Snow, Sub-Zero Weather Causes Much Suffering

CHICAGO, Jan. 14 (AP)—The midwest was locked tonight in the icy grip of one of the most severe cold waves and the worst snow storm in recent years. Sub-zero temperatures that yesterday broke records of 40 years were followed today by a snowstorm expected to last until tomorrow, with the severe cold continuing. The storm and cold caused the deaths of half a dozen persons, and suffered by thousands of others, had blocked main highways in many states, hampered rail transportation and tied wire communication facilities into a snarl that threatened to become worse if the snow lasts. The weather bureau held little hope of immediate relief either from the cold or the snow. For the most part snow was predicted tonight for the entire area from the Mississippi to the Ohio river valley. In Chicago with a temperature yesterday of below zero and readings today of a few points above, hundreds of men labored to keep the streets clear. Four deaths here were attributed to the cold. Firemen fought two disastrous blazes in the cold and snow, one yesterday on the forty-second floor of the unfinished Foreman National bank building in LaSalle street and the other today in the south side plant of the Inland Rubber company. One high school was closed because it was impossible to provide enough heat. A Chicago and Northwestern railroad engineer was killed by a snow plow at Minnesota Junction, Wis. Fearful expressed for the safety of two parties of fishermen. DES MOINES, Jan. 14 (AP)—In the midst of a cold wave that is setting new records for temperature all over the country, Iowa got a sample today of the even colder weather in store for tomorrow. No relief is in sight from the sub-zero weather of the last two days, the weather bureau reports.

Automobile Show Committee Meets

J. G. Gardner was appointed temporary chairman of a committee to consider holding an automobile show here, at a meeting of automobile dealers and dealers of automobile accessories yesterday. Before the meeting a dinner was held in the American legion community building at 6 p.m. Because a great many of the dealers were not represented it was not finally decided whether or not to have the show. A second meeting and dinner was set for tomorrow night, at which time the dealers will decide the place, time and exact nature of the exhibition. Several automobile shows have been held here, prior to last year, when lack of sufficient floor space prevented the carrying out of the plans. It has been rumored that the show this year will be held in the auditorium of the American legion community building.

A CREED... "If you work in a town, in Heaven's name work for it. If you live in a town, live for it, give for it. Help advance your neighborhood. Respect the great power that protects you. That surrounds you with the advantages of advanced civilization, and that makes it possible for you to achieve results. Speak well of it. Stand by it. Stand for its civic and commercial supremacy. If you must obstruct or defy those who strive to help you—quit the town. But as long as you are a part of a locality, do not belittle it. If you do, you are losing the tendrils that hold you to the community, and with the first high wind that comes along you will be uprooted and blown away, and probably you will never know why."—Charles G. Dawes, vice president of the United States.

The Fenn Bill

THE FENN BILL for reapportionment of congressmen has finally passed the house of representatives after repeated efforts to defeat it on the part of an opposition group.

Under the present bill 11 states will gain from one to six members and 17 states will lose from one to three members.

Perhaps Mr. Black's statements are too strong, but when congressmen will deliberately defy the constitution which they are specifically appointed to uphold, it would seem that some type of reapportionment were necessary—a type in which such law makers might be omitted from coming sessions!

A Municipal Skating Rink

ICE SKATING is one of the most healthful as well as one of the most enjoyable recreations open to young people at this time of year.

Considering these facts, Cedar Rapids has recently opened two rinks, one at each end of the city.

The Professor Practical

IN AN appeal to the legislature of his state for increased salary appropriations for university professors, Chancellor Edgar A. Burnett of the University of Nebraska mentions the "striking contributions to world civilization" that have been made by the university professor.

Considering outstanding developments of our present civilization, he calls attention to the fact that the fundamental principles governing all of our great systems of wireless telegraphy and broadcasting came from the university; that the discovery of radium was made in a university.

In the nineteenth century the Hertzian wave was discovered in the Karlsruhe Polytechnic by Rudolph Hertz; Professor Righi of the University of Bologna became interested in the study of this same wave, and it was his pupil, Marconi, a young university student who saw the possibility of using these waves in a practical way to transmit messages.

Radium was discovered in the Sorbonne and the x-ray in the University of Wurzburg. Only recently have we had demonstrated the value of the radio to ships in peril.

Another Chance

ANOTHER chance will be provided for Arthur Berry, 15-year-old Detroit "bad boy," provided he recovers from an operation for removal of an abscess from his brain in an effort to correct his tendencies toward crime.

The assistant district attorney, a woman, became interested in the boy when he admitted that he had taken 60 letters containing $1,000 in checks from a mail box.

Next Summer in Europe

A NUMBER of students now enrolled in the university will be fortunate enough to travel in Europe next summer.

It is not without a smile that one reads that the Rumanians and Poles are charged with broadcasting to as to demoralize the Russians.

With all these projects for spreading abroad the "truth" there are at least two difficulties—the fact that there may not be unanimity about the decision of the international commission as to just what the truth about the world is from week to week, and the difficulty of "putting the truth across" without a universal language.

Chills and Fever

Hello everybody! I saw down, but I don't say boom! It wasn't at the Military Ball either. Damn you always know nostrils at me. Three times four is twelve. There you are.

Did we ever have contrails or no? Look at them if you don't think so. Here they are and we hope you like them.

It is a wise man indeed who can in this day and age successfully hide his talents beneath a bushel. Of course, I always knew I was a great big, handsome, talented, irresistible brute, but little did I think that the mere writing of a letter to a girl who needed contributions would cause all this furor.

This being dangerously close to exam week, I should say not a word more at this time, except that my pseudonym (well, spell it your own way) would sound better as Os Kopf, if I may mix Latin and German so freely.

Where do we come in for our share of that bargain? How about the Canadian one cent piece?

Did you hear the one about the bookmaker who walked on his hands and when asked why he replied: "When I walk on my hands I can't get them in my pockets and when I could get them in my pockets I can't spend my money."

Well, dear readers, that will be about all for this time. Well, an revoir. What does that mean? That's goodbye in French. Well, carabole euh. What does that mean? That means goodbye in my language, he said.

What Has Gone Before

It was late in the spring when the catastrophe fell upon Europe. Unknown forces brought terrific upheavals in the earth's surface; what had been highlands sank beneath the insurging waters of the ocean; in many places what had been the ocean bottom now steamed under the full glare of the sun.

On that terrible night when the land sank in England, the floods separated Martin Templeton from his wife, Helen, and their two small children. He could not doubt that they were drowned. After a difficult struggle, Martin succeeded in swimming to a newly formed shore by Tom Aldworth, an acquitted murderer.

Helen, separated from her husband when the waters came, found refuge for herself and babies in a small boat. The rising waters set the boat adrift and it was found next morning on a newly formed shore by Tom Aldworth, an acquitted murderer.

Only the fact that she was a strong swimmer had saved Claire Arington from the rising waters that had killed her husband and baby. For weeks she lived on a small island with two men, their company became intolerable, and she resolved to try finding more land if it existed. She swam to another small island, where she lived several weeks with an old shepherd and his invalid daughter. There Claire was safe, but unsatisfied; she desired a mate. One morning in August she again trusted her life to the waters, hoping to find more land—and the man she desired.

She jerked her head angrily, and advanced with a deep grunt and the menace of open jaws.

Had Claire been her real objective, or had she known how to use her strength, there could have been only one possible issue to such an argument in spite of the knife which opposed her.

Had Claire shown a second's lack of confidence the result might have been the same. As it was, her glance met the small, cunning eyes boldly, and the knife slashed at the advancing head.

The boy dodged the stroke with surprising agility, and an angry snap of jaws that could have cracked a thigh bone without effort. But in an instant Claire had repeated the stroke and the knife point caught in the nostril of the flinching snout.

With squeal of pain the great pig turned and dashed away through the garden, with her half grown litter, startled by the sound of their mother's terror, following her in a wild confusion.

Claire stood for a moment to watch them, flushed and exultant, her head lifted, a drop of blood falling from the knife she held, showing, in the close fitting bathing dress that neither concealed nor distorted, like a statue of triumphant womanhood, combining all that is best in savagery and civilization. Then her mood broke into laughter at her trivial victory.

The confused outcries of the flying litter died into distance, but left a sound of regular and persistent squealing, which became more dominant as the other noises died. It came from the further end of the ruined garden, penetrating and maddening. It needed little wisdom to guess that one of the flying troop was intruded in some arresting catastrophe, and less than the curiosity of her maternal ancestor to incline Claire to its investigation.

She found a young boar pig caught in a fine gap in the garden palings. It seemed that a blind rush at a hole which was scarcely large enough for its passage had carried it half way through, bending back a piece of broken pale, which its strength might have been sufficient to break entirely, but it happened, unfortunately, that there was a projecting nail that had caught into its back. If it pushed forward it drove the nail deeper. Either it could not wriggle back or it lacked the sense to attempt it. What could it do but wriggle at intervals till the pain of the nail in its protest-ribbed caused it to desist and squeal for the help of a mother who was already becoming indifferent to the claims of her half grown offspring, and who was now fully occupied with a pain which she could not rub out of her snout, however deeply she buried it in the cool dampness of the soil of the ditch which she had resorted to?

Claire knew little of pigs, except that under the postmortem circumstances in which they had unwillingly contributed to the nourishment of her own body. She vaguely supposed them to be greedy and obstinate, which they are, and dirty and stupid, which they are not. The squeal of a pig does not awaken human sympathy as readily as the cry of a lamb or calf. There are reasons for this, as for everything, and the subject is not without interest, but a consideration of pigs is outside the scope of this record.

But Claire's instinct for nearly 30 years had been to go to the help of any calling need. She tore away a tangle of kidney beans which had grown over the fence, that she might see what was wrong more clearly. She decided that if she pulled the animal backward she could get it clear without any great damage or difficulty. She grasped its hind legs with that purpose, but as she touched them it wrenched free vigorously. It renewed its efforts to struggle forward, and pain and fright gave fresh volume to its vociferations. I think that, had it taken its attempted rescue move quietly, Claire would have pulled it free, and it might have galloped off to be the father of hundreds. But the attitude it showed stirred in her a more primitive instinct than sympathy—that of capture and acquisition. Why should she not secure it? She realized that the uses of a boar pig are limited. But a pig is pork, in fact, the pork before her was as fine as free range and abundant feeding could make it. Had it been less plumply rounded it might then have been rooting with its companions in the ditch where its mother lamented.

Claire had a practical mind, and could act with promptness and vigor, or she would not have been enjoying life in the sunlight when so many millions of her kind had perished. She looked at the pig and she looked at the knife which she had still car-

Martin sat on the seashore, troubled. Until today he had seen no human beings on the land where he was marooned. Today he had seen the still warm body of a murdered woman, and three wild looking men who were evidently her murderers. He wanted to think before he revealed his presence to these lawless men.

As he watched the waters, a woman swam in on the tide and sank exhausted on the shore. Puzzled, Martin approached her. He was hardly the hero of her dreams, but Claire felt that she could trust him. She agreed to follow him, and, warily, the two made their way to the hut in a deserted railroad tunnel where he had stored the supplies he had foraged during the summer.

They discussed life since the deluge. Martin found she was alone in the world, and he was glad. He dealt her discreetly. Both were friendly but guarded. He told her of the new danger of the lawless men he had seen, and urged her to stay with him at least another day. Together they started for a deserted house two miles away, where they would find cooking for Claire. Martin carried a hunting knife and a spear which he had found. On the way, an encounter with a dog, grown savage in the new wilderness, gave proof of the value of the crude weapons. When they reached the house, Martin went upstairs to search for clothes, leaving Claire in the garden. While she waited, she heard a noise, and saw a huge sow approaching her through the weeds, followed by a litter of half grown pigs.

Now go on with the story.

Claire took a step forward, shouting at the sow to scare her, but she continued to advance. Her impulse to leave the basket to its fate became almost irresistible. Bare feet and legs are a poor equipment for such contest. But the resolution which she had just made had sufficient force to hold her. She realized the courage that was needed if men were to dominate in the changed conditions of life, and stepped boldly before the basket.

The animal hesitated again, but years of wandering round the farmstead had left her without the fear of man, which is instinctive in those that have been born to the wilderness.

He looked at her capture, which was floundering awkwardly among the trampled weeds, her foot upon the end of the rope that tied it, in some doubt as to her immediate purpose. Then she put the knife back into its sheath and decided to carry the pig to the house and consult with Martin as to its destiny.

It was less easy than she had supposed. Had it been dead it would not have been a very light or easy burden. Alive and writhing, and with its front legs kicking vigorously, it was an awkward and very slippery load.

Martin, roused by the continued disturbance, and coming through the garden to discover its origin, met her as she approached with the author of that delightful concert "he asked.

Claire was hot and breathless, furious with herself for the folly that had taken a living burden when a dead one could have been carried so much more easily. She bit her lower lip in a way she had when her temper flared. She was carrying the animal with her right arm round its middle and her left hand holding an ear to stave off the wriggling and with the sharp teeth and growing tusks of which she did not view with entire complacency. And why hadn't she tied its front legs? she thought angrily.

As Martin spoke, the pig, perhaps stirred to fresh effort by his approach, succeeded in a backward struggle that brought its tied hind legs to the ground, from which she recovered it with difficulty.

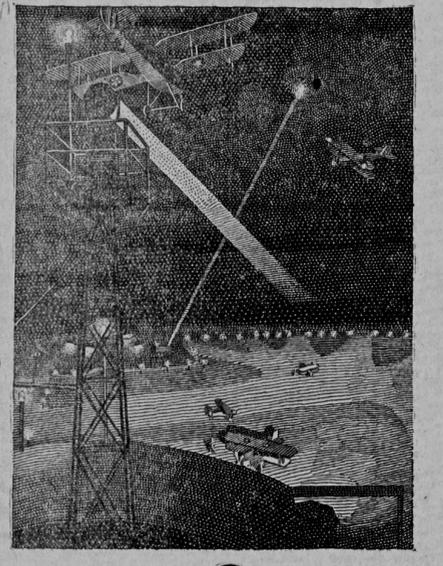

"It wasn't in a sty. It won't much longer. Don't you know what pigs are for?" she replied somewhat contentedly, but Martin understood well enough, and also that he had failed to strike the right note, as he had failed before, with this new companion. There was a grim meaning in that emphatic phrase, "It won't much longer," that made him realize that he had still much to learn of the character of the woman before him.

With a changed tone, he said quickly: "You've done well to catch it, anyway. Let me help." But she refused curtly. She did not know why she was so angry. She said: "There is enough here to repay you for what I shall eat till I go tomorrow. I like paying my debts."

Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so tomorrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

A majority of the beacon lights used in airport and airway illumination have been designed and manufactured by the General Electric Company, whose specialists have the benefit of a generation's experience in the solution of lighting problems.

Dean Kay Speaks to Club Members

Geology club members will meet in room 106 of the geology building today at 6 o'clock.

Dean George F. Kay of the college of liberal arts, head of the geology department, Prof. A. O. Thomas, and Assistant Professor J. J. Runner, all of whom attended the meetings of the Geology society of America, and the American association for the advancement of science, will speak at this time.

He had come to the scene of action, and had laid on the ground as she knelt to investigate.

They seemed made for one another.

But though she was unpracticed in procuring the decease of pigs, she felt sure that it would be wrong to commence operations by assaulting it in the hind quarters. It seemed more natural to approach it at the other end. But that end was beyond her reach, and she did not know how difficult it might be to get round to it. "Never the time and the place," she thought whimsically, as she pondered the problem. It occurred to her also that if she should approach from the other side the pig might make a successful effort to wriggle backward and be lost entirely.

The hunting instinct had not waked in her mind for 20 seconds before she was searching the debris of the garden for the thing she needed. She found it quickly enough in a length of rope which had been pegged down to mark the edge of a path which someone had been trimming backward and had left unfinished.

Two minutes later half a hundred, weight of protesting pork, his hind legs tightly bound together, was being hauled backward from the palings.

Claire looked at her capture, which was floundering awkwardly among the trampled weeds, her foot upon the end of the rope that tied it, in some doubt as to her immediate purpose. Then she put the knife back into its sheath and decided to carry the pig to the house and consult with Martin as to its destiny.

Patrick Writes on Conception of Mind

George T. Patrick, professor of philosophy, is the author of a book, "What is the Mind?" which has recently been published. It is one of the series, "Philosophy for Laymen."

Professor Patrick tells the story of man's changing conception of mind. He points out that the older views have gradually given way to the realization that mind is simply a term for certain operations and activities of the human organism as a whole.

Professor Patrick has been professor of philosophy in the university since 1887 and is now on leave of absence.

Murphy Goes on Scoring Spree as Purdue Beats Chicago

Boilermaker Five Crushes Maroon Hoopsters, 64-14

Big Center Accounts for 26 Counters in Triumph

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 14 (AP)—Stretch Murphy, Purdue university's lanky basketball center, scored 26 points against Chicago's maroon team which, added to the efforts of his teammates, gave the Boilermakers a 64 to 14 victory. Murphy broke the record he set last week at Chicago by one point.

Britons Decline Polo Bid

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP)—Army polo teams representing the United States and England will not meet this year in renewal of their rivalry begun in 1923, it was announced today on receipt of a letter from England declining an invitation to send a British army team to the United States next summer.

Sport Heroes of 1928—Billiards

rested led up to a climax when Taberski folded up his cue and demanded a forfeit. Pretty snarling between the pair was plainly evident in the early rounds, and finally Greenleaf left the room of play which, according to an old custom, is all-gone when it comes to championship billiard matches. Taberski objected to this but the objection was not sustained by Referee Joe Orr, who was the third man in the ring—or around the table. When Ralph walked out on the Gray Fox for the second time, the game was stopped and the matter referred to the committee, which ruled that the game should be replayed.

Customers Fill Hall
Naturally neither Taberski nor Greenleaf was inclined to send each other flowers prior to the playoff, and as a result the referee had difficulty in restraining them from halting play to do a little regular quarreling. And that's no way to act in Orchestra hall, if you know what we mean. Under the circumstances both boys were off their stride and the play was as ragged as a hobnob's toga. But now of the squabbling had leaked out and the hall was filled to the rafters, showing possibly that the customers would be interested in billiard if they were rarer and unrefined.

Taberski won the first game from Greenleaf, 125 to 97, and the championship by defeating him the second time in one evening, 125 to 47. With the title went $2,500 in cash, a salary of $6,000 for one year and 40 per cent of half the tournament gate receipts and a possibility that Taberski may yet build himself up to a point where he will get a shot in some of the tournaments which Mullen is constantly running off in pugilistic circles. This angle depends on the Gray Fox and his attitude toward pugilism, but Frank showed he had plenty of color and Mullen is as crazy about color as an old lady is about her tating.

Taberski First Champion
Through his victory the Schemedaddy won the first recognized world's pocket billiard championship. He's been a champion or in the championship class for more than 12 years and is noted as one of the best strategists known in the green tables. He is a courageous player and a fine shot. A huge task confronted Taberski when he entered the last lap at Chicago, and while both players were off form, Frank easily outplayed and outgen-dered Ralph and the finish was one which the customers would be interested in billiard if they were rarer and unrefined.

Ames Wrestlers Whip Indiana, 17-11

AMES, Jan. 14 (AP)—In its first intercollegiate meet of the season, the Iowa State wrestling team defeated Indiana university here tonight 17 to 11. Each team won one fall, Juhl of Iowa State downing Buchanan of Indiana after keeping behind him for eight minutes and Unger of Indiana scoring the invaders' only fall when he threw Zink son after the five-minute mark.

Knoxmen to Meet River City Five in Battle Friday

Davenport Slated as Hard Competition for Hawklets

Undismayed by their ill fated beginning which has lowered them to the humble position on the bottom cellar step, Iowa City high's Hawklet basketballers are grooming to meet the leaders of the Mississippi Valley conference Friday night.

The Knox coached men, although unable to win a conference contest out of five starts, showed remarkable improvement in form last Friday against Grant high of Cedar Rapids. It took the Parlor City an additional period to win a decision over the Hawklets, but the local team had led nearly the entire last half.

Stress in the drill was placed on speed play with the attempt to offend play in working the ball from the floor to a position under the basket.

Armour Falter in Final Rounds of Los Angeles Open

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14 (AP)—Final echoes of the $10,000 Los Angeles open reverberated through Santa Monica canyon today when a dozen rollers finished rounds they had failed to complete Sunday because of darkness, carried the faltering notes to Tommy Armour's clubs.

Armour beat out Leo Dieck of Santa Monica country club in Mexico, and national professional champion, by a single stroke. Dieck's aggregate of 292 gave him third place and $850. Horton Smith, 21 years old, Joplin, Mo., professional and George Von Elm, amateur from Detroit, deadlocked at 294.

When you've planned a trip for fishing, And you've spent a lot of lake, Bet the whole of your vacation On some swisher's tale And you fish a lake of beauty Hidden in a land of dreams, Where the air is clean as sunshine Haunted by songs of crystal streams. Comes the moment when you're casting And a smasher hits your line Then you play him like a gamster With the battle going fine, Till a snag, a yank, and silence And the line is hanging slack, While you grip your teeth and whistle And reel the fishline back. ## Coe Scores Only Two Field Goals in Cornell Game

MOUNT VERNON, Jan. 14 (AP)—In a basketball game filled with ancient rivalry, Cornell defeated Coe college 24 to 11 here tonight. Cornell never relinquished the lead. The game was featured by the close guarding of the Cornell quintet which resulted in Coe scoring but two field goals, both of which were in the last half.

This and That in Sports

In a game which displayed all sorts of basketball from the best to the worst, the Hawkeyes downed the invading Minnesota five and gained some measure of revenge for their recent defeat at the hands of Michigan.

Among the Iowa five it is hard to pick out a star on the basis of the play last night. Compared to the game two days before, no one looked like himself.

In the final analysis, however, it must be admitted that the Old Gold hoopers were aided considerably by the inability of the Michigan team to hit the hoop consistently.

LONDON, Jan. 14 (AP)—The British Ryder cup golf team for matches with professional golfers from the United States at Leeds in April, was named today with George Duncan as captain.

Officials Postpone Relay to Feb. 23

The all university relay carnival, originally scheduled for Jan. 19 has been postponed to Feb. 23, it was announced yesterday by Coach George T. Bresnahan.

Officials decided to postpone the meet, believing that it might interfere with the students' preparations for the final examinations which begin next Monday.

The new date is an open one on the indoor track card, since it was found impossible to schedule a dual meet with the Illinois Athletic club at that time.

Rosilla Branch Miller, '26, is living in Rock Island, Ill.

Failling Corn Crop Boosts Argentina Corn Prices Again

CHICAGO, Jan. 14 (AP)—Flickering out of chances of a bumper crop in Argentina sent corn, wheat and oats today to new high prices.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 16 1/2 to 17 1/2 cent higher.

Wheat finished 1c to 1c up, oats 1c to 1c advanced, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 2c.

All deliveries of corn and oats surpassed today the peak quotations in the season's trading heretofore.

For wheat, the new top record established today was for the July delivery alone, but other months attained the highest point yet on the present upward movement of values.

Through most of the day, attention focused on Buenos Aires advances to leading houses here that prospects of a big new crop of Argentine corn this year had finally been canceled by drought which has prevailed in the greater part of Argentina.

Another outstanding feature in the corn pit today was the fact that the corn export business from the United States by way of the Gulf of Mexico was under way at increased premiums as compared with the market for future deliveries.

Meanwhile, country offerings of corn to come here were of liberal volume, but were smaller than had generally been looked for in view of the recent sharp advance in prices.

About as expected, the domestic corn visible supply today showed an increase of 1,329,000 bushels for the week, and is now 20,132,000 bushels, against 7,570,000 bushels a year ago.

Oats followed corn.

Falling off of 3,745,000 bushels in the United States which visible supply total for the week, together with the fact that for the first time in 1929 the European wheat market was fully reflecting advances scored on this side of the Atlantic, gave a stimulus today to wheat buyers.

Time money held persistently at 7 1/2 per cent for all maturities.

This is the highest for the 6-month maturity seen in mid-January in more than 20 years, save for 1920.

The decline in sterling late last week, which revived hope of gold imports from London, was checked.

The department of commerce's report that American foreign trade in 1928 reached the highest level for any year save 1929 had been discounted market-wise several weeks ago.

A further indication of the strength of the steel industry was the statement of the Otis Steel company, showing the highest earnings in its history in 1928.

Allied Chemical shot up 18 points to a new high price at 27 1/2 on rumors of a stock split up, Wright Aero was also carried up 18 points to a record price at 29 1/2; to the accompaniment of unconfirmed reports that a large melon would be cut through the granting of valuable rights, but fell back to 29 1/2 at the close.

Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific also improved, while Pere Marquette encountered further profit taking.

Motors improved somewhat on what appeared to be short covering.

Studebaker broke into new high ground, and General Motors (old stock) sold about 3 points higher at 90 points.

American Sugar Refining sold up nearly 4 points to within striking distance of its 1928 high on reports that its 1928 earnings will run around $10 a share.

Rubbers were again strong, U. S. selling up about 3 points.

Otis Elevator, International Telephone, and American Type Founders made extreme gains of about 8 to 9 points.

National Bellas Hess slumped 15 points, and Midland Steel Products slumped 20.

Foreign exchanges were featured by the firming up of sterling, the demand rate rising 1/16 of a cent to $84 1/2.

Japanese yen dropped 27 points to 45.13 cents.

Transport Planes Travel 2,178,365 Miles During 1928

Planes operated by the Boeing Air Transport system on the San Francisco-Chicago route piled up a mileage for the year, according to the traffic vice-president, W. G. Herron, of the Boeing company.

This figure was for the entire U. S. air mail service. Second Assistant Postmaster-General, W. Irving Glover says that the fire hazard by air is no greater than by railroad or steamship.

"American distances demand air mail," explains an official of a transport company on the western coast, relative to the increasing volume of flown communication.

He says that development of postal transportation by air contributes much to our present standing in aeronautics.

In Europe distances are not as great and air mail is not as much used. For that reason, air transport companies on the continent are almost subsidized by their governments in the amount of from 40 to 100 per cent of their expenses.

Commercial aviation in America is maintained almost without expense to the government.
