Lining up to be anything BUT the

New Gingrich

■ "I'm not Newt" is the common theme among those who want to replace Gingrich.

By John Diamond
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican leadership battle took to the airwaves Sunday as candidates to replace departing House Speaker Newt Gingrich and his lieutenants sought support from colleagues who want the GOP to show a friendlier and more effective face.

Momentarily interrupting their fevered phone campaigning for a parade through the Sunday talk shows, the GOP contenders differed less on policy issues than on whether to work with Democrats next year in a narrowly divided House. A common campaign platform seemed to be, "I'm not Newt."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., hoping to succeed Gingrich, spoke of working with Democrats to produce legislation on which a broad majority can agree.

"I intend to reach out and bring anybody who wants to together to formulate the legislation that we need," Livingston said on ABC's "This Week with Sam Donaldson and Cokie Roberts."

His only opponent thus far, Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., proposed a cooperative agreement with the Republican Senate — something seldom seen under Gingrich — and promised to keep social policy issues out of basic spending bills, a legislative tactic that often tied the House in knots.

"This is not just about who is going to be the next speaker of the House, it's about the direction of the country," Cox said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

The race for speaker may come down to who can dial the phone fastest, and the 17 incoming freshmen members may prove the crucial votes.

"Livingston called me yesterday. Chris Cox has not," said Rep.-elect Lee Terry of Nebraska. "I told Bob Livingston that I wanted to at least check out Chris Cox but that it would be a heck of an upset for me not to go

Newt's exit shocks local Republicans

By Kelly Wilson
 The Daily Iowan

■ Politically minded Iowa City residents react to the surprise resignation of Newt Gingrich.

"(Gingrich) knew he either had to quit or would get pushed out."

— Bill Kidwell, chairman of the Johnson County Republican Party

Three days after Republicans lost five congressional seats in the 1998 elections, Newt Gingrich resigned as speaker of the House on Nov. 6, sending shock waves through the UI campus.

Since much of the blame for the GOP's poor performance in last week's non-presidential election was placed on the Georgia representative, many local residents say Gingrich's decision to resign from Congress altogether is a strategic move.

"I think he felt he was destroying the chance for his party to really make some hay," said Cary Covington, a UI associate professor of political science. "As a Republican Party strategist, he was looking toward the 2000 elections."

Bill Kidwell, chairman of the Johnson County Republican Party, said Gingrich is a very intelligent party leader who made the decision to step down to avoid facing a difficult re-election for the top position within his party.

"He (Gingrich) saw the writing on the wall," Kidwell said. "He knew he either had to quit or would get pushed out."

Kidwell said he was surprised by Gingrich's announcement to resign from Congress after almost 20 years of service. But he said Gingrich's resignation was also a result of his waning popularity, which started long before the recent elections.

UI junior and Republican Karly Rubly said she was happy to hear that Gingrich was stepping down from his position.

"I don't like him, the things he has done or his stances on issues," Rubly said. "This is good news for the party because we need someone new."

Rubly said she thought Gingrich's resignation was prompted by the GOP's embarrassment that the party did not fare as well in the '98 elections as many expected. Especially in light of the Clinton scandal, everyone thought Republicans would win an

UI prepares for stiffer enrollment competition

■ As the state's birthrate drops, the competition for in-state students is expected to increase.

By Craig Mueller
 The Daily Iowan

The UI plans to increase scholarships and grants in order to stay competitive for in-state enrollment, as Iowa's birthrate is expected to drop below the national average in the next decade.

But UI officials say that they will not lower admission standards in an attempt to stay competitive.

"I don't think anyone's in favor of lowering standards for enrollment," said Michael Barron, director of Admissions. "If anything, we'd be more likely to gradually increase them."

According to Sandra Charvat Burke, assistant scientist in the Department of Sociology at Iowa State University, there were 806,000 Iowans under the age of 19 in 1990. Those numbers are projected to fall 8 percent by 2010 — a decline of 65,000 Iowans.

"We're very mindful of those numbers," Barron said. "Which means we are working to recruit both harder and smarter to make sure students hear our message."

Even though the UI saw a boost in this year's enrollment numbers — especially among freshmen — Barron said the UI is keeping its eye on long-term projections that show the pool of students in the state is likely to shrink.

Altogether, student numbers at Iowa colleges and universities rose by nearly 2,000 this year. Freshmen increases are particularly impressive, especially at the state's private institutions, where they climbed by 24 percent.

In order to attract students, the UI plans to offer more grants and scholarships to students who would otherwise not enroll at the UI, Barron said.

The UI currently gives 250 merit scholarships to freshmen each year, but Barron said that number needs to go up.

"We're concerned with that propor-

I.C. tries to help hurricane victims

■ While Iowa City aids in the relief efforts for the victims of Hurricane Mitch, some locals worry about family caught in the storm.

By Shirin Sadeghi
 The Daily Iowan

In the aftermath of Hurricane Mitch, national and international relief organizations are coordinating their resources to bring to a halt the death toll in Central America, which is climbing to more than 10,000.

Iowa City has developed its own means of lending a helping hand.

"All the area hotels are acting as drop sites for food and clothing for hurricane relief," said Jay LeaVesneur, general manager of the Heartland Inn, Coralville.

LeaVesneur and other local residents have been contacting area hotels and businesses to announce the drop sites on their marquees and in their windows since Nov. 6.

"So far, I am very surprised with the response we have received," LeaVesneur said. As of Sunday evening, the Heartland Inn had accumulated about 25 bags of clothing and a similar number of boxes of food.

The Central America Solidarity Committee is in the preliminary stages of coordinating efforts with UI Latino sororities and fraternities for relief in the regions affected by the hurricane.

"The priority is to have monies sent down so people can buy materials to build homes," said Jacqueline Gharib, a committee representative. "People will be placed in temporary housing made of corrugated tin and plastic. The effects of homelessness will last for years to come."

Some local people are involving themselves in relief work outside Iowa City. John Wolseth, a UI graduate student, has been trying to collect donations for the School Sisters of Notre Dame. This is a worldwide order that provides schooling and orphanages to regions in Central America and is specifically coordinating hurricane aid efforts for the town of El Progreso, Honduras.

Wolseth spent 10 weeks over the summer working in El Progreso and has been trying to keep in contact with the people he met from there. "It's pretty bleak. Most of the major highways leading in and out of the town have been destroyed," he said.

He hasn't been able to contact his friends in El Progreso either, because "the lines have been extremely busy or dead," a problem that many nationals abroad have had in trying to determine whether their friends and loved ones are still alive.

Patricia Moreno, a graduate student originally from Nicaragua, was able to contact her family last week but hasn't

UISG plans open debate on proposed party ordinance

■ A forum is scheduled for tonight to find out what students think about the proposed party ordinance.

By Carrie Johnston
 The Daily Iowan

The UISG and the A. Craig Baird Debate Forum, one of the oldest UI student organizations, are getting together tonight in order to make a stand on the proposed Iowa City party ordinance — whether they'll oppose it or approve it is still up in the air.

Representatives from UISG and the debate squad are scheduled to participate in an open debate on the ordinance in the R. Wayne Richey Ballroom of the Union at 6 p.m. The debate is being held to hear students' opinions about the proposal.

The party ordinance, if passed by the Iowa City City Council, would enable Iowa City police officers to break up a party at their discretion. The current ordinance permits police to break up a party only if a person complains to the police.

UISG decided to host the debate to formulate a stance on the proposed ordinance to best represent the UI student body.

"We are going into this debate just to listen at this point," UISG Executive Sarah Pettinger said. "UISG does not have a specific opinion right now."

However, by the end of the debate, UISG will, she hopes, have formulated a stance; that position will depend on the voice of the student body.

"The point of this debate is to find out what students think about this

CLAIRVOYANT LITTLE BOY

There was once a clairvoyant little boy who could foresee the future. One night while saying his prayers, the little boy was heard saying, "God bless Mommy, God bless Daddy, God bless Grandma, goodbye Grandpa." The next day his grandfather dropped dead of a heart attack.

A few weeks later, the little boy was praying, "God bless Mommy, God bless Daddy, goodbye Grandma." The next day his poor grandmother was hit by a bus while crossing the street — she never felt a thing.

A month or so later, the little boy was praying and said, "God bless Mommy, goodbye Daddy."

His father panicked. He had himself driven, very carefully and slowly, to work by an armed guard in an armored security truck he hired. He couldn't concentrate, however, thinking about those words, "Goodbye Daddy." He finally came home early, but very carefully.

He was met at the front door by his wife, who said, "What do you think happened today, dear? The most awful thing — the mailman dropped dead on the front porch." source: <http://www.fun-nybone.com>

Help Me, Harlan

Dear Harlan,
 I like this girl a lot and she likes me, but I have a few things that make me unsure. She is obsessed with her ex-boyfriend still, and she thinks I don't understand the obsession. Her ex treated her badly, using her as a sexual toy rather than a human. There is something else to her sexual past that scares the hell out of me. There were a lot of people before me, and I hear stories about them all the time from her own mouth.
 What shall I do?
 — Hopeless in the Hamptons

Dear Hopeless,
 This girl has more issues than a coffee table sitting in a doctor's office waiting room. To get involved with a woman who has so many issues is unhealthy. And from your letter, all indications are that she needs time alone to work out these very personal issues. Unless she's in therapy or making changes in her life to help resolve her personal problems, she doesn't seem ready to be with you or anyone. If she's that special, be a great friend and help her to love herself so she can love you or someone else in the future.

Shaw goes to jail

■ Shaw didn't complete the community service required after he received an assault charge for pushing the police chief.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

The two days that Iowa City resident Jay Shaw will spend in jail next week are meant as a protest, he said Sunday.

"In a strange way, I feel like someone has to serve jail time. I guess I'll have to do it," said Shaw, whose son Eric, an Iowa City artist, was shot and killed by an Iowa City police Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie in 1996.

"In my mind, I'll be serving one day for Officer Gillaspie and one day for Officer (Troy) Kelsay."

Gillaspie was investigating an open door at Jay Shaw's Gilbert Street business at the time of the shooting. Kelsay was one of two other officers with Gillaspie that night. On Nov. 6, during his parole hearing, Jay Shaw was sentenced to two days in jail after admitting he had not completed the terms of his deferred judgment.

He pleaded guilty to simple assault in December 1997 for pushing Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake at the Coralville City Hall four months earlier.

Jay Shaw has said he pushed Winkelhake because he was angry that no charges were filed against the police after his son's death.

A Johnson County grand jury and federal prosecutors have ruled that Gillaspie did not break Iowa law when he shot Eric Shaw. Gillaspie resigned from the force in October 1996.

As part of the deferred judgment, Jay Shaw had to go through anger-management counseling and complete 15 hours of community service.

He completed the counseling but said he couldn't finish the commu-

"I wasn't going to do it for them," Jay Shaw said. "If they want to punish me, they'll have to do it to me."

He said he's still seeing his therapist.

"When anger overcomes you so much that you push the chief of police, you need some help," he said.

Jay Shaw is scheduled to begin serving his sentence on Nov. 17 at 9 a.m. The simple assault charge will now be part of his permanent record.

Geographer to speak on apartheid

■ A geographer and preeminent scholar of social justice, David M. Smith is scheduled to lecture at the UI tonight.

By E.C. Fogue
The Daily Iowan

David M. Smith, a geographer and prolific author on the interface between geography and social justice, is scheduled to present a series of three public lectures during his week-long stay at the UI.

At his first lecture, titled "South Africa After Apartheid," today, Smith is scheduled to discuss his findings on the recently implemented Truth and Reconciliation Tribunal.

The tribunal, instituted in South Africa in 1995, seeks to document human rights abuses under apartheid.

Smith's work in this area stems from his exposure to racial discrimination in the American South. It culminated in his recent visit to South Africa, where he researched the moral issues of the post-apartheid era against the background of new social and economic policies.

The lecture, which will include photo illustrations of Smith's recent research, is scheduled to be held in Tippie Auditorium of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building tonight at 7:30.

Smith is scheduled to present his second lecture, "Geography and Social Justice," in Tippie Auditorium, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

In his most influential book, "Geography and Social Justice," Smith delves into the geographical aspects of inequality and human welfare.

"In the last few years of the 20th century ... there has been a return of social justice to the geographical agenda," he said in his book, which was published in 1994.

Smith is a professor of geography at Queen Mary and Wakefield College at the University of London and has been a visiting professor at universities in Australia, South Africa and the United States. In his studies, he attempts to "place justice at the heart of human geography."

At the UI Department of Geography's weekly seminar, Smith is scheduled to present his third lecture, "The Moral Turn in Geography," in Room 5207 of the Pappajohn building Friday.

His visit is sponsored by the Department of Geography, Global Studies, the UI College of Law and the International and Comparative Law Program, in conjunction with the UI's year-long commemoration of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Global Focus: Human Rights '98.

STATE BRIEF

Fifth person jailed in Boyd slaying

(AP) — A fifth person is in custody in the death of a man whose burned body was found in a Johnson County ditch.

Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter says Diana Lauritson, 15, of Salina, Kan., was arrested there on Nov. 6. She faces several charges, including obstruction of justice.

Lauritson was being held in Salina and will appear in juvenile court Tuesday. Iowa officials have filed documents asking that she be returned to the state.

Farmers found the badly burned body of Frank Lee Boyd, 43, on Aug. 7. An autopsy showed he had been beaten and shot before being set on fire.

Four Iowa City men and an Iowa City woman have been charged in the case, but officials are still looking for one of the men. Investigators say drugs were involved.

Technology takeover in Oakdale

The first research company to set up shop at the UI's Oakdale Technology Innovation Center announced on Nov. 6 that it has merged with a European technology firm, a move that some say would help bring further technology innovation to the UI.

Computer Aided Design Software Inc., 2651 Crosspark Road, Coralville, was sold to LMS International, a Belgian-based engineering firm, on Oct. 27.

"It was a friendly acquisition and a logical step in the growth of CADSI," said Tim Webb, director of marketing for Computer Aided Design. "It's a mutual benefit to both companies."

Webb said he hopes the merger will continue the development of technology in Iowa City and the UI. "It provides us with some additional resources as we grow our business," he said.

LMS has a larger presence in some companies than Computer Aided Design does, Webb said, and therefore has the resources to undertake and support various projects.

"We're not big enough," he said. But with the merger, "our customers feel more confidence in the stability in the company."

Computer Aided Design will become LMS CADSI in January, a strategic business unit focused on developing design simulation and virtual prototyping solutions.

Despite the name change, Webb said the company will remain in Coralville. "We have a significant relationship with the UI and its ongoing research," he said. "We will continue here because we have expertise in mechanical engineering."

Webb called the company's software designers "state of the art," and said the UI is a mecca for computer technology.

Computer Aided Design, a spin-off of the UI Mechanical Engineering Department, began in 1983 with the commercialization of DADS, a multibody motion simulation software.

Ed Haug, UI professor and creator of DADS, said the merger is a natural linkage that reflects the globalization of business.

Computer Aided Design, which was the first business to open at the Oakdale center, currently has 48 employees.

It is the fifth company LMS has bought in the last five years. It is now part of a company of more than 500 people in 15 offices worldwide. LMS expects its revenues to exceed $100 million by 1999.

Winter gets jump-start with first official snow

'Tis the season in Iowa City, even if winter does not officially start for another six weeks.

The first snowfall of the season was recorded at 0.6 inches on the evening of Nov. 7, said Candice Boyd, meteorologist for the National Weather Service.

And even though winter got a jump-start in the area, many students said they were excited about the snow.

UI graduate student David Close said he and his fiancée scraped up enough snow from the ground and cars for a snowball fight.

"It's an opportunity to go out and play," said Close, who comes from South Dakota.

For other students, the snow provided a chance to try something new.

"I've never driven in it," said UI graduate student and native Texan Simon Cisneros. "It was different from what I was used to."

Even though the snowfall was so light that nothing substantial accumulated on any roads, City Manager Steve Atkins said crews are ready if a larger snowstorm hits the town.

"We play it by ear, and keep an eye on weather reports," he said.

The town's equipment is currently set up for leaf pickup, but with the installation of a sander and a plow blade, it is also ready for winter action on the streets of Iowa City.

However, National Weather Service meteorologist Kyle Weisser said there was "a minute chance of snow on Tuesday." Other than that, no snow is expected through next weekend.

Change state medical examiner's office, officials say

Iowa prosecutors warn that disarray is hurting their investigations.

Associated Press

Some Iowa prosecutors are asking for change in the state's medical examiner system, warning that disarray in the office is hampering criminal investigations.

Some county attorneys also said the state Division of Criminal Investigation needs more agents and lab workers.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said having no state medical examiner can mean delays in investigations, such as the Frank Boyd slaying near Iowa City in August, which led to five arrests last week. Farmers found Boyd's body in a Johnson County ditch.

"Here we are standing at the side of the road with a body that needs a lot of work and identification, and everyone was anxious to get started," White said.

But with no state medical examiner to call on, he said, investigators instead spent several hours looking for a private forensic pathologist qualified to study Boyd's badly burned and decomposed body. They finally took the body to Dr. Larry Blum of Rockford, Ill.

"The delay in some cases is potentially dangerous," White said.

Former state medical examiner Thomas Bennett resigned in October 1997 amid an inquiry into his office.

White said that in addition to hiring a new medical examiner, the state should consider putting deputy medical examiners at offices around the state.

"In the short term, we're getting the job done. But in the long term, the best situation is having a state medical examiner on board."

— Paul Wieck, State Public Safety Commissioner

A state medical examiner can offer a level of expertise in forensic pathology that most county medical examiners do not have, White said.

Dubuque County Attorney Fred McCaw, who is on the committee charged with finding someone to replace Bennett, said he also favors having deputy examiners stationed throughout the state. Otherwise, there is only one person to handle all the work, he said.

"The only reason the system was working under (Bennett) was because he was willing to sacrifice for the system," McCaw said.

State medical examiners need to be available not only for autopsies but for further consultation and testimony at trial, he said.

The pressure the state puts on its medical examiner is scaring off candidates, he added.

"The first thing they say is, 'You don't have enough people,'" McCaw said.

State Public Safety Commissioner Paul Wieck and DCI Director Darwin Chapman said they recognize the needs and are doing the best they can with the resources they have. The state now uses private pathologists and gets a lot of assistance from Polk County Medical Examiner Francis Garrity. "In the short term, we're getting the job done," Wieck said. "But in the long term, the best situation is having a state medical examiner on board."

Wieck said candidates have turned down the medical examiner's position for various reasons. He also defended the length of the search.

"The position could probably have been filled soon without the involvement of the various constituencies interested in it, but we formed a search team," he said.

Another committee, charged with studying the medical examiner system overall, is chaired by Polk County Attorney John Sarcone. He said a system that would include more than one medical examiner is being discussed.

The committee, which includes Wieck, should have recommendations ready by the beginning of the year, Sarcone said.

The county attorneys also said they are concerned about what they consider an inadequate number of DCI agents and lab workers.

The wait for lab test results is getting longer and longer, White said, noting that Johnson County investigators are still waiting for some results from the Boyd case. DCI lab workers are competent, but there aren't enough of them, he said.

Iraq prepared for strikes, officials say

Iraqi ministers maintain a hard line, refusing to back down despite the threat of military action.

By Eileen Alt Powell, Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — As U.S. officials considered military action, Iraqi ministers said Sunday they are not afraid of American attacks and would not back down on their decision to bar U.N. arms inspections.

Trade Minister Mohammed Mehdi Saleh said Iraq has suffered for so long under U.N. sanctions that it has nothing to fear from new U.S. threats.

"They will not kill in a military strike more than they are killing with sanctions every day," Saleh said, referring to the U.N. Security Council trade sanctions imposed on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

"Our country is prepared to face any military aggression," he said.

Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said the government was not moved by last week's Security Council resolution that held Iraq in "flagrant violation" of U.N. edicts for its decision to stop cooperating altogether with weapons inspectors.

"Iraq adheres to its stance until the Security Council fulfills its obligation toward Iraq," Aziz told President Clinton meets with senior advisers at Camp David, Md., Sunday to discuss the crisis caused by Iraq's latest refusal to open weapon sites to U.N. arms inspections. From right, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Henry Shelton, Secretary of Defense William Cohen, National Security Adviser Sandy Berger and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright.

the official Iraqi News Agency. He called on the United Nations to lift its ban on the sale of oil — Iraq's economic mainstay — "as a start toward the final lifting of the whole embargo."

Iraq last month announced it was halting cooperation with U.N. weapons inspectors until the Security Council begins moving to lift the embargo.

The Security Council has said the embargo won't be lifted until U.N. inspectors certify that Iraq has eliminated its weapons of mass destruction, as required by U.N. resolutions that ended the 1991 Gulf War over the Kuwait occupation.

Iraq says the sanctions, which also ban almost all other trade, have led to the deaths of 1.5 million Iraqis in the past eight years — many of them children — by causing shortages of food and medicine and a deterioration of water and sewage systems.

"We are losing 4,500 children per month — that means nearly 60,000 per year," Saleh said. "I don't think a military strike would kill 60,000 children as sanctions are killing now."

Aziz, the most senior Iraqi official to comment on the latest U.N. resolution, spoke after meeting a delegation of Irish and Scottish politicians who said they oppose the use of force against Iraq.

"I think nothing is solved by military action," said Tam Dalyell, a Scottish member of the British Parliament.

Dalyell said the delegation's leader, former Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds, planned to brief President Clinton on the trip, adding: "I hope it does some good."

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan's envoy to Iraq, Prakash Shah, also met with Aziz Sunday. Shah refused to give details of the session to reporters.

The United States and Britain have threatened military action to force Baghdad to allow U.N. weapons inspections to resume.

On Sunday, Clinton was meeting at the Camp David presidential retreat with Defense Secretary William Cohen, who just completed a tour of the Gulf, and National Security Adviser Sandy Berger, who consulted last week with Britain and France.

NATION BRIEFS

Glenn had shaky reintroduction to gravity

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After a shaky reintroduction to gravity, John Glenn was '95 or 98 percent back to normal' Sunday, walking briskly, telling jokes and urging old folks to follow their dreams.

"I feel very elated that things went well. We got a lot of the data we were looking to get and worked very hard up there," NASA's 77-year-old geriatric test subject said his first morning back on Earth.

"Obviously, we'd like to ... go right back up again, but that's not to be. And so a sense of accomplishment, I guess, I feel, and a little bit of letdown that the whole thing is over, maybe, but nothing serious."

In his first post-flight news conference, Glenn admitted he "didn't feel too hot" when he stood and walked out of space shuttle Discovery on Nov. 7.

He was determined, though, to join his six crew mates for the traditional walk around the shuttle.

"If I would have been on my hands and knees, I was going to do it," said Glenn, who beat the oldest-space-man record by 16 years.

"I wasn't quite to that point, but obviously I was not doing my best gait out there. I was not disoriented, that would be too strong a word for it. But you're walking very spraddled so you can keep your balance."

Pump prices down in all regions of the U.S.

CAMARILLO, Calif. (AP) — Low crude oil prices and less demand for gasoline pulled down pump prices, which dropped nearly a penny per gallon, an industry analyst said Sunday.

The average price for gasoline, including all grades and taxes, was $1.086 on Nov. 6, down .86 cents from two weeks earlier, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 stations nationwide.

At self-service pumps, regular gasoline was $1.027 per gallon, mid-grade was $1.135 and premium was $1.219. At full-service pumps, regular was $1.463, mid-grade was $1.55 and premium was $1.624.

MRI scans may help detect heart attacks

DALLAS (AP) — Magnetic Resonance Imaging scans are helping doctors predict whether plaque, the fatty gunk that clogs the arteries, is likely to break open and trigger a heart attack or stroke.

Doctors have long known that heart attacks and strokes typically occur when a lump of plaque on an artery walls bursts. In a misguided attempt at repair, the body forms a clot over the plaque that chokes off the blood supply completely.

Researchers have been delving into what makes some plaque harmless, even though it fills up much of the blood vessel, while other bits are prone to breaking. Now, they are taking steps toward technology that will let them peek inside the plaque to reveal whether it is vulnerable to disaster.

At Sunday's opening of the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association, doctors described two new uses of MRI scans that may at last allow them to distinguish benign plaque from the dangerous.

"Many of us think that the most significant clinical advance in the next five to 10 years will be the noninvasive imaging of plaque," commented Dr. Jan Breslow of Rockefeller University in New York City.

The noninvasive technique, tested by Dr. Valentin Fuster and others at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, involves souping up an ordinary MRI machine to snap super-fast cross-sectional pictures of the beating heart.

Teacher adrift for 6 days

■ After floodwaters from Hurricane Mitch ravaged her village, a Honduran woman survived on a makeshift raft.

By Ken Guggenheim
Associated Press

TRUJILLO, Honduras — Flushed out of her village by Hurricane Mitch's raging floodwaters and drifting for six days far into the Caribbean Sea, Laura Isabel Arriola de Guity was alone.

Her husband and three children were dead. All she had was a makeshift raft, the sea below her, the sun in the day and the moon at night. There was no land in sight.

On the sixth day, she spotted a duck near her raft.

"I started to talk with this duck," she recalled. "I said, 'Little duck, send a message that I'm alive. Take me to my people. Take me to the shore.'"

"I started crying, and I said, 'Why don't you take me so that I can fly somewhere with you?'"

Arriola's desperation ended hours later. She was spotted by an airplane looking for a yacht that had disappeared during the storm. A British helicopter rescued her.

The 36-year-old schoolteacher is recovering from dehydration, sun exposure and hypothermia at a hospital in the northern Honduran city of Trujillo. She is expected to be released soon.

In an interview in her ward, Arriola tried in vain to hold back tears as she described six days of terror and miracles, surviving a storm officials say killed at least 10,000 people in Central America.

Arriola and her family lived in the village of Barra de Aguan, near the mouth of the Aguan River. Normally her house was about two miles from the sea on one side and more than a mile from the river on the other. But when Hurricane Mitch stalled over the Honduran coast, Oct. 28, the sea and the river merged into what seemed like a single body of water.

Arriola's house was quickly swept away, so her family took refuge at a neighbor's home. Fourteen people climbed onto the roof, but when a wall collapsed below, they returned downstairs.

They briefly found shelter in one room, but a wall there also caved in and the river tore through the house. Arriola clutched her 4-year-old son, Andersson Moises, and shouted at her husband and brother-in-law to grab the other two children: Frances Elizabeth, 8, and Ricardo Gerson, 10.

She tried to hold on to her son, but the river ripped them apart.

"I tried to float so I could see over the water," she said. "I swam and swam, trying to save him, trying to get to somewhere dry. And then I realized I was already in the sea."

She never saw her family again. Arriola, a strong swimmer, clung to some floating palm branches for four hours. Using debris in the water, she made a 4-foot by 4-foot raft out of tree roots, branches and a mortarboard.

"I was thinking, I was begging God to let someone find me and rescue me," she said. "But there was no one. No one saw me."

Debris littered the sea. Arriola spotted the corpse of a child, along with several dead animals. But she also found coconuts, which gave her milk, as well as pineapples and oranges.

On the second day, she spotted two islands in the distance, which she believed were Roatan and Utila — about 100 miles from her home. But the sea and winds pushed her in the other direction.

Arriola slept little. Rough seas made it difficult to rest, and she was knocked off the raft several times.

"The worst part for me was after being with my whole family, with my children, my husband, that I could be so alone in the sea without seeing anybody," she said.

"I cried every day. I was crying more than I was quiet. Day and night I cried and screamed. I was praying, worshipping. I did it all. The only thing I couldn't do was run, because there was no place for me to run to."

She passed the time singing religious songs, talking to God and to her husband and children.

"I wasn't feeling so lonely when I was thinking of them as if they were close to me," she said.

Her prayers bore fruit on Nov. 2, when she saw a plane flying by and waved at it. It turned and passed over her again.

"I was trying to stand up on the raft, but a wave threw me in the sea," she said.

She climbed back on the raft and took off her black T-shirt because she thought her red bra might be more visible. The plane passed again, this time dropping something in the water that exploded. It was likely intended to mark the spot, but Arriola was scared she was being bombed.

About half an hour later, she saw something in the air that she thought was a bird. It turned out to be a British helicopter coming to rescue her. A crewman was lowered to the raft and placed Arriola in a harness before she was pulled on board.

Rigoberto Hernandez, 26, covers his nose to avoid the smell of a decaying bull that was victim to Hurricane Mitch in the town of Bajos de Choloma, located 9 miles from San Pedro Sula on the northwestern coast of Honduras Sunday.

"I told him, 'Thank God you have saved me. Thank God,'" she said. She said she doesn't know where she was picked up, but news accounts said it was 25 miles north of Guanaja Island — about 75 miles from her home.

The crew members at first thought she might have been a survivor of the Fantome, a Windjammer schooner apparently destroyed during the storm with 31 crew members aboard.

Asked why she thinks she survived while so many others died, Arriola paused.

"To me it was because I was in the arms of God," she said. "God had me in his arms, because it's only with his help that I am still able to live."

Arriola says she'll likely live with relatives after being discharged from the hospital. The bodies of her husband and daughter have been found. The other two children are presumed dead.

Hurricane Georges cleanup in aisle 4

NO doubt you've been waiting to hear about my harrowing experiences during Hurricane Georges. The worst moment came when my body was being tossed around violently, attacked by savage, uncontrollable forces of terrifying power. This happened in the supermarket two days before Georges arrived.

Going to the supermarket is a tradition for us hurricane veterans in the Miami area. When we hear that a hurricane is coming, we calmly and efficiently implement our Hurricane Preparation Plan, which is: (1) Panic; and (2) Buy random stuff.

do with so-called "meteorology": It had to do with my hurricane shutters. Hurricane shutters are metal panels that many residents of hurricane zones keep in their garages under a protective blanket of dead spiders.

These panels are scientifically engineered such that, if you fasten them correctly to all your windows, you will have long bleeding gashes on both hands. Also you will guarantee that the hurricane will not come. A hurricane can, using its eye, see whether you have your shutters up, and if you do, it will go somewhere else, emitting powerful gusting chuckles.

Ordinarily, I would have had my shutters up, thereby keeping Georges away, but as it happens, this year I ordered new shutters (the edges of the old ones were getting dull). As Georges was forming, workmen (1) took away all my old shutters and (2) piled new shutters and hardware all around my house.

This presented Georges with a rare opportunity: Not only could it destroy my house; it could destroy my house by whacking it to pieces with my new hurricane shutters. So Georges aimed straight for my house. If the weather experts had known, they could have just said, "Hurricane Georges is currently at latitude X and longitude Y, and it is going to Dave Barry's house."

Fortunately, I happen to be a pretty handy "do-it-yourselfer," so rather than leave the new shutters lying on the ground, I was able, using my natural mechanical ability, to beg the workmen to put them up. So they did, and Georges immediately swerved away. (I sincerely apologize to the people it hit, but at that point, I was no longer steering.)

For the remainder of the hurricane, I watched the TV coverage, which consisted mainly of TV reporters in bright yellow rain slickers going into evacuation zones and asking the residents, in highly judgmental tones, why they did not evacuate. Just once, I wanted to hear a resident answer: "Hey, I'm here because I LIVE here. What's YOUR excuse, Hairspray Boy?"

Anyway, I'm glad hurricane season is almost over. And I decided I'm not going to wait until the "last minute" to get ready for the next season. That's right: I have already bleached my shutters.

Stripping the X rating from sex

LAST Monday, my younger sister Mar and I had the pleasure of interviewing noted Details magazine sex columnist Anka Radakovich for everyone's favorite student-run FM station, KRUI.

Though Radakovich's plane was late and she seemed unimpressed with our charming (if rustic) broadcast facility, it was pretty cool to be able to sit and chat about sperm with one of my journalistic heroes.

One thing that came up during the interview that I would have liked to pursue but didn't get to because of time constraints was this: Everybody thinks people (i.e., women) such as Radakovich are these brazen sexual revolutionaries because they stand up behind a podium and say "boner" or sit down before a computer and tell thousands of magazine subscribers all about spanking.

Where has everyone been? Did the '60s have no effect at all? Did we all miss the Madonna Phenomenon? Is a grown woman speaking her mind about gonads in a world gone mad really that shocking? I don't understand.

I don't understand why the society we live in uses sex to sell everything from lingerie to Turtle Wax and yet frowns on the open, honest, enlightening discussion of the same (the sex, that is — not the Wonderbras and wax).

I don't see how the guys in charge can miss a double standard so obvious. It's like, "We're going to show a curvy blonde reclining on the sports car we wish to sell you because we believe horniness loosens the purse strings and encourages free enterprise." Unless you're a Commie pinko or somethin', you'll want the girl, and thus the car. Of course, the curvy blonde is really a wholesome coed from a Bible college in Oklahoma and would never dream of fornicating with the likes of you! She may be nearly naked and spread-eagled on the hood of a Mazda, but she really wants to get married, settle down in the 'burbs and start having babies as soon as possible. She's the All-American Girl — wholesome and nutritious, nudity notwithstanding.

So what do naked girls on cars have to do with Radakovich and you? Maybe not much ... at first glance. But consider this: You're constantly bombarded with sexually charged text and images on television, the Internet, in magazine ads and in fine publications such as the one you're reading now.

You can't escape, but you can't really take advantage, either — without being labeled a skank with a dirty mind and too much time on your hands (or with your hands, as the case may be) — and worst of all, you can't talk about what you feel because, evidently, we just don't discuss that kind of thing around here.

But let's back up for a second. This is a free country (in theory, at least), and you can pretty much do what you like, so long as you don't mess with anyone else's show.

So if you'd rather leave the sex in the bedroom, that's cool. It's your right and prerogative to have a crummy love life and wallow in it if you want to, but dammit, don't try to put the smack down on all of us perverts out here who like nothing better than to sit around in radio studios and talk about sperm. We're just exercising our inalienable right to be raunchy, and you don't have to listen.

But regardless of inalienable rights, and even today in our "enlightened" society, if you're a man who takes a keen interest in sex, you run the risk of being dubbed a raging bundle of disturbed hormones, a dawg out for snatch at all costs, or, depending on your age, a dirty old man.

It should be noted, however, that unsavory as these epithets may seem, they probably won't lose you friends or get you ridden out of town on a rail. You may have a harder time scoring once the word gets out, but your life is far from shot.

On the other hand, if you're a woman who enjoys the theory, discussion and practice of being sexy, you may very well get labeled "loose," disreputable or the grandma of all still-acceptable misogynistic slams, a "slut."

Your mother will disapprove, your friends will worry and guys will begrudge you their respect (for what it's worth) because there's a good chance you might actually just give them what you both want instead of playing some stupid head-game. Hypocrisy, anyone? Would you like fries with that large order of frustration?

So anyway, I'm glad there are people like Radakovich who are high-profile enough to speak their mind and say to hell with the fallout. The world needs people who are unafraid to deal with issues the masses find difficult and distasteful — LesBiGay issues, gender issues, issues of women and minorities and the whole magazine-rack of issues surrounding sex and desire.

The more people talk about and get comfortable with stuff like this, the more tolerant and understanding they will become of people unlike themselves ... and that can only be a good thing, if you ask me.

Alternative to 'dead week' admirable

With the stress of final exams closing in, a week without classes would be a blessing to UI students. Although in the past attempts to earn a "dead week" have failed, the crusade to ease the strain of finals is still underway, as the UISG is giving it another shot.

While its efforts may not yield perfect results, the UISG should be praised for opening up dialogue with faculty members and addressing student interests that are often overlooked.

The appeal of the UISG's alternative plan to "dead week" is not what it can do, but what it might do. Last Tuesday UI students went to the Faculty Council with a plan requesting that professors hold final exam review sessions during the last week of classes instead of assigning more work or introducing new material.

The plan is more realistic than the initial "dead week" proposal, which valiantly sought a week free of classes prior to finals. UI administrators burst that utopian bubble, contending that too many uncertainties existed with giving students a free week of study.

The real challenge of the new plan is getting instructors to recognize the benefits of hosting a review session.

Under the proposition, each department and professor would participate on a voluntary basis. If the new plan is adopted, UI students are only guaranteed a possibility that their professors will hold much-needed course reviews.

The UISG's effort should be recognized: These students are exploring ways to make the finals week crunch a little easier. Unfortunately, the option of whether to hold a review under this proposal tarnishes the success of the plan and the motivation behind it.

The disparity between those who take exams and those who devise them is most evident during finals week.

For those professors who introduce new material right up until finals week, a review session would take time away from their course objectives. For the student who is balancing a full class load, these reviews would cut study time in half and relieve the strain of reorienting oneself to the basic ideas introduced at the beginning of the semester.

Still, cramming for finals remains the prevalent, though not always popular, approach to studying. The stress of scheduling, preparing and passing or failing will keep UI's academic hopefuls occupied, dead week or not.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editorial's argument lacked evidence

To the Editor:
In a month when much of the nation (including Iowa City) is still reeling from the crucifixion of Matthew Shepard on a fence in Wyoming, I could have done without Lance Hamby's buffoonish argument against gays in the military ("Discrimination policy needed for military," DI/Oct. 28).

In the second to last paragraph of an editorial that reeks of circular reasoning, Hamby writes: "The military is not a social laboratory. Our nation's armed forces must restrict access to many people, not just homosexuals, to maintain its high level of quality as our nation's protector."

There is not a shred of evidence that homosexual military personnel does not perform its duties as well as its straight counterparts. It is that simple.

The argument about military discipline was foolish when Colin Powell argued it. It was foolish when the Ninth Circuit Court repeated it. Having the argument parroted back to me in the The Daily Iowan is annoying.

The idea that the presence of a homosexual in a military unit might impact that unit's "combat readiness" is as laughable as it is unsupported.

Not only is the argument ridiculous to gays and lesbians, but it is ridiculous to a great many decent, thinking people, including many of Hamby's "soldiers, sailors and airmen" — those men and women he gallantly defends from gay people.

And I ask Hamby this: Do you think that in the history of past wars not a single homosexual person has died for this country in combat? That only straight people have what it takes to die for their mothers?

If you believe that even a single homosexual person has ever died while in U.S. military uniform, then your argument spits on that soldier's grave.

Doctor's experiments not worthy of defense

To the Editor:
Regarding UI Professor of dermatology John Strauss' experiments on mentally disabled children in the 1950s and his absurd defense of those experiments as "adher[ing] to the prevailing research standards and ethics," consider the opening statements of Gen. Telford Taylor at the Nuremberg trials from Dec. 9, 1946:

"Whatever book or treatise on medical ethics we may examine, and whatever expert on forensic medicine we may question will say that it is a fundamental and inescapable obligation of every physician under any known system of law not to perform a dangerous experiment without the subject's consent."

As for the statements by (Robert) Weir, a UI professor of medical ethics, and David Skorton, UI vice president for research, they need to be "parsed" more carefully than a Clinton deposition. Makes one really proud to be a Hawkeye, huh?

FILM REVIEW By Phil Kennedy

No shocking jokes, no memorable scenes and certainly no surprising plot lines. The only symbol of a good Adam Sandler film in "The Waterboy" is all the hitting. Sandler has made a reputation for himself as a physical actor. He screams a lot, and he beats a lot of people up, but what Sandler does well is mixing his awe-shucks cuteness with a wild temper that attracts male and female crowds of all ages. The combination worked in "Happy Gilmore" and "Billy Madison," but "The Waterboy" does not bring all of Sandler's talent to the screen. The film had so much potential. The plot of a socially inept waterboy escaping his fears and taking out his temper as a linebacker for a failing football team brings forth the possibility of a movie of endless jokes. Unfortunately, the only comedic performance Sandler comes up with is his crazy-ass performance on the football field. Play after play, Sandler squeals and pummels his opponents by spearing and even power-bombing them into the ground. Sandler's team, the Mud Hogs, even knocks heads with none other than the Iowa Hawkeyes later in its season. Sandler stars as 31-year-old Bobby Boucher, a hardcore waterboy who is bullied by football players and babied by his loony mama (Kathy Bates). The water fascination that Bobby has is the most ridiculous subplot of the film. Bobby offers multiple types of H2O to his players and even checks pH balances throughout games. Bobby sees a new light when he finally cracks out of his quiet waterboy habits and pummels his team's quarterback during practice. After a clichéd pep talk about using certain frustrations as motivation from coach Klein (Henry Winkler, aka, The Fonz), Bobby learns that he can use his anger on the football field. What's disappointing for Sandler in the film is that he can never find his comedic talent outside of the football field. His relationship with his over-protective mother gets old after two minutes and Sandler's relationship with his recently released-out-of-prison girlfriend Vicki Vallencourt (Fairuza Balk) never hits the heart. Sandler's presence and occasional bathroom humor jokes work for him, but not on any of the other characters in the film. He basically carries the movie by himself. Sandler's humor on and sometimes off the football field combined with a mediocre cast and plot even out to make a decent comedy, but what brings the film down further is the predictable chain of events that unfolds throughout the film. Sandler films don't center on genius plots, but "The Waterboy" is Sandler's worst film yet.

Moving toward the ambiguities of life

■ Ethan Canin is scheduled to read from his newest novel tonight.

By Tyler Steward
 The Daily Iowan

Cover Art

Though newly appointed Iowa Writers' Workshop faculty member Ethan Canin is also a physician, he no longer practices medicine. But he didn't choose to be a writer because it was easier than being a doctor. "Writing is the hardest thing I've ever encountered," he said. "Medicine wasn't nearly as hard." Canin is scheduled to read from his newest novel, "For Kings and Planets," tonight at 8 in the Buchanan Auditorium of the Pappajohn Business Administration Building. Canin first decided he wanted to be a writer when he read a collection of stories by John Cheever. Ever since, his reaction to a good book has been the same. "Every time I read, I'm happy to be a writer," he said. Though Canin said his ambition was always to write, he started out as an engineering major at Stanford. He then graduated from both Harvard Medical School and the Iowa Writers' Workshop. Even before his appointment as a faculty member in the Workshop, Canin decided to give up medicine to devote himself to writing. Medicine, he said, was a profession too time-consuming and too comfortable to allow him to write. "One of the things that drew me away from medicine was that if I stayed with it, I knew I would never write again," Canin said. Canin has written two collections of short stories, including "Emperor of the Air." More recently, he has found success as a novelist. "For Kings and Planets" has drawn praise from Publisher's Weekly and Newsday, among other publications. Though Canin has been considered predominantly a short story writer in the past, his turn as a novelist reflects his developing thematic concerns. "As one gets older one gets more interested in ambiguity and less interested in closure," he said. "A longer novel mimics life's ambiguity." His newest novel does precisely that. "For Kings and Planets" tells the story of Orno Tarcher, a young Midwesterner who attends college at Columbia University in New York, and who finds himself unsettled by the city's cosmopolitan atmosphere. There he meets Marshall Emerson, a charismatic and sophisticated but deeply troubled young man. The book charts their unusual friendship, as well as Orno's growth from out-of-sorts underdog to career man and parent. Canin hopes the story, inspired by another novelist/short story writer, will be the first of a trilogy of novels. "It was inspired by a John Updike story about a friendship over 30 years," he said. "What better subject than how a child is present in an adult?" In creating the characters that populate his work, Canin relies on several sources for inspiration. And sometimes their sources are entirely mysterious to him. "It's parts of me, little bits of things I've heard, people I've met," he said. "It's all hidden." "I think I make everything up, but then my brother reads something and he says, 'Oh yeah, I remember when that happened,'" Canin added, laughing. But mystery, whether encountered while reading or while writing, is fine with Canin. "I'm moved by things that I like, especially things I like for mysterious reasons."

Some residents defend Newt after his sudden fall from power even greater majority, Rubly said.

UI junior and Democrat Sean Spellman said he thinks the resignation of Gingrich is an indication that the Republican Party is losing power and leadership.

"I think it is a good thing, because it shows that the Republican house of cards is crumbling," he said. "There has been conservative movement lately, but this past election shook things up."

But Democrats should not hail the GOP leader's resignation as a victory just yet, Covington said. A successful transition depends on whether the Republicans opt for an ideologically polarizing or politically pragmatic leader, he said.

"You can't say whom this is going to benefit just yet," Covington said. "Depending on how bloody the election of a new speaker is, the GOP could stand to gain if its replacement goes smoothly."

From now until Congress reconvenes in January, the Republicans would be wise to get a more moderate leader in the House if they want to punish Clinton, he added.

Steve Foss, past chairman of the county Republicans, said Gingrich's resignation was the right thing for him to do under the circumstances.

"He did it for the good of the party and the country," Foss said. "Now it will take awhile for the Democrats to find a new person to pick on."

Even though Gingrich was made out to be a villain by the Democrats, UI senior and Republican Doug Hoelscher said the congressman did a lot of good things for the party.

"He is the main reason Republicans regained the majority after 40 years of Democratic control," Hoelscher said. "Gingrich could be pretty pretentious at times, but Republicans would not be where they are today without him."

UI senior and Republican Mark Sands said Gingrich was treated unfairly by his opposition and had been the central person to blame things on.

"He has been the victim of a brutal campaign of attack from the media and Democrats since the first day he took over as speaker," Sands said. "I think it is really unfortunate, because he really deserved a place in the history books."

At this time, the top contenders for speaker are Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., and Christopher Cox, R-Calif., chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee, Sands said.

"They are both very appealing because they are articulate and well respected," Sands said. "They will provide the needed new blood to further the Republican agenda."

UISG to search out student opinions on party ordinance ordinance," Pettinger said. "We are here to represent whatever the students feel."

Various members of the debate squad will be participating in the discussion to represent student opinion. Four of the members — Josh Kramer, Peter McCollum, Jigar Desai and Megan Dolan, all UI freshmen — will argue both sides of the proposal.

"We received a call from (UISG President) Brian White, and he thought it would be useful to present arguments for both sides in an organized fashion," said David Hingstman, director of debate and an assistant professor in communications studies.

The four debaters were randomly assigned positions to take on the issue; they have been preparing thoroughly for the debate, and are expected to make the best possible case.

"We have looked into other city ordinances that are similar and different," McCollum said. "We have also looked into the provisions of this ordinance." He said the arguments that will be presented in favor of the party ordinance are binge drinking, personal safety, and vandalism and property damage.

The arguments opposing the ordinance include the law's unfair over-extension of its bounds to protect neighbors, the interference with personal property, and the distraction it would cause police officers when they should be covering downtown.

"This issue has a great deal of importance to students," Hingstman said. "It affects their freedom and their level of responsibility. ... It seems like students will relate well to other students who like to party sometimes."

In addition to the students involved, Pettinger said she hoped that city councilors would attend the discussion as well, although their presence is by no means certain.

After the presentation by the debate squad, there will be an open microphone session so that other students can express their views about the proposal.

"Students are highly encouraged to come," Pettinger said. "Based on student opinion, UISG will form a stance. If we need to take it somewhere, we will."

with Livingston."

As chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, Livingston was able to raise millions for his political-action committee and donate to Republican candidates, including Terry.

A third House Republican who was weighing a run for speaker, Rep. James Talent, of Missouri, withdrew his name and threw his support to Livingston.

Two additional potential candidates for a House Republican leadership position may be ready to make a move.

Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wa., is giving renewed consideration to challenging Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, the House majority leader. Dunn's announcement could come as early as today, said GOP sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rep. Dennis Hastert was also considering entering the fray, according to a source close to the Illinois Republican. That would make it a four-way race for the No. 2 House post; Rep. Steve Largent, R-Okla., has already declared his interest.

Hastert is a close ally of Rep. Tom Delay, R-Texas, the House majority whip, who is backing Livingston for speaker but has been conspicuously silent about the majority leader's race.

The Election Day Democratic gain of five seats means the next Congress will have 223 Republicans, 211 Democrats and one independent who usually votes with the Democrats. The immediate concern of Livingston, Cox and others seeking lower-level leadership posts is the number 112 — a majority in the Republican caucus.

The incoming GOP House members will vote for leaders by secret ballot on Nov. 18, the day before Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr will be testifying before the House Judiciary Committee. A vote by the full House for speaker would take place after the 106th Congress convenes on Jan. 6.

Incoming Republican senators will meet the first week of December to vote for leaders. While no challenges have yet emerged, there are rumblings of dissatisfaction with Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Mo., and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. The GOP had hoped to widen its Senate majority to a filibuster-proof 60 seats but wound up making no gains. The Senate has 55 Republicans and 45 Democrats.

heard from them since.

"The economy is affecting (my family) like everybody else," she said, expressing concern that an already weak economy has been further damaged by this disaster.

She said she is currently planning her own efforts to provide assistance by raising funds, collecting clothing and food and organizing people to go to Nicaragua.

The focus is now on trying to help the people who have survived. "We can't do anything about the deaths that have already occurred, but we can try to prevent further deaths," said Wolseth.

This includes trying to bury the dead quickly so that diseases such as cholera don't become epidemics. Dealing with mosquito populations, which flourish in temperate, moist climates such as flood zones, has also become a top priority.

"Mosquito-borne diseases like malaria and dengue fever are becoming a serious problem," Wolseth said.

Immediate attention is aimed at providing food and bottled water to the inhabitants of these regions. In many of these countries, water from pipelines is unsafe and most people buy bottled water on a regular basis. However, with roads and other means of transportation destroyed, people are unable to acquire such basic necessities.

Competition heats up for in-state students

ENROLLMENT

tion and have a definite interest in increasing it," he said.

By giving out more in financial aid, officials in the Office of Student Financial Aid said the UI could stand to profit by gaining money from student tuition that it would not have otherwise received.

Because Iowa houses three public universities, 28 private schools and 15 community colleges, as well as several speciality schools, the UI realizes that the competition is intense for in-state students, Barron said. The UI is set on getting out the information to prospective students on what it has to offer.

Since the competition for these scholarships has increased, leaving a larger number of prospective students empty-handed, Barron said the UI could benefit by tapping into that resource. According to him, the UI gives out 50 Presidential Scholarships each year out of a pool of nearly 600 applicants.

"The market is out there," Barron said. "It's regrettable that we can't grant more (scholarships)."

The decline in birth rates is especially disconcerting for private colleges and universities who rely on tuition as their main source of income.

Some private state schools offer "merit awards" to students with good high school grades, sons and daughters of alumni, siblings of current students and even children of teachers or clergy.

Such discounting at colleges "has become the culture in the Midwest," said Tom Willoughby, dean of admissions at Drake University, and the practice is likely to grow.

Although the UI does not plan on providing the same types of discounts, Barron said he could see how these practices could work for private schools.

"Financial aid leveraging is a business practice that is becoming popular at universities today," he said.

According to Barron, there were about 38,000 high school graduates in Iowa this past year, with about 75 percent going on to college.

"At the moment, we are not in a panic mode, but we are careful to make sure that what we are doing, we are doing very well," Barron said.

The UI has been successful in increasing enrollment, gaining 834 students this past year, the highest in the state.

NATION BRIEF

Gingrich's plummet stuns White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — When senior White House adviser Doug Sosnik delivered the news — "Newt is resigning" — President Clinton's head fell forward, his eyebrows arched in disbelief. Two typed sentences of official reaction were distributed to reporters.

"It will be an interesting weekend," said one aide.

"I feel kind of bad for him," said another.

A third aide quizzed associates for what they knew about who was in the race to succeed Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., as House speaker. "Who's announced? Who's announced?"

Few who work at the White House were willing to have their name attached to any published comment on the explosive story of Gingrich's fall. "We have mixed feelings," said one political adviser. Gingrich, after all, was a known quantity. Who knew what kind of Republican they might have to work with next?

"If the new speaker gets elected because the Republican Caucus thinks Newt Gingrich was too conciliatory, it's hard to see how that would promote bipartisanship," Press Secretary Joe Lockhart said on Nov. 7.

Penn State halts Iowa's conference title hopes

The Nittany Lions beat Iowa Saturday and went on to win the Big Ten Field Hockey Tournament Sunday.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The second round of the Big Ten Field Hockey Tournament was everything it was billed to be and more.

But Iowa, which had won six of its last seven games, saw its hopes for a Big Ten Tournament title come to an end against eventual champion Penn State here Saturday.

In a highly competitive game, the Nittany Lions advanced to the finals by beating the Hawkeyes, 3-2. Penn State went on to defeat Michigan, 3-1, to win the tournament.

"We had good stretches, then bad stretches," Iowa sophomore Natalie Dawson said. "We needed to play a little smarter at the end of the game, but there were times where we had the ball in their end for long periods of time."

The game may have been decided in the first 15 minutes, when Penn State caught the Hawkeyes flat-footed and jumped out to a 2-0 lead.

At 25:56, Sonje Volla stole a pass in the Hawkeye zone and buried the shot. Five minutes later, another turnover in Iowa's defensive zone opened up Heather Gorklaski for a goal.

"We started off pretty rocky, and Penn State came out like gangbusters," Iowa coach Beth Beglin said. "We were really on our heels that first 15 minutes of the game, and they came right at us."

The two goals snapped the Hawkeyes back to reality, and they began to put heavy pressure on the Penn State defense.

Iowa kept on the attack for the rest of the half, and cut the lead to 2-1 just before halftime when Dawson and Kelly Dolan got creative on a broken play.

After a botched push-in on an Iowa penalty corner, Dolan stepped up, stopped the ball, then got it back to Dawson for the goal.

Iowa continued to pour it on after the half, and immediately tied the game at 2-2 when senior Kerry Lessard buried a pass from Gina Carr.

"I was really proud of how we battled back in that second half," Beglin said. "We started to play a lot smarter, tightened up our defense, and kept possession better."

With about 20 minutes left in the game, Penn State began to put some offense together, but Iowa goalkeeper Lisa Cellucci stepped up. The senior denied Penn State on three consecutive penalty corners, but couldn't hold them off forever.

At 16:49, Tracey Larson sent a shot wide, but freshman Meredith Shulzitski was there to tip the ball over Cellucci, giving the Nittany Lions a 3-2 lead.

Iowa tried to get back on the counter-attack, but was forced to play short-handed for five minutes when junior Alycyn Freet received a yellow card for taking down a Penn State player.

"Over the last 10 minutes, you've got to be able to push everybody up,"

Iowa's Dean Oliver goes up for a shot against Marathon Oil's Ken Roberts Sunday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Marathon Oil loses Price war

Dean Oliver scored 19 points, but another guard, junior Jason Price, stole the show and led the Hawkeyes to an exhibition victory.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Jason Price had one of the most productive seven-minute stretches in Iowa men's basketball history Sunday, and his timing couldn't have been better.

When Kenny Pratt started to heat up for Marathon Oil late in the second half, Price began matching him shot for shot.

With six-and-a-half minutes remaining, Price gave the Hawkeyes a 74-55 lead with a lay-up. Then Pratt hit a 3-pointer, and Price answered with another lay-up. Pratt followed with a pair of baskets from beyond the arc, and Price had a 3-pointer of his own.

Pratt added two free throws to end the entertaining game of tit for tat, cutting Iowa's lead to 79-66. But that was as close as Marathon Oil would get, and the Hawkeyes won the exhibition game, 95-72.

Pratt finished with 25 points, and his team dropped to 0-3 on its exhibition tour. Price later added another basket and four free throws.

"I just had fun out there tonight," said Price, a transfer from Marshalltown Community College. "I just want to do the same thing in there, no matter if it's one minute, two minutes or whatever."

Price did not even see the court until Iowa had a comfortable lead. The Hawkeyes turned a three-point halftime advantage into a 19-point cushion by the time Price entered at the 7:06 mark.

The 6-foot Price played the off-guard position, rather than point guard. He adapted quickly, though, and his explosiveness allowed him to score 13 points on 4-of-4 shooting.

Price was also 4 of 4 from the free-throw line, and with Dean Oliver at point guard, Iowa had a backcourt with exceptional quickness.

"I have a lot to learn about the two spot," he said. "It was tough, but I got through it."

"Both of us are quick, and Dean is extremely quick."

With J.R. Koch still shaky with an ankle injury and Guy Rucker having an off night, Price's Marshalltown teammate, Jacob Jaacks, provided some stability around the basket.

Jaacks, a 6-foot-8 center, scored 12 points on 4-of-4 shooting and pulled down eight rebounds. Rucker, meanwhile, struggled to find a rhythm and had just four points on 1-of-7 shooting.

Jaacks' effort, combined with guard Ryan Luehrsmann's nine rebounds, helped Iowa to a 50-39 advantage on the boards.

"I like to mix it up," Jaacks said. "Shoot when it's open. Bang, throw some people around, push some people around and hopefully establish ourselves inside. It's really gonna be important in the Big Ten (season)."

Missing much of the last two weeks of practice caused Koch to be a little rusty. His timing was off, which con-

Too busy to slow down

Pat Summitt is regarded as the best women's coach ever.

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Keeping up with Pat Summitt is impossible.

She's everywhere and everybody wants a part of the woman who's guided Tennessee to six national championships. They want to hear her speak, get her autograph and watch her work. Anything that might help them grab some of her magic.

How she meets all the demands — while running a program favored to win an unprecedented fourth straight title and raising 8-year-old son Tyler with husband R.B. — amazes those around her.

"She must have more hours in the day than everyone else because I sure couldn't do what she's doing," senior point guard Kellie Jolly said. "I think I'm busy, and she does twice as much as I do."

"The lady does not slow down ever. If you can ever catch her sitting down doing nothing, you are one special person."

The only time Summitt really slows down is during the season, when many of the outside demands can be put aside.

"I feel like I'm getting my energy back just because I've had a chance to sleep," she said.

After leading her team to a 39-0 record and national title last spring, Summitt went on a monthlong tour promoting her motivational book, "Reach for the Summitt." Then she worked with writer Sally Jenkins on "Raise the Roof," a book about the 1997-98 season. There also was a speaking engagement nearly every day, plus recruiting trips.

The 46-year-old coach didn't get a break until late summer, when she took a cruise with her family.

"I'm not complaining, don't get me wrong. But I think it's made me realize how popular the women's game is now and how popular our team was last year," Summitt said of her hectic schedule.

Hawkeye losing streak climbs to 24

The Iowa volleyball team dropped matches to Penn State and Ohio State over the weekend.

By Roger Kuznia
The Daily Iowan

On the surface, nothing changed for the Iowa women's volleyball team Saturday night.

Penn State, ranked second in the nation with a record of 24-0, handed the Hawkeyes their 24th consecutive conference loss.

However, the Hawkeyes gave the Nittany Lions all they could handle in the first game, losing 15-13 before they lost the next two by big margins, 15-2 and 15-3.

Ohio State also defeated Iowa Friday night in three straight games, 15-8, 15-9 and 15-8.

The losses dropped Iowa's overall record to 6-17 and 0-14 in the conference.

Iowa coach Rita Crockett said her team played well throughout the Penn State match, despite the lopsided scores in the final two games.

Crockett said her players are starting to understand their roles better.

Beglin proud of team's late-season improvement

FIELD HOCKEY

Beglin said. "With Penn State having the extra player, there were more gaps for them to work the ball in. In that five minutes we had to spend most of the time defending instead of attacking, and it hurt. We had to step up, but it's hard to do that being one player down."

The game was not without losses for Penn State, as first team All-Big Ten forward Meagan Galle left the game with a broken collarbone and will miss the rest of the season.

To get to the second round, the Hawkeyes defeated the only Big Ten team they hadn't beaten this year when they took out Michigan State, 3-1. Iowa used goals from Dawson, Tiffany Fodera, and Quan Nim to gain revenge for last year's tournament, when the Spartans knocked Iowa out in the first round on the Hawkeyes' home field.

Nim was the lone Hawkeye named to the all-tournament team.

The Hawkeye team that beat Michigan State and stretched Penn State to the limit Saturday was a far cry from the team that opened the Big Ten season 0-5, Penn State coach Char Morett said.

"Iowa has really come on strong from the beginning of the season," Morett said. "They've got a great team, and have really improved since the first time we played them. I don't think that they are a 9-9 team."

Beglin said the same. "There is a totally different attitude, competitive spirit, and this is just a different team than the beginning of the season," she said. "The team really came together and grew. I'm really proud of the way the team turned things around at midseason. This is going to be something that we can build on for next year."

tributed to early foul trouble. The senior picked up his fourth foul with 13 minutes remaining in the game.

Still, Koch managed to score 10 points and grab six rebounds. "I thought I could move a little better with (the ankle) than I did, but it's just not there yet," Koch said.

Iowa coach Tom Davis noted that Marathon Oil's physical play underneath hindered the efforts of Rucker and Koch, who rely more on finesse.

Rucker's struggles came a week after his 18-point performance against the Philippine National Team. "Rucker is almost trying too hard," Davis said. "But he's been practicing better and better, and we'll get him back to the drawing board."

Freshmen Joey Range, Antonio Ramos and Duez Henderson did not appear until late in the game, and classmate Rod Thompson played late in both halves.

Davis said Range is nursing a neck injury, but the Galesburg, Ill., native made his presence felt in a hurry once he entered the game. He made 3 of 4 shots in just three minutes of play for six points.

The freshmen are deliberately being brought along slowly, partly because of injuries and missed practice time. Davis is also trying to get them to focus on academics, at least until the end of the semester.

"After their last final (exams), they can then devote themselves to basketball for a full month," the Iowa coach said. "But if they don't hit the books now, they won't be here."

Marathon Oil coach Mark Simpson vented his frustrations after the game. He thought his team played lackadaisically and got outstuffed. The Oilers actually led 22-15 early in the game before Iowa went on a 16-0 scoring run.

"We played like a bunch of individuals tonight, and that's not what Marathon Oil is all about," Simpson said.

Iowa will try to end losing streak again this weekend

VOLLEYBALL

Crockett said. "It's taken over half the season, but it's still not too late. We have to start somewhere."

Penn State scored the first four points of the first game before Iowa went on the offensive, scoring six of the next seven points to take a 6-5 lead, its first and only lead of the entire match.

The Nittany Lions retook the lead for good, though the Hawkeyes hung right with them to the end, 15-13.

Iowa's Julie Williams and Sara Meyermann both had eight kills in the first game. In the next two games, they combined for just six.

Williams said she was encouraged by her team's play Saturday. "We knew we didn't have anything to lose and we just came out as hard as we could," Williams said. "I think that's what really helped us, that we didn't put any pressure on ourselves."

"I think if we play like we did in that first game, we can beat anyone else in this conference."

Penn State coach Russ Rose said he was impressed with Iowa's effort. "Iowa played really well," Rose said. "They're going to catch somebody. I have no question about it."

Penn State came off a huge conference win over eighth-ranked Wisconsin last Friday in three straight games. Because of that, Rose said his team wasn't ready to play in the first game against Iowa.

"I talked to my team about that,

and I think they learned a little lesson," Rose said.

Against Ohio State, Iowa gained early leads in the first two games, 4-0 in the first and 6-1 in the second, before faltering.

"They didn't focus on everything we asked, and it showed," Crockett said. "Once it's done the whole match, we'll get somewhere. It's like taking bad medicine. You really don't believe you can do it, but you still go through it anyway. But in the end, you're going to get well."

Senior Barb Zvonek had 28 assists and five digs against Ohio State. She now needs only 15 digs to become Iowa's all-time leader.

Crockett is unsure when her team will win its first conference game, but she said patience will be the key.

"It could end up being not this year, it could be next year," Crockett said. "It's not so important to win, it's how we play right now. Of course I would take some wins, though. I wouldn't turn them away."

Iowa will play two more home matches Friday and Saturday against Indiana and Northwestern. Williams hopes that after the team's success against Penn State, things will turn around.

"Now that we've seen each other do it and know what each other can do, we need to expect it more from each other and set the standard there instead of where we've been lately," Williams said.

Summitt wants to see women's college game equal that of the men

It's a far cry from when Summitt took over the Tennessee program in 1974. Her team played in a largely empty arena, and she was paid $8,900.

Now her base salary of $140,000 ranks with those of Tennessee football coach Phillip Fulmer ($155,000) and men's basketball coach Jerry Green ($142,000), and the Lady Vols often outdraw Green's team.

The reason is Summitt, widely regarded as the best women's coach ever.

Her six national titles put her behind only John Wooden, who won 10 men's titles at UCLA. Her coaching record at Tennessee is 664-143, and she is 63-4 in international competition, including a gold medal at the 1994 Olympics.

The Lady Vols have made the postseason 22 straight years, reached 15 Final Fours and played in 10 championship games. They have won 45 straight games entering this season.

What drives Summitt is the desire to see the women's game equal the men's. A woman who played 6-on-6 in high school wants sold-out tournaments, more media attention and equal pay for women's coaches.

That competitive spirit has driven Summitt since she first played basketball with her brothers in a barn loft.

"She hated to lose then, hates to lose now," said state Rep. Tommy Head, who often had to separate his sister from his other brothers when a game in the loft turned into a fight.

Credit her parents, Richard and Hazel Head, who raised their family on a farm in Henrietta, Tenn. Everybody worked hard — and played hard.

Even Chinese checkers was a battleground. When the children started to beat their parents at the game, the parents quit playing.

Summitt's famous ice-melting stare comes from her father. So does the determination that there's only one right way to do something, whether it's to fix a fence or inbound the ball.

"In my family, if you made a mistake, you heard about it," she said. "We didn't brush it under the rug. We talked about it, and we corrected it."

Summitt does the same with her players.

She punished one team that started up partying before an early morning practice by running them until they vomited. She even placed garbage cans in the gym so they'd have somewhere to be sick.

Summitt and her 12 rules of conduct for the Lady Vols program — the "Definite Dozen System" — aren't for everyone. A total of 14 players, six this decade, have transferred to other schools, while five simply quit.

Among the rules: take full responsibility, discipline yourself so no one else has to, and make hard work your passion.

"It's worked for us here the majority of time," Summitt said. "There's been a few players that left the program because they couldn't handle it."

Summitt is a tireless recruiter, but some players don't make her work at all. Sarah Edwards and Amanda Canon are walk-ons this fall. They turned down scholarships elsewhere to play for Summitt.

"If you're going to give it everything you've got, why not get it from the best?" Edwards said. "It's like when you work out: The more it burns, the stronger you get."

Michelle Marciniak was recruited by Summitt, but she chose Notre Dame — only to transfer to Tennessee. She said the coach attracts players by dangling potential in front of them.

"I don't know how she does it because she's so hard on you and she rides you so hard," said Marciniak, who now plays for the ABL's Nashville Noise.

ROLEX TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

No. 1 Cleveland leads men's team to strong fall finish

By Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeye men's tennis team scored four victories at the Rolex ITA Regional tournament in East Lansing, MI last weekend to end their fall season.

Sophomore Tyler Cleveland won two matches before losing to the tourney's No. 1 seed, Ryan Sachire of Notre Dame, 6-1, 6-2.

Wins over Brandon Currie of Butler and Derek Myers of Purdue led Cleveland to the third round, where Cleveland would end his fall season with a 13-5 record.

"He played at a different level for me, he was real aggressive," Cleveland said of the tourney's No. 1 seed.

"I played my best tennis at the Ball State Invitational, and I thought that I was playing at that level in this tournament, I just ran into a guy who was better."

Redshirt freshman Tom Buetikofer beat David Chang of Wisconsin 7-5, 4-6, 6-3 in the second round, but then fell to Gavin Sontag of Illinois 6-3, 6-2.

"He's had a great fall, but hadn't beat anybody of that caliber before," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said, "He played him pretty tough, Buetikofer topped off a really great fall with a really great tournament."

Freshman Petar Mandic, junior J.R. Chidley, and junior Girls Auskaps all lost in the first round. Mandic lost to Henry Behm of Michigan 7-6 (7-0), 6-0, Chidley lost to Ball St.'s Juan Fernandez 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, and Auskaps fell to Northwestern's Brad Erickson 5-7, 6-1, 6-3.

In doubles, sophomore Jason Dunn and Auskaps registered Iowa's lone win.

The Hawkeyes won either a singles or doubles championship in every fall tournament and will use their fall success as a stepping stone to the spring dual season.

"I thought overall we had a real good fall, we won a lot of titles," Houghton said. "I think we made a lot of progress."

Auskaps agreed. "I think it went well," he said, "We expected a better fall season this year, and we did it, we dominated two tournaments."

6 victories not enough for women's team to grab titles

By Todd Hefferman
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team closed out its fall season over the weekend with six victories at the Rolex Regionals in South Bend, Ind.

Junior Natalya Dawaf upped her fall singles record to 5-6 with a straight set victory over Detroit's Maria Pandelet in the first round. Dawaf won 6-4, 6-3, but was knocked out of the singles draw by Kristy Dascoli of Ohio State 6-3, 6-1 in the second round.

"I think I played well, I just think she had a little more experience than me," Dawaf said.

Senior Emily Bampton started off her last Rolex Regional with a straight set victory over Jennifer Vaughn of Michigan. Bampton won, 6-1, 6-4, to advance to the second round, where she was defeated by Jennifer Hall of Notre Dame, 6-3, 6-0.

Sophomore Erica Johnson and junior Shera Wiegler both lost their first round matches, dropping them into the consolation brackets, where both lost in the consolation bracket's second round.

The Hawkeyes' two doubles teams each won their first round matches before being knocked out in the second.

The Rolex became the only tour-namment that the Hawkeyes didn't earn either a singles or doubles championship.

"I think we've all made vast improvements, and I think our doubles have gotten better," Dawaf said. "Everybody's stepped up."

The Hawkeyes open their spring season by hosting Illinois State on Jan. 30.

UI MEN'S SWIMMING

Men's swimming wins one of five duals at Extravaganza

An exhaustive weekend at the Illinois Dual Meet Extravaganza slowed, but didn't stop the Iowa men's swimming team this weekend.

The Extravaganza featured five dual meets over a three-day span, scheduled to improve the stamina of the Hawkeyes for the Big Ten Championships in February.

The Hawkeyes managed just one win in five duals, defeating Southern Illinois Friday night. Sunday, Iowa lost to Cincinnati and Indiana, and Saturday they fell to Missouri and Drury College.

"It was a really tough weekend," coach John Davey said, "It was more of a test to see how the guys would swim with so many dual meets in such a short time."

"And I think all the guys did a really good job. We have some fighters, that's for sure."

Against Southern Illinois, the Hawkeyes won five out of the nine races and sophomore Simon Chrisander continued to dominate the diving competition, winning the three-meter event for the second time this season.

Sophomore Marko Milenkovic won the 200-yard individual medley and the 100 butterfly, junior Bogdan Deac won the 100 backstroke, and sophomore Jay Glenn won the 50 freestyle.

Saturday, Chrisander again won the three-meter event. Glenn and Deac also registered victories in the 500 freestyle and 200 backstroke.

Sunday, Chrisander lost his first diving competition against the Hoosiers and Bearcats, finishing third in the one-meter and second in the three-meter. Mike Collier scored 315.45 points to beat fellow Hoosier Ryan Kosanic for the one-meter title, and 331.20 to edge Chrisander for the three-meter crown.

Glenn won the 200 and 100 freestyles and helped Iowa win the 400 medley relay as an anchor, and Milenkovic beat Agustin Guzman of Cincinnati by 0.04 seconds to win the 200 butterfly.

Even though the Hawkeyes lost four out of the five dual meets last weekend, they were mostly happy with their results.

"I thought we showed a lot of pride and a lot of confidence," Mednick said.

Vikings bounce back from first loss

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Brad Johnson, who was hurt the second week, came off the bench when Randall Cunningham was injured and led Minnesota to 17 straight points in a 31-24 win over New Orleans on Sunday.

After the game, it was disclosed that Johnson played the second half with a broken thumb on his throwing hand.

But he also threw two costly interceptions as the Vikings (8-1) rebounded from their first loss a week ago.

Sammy Knight picked off both passes and returned the second one 91 yards to tie the score 24-24 with 10:10 remaining.

New Orleans (4-5) lost for the fifth time in six games despite the rally that began with Aaron Craver's 100-yard TD on a kickoff return.

Playing with his broken thumb, Johnson coolly led Minnesota on an 81-yard drive.

Eric Gray/Associated Press

Falcons 41, Patriots 10

FOXBORO, Mass. — Atlanta jumped to a 14-0 lead after six minutes and improved on its best start ever behind Jamal Anderson's two touchdowns and a defense that sacked Drew Bledsoe five times and allowed only 18 yards rushing.

The Falcons (7-2) began the day tied for the NFC West lead with San Francisco and erased any doubts that they can dominate on the road against a winning team. Until Sunday, they were just 2-2 away from home and had beaten only two teams with winning records.

Jaguars 24, Bengals 11

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Sparked by cornerback Aaron Beasley's 90-yard fumble return, Jacksonville (7-2) opened another big first-half advantage and coasted home.

Jaguars quarterback Mark Brunell strained his groin and was held out of the second half as a precautionary measure. He wasn't missed against the Bengals (2-7).

Cowboys 16, Giants 6

IRVING, Texas — Emmitt Smith became the Cowboys' career leading rusher with a 163 yards and Troy Aikman shook off a painful finger injury to make two critical throws for Dallas.

The Cowboys delivered what could be a fatal blow to the defending champion Giants' chances of repeating as NFC East champion.

Dolphins 27, Colts 14

MIAMI — Rookie John Avery rushed for 100 yards and O.J. McDuffie caught two touchdown passes to spark an offense that has sputtered for most of the season for the Dolphins (6-3).

Miami, averaging 269 yards per game, outgained Indianapolis (1-8) 279-57 in the first half for a 20-0 lead. The Colts scored all of their points in the final eight minutes.

Ravens 13, Raiders 10

BALTIMORE — Rod Woodson returned an interception 18 yards for a touchdown and Michael McCrary

Dallas' Leon Lett (78) celebrates after he and teammate Greg Ellis (98) sacked New York Giants quarterback Danny Kanell (13) Sunday.

had four sacks as the Ravens snapped a four-game losing streak.

Eagles 10, Lions 9

PHILADELPHIA — Less than six days after a humiliating 34-0 loss at home to Dallas, the Eagles beat Detroit, surviving when Jason Hanson's 58-yard field goal attempt landed short with 31 seconds left.

Rams 20, Bears 12

CHICAGO — Tony Banks completed 24 of 31 passes for 202 yards and one touchdown and ran for another score for St. Louis.

Ricky Proehl, Chicago's leading receiver last year, caught eight passes for 99 yards and a score for St. Louis, and Jeff Wilkins kicked two field goals.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak for the Rams (3-6) and was their first win in Chicago since Nov. 3, 1986.

49ers 25, Panthers 23

SAN FRANCISCO — Ty Detmer, subbing for the injured Steve Young, led a drive to set up Wade Richey's 46-yard field goal with 33 seconds left, as the 49ers (7-2) overcame an early 16-0 deficit. Young was out with a pulled abdominal muscle.

Detmer, making his first start since joining San Francisco as a free agent, threw three interceptions in the first half and fumbled once. But he came back to throw touchdown passes of 36 and 5 yards to Terrell Owens and a 29-yarder to J.J. Stokes.

Broncos 27, Chargers 10

DENVER — Bubby Brister, who started after John Elway strained rib muscles during pregame warmups, threw two touchdown passes as Denver remained unbeaten in nine games.

Terrell Davis, the NFL's leading rusher, was held to 69 yards on 20 carries by a San Diego defense that ranked first in total defense and rushing defense. Davis accounted for two touchdowns, catching a 4-yard TD pass from Brister and running 24 yards for another.

Cardinals 29, Redskins 27

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Cardinals squandered a 9-point lead in the final 1:39, then came back to beat Washington 29-27 Sunday on Joe Nedney's 47-yard field goal with two seconds left.

Jets 34, Bills 12

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Vinny Testaverde, in the midst of the best streak of his 12-year career, passed for three touchdowns in New York's 34-12 rout of the Buffalo Bills.

The victory, which snapped the Bills' six-game winning streak in the series, left the Jets (6-3) tied with Miami for first place in the AFC East.

New York won its fourth straight thanks to Testaverde's marksmanship and a staunch defense that clamped down on the elusive Doug Flutie.

Seahawks 24, Chiefs 12

SEATTLE — The Seahawks (5-4), losers of four of their previous five, took advantage of four turnovers that made up for an offense that gained only 202 yards.

It was Kansas City's fourth consecutive defeat, the first time that has happened to the Chiefs since Schottenheimer took over as coach of the franchise in 1989. The Chiefs (4-5) could miss the playoffs for the third time in Schottenheimer's successful tenure in Kansas City.

Oilers 31, Bucs 22

TAMPA, Fla. — Eddie George had his fifth straight 100-yard game and Steve McNair clinched the outcome by scrambling 71 yards for a touchdown with less than two minutes to go for Tennessee.

The victory was the fourth in five games for the Oilers (5-4), who are 4-1 on the road, but just 1-3 at home. Tampa Bay (4-5), despite leading 16-3 at halftime, lost for the first time at Raymond James Stadium after four straight victories on their new home field.

MATEEN CLEAVES

Big brothers inspired (and required) Cleaves' greatness

■ The Sporting News named him college basketball's pre-season player of the year.

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Ten-year-old Mateen Cleaves was getting knocked around by two older brothers as they played backyard basketball with a nailed-up milk crate.

So, he ran inside, crying for his mother while his brothers chased him.

"I said, 'Momma, momma, I don't want to go play,'" Cleaves said, "but she just turned her back and went in her room. She let my big brothers handle it."

"They just hauled me back out there and told me, 'You better never be a quitter. We don't have quitters in our family.' And at that point, I knew. That was the last time I ever quit in a game that I started."

A decade later, that tenacity has paid off for the Michigan State guard as he emerges as one of college basketball's brightest stars.

Slowed by a back injury two years ago in his freshman season, Cleaves blossomed last year and led the Spartans to the NCAA regional semifinals. He led the team in scoring with a 16.1 average, and topped the Big Ten in assists with 21.7.

The surprising Spartans finished 22-8, Cleaves won the Big Ten Player of the Year award and his coach, Tom Izzo, won The Associated Press Coach of the Year award.

This season, Cleaves is the nation's No. 1 point guard, according to Street & Smith magazine, and he was the pre-season player of the year in The Sporting News.

That means Cleaves and the Spartans won't be sneaking up on anybody this season. Still, with virtually the entire team returning, prospects look good.

Clearly, Cleaves is the key. To his teammates, the 6-foot-2, 190-pound guard is a leader and a friend.

For opposing coaches, Cleaves is tough to contain — yet fun to watch.

"He plays with so much energy and charisma, it's contagious," said Brian Ellerbe, coach at rival Michigan.

Besides that, Purdue's Gene Keady said, "He's a big-hearted kid."

That big-heartedness is no small part of Cleaves' game. He loves helping people.

"That's maybe what makes me so good at getting assists," he said. "I'd rather see somebody get the joy out of scoring, rather than me scoring."

Frances Cleaves says it's always been that way with her youngest son.

"If he was down to his last two cents, he would give it to somebody if they said they needed it," said Mrs. Cleaves, who works on the assembly line at a General Motors plant in Flint.

Izzo is sometimes accused of being soft on Cleaves. The coach admits there might be some truth to that, but his empathy is deep-rooted.

Izzo comes from the Upper Peninsula town of Iron Mountain. His chances of making it at a place like Michigan State didn't seem much better than a lot of kids' chances of making it off the streets of the tough Flint neighborhood where Cleaves grew up.

"I respect where he came from, and he respects where I came from," Izzo said. "We're both fighters."

Despite his success on the court, Cleaves has had some troubles off it. In February, he and teammate Andre Hutson were arrested on alcohol charges after the Spartans' first victory in three years over Michigan. Izzo suspended Cleaves for the first half of the next game, and Cleaves later paid $150 in fines on reduced charges.

"The night where he had poor judgment, the next day he accepted the responsibility. He didn't run and hide from it," Izzo said.

"He knows he's a role model. The problem is, he's still a kid."

There also was the night in 1996, when Cleaves was still a highly recruited high school star at Flint Northern, that he was involved in a rollover car accident with five Michigan players.

Familiar faces shoot for Final Four

■ The rising number of underclassmen going to the NBA hasn't hurt the college game too much this season.

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

College basketball has never had another season like the one 20 years ago when the Magic and Larry show electrified the nation in the championship game.

That could all change in 1998-99. It's not impossible for an upstart team from Indiana to make some serious noise in the NCAA tournament with one player leading the way, as Larry Bird did with Indiana State. Valparaiso and buzzer-beater Bryce Drew proved that last March with a run to the Sweet Sixteen.

Neither is it far-fetched for Michigan State to be one of the country's best teams led by an exciting young guard just as the Spartans will be this season with Mateen Cleaves. Magic Johnson surely will be tuned in to his alma mater.

The naysayers have always lined up to announce what's wrong with college basketball, but the sport has survived TV saturation, scandals, scholastic shortcomings and the defection of young stars to the NBA.

This season, the last without a 20 in the name, won't be any different. Sure, some stars have left early —

All-Americans Antawn Jamison of North Carolina, Mike Bibby of Arizona and Paul Pierce of Kansas — and some never made it to campus, such as high schoolers turned pros Al Harrington, Rashard Lewis and Korleone Young. The gambling scandals are fresh in the minds of everyone at Arizona State and Northwestern, and maybe someday the term Prop 48 will disappear.

But until then, there are a lot of games to be played and there's no reason the trail to St. Petersburg for Florida's first Final Four won't be as exciting as the one that led to Salt Lake City 20 years ago.

Duke opened the '90s by reaching the championship game three straight years and Kentucky can go one better to close the decade. The Wildcats have been in the last three title games, sandwiching championships around an overtime loss to Arizona.

The defending champs have two starters back from the Comeback Cats as Tubby Smith tries to become the fourth active coach with two titles and Wayne Turner tries to become the fourth player to make it to four straight Final Fours.

Turner and Scott Padgett, the returning starters, will be joined by last year's deep bench and a solid recruiting class.

"I'm about as nervous as anyone starting the season," Smith said. "You never know what your team is going to be like. You're dealing with people, you're dealing with young kids."

Some coaches will be very familiar with their teams as the season begins. Stanford, Connecticut and Michigan State all return five starters from teams that had outstanding seasons last year.

Stanford went to the Final Four for the first time since 1942 and the Cardinal find themselves as the favorite in the Pac-10, a spot that has almost always been held by UCLA or Arizona in recent years.

"How we're going to react, I don't know," coach Mike Montgomery said. "But I do know I have a bunch of unselfish guys who have stepped up before and who can do it again."

Michigan State hasn't been to the Final Four since those Magic days and last season's run ended in the Sweet Sixteen against North Carolina.

"It's easy to sneak up on people. It's not as hard as when everybody's shooting at you," Cleaves said. "I'm one of those guys that's never satisfied. Once you get satisfied with yourself, think you don't need to be learning anymore, that's when you start falling off."

Connecticut has never reached the Final Four and last season's loss to North Carolina one game shy of the national semifinals was the third regional final in the '90s for the Huskies.

Kentucky coach Tubby Smith holds the 1998 NCAA championship trophy.

• Clyde Drexler is making the jump from NBA player to college head coach as he takes over at Houston, a school he led to the national championship game in 1983.

eight

• It's hard to believe there's ever been an earlier big-time head-to-head matchup than Texas Christian's Lee Nailon and Rhode Island's Lamar Odom on Nov. 9 in the CoSIDA Classic in Providence.

nine

• Thanksgiving week should shake up the poll as the Preseason NIT (Stanford, North Carolina, Purdue); Great Alaska Shootout (Cincinnati, Duke); Maui Invitational (Utah, Syracuse, Indiana); and Puerto Rico Shootout (Maryland, Kentucky, UCLA, Xavier) all guarantee early season losses for some of the country's top teams.

ten

• The Mid-American Conference will again come through with one of the nation's best players, this time with Wally Szczerbiak of Miami, Ohio, whose stock rose with a great summer playing for the United States in the Goodwill Games.

eleven

• For the first time in Denny Crum's 27 seasons at Louisville the Cardinals will miss the NCAA tournament two years in a row. Last year it was a 12-20 record, this year NCAA probation.

twelve

• There will be a Michael Jordan to watch this season, in fact there are two of them — a junior guard at Penn and a sophomore forward at Detroit.

thirteen

• There will be one junior college impact transfer on each side of the country: Steve Francis at Maryland and Shawn Marion at UNLV.

fourteen

• Northeastern Illinois dropped its men's basketball program. Five players and assistant coach Thomas Trotter are now at New Mexico State.

• An impressive statistic from last season that the player doesn't want to match is Vontee Cummings of Pittsburgh averaging 40.5 minutes per game.

seventeen

• Drake coach Kurt Kaskasik could win for the first time in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Bulldogs were 0-18 in each of his first two seasons.

eighteen

• Bo Ellis, who led Marquette to the 1977 national championship, takes over as coach at Chicago State and the Cougars should expect to dress better and at least match last season's 2-25 mark.

nineteen

• The most closely watched knee in the early season will be the left one belonging to UCLA point guard Baron Davis. Coach Steve Lavin needs him early to help 12 sophomores and freshmen become a team, but he needs him in March and doesn't want to rush him.

IOWA'S NEXT OPPONENT: OHIO STATE

This time, Buckeyes' foe doesn't buckle

The Facts: Top-ranked Ohio State lost to Michigan State 28-24 Saturday.

The Impact: The Hawkeyes can expect an angry bunch of Buckeyes in Iowa City on Nov. 14.

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State had been No. 1 since August and was winning by an average of 29 points a game, playing a schedule that kept getting easier as the season went on.

Not once had the Buckeyes been forced to respond with a game on the line. Their closest game had been a 17-point win at West Virginia.

So when hard times hit Saturday against Michigan State, Ohio State was in unfamiliar territory. The result was a startling 28-24 upset that sent reverberations across college football.

"We let them in," Buckeyes coach John Cooper said. "Instead of putting them away, we let them beat us."

Ohio State's last four opponents — each with losing records — did not have the manpower to withstand an early assault. But Michigan State, down 17-3 after a quarter and trailing 24-9 midway through the third period, never backed down.

"Our team showed a lot of character and maturity to get back into the game and play their way to finish strong," said Michigan State coach Nick Saban, a former Ohio State assistant.

In a crazy way, the Spartans' up-and-down season proved to be a motivation. Michigan State (5-4, 3-2 Big Ten) lost its first two games and four of the first seven. There was no reason to keep anything in reserve anymore.

"When you're backed into a foxhole, nobody expects you to win and you can go out and play loose," said quarterback Bill Burke, who completed just 18 of 46 passes but for 323 yards.

"Most people turned their backs on us, but we showed everyone today that we could win," tailback Sedrick Irvin said.

There was no question that, unlike Ohio State's earlier opponents, the Spartans were planning on going the distance.

Jay LaPrele/Associated Press

Dejected Ohio State flanker Dee Miller, left, leaves the field with a towel over his head after the No. 1 Buckeyes were defeated 28-24 by Michigan State Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

"We talked about how we were going to be in a 15-round fight and no matter what happened in rounds two and three, that we were going to have to be Rocky in the 15th round and hit them with a haymaker and keep going," Saban said.

Julian Peterson, who came on when starting defensive end Robaire Smith broke his leg on the seventh play, forced three of Ohio State's four lost fumbles. Cornerback Renaldo Hill added the clincher with a goal-line interception with 1:12 left.

"This hurts, no question about it," Cooper said. "It seems like anything that could happen to us did happen to us."

The Spartans trailed by 15 points early in the third quarter after Ohio State's Damon Moore picked off Bill Burke's pass and returned it 73 yards to a touchdown.

Burke hit LaVaile Richardson for a 23-yard score. Paul Edinger kicked a 49-yard field goal and Irvin scored on a 3-yard run to open the fourth quarter and give MSU its first lead, 25-24.

With 3:33 remaining, Michigan State's T.J. Turner, with help from Sorie Kanu and Josh Thornhill, stuffed the Buckeyes' Joe Montgomery for no gain on fourth-and-1 at the Spartans 26.

After forcing a punt, the Buckeyes moved to a first down at the MSU

15. After three incompletions Germaine underthrew Dee Miller and Hill picked it off near the goal line.

It was Michigan State's first victory over a No. 1 team since the Spartans upset Michigan 28-27 in 1990 — also the last time an unranked team beat a No. 1 squad.

Ohio State (8-1, 5-1) not only lost its No. 1 ranking — falling to No. 7 — but dropped to third in the Big Ten behind Michigan and Wisconsin, both unbeaten in conference play.

"This is hollow," offensive tackle Tyson Walter said. "Anything short of a national championship would be a failure of a season. Now, technically, it's a failure."

Led by white male basketball players, NCAA graduation rates drop

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — NCAA athletes, with the exception of white female players, are losing ground in the classroom.

Led by an alarming dip among white male basketball players, Division I athletes who entered school in 1991 showed the first overall drop in graduation rates in four years.

According to NCAA statistics released during the weekend, 57 percent of Division I athletes who were freshmen in 1991 had graduated by 1997. For each of the three previous years, the rate was 58 percent.

The NCAA began tracking graduation rates in 1984, using a formula that counts all transfer students — even if they go elsewhere and graduate — against the rates of their original school. It allows six years to complete a degree program. Thus, graduation rates for the 1992 freshman class will be compiled and announced next year.

Almost every category for the 1991 entering class — which includes males, females, blacks, whites, football and basketball — took a tumble.

White male basketball players were hardest hit, plunging from 58 to 47 percent.

"That's a significant change," NCAA spokesman Wally Renfro said. "We've seen changes before, but I'm not sure we've had that big of a change."

White females athletes, holding steady at 70 percent for the third straight year, retained the highest rate among all classifications and were the only group not to decline.

"I don't think we know the answer," Renfro said. "A one-year flip like this may not be particularly meaningful, especially in light of the fact we changed the reporting process."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Wildcats and Volunteers football's new 1-2 punch

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Ohio State is out, UCLA is down but not out and Tennessee and Kansas State are in — as college football's new 1-2 punch.

When Joe Germaine's fourth-down pass was intercepted at the goal line with 72 seconds left, and Michigan State had upset Ohio State 28-24, the run for the national championship changed dramatically.

While Ohio State fell out of the national title chase, and to No. 7 in this week's Associated Press poll, No. 3 UCLA (8-0, 6-0 Pac-10) barely extended its winning streak to 18 games with a last-minute 41-34 victory over Oregon State.

"It's hard on 18-, 19-, 20-year-old kids, and it's hard on a 52-year-old man," UCLA coach Bob Toledo said after the Bruins' second straight narrow victory.

The Bowl Championship Series standings will be released Monday, and it appears Tennessee and Kansas State will be in the top two places. The BCS matches the first- and second place teams in the Fiesta Bowl, with a national title on the line.

Tennessee (8-0, 6-0 SEC) moved into the No. 1 spot for the first time since Nov. 12, 1956 (the Vols held the spot for one week). Tennessee beat Alabama-Birmingham 37-13 Saturday as Tee Martin threw for one TD and ran for another.

The schedule gets tougher in the coming weeks. On Saturday, the Vols entertain No. 10 Arkansas (8-0) followed by a visit from Tim Couch and Kentucky (6-3) Nov. 21.

No. 2 Kansas State (9-0, 6-0) just keeps piling up impressive wins. Michael Bishop threw for two TDs and ran for another as the Wildcats beat Baylor 49-6 for their 17th straight victory.

On Saturday, K-State plays perhaps the biggest game in school history — against Nebraska, a team that has won 29 in a row over the Wildcats.

With four weeks to go before the bowl matchups are set, here's a look at the six major conference races. The six winners get automatic BCS bowl berths. Two at-large selections will fill out the field. The BCS bowls are the Fiesta, Rose, Sugar and Orange.

— ACC: Florida State (9-1, 6-1) needs a win at Wake Forest (2-4, 3-6) Saturday to wrap up its seventh straight league title. The Seminoles also have a game remaining against Florida Nov. 21. Chris Weinke threw for one TD and ran for another before missing the second half of Saturday's 45-14 win over No. 21 Virginia (7-2, 5-2) with a concussion.

— Big East: Following Syracuse's 35-28 loss to West Virginia, No. 16 Virginia Tech now has the clearest path to the title. The Hokies (7-1, 4-1) have games at Syracuse Saturday, then Rutgers the following week. The Orange-men (5-3, 3-1) and No. 24 Miami (5-2, 3-1) are still in the running.

Wade Payne/Associated Press

Tennessee's Raynoch Thompson (46) is congratulated by teammate Al Wilson (27) after a tackle against Alabama-Birmingham.

— Big Ten: It looks as if the Rose Bowl will get the Big Ten champ, after all. If Wisconsin beats Michigan Saturday, the Badgers (9-0, 6-0) are off to Pasadena barring a rash of upsets involving the teams ranked ahead of them. If Michigan (7-2, 6-0) wins, it would then need to beat Ohio State Nov. 21 to return to the Rose Bowl. Wisconsin goes if there's a three-way tie for the title, while Ohio State goes if it finishes tied with Michigan.

— Big 12: Kansas State (9-0, 6-0) should win the North, but has two tough games left — against Nebraska and Missouri. The Tigers (7-2, 5-1) can catch K-State if they win out.

In the South, it's Texas A&M (9-1, 6-0) or Texas (7-2, 5-1). The teams play Nov. 27.

— Pac-10: UCLA has command of the league, but shaky wins over two weak teams make it hard to believe the Bruins aren't ready to fall. On Saturday, UCLA is at Washington before playing Southern Cal Nov. 21. Then, there's the makeup date at Miami Dec. 5. Arizona (9-1, 5-1) is waiting in the wings if the Bruins fall.

— SEC: Tennessee needs a win over Arkansas or Kentucky to clinch the East and move into the SEC title game Dec. 5. Florida (8-1, 6-1), which lost to Tennessee earlier this season, needs the Vols to lose both games to sneak in.

In the West, Arkansas (8-0, 5-0) plays its final three games on the road, but should make it to Atlanta, where a rematch with the Volunteers seems likely.

BREEDER'S CUP CLASSIC

Cup full of mixed emotions

■ Awesome Again took Silver Charm in the deep stretch to win the Breeders' Cup Classic Saturday.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

Al Behrman/Associated Press

The top three finishers in the Breeders Cup Classic, from left, third place Swain, second place finisher Silver Charm, and winner Awesome Again charge the finish line at Churchill Downs in Louisville Saturday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — This was one emotional day for trainers Sonny Hine and Michael Dickinson — their feelings poles apart.

"It was tough for me yesterday," Hine said Sunday. "I've pretty much accepted it now. It was very hard going over there."

The Breeders' Cup Classic was the final race of Skip Away's grand career. And Hine's horse, a 5-year-old gray looking for a second Classic win, finished sixth in the $5.12 million race won by Awesome Again, who overtook Silver Charm in the deep stretch.

The Top 3

Top finishers for Saturday's Breeders' Cup Classic.
Win - Awesome Again
Place - Silver Charm
Show - Swain

"It was like a fairy tale, only the ending wasn't like we wanted it to be," said Hine's wife, Carolyn, owner of Skip Away.

Skip Away earned no money and failed to become the first horse to make $10 million. He finished with $9,616,360, second only to Cigar's $9,999,815.

The Hines' horse-pet will stand at stud at Hopewell Farm near Midway, Ky. He was to go there Monday. Dickinson was elated after Da Hoss won the $1 million Mile on the grass. Because of illness and injury this was only the second start for Da Hoss since he won the 1996 Mile at Woodbine.

"There were dark days and long nights," said Dickinson, an Englishman who has a training center at North East, Md. "But there hasn't been a day since Woodbine that it (the Breeders' Cup), hasn't been on my mind."

Wilkinson said that when Da Hoss' owners, Jack, Art and J.R. Preston, wanted to know if the 6-year-old gelding would make the Breeders' Cup, he told them, "It will be a miracle to get to the Breeders' Cup, but miracles do happen."

Da Hoss, ridden by John Velazquez, gave up the lead to Hawksley Hill in the stretch, got it back and held on to win by a head over Hawksley Hill.

Vindication, perhaps, was what trainer Patrick Byrne was feeling after Awesome Again remained unbeaten in six starts this year with a three-quarter length victory over Silver Charm that was worth $2,662,400.

Byrne, who was born in London and now lives in Louisville, had been criticized for giving up Favorite Trick, the 1997 2-year-old champion and Horse of the Year, and Countess Diana, the 1996 champion 2-year-old filly, to train privately for Canadian industrialist Frank Stronach. Favorite Trick finished eighth in the Mile.

"Mentally, he's got an incredible amount of confidence," Byrne said of the 4-year-old Awesome Again. "He think he's King Kong."

Byrne also thinks Awesome Again's unblemished record, his second win in a Grade I stakes and a second victory over Silver Charm this year should make him Horse of the Year.

The Detroit Red Wings aren't thinking about returning to the Stanley Cup Finals just yet. Right now, the defending champions are just thinking about returning to the top of their division.

Same thing for the defending Eastern Conference champion Washington Capitals, who have been trying to find their way after a slow start.

Welcome to NHL parity, 1998-99 style.

"It's a very tough league," Montreal coach Alain Vigneault said. "All the teams, I feel, are about one injury away from being in big trouble, and if you lose some key people it makes it hard."

That's been especially true of the Capitals, who have had as many as nine regulars out of the lineup because of injury. While the Capitals look toward better days, many Eastern Conference teams are already having them.

In the Atlantic Division, New Jersey, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia were tied for first with 14 points — only four better than the last-place New York Rangers — following Saturday night's games.

Only two points separated first-place Toronto from last-place Montreal in the Northeast. A logjam also existed in the Southeast, where first-place Carolina and the last-place Capitals, despite all their troubles, were separated by merely four points.

The Western Conference was nearly as close with conference leader Dallas only eight points ahead of last-place San Jose, the Stars' Pacific Division colleague. On Saturday night, the Sharks pulled out a 2-2 tie with Central Division leader St. Louis by scoring the game's last two goals in the third period.

The tie was the 28th in the league with the season barely a month old. Projecting that number over the course of the year, there's a good chance the league will break its record of 165 ties in a season, set in 1980-81.

"Is it ever even," Blues coach Joel Quenneville said. "The parity could be at an all-time high right now. On any night, it might take a break here or there or a timely power-play goal."

Ask the Red Wings. They are 2-5-0 after starting the season 4-1-0 and carried a four-game losing streak into Sunday night's game at Anaheim.

The last time the Red Wings lost four in a row? Try October 1993 — Scotty Bowman's first month as coach in Detroit.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Hail, Irwin, the Senior Tour champion

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Hale Irwin finally closed his season with a victory, blasting past a star-filled field Sunday to win his first Senior Tour Championship.

Irwin finished with a 65, 14-under 274, for his seventh victory of the year and his 20th Senior title since joining the tour in 1995. He won $347,000.

He was five shots ahead of defending champion Gil Morgan, who had a 71. Jay Sigel, the 1996 winner, was third at 280 after a 70.

"All in all, this has got to be at least as good as last year," said Irwin, who won nine times and earned more than $2.3 million in 1997.

Irwin has come to The Dunes Golf & Beach Club a top contender the past four years. Something — the cold weather, poor iron play, hitting the wrong ball — has always kept him down in The Dunes.

In 1995, he marked his ball at Jim Dent's marker on the 16th hole during the third round, took a four-stroke penalty and shot 75 to fall from the leaderboard.

A year later, Irwin couldn't overcome frigid, 30 mph wind gusts as he shot 75-76 in the middle two rounds. Last year, he trailed by two at the start of the final round, but was beaten by Morgan's tournament record 272.

While Irwin already had secured the money title, Morgan's six wins and steady play gained him a following for Player of the Year.

Morgan appeared ready to add another victory after a birdie at No. 3 gave him a two-shot lead.

22nd-ranked Hoosiers defeat South Carolina

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Luke Recker scored 22 points to lead four Indiana Hoosiers in double figures as the 22nd-ranked Hoosiers beat South Carolina 76-55 Sunday in the NAABC Classic.

The Hoosiers (2-0) scored the game's first eight points and the Gamecocks (0-2) never drew closer than five at they had nine turnovers and shot just 2-of-9 in the opening eight minutes at the RCA Dome.

Indiana went on to lead by 14 three times in the opening half, which ended with the Hoosiers leading 39-27.

South Carolina starting guard Herbert Lee Davis got into early foul trouble, picking up his third foul with 15:23 left in the first half and a substitute on the sideline ready to replace him. He returned with 9:41 remaining and was called for his fourth foul when Recker stole the ball from him with 7:13 left.

Without Davis, South Carolina continued to have problems against Indiana's aggressive man-to-man defense, which included plenty of help for players guarding the man with the ball.

Kirk Haston had 10 points off the bench in the second half after going scoreless in the first half. Indiana took its biggest lead, 71-47, with 4:34 to play in a basket by William Gladness, who had 17 points. A.J. Guyton added 11 points for Indiana.

LeRon Williams led South Carolina with 14 points.

South Carolina had 13 turnovers in the second half and shot only 38 percent for the game, 11-of-31 in the first half and 12-of-29 in the second half.

IRL - CART reconciliation unlikely

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indy Racing League will unveil its new engine specifications later this month, although there likely will be no reconciliation with Championship Auto Racing Teams until the sides can agree on who is entitled to own and work on the engines.

The philosophical divide apparently is the biggest stumbling block, despite efforts by CART engine manufacturers who have submitted a possible compromise to Tony George, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and founder of the 3-year-old IRL.

"If they say, 'We will only do a leasing program and won't let our teams own the engines,' I don't know that there will be any progress," Speedway spokesman Fred Nation said Sunday.

"What we will announce, while it will be different, will follow our philosophy of having engines that are available and affordable."

CART has boycotted the Indianapolis 500 since George launched the IRL in 1996 in protest of escalating costs and a trend toward road courses. The IRL runs its series on traditional oval tracks.

The IRL this year already eliminated one difference — a rule that guaranteed a certain number of starting spots to IRL regulars — but a huge problem still is the engine and chassis formulas used by the two camps. Both sides plan new packages for next season.

CART's manufacturers lease their engines to race teams, controlling the entire process of building, on-track maintenance and rebuilding. The IRL allows its teams to buy and control its own engines from six approved builders.
