Governor's race heats up as it tightens

■ Vilsack hits Lightfoot on student loans, as Lightfoot bashes him for favoring "labor bosses."

> By Mike Glover Associated Press

DES MOINES - In a election that some view as tightening, Iowa's gubernatorial candidates are using some hot rhetoric to get their point across from college students to labor conflicts.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Ross Lightfoot started off his day collecting the endorsement from a string of veterans, while Democratic rival Tom Vilsack headed for Iowa State University and the first in a series of campus appearances to tout his plan to expand student-loan programs.

For his part, Vilsack was focusing on efforts among college students he's seeking to attract with proposals to strengthen student-loan pro-

"My opponent has a history of turning his back on college students," Vilsack said. "In fact, it often seems that he's at war with educational opportunity."

Vilsack has proposed freezing community-college tuition and putting in place programs for student loans that are forgiven if a student stays in Iowa after graduation.

"Iowa needs a governor who under- the race to date. stands the importance of cultivating our most precious commodity in Iowa our students," Vilsack said.

He said Lightfoot's record on education has been "deplorable."

"Jim Lightfoot waged war on college students when he was in Congress,' Vilsack said. "He will do it again if he is elected governor."

Lightfoot rejects that argument, saying he wants to put education at the top of his agenda by focusing on classroom discipline and returning to educational basics.

In contrast to Vilsack, Lightfoot started off his day at a fund-raising breakfast with former Sen. Bob Dole, the GOP presidential nominee in the last election. Lightfoot has been critical of Vilsack's ties to organized labor, but his

With arms gesturing widely, Dith Pran told a crowd of approximately 400 Tuesday night that he understood the risk of being caught by the Khmer Rouge but overlooked the danger in order to photograph the suffering during the Cambodian civil war.

"I could have left with my family," said Pran, a native of Cambodia and now a photojournalist for The New York Times. "I didn't miss the plane," he joked.

While his wife and children were sent abroad to the United States, Pran risked his life by continuing to work as a war correspondent. After Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge seized power in 1975. Pran was sent to "the killing fields," a forced labor camp.

About 30 people attended a Tuesday night forum designed to open discussion about police policies - but half of the audience was made up of the police themselves. The forum, called by the Police Citizens Review Board, was targeted toward students, yet only six showed up to voice concerns about public intoxication arrests and a proposed change that would extend police power in the enforcement of "loud" house parties. Forum attendees addressed the board, and members or police officers answered their questions. Many speakers said they were uncomfortable with giving the police any broader discretion.

However, an officer's discretion is important, said Iowa City police Officer R.A. Mebus, though it may be the root of disputes between residents and officers.

foot, said negative advertising is necessary in a political campaign.

Vilsack was the first to be negative, she said, when he attacked Lightfoot's record on education on Aug. 19, and it was necessary for Lightfoot to defend himself.

"After being attacked, (Lightfoot) must respond. If he doesn't, people in Iowa think two things: He either doesn't care, or the attack is true," Gimbel said. "Not answering a negative ad can really hurt you.'

"I don't think it is a good idea people don't like it," UI junior Susan Poll, a registered Republican, said about negative ads. "But it must work."

Ads are developed by media consultants, campaign assistants or professional organizations, said John Del Cecato, communications director of the Iowa Democratic Party.

The amount of involvement by candidates in creating ads varies, he said, noting that the best way to reach voters today is through television.

"It is a very effective means of com-munication," Del Cecato said. "However, Democrats put more of a premium on grass-roots campaigning."

However, the truthfulness of ads can easily be twisted because of the wide-scope rights granted to political discourse in this country, Del Cecato said. Public figures, including politicians, having the greatest protection against charges of libel.

He added that it is up to the media to judge what is truthful.

Documentation of the truthfulness of the facts must be accompanied with the advertisements, Del Cecato said. Sometimes the documentation reaches 20 pages.

Dan Olsen, KGAN general sales manager, said he has the final say on allowing an ad to run at the station, noting that the information is most often the opinion of the candidate, therefore leaving little choice but to run the advertisement. Usually, it is those in positions such as Olsen who decide whether to run an ad.

Olsen said he sees negative advertisements as both helping and hurting candidates.

"Negative spots can stimulate the process for the undecided. For those who are decided, a negative spot by the opponent can strengthen the decision," Olsen said.

day. "I really see this as a choice between freedom and turning our state over to a few of the big labor bosses, or people of that nature, who really don't have our interest at heart."

Vilsack fired back in kind, arguing that Lightfoot has made the centerpiece of his campaign a big tax cut for the richest Iowans.

Jim Lightfoot waged war on college students when he was in Congress.

"Jim Lightfoot's idea of freedom is a massive income tax cut for the wealthy that would be paid for with dangerous budget cuts aimed at our schoolchildren, senior citizens and college students."

expected to die of the disease if the cancers are found in an advanced and untreatable stage. In Iowa, an estimated 2,400 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed this year - 600 of those diagnosed will not survive the disease.

The disease has affected UI students directly. Earlier this month, Sang Hee Yoo, a 29-year-old UI graduate student, died after a fourmonth battle with breast cancer.

For accurate detection, experts recommend a three-step approach in breast cancer screening: monthly breast self-examinations, regular mammograms and seeing a physician for regular breast examinations.

All women should do a selfexamination once a month to check for lumps, thickening or other changes in their breasts.

However, many UI female students say they don't do a monthly self-examination. "I just don't think about it," UI freshman Whitnev Bulmahn said.

Young women with a family history of breast cancer should consult with their physician on whether a mammogram is right for them, Carson said. "Younger breast tissue is dense, and mammograms can't read it that well," she said.

Although breast cancer affects mostly women, men are not completely immune.

According to the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute, about 1,600 men will be diagnosed with the disease in the U.S. this year.

She was in 10th grade when a group of volunteers working with a women's clinic came to speak to the female students in her class, she said.

The most profound impact for her was when the volunteers passed out brochures and Tincher's contained a piece of gum - symbolic of the one out of eight women in the United States who are diagnosed with breast cancer in their lifetimes.

"I wasn't aware until that moment that so many women face this," Tincher said. "It made me realize that it could happen to me."

To promote awareness of breast cancer, early detection and early intervention, the Friend for Life program is scheduled to be held at the Coral Ridge Mall Saturday from the time the mall opens until it closes.

The program encourages women to contact their best friends on the seventh day of every month to do a self-examination, Carson said.

"It's important for women our age to be aware of the disease and its severity," Tincher said. "Women don't realize until it's too late what they could have prevented."

visors, attorneys and others. I'm very aware what's necessary to do it right," he said. "If we arrested everyone that deserved to be arrested, we would need a jail the size of six dormitories and have public transit on duty ready for people 24 hours a day."

When applied to the proposed party ordinance, many residents feel that broadened discretion allowing officers to act as complainants and disperse parties would give police too much power.

"I'm a responsible person who can take care of my property," UI senior Kevin Burgess said. "I think that the party ordinance would be abused by officers. They may as well walk into my backyard and join."

same is true when it comes to the charge of public intoxication.

I feel very safe in Iowa City, but I have difficulty with public intox," UI freshman Gwen Cassidy said. "I understand something like a fight, but I don't feel that walking crooked merits intoxication.'

There is no alcohol level required to be charged with public intoxication, which is a state law, said police Sgt. Sid Jackson, adding that persons charged with public intoxication demonstrated real or simulated intoxication. The charge is expunged from the person's record after two years.

The issue is deeper than walking crooked, Mebus said. It's about preventing other alcohol-related offenses such as assault and theft.

"Chances are in order to get public intoxication, you do something pretty dumb," he said. "You may be walking down the street, and you're beating up newspaper boxes or bouncing off walls, but we have the obligation to protect the owners of those boxes."

The police are doing the best they can with what they are dealt, Iowa City resident Anna Buss said.

"Anyone who was downtown this past weekend saw what officers have to deal with each day," she said. "They have a very tough job. We have a good police department that has taken a lot of bad PR."

Luckily, Dora Maar, muse to Pablo Picasso for eight stormy years, kept all those things and more - from grand oil paintings to a paper scrap with her lover's bloodstain.

On Tuesday, 15 months after Maar's lonely death, art-lovers got a chance to buy a piece of that passionate treasure trove

The three-day auction — said to be the largest Picasso collection to go on the block — is expected to bring in up to $70 million. The first evening, focusing on oil paintings and drawings, saw sky-high prices for drawings but lower than expected bids for some of the paintings.

But it is the deeply personal, slice-of-life nature of the collection that had Parisians standing in the rain to get a pre-auction glimpse at the Maison de la Chimie, near the Eiffel Tower.

Maar, an accomplished photographer with close ties to Surrealism, was 29 when she met Picasso in 1936. She quickly became his lover and model, particularly for the weeping woman in "Guernica" the masterpiece screaming Picasso's outrage over the German bombing of the ancient village in northern Spain.

But Picasso moved on to the younger Francoise Gilot in the 1940s, and Maar went into a tailspin, living a hermetic existence in her apartment on the Rue de Savoie, never even seeing her close

She died in solitude in July 1997 at age 89. She had never married, had no heirs and had only a 1958 will naming three monks who died before she did, museum officials say.

An Open Letter to the Community

Two tragic and senseless acts of violence in the recent past serve to remind us that the infamous institution of lynching still exists in American society. The murders of James Byrd in Jasper, Texas, last spring and Matthew Shepard, a University of Wyoming student, more recently are the tragic reminders. It appears that Shepard was beaten and killed because he was an openly acknowledged homosexual man. Apparently, Byrd was tortured and killed because he was Black.

While these events may seem remote to Iowa City and the University of Iowa, we are connected to them by the necessity to accept the challenge to rededicate ourselves to work toward real social and racial integration in our society.

The terms lynching and integration may strike the ears of some as reminders of a bygone era in the struggle for human dignity by slave descendants during this past century. Lynching results from fear and hate, which are twin motivators of cultural stagnation.

The University as a learning community must be ever vigilant to create and sustain a supportive, civil, and humane environment to work against these forces of evil. Our challenge is to actualize the University's core values of learning, community, responsibility, integrity, and quality through the learning experiences in the classroom and outside the classroom. These core values are the best defense against fear, hate, and cultural stagnation.

In our learning community, we must remember the basic tenet of the University Human Rights Policy: "The University is guided by the precept that in no aspect of its programs shall there be differences in the treatment of persons because of race, creed; color, national origin, age, sex, disability, sexual orientation, gender identity, and any other classification that deprive the person of consideration as an individual." If we are to be true to the spirit of social and racial integration, we must recognize and respect two things: cultural differences and individual talent that is based on the content of a person's character.

I encourage everyone to participate in the dialogue sponsored by the UI Diversity Committee on Wednesday, Oct. 28, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. in the Senate Chamber of Old Capitol. In a panel discussion entitled "Whose Community Is It Anyway?" panelists Willard Boyd, Monique DiCarlo, James McPherson and Carmen McCoy will join moderator Joe Knight in discussing the privileges and responsibilities of "community." This is but one way we can work toward expanding the collaborative and respectful efforts that help move us toward social and racial integration.

All systems 'Go' for Glenn's return flight to space

■ As Hurricane Mitch heads for Honduras, the worries about the weather have disappeared in Florida.

> By Paul Recer Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - All the elements for John Glenn's historic return to space were in good shape Tuesday, with the astronauts on hand, the countdown going smoothly and the outlook for launch day weather judged to be "100 percent."

Forecasters said Tuesday Hurricane Mitch is now moving away from Florida, and a high pressure system has settled in over the oceanside launch pad area.

"We're now 100 percent to go," NASA weather forecaster Ed Priselac said. Earlier Tuesday, the forecasts had been only 70 percent favorable. Priselac said a 100 percent favorable forecast has also been made for Friday, in case the Thursday liftoff has to be postponed because of technical problems.

Pet owners ready to pay more in health care

As new treatments are saving pets who wouldn't have survived 10 years ago, owners are eager to give their loved ones another shot at life.

Parisian cat, partially collapsing his But Apfelbaum thought Pierre was too young to let go. She took him to the Veterinary Hospital at the University of Pennsylvania, where an oncology team used chemothera-py to shrink the tumor. Apfelbaum, who lives in New York, doesn't mind the trips or the hundreds of dollars in bills. They did wonders for him," said Apfelbaum, stroking Pierre's striped fur, made even softer by the treatments. "He's having a very nice life."

Apfelbaum is among a growing number of pet owners seeking the latest in high-tech health care and willing to pay for it. From kidney transplants for cats to open heart surgery on dogs, new treatments are saving pets who wouldn't have survived 10 years ago.

Along with the new care, though, come the same types of ethical dilemmas that doctors and loved ones face in human health care.

Early in a pet's stay at the Pennsylvania center, one of the most advanced in the nation with about 23,000 patients a year, doctors try to broach with owners how far to pursue treatment.

Sometimes owners need to know that "they don't have to go through the emotional upheaval and spend

Inside a darkly lit room off the emergency room, veterinary cardiologist Meg Sleeper runs a device over the chest of a cat lying on a table. With the echocardiogram machine - the same top-of-the-line model used for humans - she can examine the cat's heart on a monitor, looking for abnormalities.

In a critical care wing that can hold 12 animals, Hendricks and her team give constant care to pets.

"We're here moment to moment if a crisis breaks," Hendricks said.

Along one wall, glass chambers hold animals too small to have oxygen tubes in their nostrils. The tanks keep oxygen, humidity and temperature steady for pets recovering from operations. And ventilators, once used only as a last resort for animals, now frequently ease the transition from critical condition.

One Rottweiler has made his home in the unit - which costs about $150-$160 a day - for nearly two months. The dog suffers from bouts of pneumonia caused by an underlying nervous system problem. His esophagus doesn't work properly, and when he's home, he tries to eat things he can't.

The artist draws human figures and objects on the paper until they disappear through the use of changing angles and repetition, and a new direction is suggested through the mass of lines and color. Discriminatory policy needed for military

The mission of our nation's military is to preserve peace and to provide for the defense of our nation. The incomparable significance of the military's duty sets its standard apart from every other institution in the United States. Thus, the military is governed by many rules that many citizens would find intolerable in their civilian lives.

To homosexual students within the UI College of Law, the "Don't ask/Don't tell" policy is such a rule. Many law students complain that the military's stance against homosexuals conflicts with the UI policy prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation. As a result of its discrimination against homosexuals, the military, until last year, had been prohibited since 1988 from recruiting potential Judge Advocate General's officers at the law school.

However, with the passage of the Solomon Amendment, Congress has mandated that military recruiters are to be allowed onto college campuses. If the UI were to refuse to comply with this federal legislation, it could lose federally sponsored funds from the Departments of Education, Labor and Health and Human Services. Due to this, the law school decided to allow military recruiters onto campus.

Gays and lesbians continue to attack the military's right to recruit on campus because it discriminates against homosexuals; however, this argument fails to consider the special circumstances inherent in military life.

The U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in Holmes/Watson v. California Army ruled last year that our government has a compelling purpose in excluding homosexuals from military service.

The court said Congress and the military found that "excluding homosexuals who engage in or have the propensity to engage in homosexual acts from military service furthers discipline and combat readiness in the military by preventing risks to unit cohesion posed by the presence of such homosexuals." It is clear from the military perspective, which is a compelling governmental purpose, that continued discrimination based on sexual orientation is needed to maintain the high quality of our armed forces. The military is not a social laboratory. Our nation's armed forces must restrict access to many people, not just homosexuals, to maintain its high level of quality as our nation's protector. Thus, people are also discriminated against based upon their age and physical and mental disabilities To judge the above acts as improper discrimination is to judge them as a civilian and not in the proper context as a soldier, sailor or airman.

Caring how a killer looks

The fight against animal rights is about to begin. Or so it seems.

From Jan. 1-Feb. 28, 1999, sharpshooters are scheduled to roam highly populated deer areas and kill 240 deer. The Iowa City/Coralville Deer Management Committee unanimously agreed last week to the plan to reduce the deer herd. This is a problem for anyone who has seen "Bambi" and believes citizens

But management is needed for the community's safety and the deer's health. There are many people who love animals. To care for animals in this situation requires looking out for the deer's safety and health. Although it seems as if it's a vicious act to wipe out hundreds of animals because they interfere with morning traffic, it's really a city's attempt to maintain order between nature

A study last year found that there are 28 deer per square mile in the Iowa City area, a high number for such an urbanized place.

Society has become accustomed to fast cars and busy highways; if we want to continue that lifestyle, we have to look out for those who live different lives. Opponents of the hunt say a survey should be conducted to see how many people in Iowa City disagree with population-control methods. However, maybe most people would not disagree that highly populated areas put deer at risk for car accidents, 28 of which have already occurred this year.

Deer also risk starving if resources become limited. Nature doesn't always solve its own problems; more food won't magically appear if it's in need. The city is not being heartless. The deer won't be left somewhere to rot. The meat from the deer will be used for food by low- and moderate-income families. The targeted sites are far from residential areas; therefore, no citizen will be at

It's up to the city to act on the notion that for the safety of the deer and the people of Iowa City, control measures must be taken.

Student Health workers mourn Shepard's death

We, the staff of the Student Health Services, wish to express our deep sorrow and horror at the recent vicious and altogether senseless murder of the University of Wyoming student Matthew Shepard. A hate crime of this dimension sadly reminds us all of our vulnerability and the absolute necessity to respect and support one another in our increasingly complex and diverse world community.

The violence of this attack on an innocent young man serves as a wake-up call to all of us to pause and reflect on our collective values, our roles in a society that could foster such hatred for those who are perceived as different. While we are unable to do anything more for Shepard, we would like to take this opportunity to publicly recommit ourselves to providing sensitive and caring service, support and respect for all of our students in need regardless of their race, religion, ethnicity, gender or gender-orientation. We feel that each of our students is a unique and vital individual deserving of our time, care and concern. We pray that this crime will not be repeated and that society will no longer tolerate expressions of digotry and nate aimed at anyone who may be perceived as too different from ourselves. We are all members of the same human family

Myths surround anti-hate laws

To the Editor:

Thank you for publishing Carol Lindeen's recent column about the brutal killing of a young gay man in Wyoming. ("An ugly reminder of intolerance," DI/Oct. 14.) Unfortunately, long before young Matthew Shepard was murdered in Wyoming, conservative groups around the country have mobilized against hate-crime

They base their opposition on a number of myths: 1. "Hate-crime laws apply only to 'special groups.' " Every American potentially receives protection.

Hate-crime statutes criminalize acts that are committed because the victim is different from the perpetrator. Thus, Christians who are attacked because they are Christian are as likely as Jews or Muslims to be protected by the law. Whites are protected just as much as minorities. Heterosexuals are as protected as

2. "Hate-crime laws violate the First Amendment." — Hate crime laws don't punish constitutionally protected free speech, only acts. Moreover, using the words of a perpetrator to establish motive is nothing new or irregular. Criminal law has always taken into account the motivation of an offender. The difference between killing someone in self-defense versus first-degree murder often rests largely on what the perpetrator said.

3. "There is no reason to increase the penalty on crimes that are already punished." — Crimes motivated by hate are significantly different from other offenses, and they are far more violent. 4. "You can't legislate tolerance. Prejudice is part of human nature." — A victim who is attacked because he or she is black, Jewish or gay often thinks "Does everyone in this community despise me?" That is because hate crimes are designed to send the message "We don't want you here" to perceived outsiders. Hate-crime laws send back an tim and a strong message to potential perpetrators that hate mongering will not be tolerated.

Wondering what Wiesel would think

To the Editor:

Imagine being taken away from your home with all of your friends and family and stuffed into a train car like animals by complete strangers. Now imagine (however difficult it may be) that you are in a place where people are being killed like insects and burned like firewood. Now imagine that people you don't even know nor understand kill most all of your extended family. It is just you and your father, but your father does not make it and you are around 15 years old and all but alone in the world that makes absolutely no sense whatsoever

You narrowly make it out of this horrible place alive, but where can you possibly go from here?

This is what Elie Wiesel, a holocaust survivor, had to endure before any of us could hear him speak in Hancher Auditorium earlier this month. During his speech, I could not help wonder what Wiesel really thinks about our society today here in America. This man who has endured hell on earth, yet travels the world not with hate but with the sole aim of bringing heaven to earth must be disgusted with many aspects of our society. A society that has faster means of communication than ever before yet rarely takes the time to hold meaningful conversations. A society that spends millions of dollars to follow around a juvenile president and ignores starving children all over the world.

Wiesel credited and praised us for bringing an end to the Holocaust, but it was our indifference that caused us to delay and not save millions of Jewish lives. Wiesel asked us not to forget the Holocaust, the ultimate example of hatred, violence and indifference from the 20th century. Also in his lecture, he emphasized that the opposite of love is not hate but indifference. He stressed the impact of each one of us helping someone else who is in trouble. He commented on the importance of compassion and respect for all human beings. Believe me, I can use this advice just as much as anyhorrible mistakes we made in the past century all over again. It's time to check ourselves. Shalom ...

Murdock column hits mark on modernism movement

To the Editor

I wish to congratulate Alan Murdock for his recent column ("Breaking away from modernism, DI/Oct. 21). Although just a few paragraphs long, Murdock's wicked parody ridicules more efficiently than anything I have previously read in the mindnumbing pretentiousness, self-congratulatory callowness and historical barrenness of the post-modernist project.

Government's use of fungus spoils day for drug users

F you listen closely, you can hear Timothy Leary turning in his grave. In what may be the most crushing blow to recreational drug users since the death of Jerry Garcia, the U.S. Senate recently voted to continue research on a strain of fungus that can destroy the plants that drugs such as cocaine and heroin are derived from. It's one small step for genetic engineers and one giant leap backward for crack addicts.

As the story goes, researchers have been working long and hard on developing a fungus that can wipe out plants such as opium poppies, from which heroin originates, and the coca plant, which gives us cocaine. In addition, researchers are looking into ways of eradicating marijuana plants as well. Rest assured, Phish fans - politicians' dreams of a drug-killing fungus have yet to material-to completion than most Pedestrian Mall dwellers would like to think. The U.S. government is chipping in $23 million to further the cause, and U.S.

ize. However, this process is much closer

Rep. Bill McCollum told USA Today that the research is in its advanced stages and that "this is something on the cusp of being successful."

Sounds like a plan, doesn't it? Now, if they can cultivate a fungus that will get rid of Jerry Springer, we'll really be in business. In all seriousness, however, it is interesting that after decades of attempts to foil the seedy narcotics industry, during which many lives have been lost and much money has been spent, it is a fungus that has eventually emerged as the best bet in halting the drug trade. Yes, after funneling millions of dollars into law enforcement and educational programs, it turns out that the only way to stop drugs may be The same friendly organism that has brought us penicillin, athlete's foot and that green stuff on your week-old loaf of bread may now be a savior in the fabled drug war. Strange, isn't it? It's one of those things you don't really expect, sort of like the UI football team scoring a touchdown against a ranked opponent. It's a surprising event, and it may eventually change the complexion of our nation's battle against drugs.

Over the years, the government has tried with great enthusiasm to bring an end to one of world's most profitable businesses, the drug trade. The results, however, have been suspect. Scare tactics such as TV commercials and the D.A.R.E. program have proven to be ineffective, as have federal laws. To this point, the war on drugs has yielded little more than overcrowded prisons and a fearful atmosphere. "Get tough" laws against drugs have merely cluttered our penitentiaries with harmless drug offenders while killers and rapists have been left to wander the what? Plenty of drugs are still available.

So, then, it seems not only recommendable but necessary that the U.S. government shift its focus from pointless programs directed at sixth graders to procedures that actually halt the spread of narcotics. Now that almost all other attempts have proven futile, the government is pulling out all the stops and getting to the root of the problem, so to speak. This means turning to advanced forms of technology to solve the problems that cannot seem to be solved through ordinary reason.

When people complained that their children were being confronted with inappropriate television programming, the government responded with the V-chip, which eliminated troublesome television and made parental responsibility unnecessary. Such is the case with this new antidote to the country's drug problem. Tired of educating children and dealing with pesky drug criminals, the govhopes that a little genetic engineering can solve its drug woes and create new woes for those with a penchant for mind-altering substances.

There are, of course, certain ethical questions involved whenever one talks about releasing a deadly organism into the wild. Researchers are quick to note, however, that if carried out properly, this procedure should kill only the plants that troops and special police b it intends to kill.

So while heroin junkies may end up short on supply, the marigolds in your backyard will still be safe. Hurricance Mitch stomps toward Honduras Eleven people have been reported killed by the storm, which also threatens Belize and Cancún.

> By Victor R. Caivano Associated Press

LA CEIBA, Honduras - Hurricane Mitch cut through the western Caribbean Tuesday, pummeling coastal Honduras and Belize with driving rain and fierce winds that snapped trees and sent thousands of people fleeing for higher ground. At least 11 storm-related deaths were reported.

Honduran President Carlos Flores Facusse declared the highest state of alert and sent in troops to evacuate thousands of people from villages on the sparsely populated coast. Thousands more made their way to safer ground on their own.

Its winds dropped from 180 mph to near 155 mph, reducing Mitch to a Category 4 hurricane, one category below the most powerful. But the 350-mile-wide storm remained very strong — and dangerous.

Mitch was meandering late Tuesday after moving west-southwestward roughly parallel to the coast for much of the day.

The storm's slow speed made the hurricane's path especially unpredictable, forecasters said.

Forecasters earlier said the most likely track would carry Mitch into central Belize by early Thursday, though some models showed it could veer southwest, northwest or even northeast if it slows further.

"With that kind of range of possibilities, we're not going to try to pin down anything about where it's going," Beven said.

180 mph winds made it a Category and the adjacent Bay Islands," the 5 storm, the U.S. National Weather Service said only three Atlantic storms were stronger — Gilbert in 1988, Allen in 1980 and the Labor Day hurricane of 1935.

Strong winds bent palm trees along the Honduran coast Tuesday, and heavy rain caused at least four rivers to overflow their banks. The entire coast of Honduras was under a hurricane warning; up to 20 inches of rain was forecast in mountainous areas.

The government reported at least three deaths. The Red Cross in neighboring Nicaragua said eight people died there due to flooding due to Mitch's rains.

In La Ceiba, on the western Honduran coast, residents fled to shelters set up in schools and fire stations on higher ground. The area has the sea to the north, the Cangrejal River to the east and a creek to the west.

Fisherman Manuel Padilla said he wanted to evacuate with his three children but authorities had not told him where the shelters were located.

Despite an 0-10 record in the conference, the Iowa volleyball team is not going to give up.

Tonight the Hawkeyes will face Minnesota in search of its first conference victory in more than one year. Action is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

"Minnesota lost to Purdue in three games last weekend," coach Rita Crockett said. "They probably aren't going to be real happy. I would bet we could beat them, but it depends on

Some of the seniors on the Iowa defense don't like what they've been seeing lately, and one of them decided to speak his mind on the matter.

Although Thigpen mentioned DeVries as another disgruntled player, the All-American candidate from Aplington, Iowa, did not echo Thigpen's comments.

"I'm not gonna put blame on anybody, especially a player or the offense or the kicking game," DeVries said.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry joked that Thigpen's postgame comments came out because "somebody rung Eric's bell."

Fry admitted, though, that it's only natural for the team's defensive players to be upset about the offense's inability to move the ball.

A high school buddy of Ballarini's, Michael Stemberk, revealed in his plea agreement with prosecutors that Ballarini shared "inside information" on the Northwestern football team with him, so that at least two 1994 Wildcats' games.

Ballarini has pleaded guilty and is cooperating with the federal investigation, so declined to discuss his alleged role in football betting. However, he recently noted of his campus bookmaking that he was around other student-athletes "15 hours a day," making it "extremely easy to do what you wanted to do."

In the 1994 Iowa game, with Northwestern a 6-point underdog, Lundy fumbled twice, once as the Wildcats were driving in the second quarter and again in the third quarter at the goal line. A video tape of the game shows Lundy apparently went untouched on both occasions.

Authorities will not say if Lundy is a target of their investigation. He did not return telephone messages left at his home in Tampa,

"I just want to play as hard as I can and not have any regrets," Lundy told reporters before his last two college games.

He didn't play in the season's final contest, against Penn State, after being confronted by school officials and admitting betting on college games other than Northwestern's. In an ironic twist, his suspension meant a start for freshman running back Darnell Autry, who went on to break Lundy's alltime school rushing record.

Pat Fitzgerald, a linebacker on the 1994 team, said he didn't hear Ray's complaint and had no reason to suspect point-shaving.

"If that's the case it's a huge disappointment to me," said Fitzgerald, who was All-America at Northwestern and is now a graduate assistant coach at the University of Maryland. "I don't even want to know the names of the guys (involved). It's just such a huge disappointment. It kind of makes me wonder how good we could have been in 1994.'

The 1994 Wildcats were 3-3-1 before dropping their last four games, including the 49-13 loss to campus gambling, Ballarini said he felt like a scapegoat for other student-athletes who gambled regularly. He said he was forced to leave school in December 1994 or face a student judicial system that could have expelled him.

Northwestern officials "knew that there should have been at least a half-dozen other student athletes right behind me following me out the door," he said. Northwestern football coach

Gary Barnett has refused to comment on allegations surrounding his 1994 team. But Taylor, who became athletic director at Northwestern in 1994 and presided over the dramatic revival of the school's football program, was outraged by Ballarini's comments. He insisted the administration did all it could before turning the investigation over to federal authorities.

to recruits?

MB: My recruiting philosophy is to recruit people and not just athletes. When I recruit, I make it clear that while I expect a lot out of them athletically, academics is still the most important thing.

A lot of swimmers are attracted to the conference we compete in. Swimming for a Big Ten school, combined with the excellent support that women's athletics gets here at Iowa are very big plusses that we have.

Finally, I think that the chances an athlete has when she comes to Iowa are great. We are in a rebuilding phase right now and recruits have the opportunity to create a tradition of excellence. They play a key role in the rebuilding process.

DI: This year's team has three Romanian athletes. How did you find out about them and how did you get them to come to Iowa?

MB: Actually, I inherited two of them. When they went home for the summer, they trained with their national team and talked positively about Iowa. People always ask me, Where did you find these kids?' I tell them that I have no special connections. (Romanian Olympian) Loredana Zisu actually contacted me.

DI: Are you looking forward to going to Hawaii in the middle of winter?

MB: It sounds luxurious, but it is really filled with high-intensity workouts. We can do a lot out there because the facilities are so much bigger down there. We work out three times a day, so it is an integral part of our training.

It is a win-win situation for us because we can get a lot of training in and the team enjoys the nice weather. Since we are down there for a good part of winter vacation, it is a great atmosphere for team bonding to take place.

Lockout talks continue with little progress established

> > By Chris Sheridan Associated Press

NEW YORK - The NBA and the players' union, finally seeking compromise in the nearly 4-month-old lockout, resumed bargaining Tuesday but limited themselves to noneconomic issues.

It was the first time since talks began April 1 that they had a detailed discussion of the many side issues that have been all but ignored in favor of the core economic themes of salary caps, luxury taxes and the "Larry Bird exception."

Personal conduct clauses, player discipline and marijuana prohibition were among the non-economic topics discussed at the four-hour meeting

"We talked about a lot of issues. I can't say we made a lot of progress," said Jeffrey Mishkin, the NBA's chief legal officer.

On Wednesday, about 150 players are expected to meet in the morning while the league holds its Board of Governors meeting. Bargaining talks on the main economic issues will resume around noon at a Manhattan hotel.

The league, which has already canceled the first two weeks of the season, is expected to announce further cancellations later this week.

"We're trying to salvage as much of the season as possible," union director Billy Hunter said. "I'm optimistic we're going to get a deal. I can't say it's going to happen this week."

NEW YORK - Roger Clemens regained his status as the top player in baseball, beating out Kevin Brown to finish No. 1 for the first time since 1988 in the annual rankings compiled by the Elias Sports

Clemens' performance the last two seasons gave him a 98.016 score out of 100, according to figures released Tuesday. The four-time Cy Young Award winner went 20-6 for Toronto this season, tying for the AL lead in wins and finishing first in ERA (2.65) and strikeouts (271).

Brown, 18-7 with a 2.38 ERA for San Diego, got a 96.094, finishing just ahead of Atlanta's Greg Maddux (95.747) among NL pitchers.

In a surprise, Houston's Jeff Bagwell tied Mark McGwire as the top NL first baseman. McGwire hit 70 home runs for St. Louis this season, setting a major league record.

The Cubs' Sammy Sosa, who hit 66 homers, was ninth among NL outfielders.

In addition to Brown, three other free agents finished first at their positions in the AL: Mo Vaughn at first, Roberto Alomar at second and Bernie Williams in the outfield.

Vaughn ended a five-year winning streak at first by Chicago's Frank Thomas, who finished tops among designated hitters this year. Last year, Thomas had baseball's top score for the second time in three seasons

Alomar has led AL second basemen five times in seven years, and Williams led AL outfielders for the second straight season.

Bulldogs ready to tangle with Gators

■ Georgia's 37-17 victory over Florida last year relieved the fears that the Bulldogs once had about this matchup.

By Paul Newberry Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. - This used to be the most frightening game on Georgia's schedule. Not anymore.

The No. 11 Bulldogs finally have some firsthand experience when it comes to beating Florida, instead of relying on stories from the good ol' days about Vince Dooley and Herschel Walker.

"We go into this game knowing we can win," linebacker Orantes Grant said Tuesday. "Now, everyone knows what we're capable of doing. People say we kind of snuck up on them last year, but they're not saying that anymore. They know we're here to compete for the Southeastern Conference championship every year."

Georgia (6-1, 4-1 SEC) ended a seven-year losing streak against No. 6 Florida (6-1, 4-1) last season in Jacksonville, turning the "World's Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party" into a mass catharsis for Bulldogs everywhere.

touchdowns and Georgia romped to a 37-17 victory.

"It was great to go back home," said cornerback Jeff Harris, a native of Jacksonville. "I had this big smile on my face the whole time. It's something that words can't describe. It felt so good."

Like most teams in the SEC, Georgia spent most of the 1990s serving as the whimpering nerd to Florida's schoolyard bully.

The Gators won seven straight games over the Dawgs from 1990-96, a galling blow to Georgia fans who had gotten used to dominating the series during Dooley's 25-year tenure as coach.

The low point came in 1995 when Florida rolled to a 52-17 victory in Athens (the series went home-and-Robert Edwards scored four home for two years while a stadium was built in Jacksonville). The Gators salted the wounds by scoring a late touchdown because, as coach Steve Spurrier explained, he wanted to be the first visiting team to put up 50 points at Sanford Stadium.

"A lot of people approached me saying we have to do something about it," said Jim Donnan, who took over as the Georgia coach the following year. The situation didn't improve in 1996 when a Florida team that would eventually claim the national championship routed the Bulldogs 47-7.

"Some of those teams that Florida had were so good, and we knew they were good," safety Kirby Smart said. "We knew if things didn't go exactly right, the game could get out of hand. I mean, they had five or six guys who are in the NFL right now.'

Things had changed drastically when the teams met last season. The Gators' mystique already had taken a blow with a 28-21 loss at LSU, while Georgia was showing signs of shaking free from a decade of mediocrity, arriving at Alltel Stadium with a 6-1 record.

'We knew going into last year that we were just as good as Florida, and we proved that," Smart said. "Before that, we knew we weren't quite as good as they were." Clearly, the Gators are no longer as intimidating as they once were. Instead of Reidel Anthony, Ike Hilliard and Jacquez Green, the leading receiver is a 5-foot-8 senior named Travis McGriff. Running back Terry Jackson is hampered by an ankle injury. The quarterback job has juggled between Doug Johnson and Jesse Palmer.

Penn State's Paterno underwhelmed by BCS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) - The polls have never really moved Joe Paterno, a coach who has seen four undefeated Penn State teams snubbed at season's end. Heck, he admitted that not only did he not draw up his rankings for the USA Today-ESPN coaches' poll a few years back, he didn't even seem to give the Gophers a favorable matchup for Saturday's game, especially considering his performance against Michigan State.

But coach Glen Mason's decision might have been much simpler than that. Persby is nursing a thigh bruise he sustained in Saturday's game before Cockerham replaced him with 5:39 remaining and Michigan State ahead 18-10.

Turner concerned about confidence level of freshmen

CHAMPAIGN, III. (AP) - Maybe this week, Illinois coach Ron Turner says, he will avoid showing his freshman quarterback and running . back tapes of their upcoming opponent. Just joking, he adds.

But Turner feels his young team is quickly losing confi dence after two blowout losses to top 10 teams in successive weeks and then a 42-9 loss to Purdue last Saturday. This coming Saturday, the struggling Illini (2-6 overall, 1-4 Big Ten) face No. 10 Penn

Turner said Monday he is concerned about the confidence level of quarterback Kurt Kittner and running back Rocky Harvey, both keys to what little offensive success Illinois has had

"The reason those two were playing is because they did have a lot of confidence, they just went out and played. They didn't worry about anything, they didn't worry about making mistakes," Turner said. "Both of them have to get back to that."

Kittner replaced senior Mark Hoekstra in the third game this season, and threw for 245 yards against lowa in his first college start. The next weekend, he led Illinois to victory at intrastate rival Northwestern, ending a 15-game Big

But Kittner faltered in the last two games against Wisconsin and Purdue - yanked at halftime in both. Illinois is averaging only 13.6 points per game and 148 passing yards this lowa State preparing for 'winnable' game at Oklahoma

AMES (AP) — There's something different about lowa State's football team this week. The Cyclones are getting ready for a game they actually have a chance to win.

Iowa State has lost its last four games, the latest a 52-7-thumping at Kansas State. Saturday, the Cyclones visit Oklahoma, which has plenty of talent but has played so poorly at times that coach John Blake is in danger of losing his job.

Both teams have the same records: 2-5 overall, 0-4 in the Big 12. They're the only Big 12 teams that haven't won a league game. "This is a game that's real winnable," lowa State coach Dan McCarney said Tuesday. "There's no question, by both staffs and both teams."

Iowa State hasn't won since beating Ball State 38-0 on Sept. 19. The Cyclones then lost to Texas Tech, Texas and Missouri before getting run over at Kansas State Oklahoma has lost five straight after starting the season with victories over North Texas and TCU. The Sooners' 10-9 victory over TCU came one week after TCU beat lowa State 31-21.

"I think it's a little more evenly matched this week," Iowa State strong safety Dustin Avey said. "Oklahoma, we can match up with their team at every position. It's a team we can definitely beat and hopefully we can go down there and get a victory.'

lowa State hasn't won a conference road game since a 23-22 victory at Missouri on Nov. 2, 1991. That had been the Cyclones' last road win of any kind until they won at lowa on Sept. 12 of this year.

That was a big deal at the time because it was Iowa State's first victory over Iowa in 16 years. But now it seems like it happened a long, long time ago.

"I don't even like to think about the lowa game anymore to tell you the truth," Avey said. "It was so long ago. So many things have happened since then. I've kind of put that behind me. It's history, basically."

Newcombe's knee could require surgery

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Nebraska quarterback Bobby Newcombe said he's been advised surgery may be required to repair his injured

During the team's weekly news conference Tuesday, Newcombe said he would miss 3-5 weeks if he undergoes arthroscopic testing on a knee injury that has grown increasingly mysterious in recent weeks. If reconstructive surgery is needed.

Newcombe said he would miss 6-9 months. After the injury occurred in the season opener Aug. 29, doctors had said no surgery would be needed. The injury initially was reported as a partial tear of the posterior cruciate ligament, and coach Frank Solich said Tuesday that team doctors are standing by their diagnosis. Solich said no decision has been made, and there's been no conclusion that surgery is needed. He even said Newcombe might start for the No. 7 Cornhuskers (7-1, 3-1 Big 12) against Texas (5-2, 3-1) on Saturday. "At this point in time, anything is possible,"

Later Tuesday. Newcombe wore street clothes as he tossed a football before practice. When drills began, he went to the sideline and sat with trainer Doak Ostergard.

The owners took little other action Tuesday, but Tagliabue reiterated that Dwight Clark, the player personnel director of the San Francisco 49ers, was likely to stay there through next April's draft despite a move by the Browns to get him to Cleveland, Carmen Policy, the 49ers' former president; is now president of the Browns.
