COM shares about poverty alleviation in Polk County

By Cora Stimpson
coras@bolivarmonews.com

In honor of National Poverty in America Awareness Month, Community Outreach Ministries (COM) has taken the time to share some of the ways they are helping alleviate poverty in Polk County.

Poverty can include deficits socially, physically, and economically. Opportunities and availability are both a big part of poverty in America. Poverty can be seen in deficiencies that include, but are not limited to, food, water, housing, social connections, and education.

Executive Director of COM, Micah Titterington, has been a part of the organization for three and a half years.

COM, though, has been around since 1999 when it was first called Bolivar Area Ministerial Alliance (BAMA). The name was changed to Community Outreach Ministries in order to better communicate the goal of the organization. Titterington says the goal of COM is "to empower our neighbors to experience hope-filled lives free from all forms of poverty."

This goal focuses on the complete individual, looking to take a holistic approach to poverty alleviation.

The organization believes that "God has given each person unique gifts and talents that can be used in building solutions," according to "COM's Philosophy of Partnering with Those in Poverty."

Because of this, COM identifies every individual as someone to partner with, seeking growth for every party involved, and not just those who are experiencing poverty.

This view has distinguished the way COM approaches situations with those in poverty.

Because the organization recognizes that each individual is unique and gifted, they believe, "we must be quick to identify and call out these strengths and empower our partners to use these strengths."

COM's philosophy is that, "our work must involve collaboration with those we seek to help."

This view opposes the one that has been displayed widely in the world. The common view is that people in poverty need immediate relief at only certain points of time.

COM believes "such approaches strip the power and dignity from the one being

A 16-year-old from Halfway was injured in a single-vehicle crash near Halfway at 8 a.m. on Monday, Jan. 10.

According to the Missouri State Highway Patrol crash report, the teen was northbound in a 2005 Toyota Scion on Rt. H, two miles south of Halfway, when he traveled off the right side of the roadway and struck a ditch.

The report says that he overcorrected, crossing the roadway, striking a fence, and overturning.

The teen, who the report said was wearing a seatbelt, was seriously injured and transported by a Citizens Memorial Hospital ambulance to Cox South Hospital in Springfield.

The vehicle was totaled and towed by B&B Wrecker, per the report.

Cold world out there

By Quincy Young
quincy@bolivarmonews.com

Many people don't often complain about a mild winter weather that ranges in the 50s and 60s, but as the daytime wanes, a chilly air begins to take hold and the unsheltered individuals of the community are forced to find a place to escape the bitter cold of the night.

The Polk County Warming Center is one such location where people are welcome to stay for safety, shelter, warmth, and social connection. The center was established by Polk County Cares, a local faith-based organization that addresses concerns regarding homelessness, crime, and addiction.

Co-directors of the warming center, Traci Rickman and Deanna Counts, have led members of Polk County Cares in this first year of establishing the center as a space for unsheltered individuals in the local area.

"In the very beginning, several of the Polk County Cares board were the founding members that birthed the vision, so we just brought light to the vision," Rickman says. "Several of them started with an idea, and they didn't know exactly, I think, what they were going to do with it, because there was a need – and still a need, I think – for an after-school program and then a neighborhood program." Rickman says that the warming center was "just one of the things that has blossomed out of that founding member group."

"The whole thing about Polk County Cares is that everything is built upon faith-based relationships, and that is the umbrella that we're under with Polk County Cares. That is what our ministry is about. Our ministry is about seeing them one-on-one," she continues.

Out of this mission has produced several remarkable stories where the guests at the warming center develop meaningful connections with the center's volunteers, and some even find redemption and reconciliation with loved ones. The co-directors of Polk County Cares have even mentioned that while they have the objective to provide a warm shelter, they are also open to helping their guests in other areas of their lives and getting them connected to beneficial resources in the community.

Upon volunteer availability, the Polk County Warming Center opens its doors on nights when the forecast is predicted to be 32 degrees or below, opening at 5 p.m. until 8 a.m. the following morning. Many of the unsheltered guests have cell phones and are able to check for updates on the warming center's Facebook page to see if the facility will be open.

The facility was organized as a men's warming center, since most of the unsheltered population that use the facility are male; however, both men and women ages 18 and up are welcome to use the facility. All of the cots are currently positioned in one room, but they can be moved in order to create separate sleeping quarters for men and women. A long-term goal of Polk County Cares is to create a room specifically for women, and as the facility improves over time, the organization would also like to have a more defined storage area and an office space.

The warming center has several amenities, including showers and storage lockers. In the future, the Polk County Cares team would like to obtain a washer and dryer to ensure that guests are able to have clean clothes. The center is equipped with comfortable furniture, and guests are also welcome to enjoy coffee, hot chocolate, tea, and snacks.

In the beginning stages of establishing the warming center, the early members of Polk County Cares based and adapted many of their policies and procedures from the East Sunshine Church of Christ in Springfield. To keep everyone at peace with one another, the main rule at the facility is to be respectful, which encompasses the request to be kind to others, refrain from using profanity, and not be disruptive after the lights are turned off for the night.

With the assistance of the community, the team at Polk County Cares has managed to keep the facility open and to provide a secure environment to the guests of the warming center.

"We opened this up because we have a problem. We're not turning a blind eye to the fact that we have unsheltered people in our community," Rickman remarks. "Some people in the community believe that because we have a warming center open that there's been an influx of people, and that has not been the case. On our coldest day so far, we've only had five people come in."

Upon opening the facility, the board expected to serve about seven to ten people at a time, and as Rickman says, while they've had more than five people at the center at a time, they've not yet had to fill all 14 cots.

Thriving on volunteerism, grants, private funding, and donations, Polk County Cares is working within their means to ensure that their guests are provided a comfortable and accommodating stay. In order to accomplish this, several organizations and churches have reached out to the co-directors in order to collaborate and provide assistance. Rickman says that Polk County Health Center donated the cots, and Citizens Memorial Healthcare has been providing laundry services to ensure that guests have clean sheets.

The establishment of the warming center has been beneficial for other organizations as well. Travis Dewitt of Community Outreach Ministries explained that last winter, COM spent around $2,000 to pay for hotel rooms for unsheltered individuals. Now that the warming center is in full swing, COM can save hotel costs by simply referring unsheltered adults to the center.

As the volunteer coordinator for Polk County Cares, Rickman works closely with a committee to recruit and organize volunteer efforts, asking people in the community to donate their time to greet guests, manage overnight shifts, and clean and organize the facility.

"We are only as good as our volunteers," she says. "That is huge in trying to bring in the people with the hearts, train the people, and move forward in that direction."

Doing the most good for others, though, can sometimes mean being available around the clock. Last month, Polk County Cares members and volunteers kept the facility open from 5 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 22 until noon on Christmas Day. Despite this, they were able to provide shelter for five people who would have otherwise weathered through the sub-zero temperatures.

Initially, Polk County Cares board members were hoping to get organizations in the community involved and committed to volunteering for a particular night.

"We have three nights that have been adopted right now, two by churches and one by the Elks. So basically what that consists of is our scheduling coordinator makes one phone call, and she's like, 'We want to activate you for this night.' Then, that coordinator for that church/organzation leaps into action and goes ahead and mobilizes the volunteers within their organization," Rickman explains.

This process with one phone call is much easier, as opposed to having to try to fill multiple four-hour time slots for a night.

Since opening the Polk County Warming Center in November, the team at Polk County Cares has been accepting volunteers in order to increase their pool of helpers for the unclaimed nights and timeslots. They are even continuing discussions with other area organizations and churches to generate interest in volunteerism at the facility.

Increasing the number of volunteers will also diminish the likelihood of burn-out among the recurring volunteers. Anyone interested in helping out at the facility is trained through "worst case scenarios," although so far, there's been no problems.

"We have wonderful volunteers. They are amazing," says Counts. "It's been wonderful. We've not had any major issues. We prepared for the worst possible things, and I feel like everything's gone pretty smoothly."

Rickman and Counts say that the individuals and organizations have rallied together to support the mission of providing a warm shelter to Polk County. They say that this community effort is not limited only to Bolivar, and that "all of Polk County has taken ownership" of the warming center to make it possible.

"We just feel that God has a hand on this, because there's been so many things happen. And we started out saying that if God is in this, it'll succeed. And if he's not, then it won't, because there's been so many things throughout the years that people have tried, and it's just not lasted," Counts says.

At the end of the day, the labor of love and generosity from volunteers and donors is rewarded through meaningful impacts on the guests at the warming center by providing the very basic human needs of shelter and security.

"To be able to lay your head down and sleep and know you're safe, I feel like that is huge," Counts says.

Donations that are currently being accepted at the warming center are winter gloves, stocking caps, scarves, and warm underclothes. They will also accept canned goods, travel-size hygiene items, and shelving or other organizational equipment.

The Polk County Warming Center is located at 404 W South St. in Bolivar. For more information about volunteering or donating at the warming center, email polkcountycarebolivar@gmail.com, and check Facebook for updates on the Warming Center — Polk County Cares page.

Welcome Home PCHS: Freya

“She completes our family”

By Alana Hindman

Julie Lebowitz lives in St. Charles County but adopted her dog Freya, from the Polk County Humane Society or PCHS. Her husband had an alert set up through Petfinder, because he had always wanted a Husky or Malamute breed.

Once they were notified that Freya was available, they made plans to travel to Bolivar. Due to time constraints, they weren't able to arrive until after PCHS closing hours. It was such a blessing that one of the foster parents allowed Freya and her siblings to stay at her home until the couple was able to get there.

“We adopted Freya because she was so sweet with our children who were 10 and 6 at the time. Both dogs were friendly with us adults and our other dog... We always add a middle name to our pets after we get to know them better. We settled on calling her “Princess Freya” since she is so beautiful with her white coloring and blue eyes. She is our only pet to earn a second first name and not a middle name,” shared Julie Lebowitz.

Freya is about a year and a half old and weighs 52 pounds. She has had hip problems since she was a puppy, and this issue causes her to limp if she overexerts herself. She can't jump on the bed or in the car without assistance from her owners. They have waited a long, four months to get an orthopedic surgeon which they will visit this month.

Prior to getting the appointment, the owners were following the PCHS website to see if any updates on Freya's siblings were posted, as they were wondering if any others from the litter suffered from hip issues.

my supervisor, Morgan Popp, holding her recently adopted puppy. Unbeknownst to us, we had adopted puppies from the same small shelter almost exactly a year apart. The oddest part of his is that the shelter is several hours south for both of us,” said Lebowitz.

Freya loves belly rubs and her brother, Kitty, who is an Alaskan Malamute rescue dog that weighs over eighty pounds. She “screams and cries” if she knows her brother is getting to do something, and she isn't able to join in.

She knows several commands like shake, sit, down, take it, drop it, outside, walk, and on your bed. According to her owners she is also a singer.

“She and her brother howl along with emergency vehicles and tornado sirens. If you sing to her, then she will sing back. It's her husky song,” revealed Lebowitz.

The family has 4 rescue pets, two cats and two dogs. They “felt strongly” about rescuing as many animals as possible.

“We like to tell everyone we see that you can adopt well-behaved and beautiful animals from shelters, including purebreds...If you want a purebred, then you can set an alert with Petfinder to find ones near you. We had a “hard to fit home” with cats, young children, and another large dog, but we still found four perfect animals that worked for us, concluded Lebowitz.

MU Extension offers online Master Gardener classes

By BH-FP news staff news@bolivarmonews.com

The University of Missouri Extension Office is offering Missouri Master Gardener online training beginning Sunday, Jan. 15.

Classes cover basic information for subjects like botany, vegetable gardening, fruit production, soil and plant nutrition, insects and diseases, and pesticide safety.

According to a press release from the MU Extension Office, this core training session along with 30 hours of volunteer service are necessary for trainees to become a certified Master Gardener. Students are encouraged to ask a current Master Gardener for assistance finding volunteer opportunities.

Classes are administered as scripted and narrated presentations via the Canvas learning platform, allowing trainees to learn at their own pace. To pass the course, students must earn a 70% composite score on their chapter quizzes.

“One of [the rewards of gardening] is the satisfaction of sharing your plant knowledge with others. The Master Gardener program was initiated to do just that,” said David Trinklein, state horticulture specialist for the MU Extension.

The program's main goal is to serve others, as exemplified in its motto “helping others learn to grow.”

The 14 classes will be taught by Trinklein and Sarah Denkler, MU Extension horticulture specialist.

“These classes represent a viable option for people who can't take the weekly classes in person,” Trinklein said. “There are Master Gardener programs in every state of the union and in most provinces of Canada.”

Students must register by Saturday, Jan. 14 in order to participate in the spring 2023 online training. For more information about Master Gardener classes, visit mg.missouri.edu.

15 QUESTIONS WITH Brad Hadank

Senior at Bolivar High School

Family? My Dad, Joe; Mom, Tracy; and two brothers, Jack and Ryan.

Hometown? I moved to Bolivar from Wentzville when I was three.

What are your plans after you graduate? As of right now, I plan to go to the University of Central Missouri and study Digital Media Production.

Who has been your biggest mentor? Coach Travis Gregory, he was my seventh and eighth grade basketball coach, and he made such a huge impact on my life way beyond the game of basketball. Coach Gregory just has always put others above himself, and I have always looked up to him for that.

Best advice you have been given. Least said, least mended.

What current trend do you just not get? Everyone my age will judge me for this, but I just do not get Be Real. I just don't see the hype.

Social media... love it or hate it? I love it, but that may just be because that's where I post the highlight videos that I make for Bolivar sports.

What professional sports figure would you like to meet? I would like to meet Collin Morikawa. I would like to meet him because he is a very successful golfer who also seems to be very humble and he displays great character.

What did it mean to you to receive the Logan Middleton Memorial Sportsmanship award at the Blue and Gold tournament? It's a huge honor. One of my goals in competition has always been to lift up others around me, whether those people are teammates or even competitors. The most important thing in sports, in my opinion, is your attitude and character, because those are the things that people will remember, and those are the things that carry into life. So receiving this award allows me to show others how important character really is, and hopefully it can motivate many other people to lift up others at all times.

Most irrational fear? Flying

What is your favorite sport to play? Honestly, it has to be golf. Because golf teaches you so many life lessons in just one round, whether that's how to deal with adversity, how to respect your opponent, etc. Also, golf is just a great way to get outside, get off electronics, and just play.

Favorite movie of all time? Definitely Cars, with Planes coming in at a close second. Disney knows how to make a good movie. But the best movie soundtrack is definitely Pure Country.

What advice would you give younger Liberators about teamwork? I would say that teamwork is the most important thing. No one can be successful without a strong team behind them. Whether that's basketball where you need to be very connected and work together with your teammates, or even in a sport like golf where you play solo. You need a good team because those teammates still push you to get better, and to be successful you need people like that.

Favorite memory being a Liberator? Honestly, winning the Logan Middleton Memorial Sportsmanship Scholarship has been one of my favorite memories. It's just so awesome to be able to represent Bolivar with this award.

What music is playing in your car when you are on the road? 100.5 The Wolf. It's country music and the Bobby Bones Show is on in the morning.

Managing Your Persistent Fears And Anxieties

By Stan Popovich

Are you looking for all of the answers on how to reduce your persistent fears and anxieties?

Fear and anxiety can ruin your life if you do not know how to overcome it.

As a result, here is a brief list of techniques that a person can use to help manage their everyday anxieties, stresses, and fears.

Take your fears apart: When facing a current or upcoming task that overwhelms you with a lot of anxiety, divide the task into a series of smaller steps and then complete each of the smaller tasks one step at a time. Completing these smaller activities will make the stress more manageable and increases your chances of success.

Take a break: Sometimes we get stressed out when everything happens all at once. When this happens, take a deep breath and try to find something to do for a few minutes to get your mind off of the problem. A person can get some fresh air, listen to some music, or do an activity that will give them a fresh perspective on things.

Get all of the facts of the situation: Gathering the facts of a certain event can prevent us from relying on exaggerated and fearful assumptions. By focusing on the facts, a person can rely on what is reality and what is not. This is a great way to take control of your mental health.

Use Self-Visualization: Sometimes, we can get anxious over a task that we will have to perform in the near future. When this happens, visualize yourself doing the task in your mind. For instance, you have to play in the championship volleyball game in front of a large group of people in the next few days. Before the big day comes, imagine yourself playing the game in your mind. By doing this, you will be better prepared when the time comes.

You can't predict the future: While the consequences of a particular fear may seem real, there are usually other factors that cannot be anticipated and can affect the results of any situation. We may be ninety-nine percent correct in predicting the future, but all it takes is for that one percent to make a world of difference.

Think of a red stop sign: At times, a person might encounter a fearful thought that may be difficult to manage. When this happens, visualize a red stop sign, which can serve as a reminder to stop thinking about that thought. Regardless of how scary the thought may be, do not dwell on it. This technique is great in dealing with your negative thinking and will help reduce your fears.

Get some help: Sometimes, it helps to be able to talk to someone about your stressful situations. Talking to a trusted friend, counselor, or clergyman can give you additional advice and insights on how to deal with your current problem. Overcoming fear and anxiety takes practice. In time, you will become better able to deal with your stressful problems.

"helped" and create unnecessary dependency on the helper.

Instead of using a system that brings those in poverty constantly back for more, creating a cycle that is destructive and repetitive, COM seeks to partner with those in need. This approach treats everyone involved as valuable, and COM notes that, "creating space for our partners to do the work also may bring about solutions that we otherwise would not have conceived if we had approached the situation in a one-directional way."

COM focuses not only on relief from present circumstances that may include systemic barriers, but also on the development of the individual.

Development asks the question, "What were/are the root causes of your instability?" and then looks to move the person toward stability and resilience. In the end, the goal is to build the individual to a better place than they were in during their crisis.

This shift in focus empowers the person, making them "no longer the recipient of help," but rather someone who "contributes and participates in pursuing their own stability and resiliency."

Recently, COM has undergone some new renovations to foster community and individual development.

The food pantry is the newest change, as it is now arranged like a typical store. Titterington believes the openness and ease of navigation around the pantry makes it easier for people to strike up conversations with those around them.

The food pantry started with BAMA, and is a very influential part of COM. They serve about 450 to 500 households a month.

Before going into the pantry, though, COM takes advantage of the first connection point when people are waiting to begin their shopping. They hold a small session with the people there to teach a lesson. Titterington says the short lesson focuses on various practical life skills like employment, nutrition, and finances.

In addition to the connection point and lesson, those who visit the pantry have a built-in learning experience with the point system that COM uses to distribute food. Given a certain amount of points, people learn what foods they need and how to best use what they have.

Bigger classes are also offered and encouraged. These are called Project Thrive classes, and they are beneficial not only for learning life skills, but also for building community with others.

Another program offered is the Pathways program, which is similar to Project Thrive, but it is much more individualized. In this program, people meet with someone from COM one-on-one for specific personal growth.

In addition to attending one of these programs, people are given extra points to use at the pantry for extra purchases.

Through these programs, individuals not only get the immediate help that they need, but they are also able to partner with COM in finding solutions for themselves. This facilitates greater stability in the lives of those in poverty, as they will be better able to get connected with jobs, a supportive community, and a wealth of practical knowledge.

Titterington says there is a "fair amount of need" for these resources in Polk County. He reports that COM sees a lot of people come to the organization each week. Overall, he believes we "really need more programs fostering development," in the community.

In the past few years, Titterington says that the food pantry has been a huge help to those in poverty. He recalls that it was very beneficial especially during the COVID-19 pandemic.

The resources that COM offers are very helpful for anyone in poverty, but Titterington draws attention to the idea that a supportive community is one of the most important parts of helping those in need.

He says that along with donating and volunteering with COM, "getting to know your neighbors" is very important in helping alleviate poverty in Polk County. He believes that a strong community that supports each other reduces need.

COM believes that, "in order to see healing and human flourishing, we must help to create meaningful, authentic communities for and with those in poverty," giving special emphasis to the power of local church groups to bring people in and show love to them.

The Official Poverty Measure in the United States, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, was at a rate of 11.6% in 2021, which is 37.9 million people in poverty.

In Polk County, the poverty rate is 15.3%, with a rate of 20.5% in Bolivar. That is one fifth of our community.

Non-profit organizations in Polk County work to dwindle these numbers down, but they can't do it alone. Visit BolivarCOM.org for more information and ways to get involved.

Donations and volunteers are always appreciated, and the most important thing is to love your neighbor as yourself, creating strong and lasting bonds to build a loving and supportive community.

Our family serving your family, since 1958.

Scientists and Inventors

George Washington Carver, Scientist

Written by: Carolyn Mueller Illustrated by: Nicole Hartfelder

George walked down the steps of the United States Capitol after testifying about tariff protections before the House of Representatives on behalf of the United Peanut Association of America. He had convinced Congress of the importance of the peanut plant, and his audience had given him a standing ovation. In 1921, few black men were given an audience before the House of Representatives, much less had their message met with applause.

"Sir," a group of school kids approached him on the sidewalk below the Capitol. "Are you the Peanut Man?" they asked.

"Well," George mused. "I guess I am!"

George had an unlikely journey to get to this place.

He'd been born in Diamond Grove, Missouri just a year before slavery became outlawed in that state. At a week old, he and his mother, Mary, were kidnapped by slave raiders and taken to Kentucky. Moses Carver, the white farmer who owned the land where George was born, was able to get the baby back, though without Mary. Moses and his wife, Susan, raised George, teaching him to read and write.

"How'd you get to know so much about peanuts?" one little boy asked.

George replied, "I teach agriculture at the Tuskegee Institute. So, I know a lot about plants. I left Neosho High School in Missouri after being disappointed in my schooling. I moved to Kansas, where I graduated high school and applied to and was accepted at Highland College."

"So, you went to Highland College and learned all about peanuts?"

"No," George answered. "They rejected me when they found out I was black. So, I attended Simpson College, a school that admitted all qualified applicants. Then I went to Iowa State Agricultural School to study botany. I graduated with my Bachelor of Science degree in 1894, followed by my master's degree in 1896."

"And then you were the Peanut Man!" the boy shouted.

"Well, my education did help me learn about plants. That's why it's important to study hard and learn as much as possible! I worked at Tuskegee alongside educator Booker T. Washington. I taught farmers how to replenish worn down soil introducing nitrogen-fixing plants like peanuts, soybeans, and sweet potatoes. I came up with countless uses for these crops by creating recipes and commercial products. I showed farmers how to use compost to enrich their soil. These sustainable methods of farming helped small farmers grow more food."

George reached in his pocket and pulled out a bag of peanuts which he offered to the children.

"And now," George told them. "You can call me the Peanut Man," he said with a laugh.

The kids may have seen only the Peanut Man. But Carver was an agricultural scientist and inventor, who revolutionized the farming industry with his soil depletion studies. The George Washington Carver National Monument opened in 1953, the first national monument dedicated to a black man.

The University of Missouri Extension Office will be hosting a five-class series to give information to producers who are interested in selling food at local farmers markets.

A news release from the Polk County MU Extension said that these classes will teach farmers about state regulations, food prices, sales tax, sales boosts, and produce incentive programs.

The courses will take place from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. on Monday through Friday, Jan. 23 through Jan. 27 via Zoom.

Sessions include the following topics:

- January 23: Food pricing and sales tax at farmers markets; available resources for producers through MU Extension and Missouri Department of Agriculture.
- January 24: Supplemental Nutrition Program (SNAP) and Double Up Food Bucks
- January 25: State

regulations for selling meat and eggs at farmers markets

- January 27: Missouri Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program and WIC Farmers Market Nutrition Program vouchers

Classes will be taught by representatives from the MU Extension Food Systems Network, Missouri Department of Agriculture, Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services, MarketLink, and the Mid-America Regional Council. The series is sponsored in part by the Missouri Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education program (SARE).

"This series will help farmers and other food producers gain knowledge to help them sell their food products at farmers markets," said Leslie Bertsch, member of the MU Extension Food Systems Network.

Participants will be able to ask questions and will be able to access the recordings for all sessions, except for Friday's session, for a limited amount of time after the live sessions take place.

Vouchers from the Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program and WIC Farmers Market Nutrition Program can only be accepted in the Zoom class on Friday, Jan. 27 or a session through the Missouri Department of Agriculture.

The cost to attend all sessions is $10. To participate in the training, individuals can register by visiting extension.missouri.edu/, clicking on the Events tab, locating the event title "Selling Food at the Farmers Market 2023," and completing the registration information.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

What's it like to do a reality show with his wife, Lisa Rinna? Go to Parade.com/hamlin to find out.

Walter Scott Asks...

HARRY HAMLIN

The L.A. Law and Mad Men star, 71, joins Anne Rice's Mayfair Witches (Jan. 8 on AMC+) in the role of Cortland Mayfair, the reigning patriarch of the Mayfair clan of witches. Cortland may not have the magical power that the females do, but he has a voracious appetite for money, earthly power and life, so when the new heir—Rowan (Alexandra Daddario)—is revealed, he attempts to lure her into his circle.

While the Mayfair Witches deals with magic and its abuse of power, isn't it also a dysfunctional family story? Absolutely. And Cortland is trying to hold it together. As the patriarch, I'm doing the best I can to make sure that whatever the Mayfair Witches do, they do it right, and with élan. I don't have any powers

What kind of man is Cortland? He's extremely narcissistic. He doesn't give a damn what people think about him. He wants to have fun all the time and spend money; there's got to be money to spend because he lives a very lavish lifestyle in a big mansion. So yeah, he wants to make sure that the monies will keep coming in. But he's a lush.

where I can lift things or see through things or breathe fire, or anything like that, but I'm still powerful.

What's the craziest thing that happened while you were filming? They originally introduced me in episode 1 and it was a rather tepid introduction. They decided to rewrite the first scene, my opening scene, and said, "Well, you're going to either have an alligator or a snake in your hands." And so I had to audition this alligator and this 10-foot-long snake. They came to my trailer and the alligator failed miserably; his audition did not go well. He didn't move at all. So, it was like, "Okay, that's not going to work." But the snake was very lively and moved around a lot. It's the first time my costar was a 10-foot-long python, so that was kind of interesting.

And they didn't ask you if you were afraid of snakes? Yeah, they asked. I'm not afraid of snakes or reptiles. I'm only afraid of one animal, and that's a skunk.

As the father of two daughters, do you think that a female-centric show like this is a positive step for women in the industry? Absolutely. Yeah, this is about empowerment. It's a kind of tweak on empowerment, but it is empowerment, nevertheless. I think it's going to be well-received within the feminist community, for sure.

Yo're in 80 for Brady (Paramount, in theaters Feb. 3). What was it like to work with Lily Tomlin, Jane Fonda, Sally Field and Rita Moreno? It was amazing. I just saw the movie a couple of days ago and it's really great. It's so charming and it's got a great sweet spot in it. Look, these are iconic women. They are extraordinary and they're great to work with. They're so open and so heartfelt in the way that they work. I was very, very fortunate to be in that cast.

When you look back, what would you tell your younger self when you were just starting out? "Do exactly what you did. Don't change a thing." Because I've had exactly the career that I wanted to have. I wanted to be an actor and do character work in films and on stage. And that's exactly the career I've had, and I've been able to raise my two kids and put them to bed every night, I didn't have to be on location for years.

Was L.A. Law one of the best times of your career? It certainly was. It was five years of being deeply involved in something that I loved doing. And the cast, a better bunch of people you couldn't find. So, it was definitely a highlight. But there have been others.

What are some of the other highlights? Your first movie is always an important milestone in your life, and it was Movie Movie with George C. Scott. This character that I'm playing now is as much fun as I had playing that character, and that's been 40-some-odd years since I've had as much fun playing a character. P

MOVIE DAD: FINDING MYSELF AND MY FAMILY, ON SCREEN AND OFF

(APPLAUSE THEATRE & CINEMA BOOKS, IN STORES AND ONLINE, $30)

In a career that spans nearly seven decades, Emmy-nominated actor Paul Dooley, 94, has worked in film, TV and stage, appearing in hundreds of movies, shows and plays. You probably recognize him from such film classics as Breaking Away, Sixteen Candles, and Runaway Bride, and on the small screen in Modern Family, Curb Your Enthusiasm and The Practice. So you can imagine that his book is brimming with show business anecdotes and plenty of personal insights.

"Movie Dad captures the extraordinary life of this legendary character actor," says actor Bryan Cranston. "What a life! It's a really fun read." Paul Dooley isn't just a wonderful actor and all-around funny person, he's a masterful storyteller, actor-director Bob Balaban says. "His transformation from a quirky little kid in a tiny West Virginia town to one of Hollywood's most iconic character actors is filled with unforgettable encounters with everyone from Carol Burnett to Buster Keaton to Robert Altman. His ongoing search for a meaningful relationship is touching, endearing and every bit as compelling."

THE TRAITORS

(JAN. 12 ON PEAOCK)

Alan Cumming is always interested in trying something new, so when he was asked to host The Traitors, a nail-biting psychological game show in which treachery and deceit are the name of the game, he thought, Why not? Especially since the host could be eccentric and a little villainous.

"What appealed to me is just how crazy it sounded and what a real departure it was from anything I had done previously," Cumming, 57, said. "I talked to the producers, and I realized they wanted me to do a heightened theatrical version of myself. The fact that I pretend it's my castle that I'm inviting all these people to, and the outfits that I wear are very camp and over the top, it's just such fun. It's like playing a Bond villain."

Based on a popular Dutch series of the same name, the show pits three contestants called "the traitors" against other contestants coined "the faithful." The contestants will be a mix of sports and reality celebrities, including Brandi Glanville, Kate Chastain, Kyle Cooke and Ryan Lochte.

"I like having gatherings, and game nights are definitely part of my life, and so to have my job be one big game was really such fun," Cumming said. "I became obsessed with the game, and I really threw myself into it."

What's Alan Cumming really like? Go to Parade.com/cumming to find out.

CELEBRITY NAME THAT TUNE

(JAN. 11 ON FOX)

Tony-winning actress Jane Krakowski, 54, demonstrates both her hosting and singing skills when the new season of Celebrity Name That Tune is back this month. The show will test the musical knowledge of Craig Ferguson, Johnny Weir, Tara Lipinski, Clay Aiken and others, who will compete to win big bucks for their favorite charities. Now, we'll test your knowledge of the Emmy-nominated actress (four times for 30 Rock alone!). Check out these fun facts about Krakowski.

► No babysitters? No problem. Krakowski caught the theater bug when her dad and mom (who was a theater instructor and artistic director) took her with them to the local New Jersey theater scene.

► Krakowski was just 18 when learned to roller skate for the Broadway musical, Starlight Express (1987).

That's her as cousin Vicki Johnson in National Lampoon's Vacation (1983).

► Krakowski's first major television role was that of Theresa Rebecca (TR) Kendall, on the soap opera Search for Tomorrow in 1984, which she played until the show ended in 1986.

► Horrors! A death scene that involved a curling iron inspired Krakowski to drop out of the horror film Sleepaway Camp (1983).

► Krakowski is famous for her aerial work during the number "A Call from the Vatican" from Nine, for which she won the Tony Award for Best Featured Actress in a Musical in 2003.

Krakowski released her debut solo album, called The Laziest Gal in Town, on July 13, 2010.

Krakowski met her future Ally McBeal co-star Calista Flockhart when they both attended Rutgers University Mason Gross School of the Arts.

► She dropped the "j" from her family name—Krajkowski—because people kept trying to pronounce the letter even though it should be silent.

Krakowski is a rare non-British winner of a Laurance Olivier Award for Best Actress in a Musical for her performance in a revival of Guys and Dolls in London's West End in 2005.

► She has an 11-year-old son with a former lover, fashion entrepreneur Robert Godley.

ALERT: MISSING PERSONS UNIT

(JAN. 8 ON FOX)

Scott Caan, 46, spent 10 years playing Danny 'Dano' Williams, a member of the elite Hawaii Five-0 task force, so you would think he would have had enough of playing a TV cop. But when the script came along for Alert: Missing Persons Unit, it was special enough for him to make a return to police procedurals.

"There are a lot of things that make this show something different than anything out there," Caan said. "If there's something that makes me immediately feel uncomfortable and I don't know exactly how I am going to approach it, that turns me on when it comes to digging into a part. If I get a little nervous, then that's a good sign that I should probably move forward and do it."

Alert is set in the Philadelphia Police Department's MPU, with each episode featuring a search for a missing person that parallels police officers Jason Grant (Caan) and Nikki Batista's (Dania Ramirez) quest to find the truth about their own long-lost son, Keith, who was abducted, but turns out to still be alive six years later.

"The idea of finding your son after not knowing where he's been for six years, I don't think that that's an experience that anybody on the planet's actually had," Caan continued. "So, to me, it's an acting [challenge] that I've never read before."

AMAZING Chili

Get the year off to a flavorful start with this veggie chili adapted from Jamie Oliver's new cookbook, One. Using sweet potatoes is a tasty twist, plus Oliver offers simple tips for using chili in quesadillas, nachos and much more. Enjoy! —Alison Ashton

OLIVER BY PAUL STUART; CHILI BY RICHARD CLATWORTHY; ADAPTED FROM ONE BY JAMIE OLIVER IS PUBLISHED BY FLATIRON BOOKS © JAMIE OLIVER ENTERPRISES LIMITED (2022 ONE). PHOTOGRAPHY © RICHARD CLATWORTHY, 2022.

SWEET POTATO CHILI

This recipe calls for chipotle chile paste, such as Gran Luchito ($7, amazon.com). If you don't feel like tracking it down, make your own by pureeing chipotle chiles canned in adobo sauce. This recipe makes a generous amount of chili. Refrigerate leftovers up to 4 days or freeze up to 2 months.

- ▶ 1 Tbsp olive oil
- ▶ 6 (8-oz) sweet potatoes, peeled
- ▶ 1 tsp cumin seeds
- ▶ 3 oz chipotle chile paste
- ▶ 1 lb fresh or frozen chopped mixed onion, carrot and celery
- ▶ ½ bunch cilantro (½ oz)
- ▶ 3 (15-oz) cans black beans, undrained
- ▶ 3 (15-oz) cans plum tomatoes
- ▶ Salt and black pepper, to taste
- ▶ 2 oz feta cheese, crumbled

1. Preheat oven to 350°F.
2. Heat oil in a large, deep, stove-top and oven-safe casserole pan over medium-high. Add sweet potatoes; fry 5 minutes, turning occasionally, until starting to turn golden. Push sweet potatoes to one side, add cumin, let it sizzle, then stir in chipotle chili paste and ¾ cup water. Stir in chopped onion, carrot and celery. Finely chop cilantro. Add chopped cilantro stems to pan, reserving leaves. Transfer pan to oven; bake 1 hour.
3. Remove pan from oven. Stir in beans and their liquid. Add tomatoes, scrunching them with clean hands, along with 1 can's worth of water. Stir well. Return pan to oven; bake 1 hour or until sweet potatoes are tender. Season with salt and pepper. Serve garnished with cilantro leaves and feta. Serves 12.

SWEET POTATO CHILI NACHOS

Top tortilla chips with piping-hot chili, and garnish with grated Cheddar cheese, sliced pickled jalapeños and fresh cilantro.

SWEET POTATO CHILI QUESADILLA

Smash leftover sweet potato and grated melty cheese (such as Monterey Jack) between two tortillas and toast on both sides in a hot frying pan until golden. Serve with hot chili, yogurt and sliced pickled jalapeños.

SWEET POTATO CHILI SALAD BOWL

Reheat some chili until hot, then serve with cooked rice, shredded carrot and juicy tomatoes, dressed with lemon and fresh cilantro. Finish with yogurt or sour cream, a drizzle of hot sauce and crumbled feta.

SWEET POTATO CHILI SOUP

Slice some leftover sweet potato. Blitz some chili in a blender, loosening with a little water, if needed. Reheat both in a pan until hot, then serve garnished with cubed ripe avocado, cilantro, yogurt or sour cream, and warm tortillas.

MacDowell

note to anyone who's ever felt physically self-conscious during a Zoom chat: Not even Andie MacDowell—as in, fashion-model-turned-impossibly-graceful-actress Andie MacDowell—is immune from those pangs of doubt. “I’m sorry, I look so horrible!” she says at the very top of her interview. “But maybe the lights are dim and you can’t even see me.”

For the record, MacDowell looks radiant sitting on a couch with her trademark curly hair pulled up in a bun and chic aviator eyeglasses perched on her nose. But her appearance is actually secondary to what she has to say for the next hour—especially when it comes to the topic of, well, appearances. No longer the romantic muse in comedies such as Green Card (1990), Groundhog Day (1993), Four Weddings and a Funeral (1994) and Multiplicity (1996), she talks with excitement about reaping the benefits of her Act Three.

THE STAR TALKS WITH PARADE ABOUT FIGHTING AGEISM IN HOLLYWOOD, LEARNING FROM HER MISTAKES, THE ROLES THAT CHANGED HER LIFE AND HER NEW HALLMARK SERIES.

BY MARA REINSTEIN

“One of the beauties of getting older is that you get more opportunities, and the roles become more multi-dimensional, and richer,” she explains in her native South Carolina drawl. “I’m really enjoying it because these roles are not dependent on how I look; it’s all about how I think and feel.”

Her new Hallmark Channel series, The Way Home, checks all those important boxes. The poignant drama, premiering Jan. 15 at 9 PM, follows the lives of three generations of strong-willed women (played by MacDowell, Chyler Leigh and Sadie Laflamme-Snow). In the first episode, MacDowell’s character, Del Landry, welcomes her estranged daughter and teen granddaughter at the family farm in rural Canada. Still reeling from decades-old traumatic events, the women slowly work on finding their footing together. Before arriving at the destination, they navigate a journey that involves a bit of time-traveling mysticism.

The role of a no-nonsense matriarch proved especially appealing, MacDowell says. “I wanted to play a real grandmother like my own grandmother—a beautiful woman who was fearless, vital, dynamic, mature and interesting, and who embraced her age.”

For the 64-year-old MacDowell, that characterization meant showing off her now-silver hair as well as her well-earned lines and creases. She also drew on her experience as the mom of three kids (with ex-husband, Paul Qualley): Justin, 36, who works in real estate, and actresses Rainey, 32, and Margaret, 28. Justin welcomed a daughter, Cosette, last summer. “I’m happiest when I’m with my children,” MacDowell says.

During the tail-end of production in Toronto (“I’ve got two days left!”), MacDowell spoke to Parade about how she found her own way at home and in Hollywood.

The Way Home features several flashback scenes set in the late 1990s. How did you feel about playing a younger version of yourself? It was scary. I wasn't sure I could pull it off. I was also thinking about how my neck looked, those kinds of things. The wig helps. And the director of photography used a softer lens to add a certain ambience. This was a time before my character experienced so much pain, so I made sure to keep my voice lighter and happier. I changed my posture, too.

How would you describe Del in the present-day? I chose to be as natural as possible. I play her a lot rougher. She's gone through a lot and being alone, she's had to get tough. There is still a gruffness to her. I could only imagine what it's like to have a granddaughter that you haven't been able to spend time with. But then the relationship opens, and the story becomes very rewarding.

Your parents divorced when you were six and your mom was an alcoholic. Did you bring that kind of intense life experience to your performance? One of the beautiful things about acting is that you do have experience than can inform your choices. And I did talk to [the producers] about how you hold the tragedy of your family in your body. It helps determine who you are because it manifests in some shape and form.

How did it manifest for you? I'm a very sensitive person. I think I have a sensitive personality disorder. I'm hard on myself. And if I'm hard on myself, then I can probably be hard on others. But I don't know if my childhood has led to what would necessarily be "faults." I'm a really complex person because of my upbringing. I played someone with bipolar disorder [in the 2021 Netflix series Maid], and I have friends who are bipolar. It doesn't mean they're bad human beings. They're complex, too.

You started your career as a successful model in the early 80s. Did you enjoy that lifestyle? It had a very positive effect on me. I grew up in a really small town [Gaffney, S.C.] and wasn't exposed to a lot of culture. And even though I went to college for a few years, living in places like Paris was my greatest education. I explored that city and traveled all over Europe. I took advantage of every opportunity. I got to work with wonderful people. So, I do feel like it was a huge enrichment in my life. But I need somebody to help me put together a portfolio of everything I did. All those magazines are collecting dust!

When and why did you decide to transition to acting? My mother [Pauline] was a music teacher and took me to a play when I was probably 10 years old. That's when I realized that adults played make believe, which was my favorite game in the whole wide world. So, the seed was planted. I did some theater in college, but I didn't think acting was a thing I could do until I moved to New York for modeling and started taking acting lessons. That's it in a nutshell!

You make it all sound pretty effortless. Was it? It's funny, because my sister would say "Everything just kind of happened." I'm like, "What are you talking about?!" I mean, I struggled a lot. I got rejected and turned down. In the late 80s, I was at the point where I was ready to quit because I wasn't getting consistent work and didn't think a career would ever happen to me.

Role Call

SEX, LIES, AND VIDEOTAPE (1989)

This independent film from Steven Soderbergh "changed my life," MacDowell says. She costarred with Peter Gallagher, Laura San Giacomo and James Spader.

ST. ELMO'S FIRE (1985)

Emilio Estevez's character falls for MacDowell's doctor character in this coming-of-age film.

Is it true that Glenn Close was asked to dub your lines in your first movie [1984's Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes] because your accent was too thick? I was devastated by that. People have a tendency to kick the person who's down because somehow it gives you someone to kick. I was that person [for a while]. But then Joel Schumacher cast me as a doctor in [1985's] St. Elmo's Fire, which was the greatest gift. I will forever be indebted to him because I had no competence at the time.

Andie Answers

FAVORITE PART ABOUT GROWING UP IN THE SOUTH The nature that it provides. I mean, you've got Spanish moss down at the beach and the most beautiful white sand you've ever seen, and here in the mountains outside of Asheville [N.C.], you see the leaves change in the fall.

FAVORITE CHILDHOOD MOVIE I would say The Wizard of Oz [1939] because, like most kids, I thought it was so magical and dreamy and scary. And I loved that it was a musical, as well.

BOOK ON MY NIGHTSTAND Crying in H Mart [by Michelle Zauner]. It's fiction, but kind of a memoir. It's absolutely fantastic. You have to read it!

LAST TV BINGE I've been watching 1899 on Netflix.

FAVORITE HOBBY I'm an avid hiker. My sister actually leads hikes in North Carolina in the wilderness. And I'd love to start horseback riding again.

GO-TO SING-ALONG SONG In L.A., I do these plunges where you put your body in cold water. It's good for your knees and joints. I always like hearing George Harrison's "My Sweet Lord" when I do it! It's only four minutes long; I know I can make it through.

HAIR-CARE TIP I have to condition the hell out of my hair because it's so curly. You have to hydrate constantly.

FAVORITE VACATION SPOT Kiawah Island, S.C.

SECRET TALENT I can make a clover with my tongue.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION FOR 2023 I want to get back into therapy. I haven't gone in a while but I'd like to try some new stuff that's more modern and contemporary. I'm trying to continue to live my best life.

GREEN CARD (1990)

Her character married a stranger, Georges (Gerard Depardieu), in this romantic comedy.

GROUNDHOG DAY (1993)

MacDowell says she wouldn't change a thing about this fantasy comedy movie with Bill Murray, directed by Harold Ramis.

Then you received great reviews for [the 1989 indie smash] Sex, Lies, and Videotape. Was that a real turning point for you and your career? It changed my life. There are two things you need to do to be successful in Hollywood: Be seen in a movie that makes money; and be seen as a really good actress. Just doing one is not enough. But that's what happened with Sex, Lies, and Videotape. Suddenly everybody wanted to work with me. It was literally a paradigm shift—the old me disappeared and came back as someone else.

Did you like the romantic comedy portion of your career? I do think it was a genre that appealed to me and I felt comfortable in it. And I got some scripts that just blew my mind. I thought Four Weddings and a Funeral had this classic old-fashioned feeling of romance and wit.

It's hard to believe, but we're coming up on the 30th anniversary of Groundhog Day. Do you have fond memories of the production? I wouldn't change anything about it. And that's because of [director] Harold Ramis, who made my every day perfect. I knew that he really enjoyed watching my performance and was extremely supportive of me and what I brought to the table. I have nothing but beautiful things to say about it.

What's your personal interpretation of a person constantly reliving the same day? I realized the concept right away: You have to just keep making mistakes until you learn your lesson. I think all of us tend to keep going through a situation over and over and over. It's like choosing really bad relationships until you say "Oh, OK, I'm not going to do that anymore." It's a tough lesson when you must learn to be a better person.

How did you reconcile with aging in your business? Hollywood informs our social ideas and our culture. If you look at a lot of old films, you see an older man with a younger woman like Audrey Hepburn and Cary Grant or Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart. We've bought into the idea that men can age but women cannot. And we didn't have a choice. It's the sad truth. And like every other woman, I was

Which film or performance do you appreciate more now? I did a movie directed by Diane Keaton called Unstrung Heroes [in 1995]. I think it's beautiful. I wish she would have directed more films because she's very talented.

UNSTRUNG HEROES (1995)

MacDowell co-starred with John Turturro in this comedy-drama directed by Diane Keaton. The young stars are Kendra Kull and Nathan Watt.

FOUR WEDDINGS AND A FUNERAL (1994)

Richard Curtis of Love Actually fame wrote this movie that starred MacDowell, Hugh Grant, Kristin Scott Thomas and featured Rowan Atkinson.

affected by that. But I do think that concept is slowly changing. It's a very slow process. Men are still glorified as they age, and women are not.

Well, you're constantly asked about your silver hair. But Hugh Grant, your Four Weddings co-star, has been silver for years and nobody cares! Believe me, I know this. I know this. It's so sad because I was really worried about [going grey] and felt like I had to ask permission for people to accept me. A man would never have felt like that. It would actually look bizarre for a man to keep dyeing his hair. We could choose to maintain the facade that we are younger, but I just didn't want to anymore.

Is all this pressure a big reason why you didn't want to raise your family in Hollywood? Yeah, I didn't move to Hollywood until Margaret was in the 12th grade. I raised my kids in Montana and North Carolina. I'm sort of a quiet person and wanted to have a real private life. I liked it that way!

You played Margaret's mother on Maid. Was that one of your proudest achievements? Oh, doing that with her was amazing. We had a lot of trust with each other and I hope I get another chance to do it before it's all said and done. Rainey sings and dances and acts as well.

Do you all get together a lot? Well, Rainey lives in L.A., Margaret lives in Brooklyn and Justin has a ranch in Montana. I took a lot of parenting classes, and I learned that the greatest thing that you can do for your children is make them independent. And I succeeded! But someday we may be all together again somewhere.

And you're keeping very busy these days, too! I'm working a lot and I enjoy it. I love feeling like I belong and showing up on set. I'm very creative and always looking for new ideas and new experiences. And I've got a grandbaby! There's a lot to look forward to. P

Did it surprise you that your daughters Rainey [left] and Margaret [right] wanted to pursue the arts? Well, it was not encouraged. I wanted them to have a real childhood because I didn't have great experiences watching children work. It's a job. So, they did normal kid things and studied dancing and got a really good education. Then when they were mature enough, they made that decision for themselves.

Isn't it about time to stop putting power transmission lines above ground, where they are subject to damage from snowstorms, tornados and hurricanes?

—Eric Goodman, Las Vegas, Nevada

The benefits of “undergrounding” may be great, but so are the drawbacks. Depending on the location, the process can cost millions of dollars per mile, and that cost is borne by customers and taxpayers. Underground systems are disruptive to vegetation as the relevant areas must be cleared for access. And in areas with rocky soil or a high water table, moving power lines underground simply isn't feasible.

While above-ground systems are prone to damage by weather and falling trees, below-ground systems are difficult to maintain and can be exceedingly slow to repair, mostly due to the inherent problem of locating the trouble spot, which cannot easily be seen. And even when major obstacles such as frozen ground or flooding aren't present, the area of damage must be excavated and then repaved or re-landscaped.

Another drawback is that underground systems cannot be upgraded to allow them to carry more power. So decisions on whether to bury transmission lines are made on a locality-by-locality basis, and those decisions may not be easy.

CLASSIC ASK MARILYN

These two “weighty” questions came from Ask Marilyn columns in the 1980s.

THE BRICK QUESTION

I've had a lot of fun with the following question, and hardly anyone has been able to figure out the answer: If a brick weighs 3 pounds plus half a brick, how much does a brick and a half weigh?

—Marjorie Lakin, Ocala, Florida

THE DOG QUESTION

If a dog weighs 10 pounds plus half its weight, how much does it weigh? And why?

—Frank McCafferty,
Tempe, Arizona

SOLUTIONS

THE BRICK QUESTION

The brick and a half weighs 9 pounds. If a brick weighs 3 pounds plus half a brick, then a brick weighs 6 pounds (if 3 pounds = half a brick then the other half also = 3 pounds). So a brick and a half must weigh 9 pounds (6 pounds plus half of 6 pounds).

6 Pounds + HALF A BRICK (3) **=
9 Pounds
