Spaces for healing

Healthcare spaces should convey comfort, wellness, security, and a sense of confidence. Helping people get well begins with making them feel good about the spaces they occupy.

A well-designed space can also provide caregivers with a sense of pride in their work, increase their efficiency and effectiveness, minimize risks, and cultivate their own wellness.

Carolina's portfolio of products meet the needs of a full-facility design, supporting the healing process for caregivers, patients, and guests. Our unique connection to OFS and their workplace products, further expands our reach into administrative work spaces of healthcare facilities.

Designing for what people need

Patients, guests and caregivers coexist and interact perpetually in healthcare spaces and the road to recovery leads each to many different places. In order to create positive outcomes, it is important everyone along the way has the smart, comfortable support they need for better experiences. After decades of thinking about human needs in healthcare environments and creating furniture to support them, we've focused on meeting four fundamental human needs.

Public spaces

Public spaces are often times the most utilized spaces in healthcare facilities and play a vital role in the overall patient experience. Furniture in healthcare public areas should connect users to the space around them and allow them to be present in the moment.

Patient spaces

It's about creating spaces that positively support the relationships between patients and caregivers, helping them navigate the best possible path towards wellness and a better life. Well-designed patient spaces are empathetic and humanize the healthcare experience.

Caregiver spaces

Through observing how caregivers perform their daily tasks, we've built a portfolio of product solutions that span the entire system of care. These observations inform the design on how to keep caregivers as efficient and refreshed as possible in the delivery of care.

Our design ethos

Creating great products and healthcare experiences begins with understanding and caring about people. We do this by focusing on three ideas in our design process. Simple. Purposeful. Personal.

Simple.

Creating a simple product is harder than a complex one. When you can find the root of what someone is looking for in a given setting, it clarifies the problem you're trying to solve and produces a simple, intuitive solution. In this way, simplicity helps us do more, by focusing on the details that really matter for people.

Purposeful.

We don't believe in designing products just to fill out a category or follow someone else's trend. Instead, our designs emerge from conversations and observations about the things people need from the places they occupy. Every piece we design offers a unique value.

Personal.

We put a personal touch in everything we do, design is no exception. It's one reason intentional craftsmanship is so important to our products. We believe the ergonomics and style of a product have the ability to support and inspire people in a personalized way.
