacey Girard double got the Crusaders their second run in the seventh.

Aquinas' Karrie Manhart was hard to stop — she hammered Ma-donna with two doubles and a single, driving in one run.

The Crusaders finished their first season with 22 victories in 38 games and a lot of promise for the future not the least of which is a pair of alldistrict players in Megan and Mandy Armstrong.

Madonna bounces back, sweeps Calvin

The five-day road trip Madonna University's baseball team embarked on last week reversed course Friday when the Fighting Crusaders rebounded after three straight losses to sweep Calvin College, 2-0 and 4-3. The opener provided coach Mike George_with_a_pleasant_surprise. Jeremy Krol, a Garden City HS graduate who had been playing shortstop this season when he wasn't hurt, got his first pitching start of the season and made the most of it. Krol blanked Calvin, the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association leader, with a two-hitter.

The second game wasn't easy. Madonna trailed 3-2 going into the seventh but rebounded to tie it, then won with a run in the eighth.

On Thursday, the Crusaders played a nine-inning game at Saginaw Valley State and lost, 5-4. They trailed 4-0 after five innings but battled back to knot it with three runs in the sixth - on Ernie Bowling's 15th home run of the season, a three-run shot that gave him 49 runs batted in for the season - and one in the eighth.

THE RUN in the eighth resulted from a walk to Krol and a single by Bowling, followed by Mike Wozniak's sacrifice bunt that put giving up one run on three hits and runners on second and third. Sean Maloney's ground out drove in the tying run.

But Saginaw Valley, which had . scored its four earlier runs on a pair of Brian Miller homers, a three-run blast in the first and a solo shot in the fifth, pushed across the gamewinner in the seventh on singles by Mitch Willis and Miller and a sacrifice fly by Tim Madden.

Chris Kloc started for Madonna, allowing three runs in three innings. Mike Hocking followed; he surrendered one run in his three-inning stint. Rich Roy absorbed the loss, Jenny Mayle pitched her sixth and seventh consecutive shutouts Thursday in Livonla Franklin's 1-0 and 2-0 double-header sweep of Plymouth Canton.

Patriots sweep Canton

Something had to give when Observerland softball powers Livonia Franklin and Plymouth Canton collided Thursday in a crucial double-header. Pitchers Jenny Mayle (Franklin) and Kelly Holmes (Canton) did not give up much, but it was the host Patriots who came away with the double-header sweep, 1-0 and 2-0.

"It was a big win for us in our division (Western of the Western Lakes Activities Association)," Franklin coach Joe Epstein said. "Defensively-we played our best ball of the season. We made only one error all day. Dawn Warner wasoutstanding defensively at second base."

Franklin is now 11-1 overall and 6-0 in the Western Division of the WLAA. Canton slips to 7-2 overall and 4-2 in the division.

Mayle, who as a junior, hurled the Patriots into last year's state Class A championship game against Jenison, was razor-sharp again. She struck out 10, walked three and allowed only one hit in a 1-0 victory in the opener. Holmes, a sophomore, was also impressive, allowing only three hits and two walks. while fanning 10 over seven innings.

Franklin's Brenda Pierson tallied the gamewinning run in third inning when she scored from third on a wild pitch.

In the second game, Mayle hurled her seventh straight shutout, a three-hitter. The senior righthander struck out eight and walked only two.

Holmes yielded just two hits and three walks over six innings. She struck out six.

Franklin struck for a run in the third when Kris McComb scored on a sacrifice bunt by Wendy Rynkiewicz.

The Patriots added an insurance run in the sixth when Emily Skura doubled, advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on Beth Hare's groundout.

JOHN GLENN 20.9, SALEM 8-7: It was bombs-away Thursday as Westland John Glenn softball

outslugged host Plymouth Salem in a WLAA-Lakes Division twinbill.

Five different Glenn players collected two hits apiece in a 20-9 win in the opener: Jenny Massey, Carrie Rachwal, Karyn Koester (both triples), Nikki Wolcik and Kerry Byberg.

- Stephanie Beech went 3-for-3 and knocked in a pair of runs for the Rocks. Teammate Missy Holmes added. two hits and one RBI.

Cathy Mruk, the winning pitcher, scattered nine hils, eight walks and struck out five over six innings.

Salem starter Andrea Welling, who struck out four and walked 10, suffered the loss.

Playing a strong second half, Plymouth Canton nearly upset the No. 1-ranked girls soccer team in the state Wednesday.

Eventually, the Chiefs settled for a still-impressive 2-2 tie against defending Class A champion Livonia Stevenson at Centennial Educational Park.

Canton outshot the Spartans 10-4 in the second half and took a 2-1 lead on Christina Stansell's goal in the 64th minute. Michelle Brach got the er, however.

Local couples enjoy Scottish castle digs

By Betey Taylor special writer

When we invited Lori and Roger Spry from Birmingham and Joan and Dale Stevens from Orchard Lake to join us on a recent trip to Scotland, both couples had the same provision. We must spend one night in a castle!

We found several possibilities, but they were either booked or closed for the season. An alternative solution was to settle for Shieldhill Hotel in Lanarkshire. Located in the Clyde Valley, this Norman keep (translalion: small castle) was built in 1199 and remained in the Chancellor family until 1959.

The succession of innkeepers who followed did little to enhance the building and, according to Jack--Greenwald, who purchased the hotel in 1987 with partner Christine Dunstan, the building was a disaster. The year and devoted their energy and talent to a miraculous facelift.

When we arrived late in the day at Shieldhill, we were miserably wet and cold. It had rained for days and the rivers, now swollen, had overflowed, causing some local roads to be closed. To top it off, we found the road signs from the village of Biggar Our congenial innkeeper, Jack Greenwald, lifted our spirits with a candlelight tour of this marvelous nine-bedroom facility.

to Shieldhill to be slightly off the mark and we took several wrong turns. And, to compound our woes, the hotel had lost its electricity!

Our congenial innkeeper, Jack Greenwald, lifted our spirits with a candlelight tour of this marvelous nine-bedroom facility, telling tales of historic note, and giving a detailed explanation of the hotel's renovation. We were sorry his partner, who looks lovely in photographs, was in-America tending to the couple's other enterprise, the Cheshire Cat, a bed & breakfast created from two new owners closed the hotel-for a --- adjoining Victorian houses in Santa---Barbara, Calif.

> The couple's creativity is seen in Shieldhill as well. Each bedroom is beautifully appointed and decorated in coordinating Laura Ashley fabrics. The room names are taken from famous Scottish battles like Culloden, Glencoe and Bannockburn. Our room was cosy with a pair of window seats overlooking the gardens. In the failing light we could just make out the expensive lawns and the woodlands beyond.

The owners had spaced no expense in the overhaul, spending close to 400,000 pounds on the project. The result is stunning! Wide hallways and stairs are covered with carpet made for the hotel with the Chancellor family crest. The halls lead to a ma--hogany-paneled lounge with a huge fireplace, a cosy bar and a spacious dining room.

After tea and time to rest, we joined the other guests in the lounge for cocktails. The only Americans present, we were joined by several Europeans as well as a May-December couple from nearby Edinburgh. Dinner reservations were made automatically for us, and due to the remote location, it was easy to see why everyone stays in for dinner.

The dining room serves from 7 to 9;30³p.m. and was set this particular evening with pale pink linens and beautifully fresh flowers. The prices were reasonable, the menu varied and prepared by a world-class chef. Local girls with shining faces and Laura Ashley country-style dresses gave us excellent service as we ate a memorable meal. Our spirits rose even higher with the return of electricity while we drank our coffee. The next morning we rose refreshed and ready for our early departure for Glasgow, 31 miles from Shieldhill. Even the Sprys, who had slept in the bedroom of the Lady in Grey, had no complaints.

Every castle must have a ghost and Shieldhill is no exception. Locals report the lady walks the property, looking for the grave of her infant child, but maybe she, too, was glad to be in out of the rain!

We were sorry to forego breakfast, but Jack gave us coffee, fruit, and scones before our fast getaway for the airport. But we'll be back. The Shieldhill Hotel is a place to savor, to enjoy and to repeat.

Alma celebrates Scottish spring with Highland Festival & Games

"I have a Scottish name, but as far as I knew, my ancestors were lowlanders and therefore not entitled to wear tartan," I said. Dinwoody's quick research showed me that the Snodgrass family does have the right to wear a tartan, two of them, in fact. They can wear the tartan of the Snodgrass clan and that of the Irvines, a clan that allied itself with the Snodgrass family in war.

McDonald's of Alma probably won't serve Scottish food in the near future, especially not the traditional haggis. "But I think haggis is very good," Dinwoody said. Haggis will be served at the Ceilidh, a traditional party to be staged Saturday, May 25, at the festival.

There are always two questions concerning Scottish "Carousel" by Rogers and Hammerstein, "Our Town" customs, according to Dinwoody. One asks, "What does a Scotsman wear under his kilt?" That's a military secret, Next question? "What is haggis?"

Also held Saturday night is the Pub and Dance. This fetches an even bigger crowd than the Ceilidh, 600-700 last year. It will be at Shifter's Restaurant, featuring contemporary music with a disc jockey.

Crowd favorites at the festival are the massed kiltle bands, a spectacular sight as they perform at 1 and 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 5 p.m. Sunday. Another favorite is the Highland Fling and the Sword Dance. Just as interesting to me are the border collies, super-intelligent dogs that keep their masters' sheep in line.

Food concessions feature international dishes, including American food and Scottish meat pies. Authentic Celtic clothing and crafts will be on sale.

Making friends on a flight to Atlanta

It was an early morning flight, and I had missed breakfast, so I was glad to see the flight attendant with her early morning snack and her coffee pot. Especially her coffee pot. We were on a Delta Air Lines flight to Atlanta, on a plane with two seats on each side and three seats in the middle. Flight attendants were serving from aisles on both sides of the middle section where I was seated.

I had that desperate look that caffeine addicts get when they haven't had their morning coffee, so I was given one cup from the serving cart next to my seat and a second cup from the cart in the opposite aisle.

It was passed to me by an understanding coffee drinker in the next seat. I reciprocated by passing her my little paper cup of cantaloupe chunks.

"There are only three things in the world that I can't eat, and one of them is cantaloupe," I said.

"I'll never be able to ask you to the melon festival," she said. "I live in Howell and we have a melon festival every year."

Strangers don't stay strangers long when sharing breakfast on a plane, so Jackie Rogers and I were soon swapping stories about hometowns and travel. Jackie was born in Nashville, Mich. Her husband Russ, presently buried under earphones, was born and raised in Charlotte. They still have family in the Charlotte and Vermontville area, which should have given me a clue.

The sights and sounds of Scotland come to Alma

By Earl Snodgrass special writer

Alma, Mich. proudly calls itself "Scotland USA." Never more so than on May 24, 25 and 26 when it hosts the 24th annual Alma Highland Festival & Games. These are bonnie days when everyone's a Scot.

record number of clan societies and organizations will participate, including several Detroit-area Shriner bands and the Celtic Pipes and Drums of Birmingham.

Everything commences with a parade down Main Street at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 25. Thousands are expected to crowd the parade route to watch three dozen clans from around the U.S. and Canada participate in the Parade of Tartans.

You would never guess that Alma is Scotland USA if you didn't visit at festival time. The only Scottish name I saw as I drove into the city was McDonald's. After lunch at a Mexican restaurant on the main street, I stopped in at the Chamber of Commerce, where I was greeted by executive director M.A. Ferguson. He was wearing a kilt.

Now, thought this Scotsman, that's more like it. Ferguson told me the Chamber of Commerce is exploring ways to Russ works seven days a week May through September at Rogers Asphalt in Howell. Jackie is an accountant, so she can't leave town before the tax season ends. The Rogers were flying to Atlanta to visit their daughter, Margene, who graduated from Howell High School and Eastern Michigan University and now lives with her husband in Marietta. Ga.

We talked about travel patterns; no two travelers ever have the same script. Russ loves to fish in Lake St. Helen, north of West Branch, and the far northern wilderness of Ontario at Chimo Bay, and to hunt deer in Michigan and caribou in the Colorado mountains.

Jackle hunts too . . . she shot her first caribou in Colorado last December . . . but her real love is bowling. She bowls in Howell, and once a year she goes to national bowling competitions.

About this time I remembered that my secretary's husband, Jess Bahs, came from Nashville. One of the women Jackie has been bowling with since high school days is Jess' grandmother, Louise Bahs, who still lives in Nashville.

"Once a year, four of us longtime women friends go to Las Vegas," Jackie said, and then we started swapping casino stories.

The plane landed in Atlanta. We left by different alsles.

"Call me sometime." "I will. You too."

Maybe we will. She seems like the kind of person I would like to know better. But even if we don't, we know a lot about one another after our two hours aboard the plane. I will think of her whenever I pass the Vermontville exit of the expressway or when I find myself within striking distance of a bowling alley.

Thousands are expected to crowd Alma on Saturday, May 25, for the Highland Festival & Games. Here the bagpipe brigade marches by in the Parade of Tartans:

make the chamber building reflect the city's nickname. One idea is to make better use of the city's official tartan. It's the MacNeil of Barra, colored navy blue, yellow, green and black. It's a dignified tarter similar to that of the famous Black Watch.

Bryan Dinwoody, director of the Alma Public Library, and a wearer of the tartan, says the Scotland USA theme comes from Alma College. The college was founded by the Presbyterian Church, which in the old country is called the Church of Scotland. Alma College athletic teams are called The Scots.

Dinwoody is a former Detroiter whose grandfather migrated to Nova Scotia from Great Britain. Dinwoody was not up on Scottish lore when he arrived here, but now he is an enthusiast. He bought a kilt with his clan's tartan and is persuading his wife to do the same.

Cop. Agood movie

With several new twists in its look at New"York's tough street scene "One Good Cop" (A., R, 100 minutes) demonstrates that it's always possible to tell a basic story with a fresh and exciting approach.

Top performances highlight this tense police action-adventure appropriately mixed with romance and family life. Even though the fight scenes tend to strain one's credulity, in much the same way as western heroes firing their six-guns 92 times without reloading might do, the film portrays the city's components real-, istically.

Artie Lewis (Michael Keaton) and Stevle Diroma (Anthony LePaglia) are longtime detective-partners on the narcotic squad. Artie's wife Rita (Rene Russo) desperately wants children but they've been unsuccessful and are resigned to a childless life. Steyje's wife has died leaving him with three young daughters.

Perhaps there's an overly obvious irony there, but the scripting, editing, directing and acting are sufficiently well-done to make it work. "One Good Cop" effectively focuses on the strain detectives regularly face and the ways in which they deal with that stress.

When Stevie is killed attempting to rescue a family from their drugcrazed father, Artie is faced with a dilemma - should he care for Stevie's daughters and give Rita the children she desires but that he can't afford - or should he allow the foster parent system to care for the girls?

ALONG THE way, Artie has to deal with the local drug lord; Beniamino (Tony Plana), who, Artie believes," ultimately was responsible stealing a lot of gold ore from a for Stevle's death.

All these elements are artfully in-the extent of their presence in motion pictures, an excellent barometer of public reaction and cultural values. Nobody on the outside gets to produce multi-million dollar media.

But as Hollywood has proven conclusively, it takes more than money and position in the mainstream to make good movies. "A Rage In Harlem" (C+, R, 110 minutes) starts out with a bang but ends with a fizzle as the film mixes in more ingredients than necessary and has trouble being an action adventure/romantic come-and Goldy's transvestite friend, Big Kathy (Zakes Mokae), the local madam who runs quite a house. In addition, a couple of cartoon cops plus the staff and management of the funeral parlor where Jackson works. fill the screen.

It's a big, sprawling story that starts down south in the '50s with a black gang led by Slim (Badja Djola) white gang. There's a big shoot-out and the black gang's moll, Imabelle (Robin Givens), gets away with the trunkifull of gold and makes her way to Harlem.

Naturally, Jackson falls in love with Imabelle and everyone in town is hot on the trail of the gold.

Slim and his gang somehow escape from the shoot-out with the white gang in the South and turn up later on in Harlem looking for the gold.

While the story concept contains the basic elements of a good action film - it's based on Chester Himes' novel — the intermixture of romance between devout young man and gang moll, Goldy's redemption, some street comedy and everybody's greed interlaced with excessive violence is more than one film can handle.

"Rich Girl" (*, R) seems to be another teenage romance in the face of poppa's disapproval. In this case, poppa is Mr. Wells, the town's richest man and his sweet little daughter, Courtney, angers him by falling in love with Rick, a rock musician from the wrong side of the tracks. Ah well. . .

The Feelles will be making their first appearance in the metropolitan area in two years, hot on the heels of the release of their. latest LP, "Time for a Witness."

Feelies: A feel for their music

By John Cortez special writer

The keepers of the crazy rhythms have returned.

The Feelies make their first Detroit-area appearance in two years tonight at the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor, touring in support of their fourth LP, "Time for a Witness," which may be their most focused effort yet.

It's another strong assemblage of searing twin guitars, richly monotone vocals and an explosive rhythm section. The album combines the best elements of the previous three releases, said bassist. Brenda Sauter.

we've come full circle.'

The band's debut, 1980's "Crazy Rhythms," was loaded with fantastic percussion, but much of the material was too murky and quirky to catch on at the time. The 1986 follow-up, "The Good Earth," exuded a melodic warmth but lacked clear, strong vocal and bass sounds. And 1988's "Only Life" had a clearer sound but the warmth was sacrificed, leaving the band with a slightly sterile sound, Sauter said.

Last year, the Feelies went into the studio, took the percussive feel of "Crazy Rhythms," the warmth of "The Good Earth," and the clarity of "Only Life" and came up with "There was a lesson to be "Time for a Witness" although a learned from each album," Sauter "few tracks, like-"Dom' it Again"

Feelies' sound is still tempo. They can go from broodingly slow to breakneck speed and back in a few furious bars. At their frenzied top speed, their screeching guitars and fiery rhythm section haze into one solid, endless chime the way a caf's wheels appear to gently roll backward when they're actually hurdling down the highway.

The Feelies' dependence on rhythm and speed translates well into a live performance, where lyrics are hard to hear anyway. Crowd response on this five-week tour has been favorable, Sauter said, and that helps feed the often frenetic shows.

"The speed of the show dependson the audience," she said. "It's also dictated by how wound up we are. Some nights are incredibly fast, and some are slower then rev up at the end." ... -

Stanley Demeski provide the soul behind the band's heart: the guitar interplay between songwriters Glenn Mercer and Bill Million.

THE TWO guitars act as second and third vocalists for the band, often beginning and ending songs with feedback-laden solos, with a couple more tossed into the middle so no one misses the point.

And the point is that the Feelies make music that move people to move. Those in attendance tonight can expect at least that. They also shouldn't be surprised to hear a few cover tunes from a variety of sources.

"Time for a Witness" includes a raucous cover of the Stooges' "Real Cool Time," and songs by acts from the Velvet Underground to Television to Jonathan Richman have been known to find their way onto the Feelies' set list.

Chickasaw Mudd Puppies? Brant Slay and Ben Reynolds, who've taken their brand of toe-tappin' music from sun-blistered porches in Georgia to the masses, just won't stand for such posturing.

During a show last year at the Royal Oak Music-Theatre, vocalist- harpist-stomp-boardist Brant Slay suddenly stopped before launching into another backwoods groove tune.

death of boxer Davey Moore after From a 1962 show is "Last Thoughts on Woody Gutherie," a gem that's worth the price of the set by itself. The seven-minute spokenword poem, the only known recording of Dylan reading one of his poems in public, is a vivid, touching tribute to his folk idol. Dylan's mid-'60s foray into pop is documented with "If You Gotta Go, Go Now" and "Sitting on a Barbed-Wire Fence." The haunting, psychedelic images of 1966's "Blonde on Blonde" are ably represented on the outtake, "She's Your Lover Now," a tune recorded with the Band in the mold of "Stuck Inside of Mobile."

Dylan's music become more introspective and less political by the time the '70s hit, but no less impactful: Three stark alternate takes from the painfully personal "Blood on the Tracks" appear here. Dylan, often prone to obscure allusion and apocalyptic imagery, shows his simple tender side in "If You See Her, Say Hello:" "Though our separation, it plerced me to the heart/She still lives inside of me, we've never been

STREET SENSE Don't try to convince him

O&E Monday, May 6, 1991

Dear Brabara.

. My boyfriend sometimes slips and calls me by my sister's first name. I get really upset, but he says that it doesn't mean anything. I don't agree, but I don't know why, and so I am having trouble convincing him. My sister and I are twins and so others have often confused us. Don't I have a right, with my boyfriend, not to be confused with her. Twin

Dear Twin,

You reaction to your boyfriend's "slips" are understandable.

Many psychologists, including me, believe in the principle of psychic determinism. That means that we do not believe that behavior is random; we believe that even slips of the tongue are determined by a previous thought or feeling. The trick is knowing how to understand what might otherwise seem to be random misnomers.

Of the answer is more complicated data one might expect, for example, your boyfriend had a dog with sister's name and so is thinking of the dog. Sometimes, the answer is simpler, for example, your boyfriend is thinking of your sister.

Whatever the truth, you sound un-happy and frustrated about your boyfriend. Why keep trying to convince him? Maybe the next one will have more empathy for the way that you feel without needing to be convinced.

There's also this anti-rock star attitude that comes across and wins over audiences. By the time they left the stage, people at the Royal Oak Music Theatre were stomping their feet and clapping their hands.

History of Chickasaw Mudd Pup-ples goes like this: Slay met Reynolds at art school in Athens and the two began playing local parties to-gether.

The band name? Well, after their car broke down near the Chickasaw River in Alabama and they kicked the mud off their boots, the name Chickasaw Mudd Puppies seemed appropriate.

Chickasaw Mudd Puppies go to great-lengths to re-create their environment, adding a clothes line, a picket fence, a few hubcaps and a rocking chair on the set.

"ONE OF our philosophies about playing in from an audience is that we don't want to be pretentious," Slay said. "We just want to have a Bood time.

'For me, there's been times when I've totally forgotten the set after we've finished. That, for me, is a good night. I'll say things that are totally stupid or we'll say something that's a little funny. We don't try to be comedians or anything. We're not a band that has this real serious look and says, 'We have these nine songs and let's burn right through them'

The Feelies will perform with guests, Chickasaw Mudd Puppies, Monday, May 6, at the Blind Pig, 208 S. First, Ann Arbor. Tickets are $9 in advance. For information, call 996-8555.

STREET CRACKS

Carey's recipe for success includes plenty of laughs

By Brenda Dooley ---staff writer

Comedian James Carrey said his legacy to America, if he could leave ione, would be simple - a recipe for grilled cheese sandwiches with applesauce.

Carrey suggests everyone try the culinary treat at least once. Because grilled cheese is one of Carrey's favorite foods, a friend asked him to test the cheesy/apple combination. Carrey said he was skeptical at first, but after the first bite, he was hooked.

"It's really good, try it," Carrey (said.)

A cast member of Fox Broadcasting's "In Living Color" comedy show, Carrey said he's "wanted to be a comedian ever since he can re-member.'

His first encounter with fame came in second grade. As a young student at a Catholic school, Carrey Easy," "Pink Cadillac," "The Deadsaid he remembers "monkeying Pool," "Peggy Sue Got Married." around" during music class. A nun spotted Carrey at the back of the ers." room, mocking students who were playing instruments.

and do that," Carrey said.

HE DID, performing a Three Stooges type dance before his classmates. Afterwards, the class applauded and Carrey's teacher asked Christmas assembly,

"That was my first taste of fame," Carrey said, laughing.

Later, at the holiday assembly, Carrey created a unique Santa show and "had one nun on her hands and knees" laughing, which was no easy accomplishment, he said.

Carrey grew up "in and around Toronto," leaving at age 17 to explore Los Angeles. Since then Carrey ' said he's gotten a "series of good -breaks," gradually gaining recognition for his acting and comedy.

He's appeared in several feature films, including "Earth Girls Are "Once Bitten," and "Finders Keep-

'When you're live you have more control over what you're doing," he him to play Santa in the school, said. "But I'm having fun on 'In Living Color,' too."

> CARREY SAID ."In Living Color" creators talked him into joining the show, even though at first he didn'twant to get locked into a television vseries.

"I decided to do it ("In Living Color") because it was different - it. had a hard edge. And I'm not stuck into one character."

His ideas for characters, Carrey said, "come from me. And sometimes I don't know where they come from."

Currently Carrey's on hiatus from the show and plans to appear in comedy clubs throughout the U.S., touring until August. Locally, he's scheduled to perform at the Comedy Castle in Royal Oak May 12-13.

He's played at several comedy clubs over the years, including The Comedy Store and The Improv in Hollywood; Dangerfields and Catch a Rising Star in New York; the Comedy & Magic Club in Hermosa Beach, Calif.; and Cobbs Pub in San Francisco. His last visit to Michigan was more than a year ago when he played at Royal Oak's Comedy Castle, he said.

CARREY'S COMEDY often involves "some kind of behavioral thing we do," sometimes highlighting people's impulses or personality quirks, he said."

"I think comedy is reassuring to people," he added, because it allows them to make fun of human traits they might not otherwise talk about. "I like to focus on things I think are dishonest or hypocritical," Carrey added.

Asked what direction he wants his career to take, Carrey said he'd like to secure a few film roles, write a screenplay and do whatever he wants to after that.

"Whatever I'm doing I have fun," he said.

On off times, Carrey said he likes to paint, sculpt and find ways to use his creativity.

"If I have more than a week off," you'll probably find me in the selfhelp section of a bookstore. I have energy and it has to go somewhere," he said.

James Carrey will perform May 12-13 at the Comedy Castle, 269E. Fourth, Royal Oak. Admission is $13. For more information. call 542-9900.

When in Dublin, do as the Dubliners do

Steel girders and glass tower high above shoppers in a mall near St. Stephen's Green in Dublin.

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Dublin, Ireland — A place where nothing is great, but everything is 'grand;'' and talk is cheap but the "crack" is priceless.

Those are the little things an Irish-American learns visiting this Irish city. But on his quest to share some kindred spirit with his brothers in Ireland another fact becomes evidently clear: a.) You can run but you can't hide from the eye of America and, b.) being an Irish-American doesn't necessarily make you Irish.

The people who inhabit this European city are another thing entirely. God love 'em.

From the runny-nosed urchins who defiantly run out in front of traffic kicking soccer balls to the pesky teenagers who cross-body block you from behind on the sidewalk and promptly turn and say politely, "Sorry," and proceed mowing down other pedestrians in their path, Dubliners are a delight.

While Irish-American visitors tend to imprison themselves in tour buses with drivers describing the sights like leprechauns, our guides let us, to quote a line from "Dead Poet's Society," suck the marrow from the bone of Dublin life.

Jim Walsh and Brian (pronounced Ba-reen)-Wright and John Tynan would usher us on this cultural exchange.

Walsh and Tynan greeted us at Dublin Airport. The proper introduction to Ireland only needs one thing at 10 a.m. after a Trans-Atlantic flight — a pint of Guinness.

THE BLACK stout looks like the refuse from an oil change with a creamy head on top. Signs around Dublin pubs proclaim Guinness is good for you.

En route to our bed and breakfast, we realized we were foreigners.

The steering wheel was where the glove compartment was supposed to be and when we flipped on the turn signal, the wipers came on. To top it off, everyone was driving on the left side of the road — now that's foreign.

From the onset it's apparent Irish drivers obviously take out the years of invasions, oppression, famine and unemployment in the way they drive.

Coupled with the fact the roads in Ireland make our alleys look like the Lodge Freeway, our little Nissan suddenly became four wheels from hell.

"One thing, don't give anybody a break," Tynan tells us. "because they won't give you one."

Once we arrive at our bed and breakfast, we ditch the car. The green bus is for us.

DUBLIN AT night is gorgeous. City lights reflect off the River Liffey as hordes of young people cross over the O'Connell Bridge to infiltrate Grafton Street.

Nearly 50 percent of the population of Ireland is 25 or younger.

Youthful idealism, though, is doused quickly by unemployment, which is high despite Ireland being one of the most well-educated countries in the world.

Many of its people will emigrate to the United States, England or elsewhere looking for work.

Walsh, 23, and Wright, 22, want to stick it out. Walsh works as a stock controller for Bus Eireann, the Irish equivalent to Greyhound. Wright is a marketing executive, recently graduated from college.

All the daily rigors of work and school are put to rest as Friday night in Dublin becomes engulied in one mass fraternity party.

OUR AGENDA includes visits to three Dublin pubs — the Long Haul, Sinnott's and Davy Byrne's. Each place is wallto-wall with people in their 20s and early 30s.

Upon walking to a new pub, Walsh assures us the women at the next-place are more beautiful than the ones at the previous establishment. Of course, this natural progression might have something to do with the growing number of pints consumed at each stop.

Upon arrival at the final place, a striking brunette steps over to chat with Walsh. He sheepishly returns to the group and is promptly childed.

"All the wide receivers get the girls," said one partier to Walsh, who plays American football in Dublin.

From there, it's on to the Olympia Theatre where Dublin blues harmonica player Don Baker will perform. The place is "black," an Irish term meaning crowded, with the standing room only audience making for a hot, steamy night.

WE WAIT IN line for Guinness in tall paper cups, which somehow seems akin to putting champagne in a Gatorade squeeze bottle.

The unpardonable sin is then committed. With our cups sitting on top of the bar we naturally grab them. We're met with a stern look from the bartender, a woman with black hair and a glare to match. She tells us to put them back; She hadn't put the head on the beer yet.

"Foreigners," she mumbles shaking her head.

As Baker walls on the harmonica and people dance in the aisle ways, it suddenly occurs to us we've only had one hour sleep in the past 24.

Undoubtedly, we figure, our heads will ring like the bells at Christ Church Cathedral before Mass next day.

The next morning, no headache, no upset stomach . . . We conclude, indeed, Guinness is good for you.

Of course, the sights of Dublin are taken in the next day: Trinity College, the General Post Office, St. Stephen's Green and Moore Street Market where toothless women hawk candy bars and cigarette lighters from baby strollers.

"Tomorrow you'll read about how a consignment of candy bars mysteriously came up missing somewhere," Walsh says, surveying the scene.

SATURDAY NIGHT includes a a listen to some traditional Irish music at place called Hughes. We agree to meet Jim and Brian at a place called Madigan's in downtown Dublin across from Pizzaland. We wait. . . and wait. Nearly 1½ hours after our scheduled rendezvous we decide to catch the bus back to the bed and breakfast.

On our way to the bus stop on O'Connell Street, we notice there is another Madigan's - next to, you guessed it, a Piz-zaland (and we thought pepperoni imperialism was left to the Ilitches and Monaghans). Inside, we find Jim and Brian looking at their watches. The real face of Irish life, though, reveals itself on Sunday. One of the local soccer teams, Shamrock Rovers, is making its debut at the Royal Dublin Society against St. Patrick Athletic. A crowd of 22,000 jams the lush grassy facility, which is normally used for horse shows (obviously, fertilizer is never a problem). A friend of Walsh's, David McGrath, reluctantly agrees to escort us to the match. McGrath is a devoted Bohemians supporter - a rival of both the Rovers and St. Pat's. For him, walking into the enemy's stadium is like asking Rudolf Nurevey to play Twister. A pre-match get-together soothes his indignity, though. With a smile, McGrath presents his visitor with a red scarf of his favorite soccer team.

O'Connor apparently is a common name in Ireland. There's pubs, even this restaurant in Kilarney bearing a familiar name for Larry O'Connor.

During the day, Dubliners hustle to and fro and buses cruise up and down O'Connell Street in downtown Dublin. "I COULDN'T let you go home without having one of these," he said, presenting the scarf like a religious article. We talk a little soccer, but the conversation quickly turns to American football, something that permeated the Irish sporting scene. McGrath is a wide receiver on the Dublin Tornado along with Walsh.

"Bo Schembechler is the president of a baseball team?," asks McGrath incredulously. "He seems far too intense for that."

On the subject of intensity, McGrath assures us that Irish soccer fans are much more tame than the British variety. This holds true until the referce misses an obvious foul on a Shamrock Rovers' player late in the second half.

A howl goes up from the terraces, a place where a team's most fervent supporters stand. Several beer cans are hurled onto the field along with a smoke bomb.

The match ends in a 0-0 draw.

Afterward, we go to Wright's home for dinner. Boiled potatoes, green beans and pork hre served, as close as it gets to traditional Irish food. Wright switches on the TV to a football game between the Buffalo Bills and the Cincinnati Bengals.

Then we head over to Corrigan's. Inside, the place looks, like a family reunion. Young and old alike laugh and enjoy one last drink before the reality of work week sets in.

THE PLACE closes at 11:30 p.m. with the barkeep yelling for everyone to evacuate and no one listening. Finally, we head to the door with the realization our Dublin Days are down to minutes.

We take in one last sight down the street — Kilmainham-Jail. This is where several members of the 1916 Easter Uprising were imprisoned and later executed. Rebel James Contolly, in fact, was injured and in a wheelchair when the British propped him up and shot him.

Anger sparked by the incident led the Irish people to side with the band of revolutionaries ultimately leading to Ireland's independence.

"We've had a great time showing you ground," says Wright as we look at the iron gate of the prison. "We go by these places every day and sort of take it for granted."

But one fite of Irish life had yet to be experienced. We head down to Larry's Take Away for some fish and chips. The cholesterol, not to mention the salt, would give a rabbit a heart atlack.

Nonetheless, the batter dipped fish and fried potatoes are savored to the last greasy piece. Finally, at this moment, we thought to have escaped the shadow of America and all its culture.

At least it was until we turned the corner. Then, there it was in all its bright lights and splendor -- a 7-Eleven.
