

Come play with us! New community orchestra forming

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Get out the flute, shine up the old trombone — there's a new band forming and musicians are needed.

Ralph Miller, Grosse Pointe schools instrumental music director, is organizing a Community Summer Band through the Department of Community Education.

He's looking for adults, college and high schools students who have had some band in high school. Rehearsals will be held Tuesday evenings, June 21, 28, July 5, 12, 19, 26, and Aug. 2, 9 and 16, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

"We're planning on four or five rehearsals prior to two concerts," Miller said.

Concerts will be presented, free of charge, at Grosse Pointe North in the Greek Theatre Performing Arts Center Wednesday evenings, July 20 and Aug. 17.

"I always felt that Grosse Pointe was the type of community that would benefit from a community band like the Detroit Concert Band that played at the bandshell on Belle Isle," Miller said.

There are many people in the area with music skills they developed in their school years, but haven't picked up their instruments since, Miller said.

"This will give them a chance to get back into it in a low-pressure setting," he said. "They will find they still have their talent; it's just a bit rusty."

There will be no limit on the size of the band. Miller said he recently held a concert with the North and South bands in which 200 members participated.

"We have already had a good response from alumni who graduated in the last couple of years," he said, "and they haven't touched their instruments since."

There are three types of people Miller said he is looking for — adults including senior citizens, college students and current high school students.

"Both the concerts and the rehearsals are scheduled for mid-week so they won't interfere with weekend activities," Miller said. "If people can only participate in one of the concerts because of a vacation, we'd still love to have them."

"We already have one of the finest community orchestras in the state with the Grosse Pointe Symphony. Hopefully, if we get enough interest we'll be able to go year-round."

There is a $10 fee. For more information or registration forms, call the community education office at 343-2178.

"People who had some band in school will find they still have the talent," Miller said. "It just needs some work. I'm sure there are people out there who have thought about taking their instruments out of the attic, but haven't because they're afraid of what they will sound like — they shouldn't."

Woman robbed on Hill

A 49-year-old Farms woman was thrown to the ground and her purse was stolen while pumping gas into her vehicle at the Standard on the Hill gas station at the intersection of McMillan and Kercheval in the Farms shortly before 11 a.m. Thursday, June 2.

The suspect, a black male about 6 feet, 2 inches tall, knocked her to the ground, then reached inside her car and grabbed her purse. He then fled in a cream-colored Lincoln, later found to have been stolen in Dearborn several weeks ago.

A witness followed the suspect in her car and lost him at the area of Kercheval and Cadieux, but did get a plate number.

Park police responding to an area-wide broadcast saw the car at a light at Jefferson and Maryland. When the patrol unit turned around, the car sped off. A short chase ensued with the suspect bailing out of the car at the area of the Jefferson alley between Alter and Ashland.

Detroit tracking dogs were called to the scene, but after a short pursuit, lost the scent.

The victim was only slightly injured from being thrown to the ground. She said the car pulled alongside her at the pumps, just before the suspect grabbed her.

Sunday shoppers

What better way to spend a warm June Sunday than perusing the wares of the country's top antiques dealers? That's what hundreds of Grosse Pointe antique buffs did last weekend at the fourth annual Christ Church antiques show. The show — a Christ Church choir fundraiser — featured the goods of 39 dealers from 10 states and was held in the gymnasium of Grosse Pointe South High School. Show co-chairman Wendy Jennings said the venture was successful.

Public hearings scheduled for Children's Home proposals

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Woods Planning Commission has scheduled two public hearings for the Children's Home of Detroit: One for a proposed on-site expansion and one for a usage clarification for a new program the board would like to install.

"There is a great need for space," said H.E. Tammela, executive director. "We don't have room to do anything."

State-mandated staffing, labor laws and the evolution of social services regarding child-to-staff ratios have nearly tripled the staff since 1950, he added.

"We are building for space problems created by an increase in staff," said Beverly Curtiss, second vice president of the board.

The building expansion would take place entirely on the grounds of the home, located at 300 Cook Road in the Woods, and would be used to house 75 percent of the current program and 25 percent for a proposed new program. The new program is the issue of the second public hearing.

The program is a chemical dependency program for children in the Grosse Pointe school system. It is designed to be an after-care counseling program used after a child has been in an inpatient treatment center for a chemical dependency problem.

"What it's designed to do is to help recovering children stay drug-free," said Nancy Nicholson, board president.

In a prepared release, the board said the program is not "an inpatient program, a crisis center, a drying-out place or a methadone clinic."

"These are the students who have already gone through an inpatient treatment program for chemical dependency," Curtiss said.

The program is done on an outpatient counseling basis, serving approximately 20 people per day. The bulk would come for group counseling sessions in late afternoon to early evening. There would be one-on-one counseling sessions with the students and a counselor in the late Problems, July 1986, by providing an accessible location for professional assessment and continuing aftercare."

The year-round program would be professionally administered and run, Nicholson said, with extensive research and programming going into it.

Nicholson said the board has worked closely with city officials, and said it has learned much about the city's government. "They have been very helpful to us," she said.

The board is also concerned with the residents in the area, and has tried to answer many of their questions.

"We are very concerned about the neighbors. We appreciate their concerns," Nicholson said. "We try very hard to be a good neighbor. The plan, we feel, honors the community."

Nicholson said the board held a neighbors' meeting in February and discussed the program and the expansion with those who showed up and altered their plans to reflect the concerns stated. The board has also sent a letter to neighbors explaining the program at great length, and hopefully answering their concerns. The residents should receive their letters today or tomorrow, she added.

The public hearing concerning the aftercare treatment is needed because a program of this nature is non-conforming with city zoning laws, a clarification or variance is needed. Both hearings are scheduled for the Woods Planning Commission meeting June 28.

If the home receives approval for only the building, and not the usage, the board will have to make a decision then as to what to do, Nicholson added.

"Either way, we need the space," Tammela said.

Day care program to begin

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The Grosse Pointe Public School Day Care Program will hold an open house Saturday, June 11, from 9 to 11 a.m., at Barnes School, 20090 Morning-side, Grosse Pointe Woods.

Barbara Ulmer, director/head teacher, said the school rooms will be open to the public so parents see them, meet her, ask questions and pick up registration forms.

"We intend to begin the program Aug. 29," Ulmer said. "People should register during the month of June."

The new program, offered on a pay-as-you-go basis, was to have begun this school year, but because of delays in licensing from the Michigan Department of Social Services, opening was held up until late March. Only a few people registered for the program, however, and there weren't enough students to start the program then.

Superintendent John Whritner said the problem was that no one had anticipated the licensing process to take so long.

"We're looking ahead to starting the program for next year," Whritner said. "Everything is in place — we are fully licensed, we have staff in place and a good location."

He believes the program will be successful, and added that residents feel this type of program is necessary in Grosse Pointe.

Ulmer said the program is for children in the Grosse Pointe school district ages 3 to 5. Cost is $100 per week, and there is a discount for those families with two or more children in the program.

"It is important to note that parents may see the rooms any time during the week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. by going to the Barnes school office," Ulmer said. "We want people to register during the month of June."

If people cannot attend the open house or visit the school during the week, they can call the Barnes office at 343-2178 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and a registration form will be mailed out, Ulmer said.

"We also have a parent handbook that will be given to parents who register their child," Ulmer said. "This handbook con-

Pointer of Interest

A. Stewart Kerr

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Talking with A. Stewart Kerr is like talking to an old friend. He expresses more interest in the other people in the room than he does in himself.

He is witty, charming and genuinely fun to be around. He is also something of a kidder, and although he is worldly, he doesn't flaunt it, often joking about himself.

For example: His books (literally hundreds of them) are categorized in his modest Grosse Pointe Woods home — by the Dewey Decimal System. They all have numbers on the bindings and are further categorized by room, fiction in one room, miscellaneous in the basement, "Religion and law are in the bathroom," he said with a smile.

"I've been thinking of color-coding them, as a refinement to the system," he added.

Kerr was born in Knoxville, Tenn. in 1915, however, he calls Chattanooga his home. He went through high school in three years, college in three, and in 1938 at the age of 23, graduated with a law degree from the University of Virginia.

The school recently installed a scholarship in his name given to a second-year law student who shows the most promise in legal writing.

He began his career working in anti-trust law for the attorney general from 1938 to 1947, a career which forced him to travel throughout the midwest. He came to this area for a six-month visit, and stayed.

"I used to be the youngest person in everything I did," he said. "Now I'm the oldest."

"I tell everyone I am the oldest lawyer at one of the oldest law firms in Michigan. It started in 1834, which was my second year of law school," he joked.

And his secret for his longevity is easy. "Pick the right grandparents."

City Comptroller Dale Krainiak has been serving as acting city manager since John Crawford's resignation on March 28.

Councilman David Gaskin, chairman of the Personnel Committee, said the group has placed ads and is accepting resumes. "At last count, we've received 35 or 40 resumes."

Gaskin said the committee will begin sorting through the resumes and setting up interviews during the next few months.

"We hope to narrow it down to three, four or five candidates and we hope to have someone in mind — or in place — by fall."

The Park has hired Marshall Binkley, a personnel adviser and Wayne State University professor, to put together a job description, develop a list of duties, and set up guidelines for screening potential applicants. This is the first time, Gaskin said, as far as he knows, that the city manager's job has been described in writing.

A draft of the job description will be submitted to council members for their comments and additions, and it will eventually be discussed and approved at a council meeting.

The reason for putting the duties of the $50,000-a-year job in writing, Gaskin said, "is that it's a benchmark against which (the manager) can be measured. It's also good to use when describing the job to applicants."

Truck driver robbed at gunpoint

A furniture delivery man was held up and robbed of about $1,000 around 2 p.m. Thursday, June 2, in front of a home in the Avondale/Balfour area of the Park.

Police said the man had just made a delivery on the 600 block of Balfour when the three delivery men were ordered into the truck by a black male wearing a red bandana over his face.

The driver had just made a delivery to a Detroit residence and had received a cash payment.

Police said the suspect is described as 23 to 26 years old, 6 feet tall and 180 pounds. He was armed with a .38 caliber nickel-plated revolver. He drove away in a 1986 or 1987 white Ford Escort.

Officials feel this same suspect attempted a similar robbery in the Harper/Chalmers area several weeks ago.

Support for grieving parents

"First Sunday," a support group for parents who have suffered the death of a child, will meet Wednesday, June 22 at St. John Hospital from 8 to 10 p.m.

Father Lawrence DuCharme, director of Pastoral Care, and Sister Beatrice Monforton, chaplain at St. John Hospital, lead the group.

The group meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month.

Call 343-3695 for more information.

St. John Hospital is located at 22101 Moross at Mack.

New housing, building permits up throughout Pointes

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

Though the boon in residential housing construction which began in 1983 has begun to level off in southeastern Michigan, the number of permits issued for new houses and remodeling jobs continues to climb throughout the Grosse Pointes.

According to a recent release from the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, the total number of new housing construction permits rose only slightly from 1986 to 1987. SEMCOG said that there were 24,177 permits issued in 1987, compared with 24,038 in 1986. This slight increase, SEMCOG said, marks a leveling off of residential building issued in the seven-county region.

Though new construction is moving along for the Pointes, the figures don't compare at all with communities like Rochester Hills or Troy where large tracts of vacant land are being subdivided and houses being built.

Where the construction boom is occurring in the Pointes is in the area of remodeling and additions construction. With the addition of the newly renovated Punch and Judy Building, and the newly constructed 131 Kercheval Center and Kerby Place, the Farms has seen a significant addition to its tax base.

Public Services Director John DeFoe said there were 22 new residences constructed in the city in 1987, compared with 10 in 1986.

DeFoe said the majority of these residences were constructed on estates which had been subdivided for new construction.

"We've done more building, both residential and commercial, than any of the other Pointes," DeFoe said.

With the addition of the Windemere, Briarwood, Rose Terrace subdivisions, the Farms has added 42 major residences to the city since 1985 — and more are on their way with the recent subdivision of the Higbie estate which is now called the Scherbrook subdivision.

New construction and renovations, both commercial and residential, held level at $10.5 million in 1987 and $10.6 million in 1986. Both figures were up significantly over 1985 which saw $3 million in construction.

The overwhelming number of permits issued in the Farms and throughout the Pointes are for additions and remodeling. Those figures have increased steadily in the Farms — 97 in 1985, 110 in 1986 and 155 in 1987.

"We are finding that people who had a large lot adjacent to their homes are selling," DeFoe said. "These lots that used to be kept landscaped are now becoming houses."

He said the Farms will be running out of those types of lots in the near future and that any new construction will come from new subdivisions, or from demolitions and new construction.

"I don't think we have many more than 10 vacant lots left undeveloped in the Farms," DeFoe said.

He said that for the first quarter in 1988, the number of renovation permits has increased, but the number of permits for new residences decreased slightly. He said the city can expect 12 more houses at Windemere Place, seven at the new Windward Place and 16 at the Scherbrook subdivision.

"If the economy remains strong, we can expect all those houses to be built by 1990," DeFoe said. "They are moving very fast."

Renovation projects are also moving along.

"When people take a look at what it would cost them to have a home built somewhere else and what it would cost them to add on, they choose to stay where they are," DeFoe said.

One way to tell if the renovation work business is healthy is to look at the number of contractors registering to work in the city. DeFoe said there are more contractors registered with the Farms than ever before.

Grosse Pointe

The City has seen its share of new construction in recent years too. Eleven homes have been constructed at Dodge Place, since 1986, with seven more lots available. The site was the Dodge/Ranger estate.

Five lots are available as home sites on Cameron Place, at the site of the Rust estate which was demolished this year. Eight lots have been given preliminary approval by the city council on the western side of Lakeside Court — the former Parcels-Lucus estate.

City Manager Thomas Kressbach said his city has also seen an increase in additions to and remodeling of existing homes.

"We like to see that," Kressbach said. "It keeps the quality of the housing stock up."

The City has a certificate of occupancy ordinance, which requires people to bring their homes into compliance with local building codes prior to sale.

Kressbach said that since the economy began improving in the early 1980s, there have been a number of younger families moving into the city and expanding their homes, renovating kitchens or adding a bath.

"With the combination of all these things, our building figures have just exploded," Kressbach said.

He added that there has been a great deal of renovation in the Village shopping area.

The number of building permits increased from 42 in 1986 to 67 in 1987. The total cost for the improvements rose from $1.8 million to $3.5 million.

Already in 1988, there have been 31 permits issued with a total cost of $2.3 million.

Grosse Pointe Shores

With by far the fewest number of vacant lots for new construction and no commercial district, Grosse Pointe Shores has seen only limited increases in construction.

Some 33 building permits were issued in 1986 at a total cost of $1.1 million in improvements. Of that $1.1 million, some $600,000 went to build six new houses.

There were four new residences constructed in the Shores in 1987 at a total cost of $778,000. Thirty-four building permits were issued in 1987, at a total cost of $1.6 million.

Shores building official Fred MacWhirter said that there have been no houses constructed so far this year, and that only 11 permits had been issued as of April.

Grosse Pointe Park

Grosse Pointe Park's building department has been a busy place. Building permit totals have increased significantly over the past few years.

While there have been few new residential homes constructed, there have been dozens of additions, and renovation projects.

In 1986, there were 105 total residential building permits issued in the Park with a total cost of $1.3 million. Those figures rose to 143 permits in 1987, at a total cost of $2.1 million. Through April 1988, there have been 37 permits issued with a total cost of $689,785.

"Spring is our busiest time," said Jim Ellison, the Park's building official.

"Just today I inspected a house where the buyer made an offer to purchase only on the basis that the master bedroom could be made larger."

He said people are adding sunrooms, pools and hot tubs.

"This shows that this is still a viable area," Ellison said. "People look around and say, 'there's not anywhere we can move that is any nicer.'"

Smash and grab

The front door and large window of a business on the 15000 block of Jefferson in the Park was smashed to gain entry sometime overnight June 1-2.

Fifty dollars was taken from the cash drawer.

Grosse Pointe Woods

Judging by the the number of calls and visitors that Woods building inspector Earl Wakely got on the morning of an interview last week, things are busy in that city.

"We have four new houses under construction right now," Wakely said. "Our residential lots are pretty much all built upon, but there are a number of additions — family rooms, garages and things like that."

Wakely said the general feeling he runs into is that people like the city — its services and the area. He said people realize that what they have is valuable, and just want to add a little more living area to their home.

New houses and residential construction stood at $1.3 million in 1986, and nearly doubled in 1987 to $2.5 million. Commercial construction decreased slightly, but Wakely said there were some major projects in 1986.

There are also some big projects to begin soon in the Woods at Pointe Plaza at Moross and Mack. A five-story office and retail building is scheduled for construction later next year. The city's planning commission is currently going over site plans.

The Farms has undergone the most significant increase in new housing and commercial building

Woman shot, leaves hospital

A 25-year-old Grosse Pointe Park woman was treated and subsequently checked out of St. John Hospital Monday night, after being wounded by at least one gunshot at about 4:20 a.m. Sunday, June 5, on the 1400 block of Wayburn in the Park.

The shooting left the woman with a wound in the left hip and left wrist. Police believe a man had demanded money from the woman who put up a struggle and was then shot.

She was transported to St. John Hospital by Park ambulance. Police said the woman apparently gave conflicting stories to detectives, and reportedly left the hospital against medical advice without having the bullet removed from her body.

Although this shooting was initially reported as having occurred during a robbery, the detectives have now all but ruled out that motive, Park Capt. William Furtaw said.

Officials believe the attack was meant for a friend of the victim. Police are investigating.

A 24-year-old Detroit man was arrested Thursday evening, June 2, after police found a loaded .22 caliber pistol in his jacket pocket.

The man was being taken into custody for a minor traffic violation and police found the weapon during a routine search.

New houses such as this one in the City are being located on the few remaining vacant lots in the Pointes. Houses are also being built in new subdivisions created by the breaking up of large estates.

"Children Helping Children" is the theme for this year's singles' tournaments for boys and girls from ages 10-18. Last year Tennis and Crumpets raised $70,000 for Children's Hospital, of which $42,500 came from the Grosse Pointe areas.

The $15 benefit ticket includes prizes, trophies, and a barbecue following the matches at Three Mile Park. Reservation deadline is June 12.

Work permits required for students under 18

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Teenagers who have found summer jobs should know that work permits, commonly called working papers, are required by the Michigan Department of Labor for children under age 18 who are employed.

The purpose of work permits, according to Dave King, director of support services for the Grosse Pointe Public Schools, is to make certain young people don't work long hours and neglect their schooling — or engage in dangerous work.

"If a student's schoolwork is suffering," King said, "a school district has the power to put the student on probation and revoke his working papers. Most people don't know that."

The combination of federal and state laws concerning minor employees varies according to their ages, he said. For 14- and 15-year-olds, the law says they may only work between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. For 16 and 17-year-olds, a state law says they may work only between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m.; or until 11:30 p.m. when there is no school the next day; and not at all between September and June during school hours.

In addition, the law prohibits young people from working in hazardous jobs where chemicals, explosives and radioactive substances are being handled. They're also prohibited from doing deliveries; working near dangerous machinery and equipment; working jobs in the logging and sawmill industry; using woodworking machinery; jobs involving brazing, welding soldering or heat treating; construction work; slaughtering, butchering and meat cutting; operating elevators or hoisting equipment; and occupations involving power-driven equipment, tools or machinery.

Teenagers may work where alcohol is sold, as long as they receive the minimum hourly wage and as long as food makes up at least 50 percent of sales.

Michigan law also requires that a minor not be employed for more than five hours continuously without a 30-minute uninterrupted break.

Working papers are available at the St. Clair office of the Grosse Pointe public school district. King said the applicant should bring in an intent to employ statement from the employer. The employer must complete the form stating the nature of the work, hours and rate of pay. The student also needs a birth certificate, a driver's license or some legal proof of age. The teenager returns the work permit to his employer before starting work.

Anyone under 18 must obtain working papers unless he or she is in a school-sponsored co-op program; unless he or she is 16 or 17 years old and has completed graduation requirements; unless he or she is a domestic worker at a private residence (this includes babysitters); unless he or she sells or distributes newspapers, magazines or political advertising. Also exempt are shoe-shiners; teens working as part of a recognized youth organization such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts or 4-H, performing fundraising activities; teens who are working in their parents' businesses; most farm workers; and teenagers who are employed in their own schools.

Senior citizen survey urged in the Pointes

Nancy Parmenter's perceptive series in the Grosse Pointe News about the problems of senior citizens in the Pointes deserves close attention not only by the families of the aging but also by the many public agencies involved in serving the needs of older people.

The Pointes constitute an aging community with an estimated 7,000 senior citizens now residing in the community of approximately 55,000 people. As people age, they in many cases have to alter their lifestyles, for financial or physical or other reasons, and yet the Pointes offer few alternatives to senior citizens who want to continue to live in this community.

As Ms. Parmenter's stories indicated, however, there are no easy solutions. Space is a major problem. Senior citizen housing or new developments catering to the needs of seniors require space that is not generally available, even though several developers are still interested if space can be found.

Some aging couples solve their problems by having their children move in with them. Others hire live-in couples who can care for the property as well as family members who no longer are completely independent. Some seniors enter nearby nursing homes. Several hospitals are now offering assisted living residential care and congregate living apartments in the area.

But most older people who have lived in the Pointes for some years want to remain here. This is where their families, friends and activities still tend to be. And at their age seniors do not like to be uprooted from their communities or, in fact, from the past. And their own wishes surely deserve strong consideration.

Just as it is a mistake to generalize about any group in our population, it is probably wrong to generalize about the needs of senior citizens. Their needs depend, after all, on their specific situations, such as how much help they require, how much help their families can provide and whether they have ample financial resources to pay for the services they seek.

Since no comprehensive study has been made to find out what kinds of alternative living appeal most to Grosse Pointe senior citizens, one of the first follow-ups to Ms. Parmenter's series could be a survey to find the answers to that question and the many others raised in her series of stories. Surely the testimony of the people who would be benefited ought to be sought before any new programs are instituted.

Children tend to believe they are immortal and seldom think about death. As we grow older, however, all of us learn that death comes to everyone eventually. But many senior citizens still have years ahead of them, years in which they will continue to make contributions to their families and their communities. But many of them also will face new problems that deserve consideration not only by their families but by the general public.

As life expectancy continues to rise, all of us begin to think about the problems arising from our own aging and the aging of other members of our own families. So it is to our own advantage to have input into the kinds of help and programs a community can offer to the aging, the group that all of us join if we live long enough.

Inform yourself, then vote

It has been a quiet campaign leading to the school election next Monday, June 13, with little controversy being generated by the four candidates for the two openings on the board or by the proposed four-tenths of 1 percent increase in the library levy.

Yet citizens still should inform themselves about the qualifications of the four candidates as well as the merits of the millage increase, so that when they go to the polls, they will be able to express their own opinions about both matters.

It is true that except when unusual controversies occur, as in the case of the school closing issue a few years ago, the Pointes usually cast extremely light votes in school elections. That is the expected result again this year, but when only a few people show up at the polls, it is always possible for a minority that is not representative of public opinion to make the decisions.

In other words, those who favor specific candidates and the library millage increase should make it a point to inform themselves and then go to the polls to vote even though the interest seems to have been light to date.

The Grosse Pointe News earlier said that while the district was again fortunate in having four excellent candidates for the board, it supported the re-election of Fred W. Adams and the return to the board of former member Ernest Buechler. At the same time we emphasized we had a high regard for the capabilities of both Gloria J. Konsler and Timothy H. Howlett, the other two candidates.

Some people have justified light turnouts of voters on the grounds that most people are satisfied and have nothing to vote against when they go to the polls. There may be something to that argument, but we hope for a good turnout to show the Pointes' respect for a democratic system that works best when a majority of eligible citizens take part in the voting process.

Little life in school plan

When the state House of Representatives last week approved a compromise school finance plan, it marked the third time the House had sought to pass a proposed overhaul of Michigan school financing. But even though the House succeeded on its third try, prospects are not very bright for enactment of the legislation at the current session of the Legislature.

As it has been all along, the major roadblock to passage is the difference between the approaches being taken by the Democrats who control the House and the Republicans who control the Senate.

In general, the Democrats seem to be going along with most of the features of Democratic Gov. James Blanchard's school financing plan. That calls for a vote on the 2-cent increase in the state sales tax at the Aug. 2 state primary; a $500 million increase in state aid funds, which is much larger than the Republicans propose, and less property tax relief than the GOP would approve.

As we've indicated before, the Republicans prefer a vote on the sales tax boost at the November general election on the grounds the results would be more representative of public opinion than the lighter turnout at the primary.

Even so, some hope for agreement between the two parties arose when more than half of the 46 House Republicans voted for the compromise measure last week. But they may have supported it just to get that fact on the record, since Senate Majority Leader John Engler had said earlier that the Senate would not vote on the plan in time to put it on the August primary ballot.

Reviewing this apparent deadlock, we find it disappointing that the Legislature once again appears to be bogged down in partisan political maneuvering on an important reform which is intended to raise educational standards, opportunities and performance in the entire state, and especially in districts which have been unable to finance even minimum standard programs.

But part of the blame for the impasse also must be assessed against the Michigan Education Association and its supporters who favor most aspects of the governor's plan, and the state's business organizations that are mildly supporting the GOP reforms. Until those special interests compromise their differences, it is unlikely that the two parties will be able to do so and reach agreement in the Legislature.

Casinos face tough fight

The long-delayed report of Detroit's Casino Gaming Study Commission may finally be out before these words are in print, but the opposition to casino gambling appears to be increasing despite expectations the commission will vote aye on the issue.

Last week, for example, the top executives of the three metropolitan counties of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb all announced their opposition to casino gambling, a new poll of Detroit public opinion found 62 percent of the respondents against gambling, and the top four state legislative leaders reiterated their opposition to legalization of casinos.

Meanwhile, Mayor Coleman Young in an interview with the Detroit Free Press made it clear he is holding out for full-scale casinos and dismissed reports that the commission would recommend the approach used by some European cities which restrict casinos to the upper floors of hotels or limit their clientele to hotel guests.

The mayor said he opposed limited casino operations because, "The next thing you know, the city of Chicago, the city of Windsor and the province of Ontario would come along with real casinos and blow us out of the water."

But even if the mayor gets the positive recommendation that he wants from his commission, the odds still are against the legalization of casino gambling by the state Legislature. We think the denial of legalization would be supported by most suburban leaders and probably by a majority of people in the Pointes.

Letters

To the Editor:
 I am a resident of Grosse Pointe and have walked past the Higbie estate numerous times. I, like many around me, was saddened by the demise of the beautiful old house.

Several weekends ago, a friend of mine and I were walking by the house and decided to wander around the piles of rubble that lay around the mostly demolished structure. As I was staring at the mess wondering what good was going to come of this, I happened to notice a pair of crutches lying amongst the twisted wood and smashed brick and concrete.

Being a student of medicine, I attempted to practice what I had learned about the art of healing. There being nothing left standing but a chimney, I decided it needed support. So I clambered over the rubble, crutches in hand and worked my way toward the "patient." I carefully placed the crutches at its side in anticipation of relieving the strain that was placed on the legs after its supporting structure was removed. After seeing the pictures (I wish I could have seen the workmen's faces on Monday morning), I realized how ironic it was to have found a pair of crutches amidst such a crumbled body.

I debated about sending these pictures to you, but decided that there are others who could appreciate and empathize with this situation. You may keep the pictures. However, if you do happen to publish anything, I wish to remain anonymous for fear of possible prosecution for trespassing.

Journey through heart of darkness

Metal and plastic move a mile a minute over concrete paths of what used to be life-giving earth, all the while producing foul-smelling fumes that can kill. It's a place with no color. Even the remarkably stubborn weeds which twist and gnarl their way from cracks in the cement barriers and live on petrochemicals and bits of synthetic rubber are a shade of gray in this black and white world.

If there is a hell on earth, it's a soaking hot August afternoon on I-94 stuck under the Gratiot overpass with a DOT bus, a couple of semis and a '74 Buick in desperate need of a visit to an AET center.

With 70 miles of urban freeway to travel every day, there's plenty of time ponder this inhumanity to man. What kind of evil created this method of travel? Where does the grease, rust, rubber and gasoline go when rain washes into the sewers what the cars and trucks have molted? What does the sand-embedded rust floating in the air from sand-blasted steel overpasses do to one's lungs?

Have you seen it? Have you really looked at what is on the shoulders of our freeways? Sure, everyone sees the slabs of re-treads and twisted, raggedly sharp hubcaps, but have you seen the barbecue grills, stuffed animals, tennis shoes and shotgun shell casings? Everything covered with a layer of grime.

I Say

It's as though my subconscious mind purposely ignores what goes on around me. I see people exit from the Lodge onto West I-94 and speed down that extra fourth lane ahead of everyone in the proper third lane, only to force someone to come to a stop to let them into the lane so they won't hit the retaining wall. But it doesn't bother me anymore. My foot touches the gas when its supposed to and eases on the brake when the red tail lights trigger whatever mechanism in my gray matter.

Music — whatever calming effect it had on me when I started making my daily journeys through this heart of darkness — no longer occurs. News and talk radio fills my head. Whether it's Chuck Wilbur or Kim Silarski in the mornings, Warren Pierce or Dan Streeter in the early afternoon, Renee Montagne during the rush (HA!) hours or Hal Youngblood after a school board meeting, I'm listening.

I hear their words, laugh at the jokes, decry injustice in whatever Third World country, but though I see billboards, bumper stickers and construction sites, I can recall very little when I get home.

I can't remember what I saw on the way in to work just a couple of hours ago. I do remember Frank McBride and J.P. McCarthy's discussion on low water levels on the river and Lake St. Clair.

It's a strange feeling — this not recalling what I've seen.

I'm a cautious driver, but it has become an subconscious habit, and that's what's frightening. I've avoided cars that have slammed into the retaining wall and spun out in front of me. I've nearly been crushed into the center barrier by a semi that changed lanes and whose driver who didn't see my car. My car has been hit with boards, scrap metal, rocks, bolts and flying hubcaps. I get this warm, tingling sensation that occurs when adrenaline races to the heart. It takes at least three mile markers for it to leave me.

It's interesting — this idea that there is no color on an expressway. I especially note the lack of color on an overcast or rainy day. It's as though the journey over the pavement isn't part of my life. It's something I do, but I'm somehow removed from it. Like when you wake up in the morning and vividly recall your last dream, but by the time you've had a shower, the dream is forgotten. The dream was a part of you, but now that it's over (now that you're off the expressway), the experience has dissolved into the ether.

Damn! This traffic jam. Was looking in the rear view mirror, Saw myself one car back looking in the rear view mirror, Thought I'd have a heart attack, Damn! This traffic jam

Ugly tie? Enter it

Every self-respecting clotheshorse has a couple of racks filled with ties. Some are the best — silk with a designer's name scrawled on the back. Others have hand-painted drawings of bullfighters or cute ducks.

If you have tie that has spent too many years collecting dust in the back of a closet, you can enter it in the Father's Day Ugly Tie Contest sponsored by the Michigan Lupus Foundation.

It costs $5 to enter the tie. Held in conjunction with Center Companies and WCZY-FM, the event will take place Friday, June 10, through Saturday, June 18, at the Northland, Southland, Eastland and Westland malls, with proceeds to go to the Lupus Foundation.

The contest will feature ugly ties registered from around the state with prizes awarded in the categories of loudest, strangest and ugliest ties. A panel of celebrity judges will be on hand Saturday, June 18, at each mall to select the winners.

Lupus is a disease of the connective tissue that causes inflammation and changes in the structure and functions of the skin, joints and internal organs.

For more information about the contest and the Lupus Foundation, call 775-8310.

Be careful

Let it be known that the city of Grosse Pointe Farms is now strictly enforcing the one-hour parking ordinance along Kercheval on the Hill.

Farms Public Safety Director Robert Ferber said that the action is in response to complaints from merchants that Hill employees are parking along Kercheval all day and feeding the meters.

Lt. Ignatius Backman said he has been working closely with parking officials, and he has seen people park along Kercheval early in the morning when the municipal lot was nearly empty, then stay parked on the street all day.

Backman said it just takes some common sense on the part of employees to figure out that if customers can't park near where they want to shop, they will go elsewhere, and the employees will be out of a job.

Ferber noted that cooler heads should prevail during this "emergency" period as the new Cottage Hospital parking deck is under construction. He added that if people can, they should try walking, riding bikes or taking a bus to work.

Since most people need their cars during the day, the best thing to do is to park in the back two rows in the municipal lot at the four-hour meters.

Remember, the ticket for disobeying a one-hour meter law is $15, not the ordinary $3 parking violation. Remember too, that feeding the meter will not keep you from getting a $15 ticket. Once the chalk is on the tire, the only recourse is to move the car before an hour is up.

Good luck, and happy parking.

In Grosse Pointe, Detroit police raided the home of two Farms residents accused of operating a $20,000 baseball pool. The two allegedly printed 80,000 World Series ticket chances which were sold for 25 cents each.

Jewelry valued at $12,500 was stolen from the Benson Ford home on Three Mile Drive. The thief apparently entered through

Citizens sought for council

The state Department of Mental Health is soliciting nominations for membership on the Citizens Advisory Council of Detroit Psychiatric Institute, according to Thomas D. Watkins Jr., director.

The council is a voluntary group empowered to meet no less than quarterly to advise DPI Director Lawrence Jackson, M.D., on administrative policy and programs, and to monitor programs, recipient rights issues and the center's operating budget.

The Department of Mental Health encourages a broad range of representation on the council, including current and former consumers of mental health services, advocates, parents and guardians of consumers, government officials, community mental health representatives and other interested persons. Members are appointed by Watkins for a term of one or two years. Employees are not eligible to serve on citizens councils.

To be considered, interested persons should forward a letter of interest and biographical information by June 20 to: Lois Brennan, staff liaison, Mental Health Advisory Council, Michigan Department of Mental Health, Lewis Cass Bldg., Lansing, Mich. 48913. For more information, call Brennan at (517) 373-6590.

Detroit Psychiatric Institute is a state facility providing treatment for adults with psychiatric disabilities from Wayne County.

Fellowships available

The Engineering Society of Detroit is accepting applications for its Engineering and Science Fellowship Program, a program that provides qualified individuals with an opportunity to serve full-time in the offices of Michigan's U.S. senators or part-time in the state legislature.

The fellowships help facilitate the exchange of technical information between the state and Congress, and benefit Michigan by keeping the state at the forefront of new technology.

Individuals interested in applying for a fellowship position should contact Pat Bohy at 832-5400. The deadline for applications is July 1.

Lake St. Clair: Neglected by scientific research

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

Only in the Great Lakes system would a 425-square-mile lake be categorized as a connecting channel, according to Doug Haffner and Cathy Alpaugh, authors of a recent article in Target Earth, the official publication of the East Michigan Environmental Action Council.

Haffner is an associate director of the Great Lakes Institute, a Canadian research institution associated with the University of Windsor. Alpaugh is a Great Lakes Institute assistant and writer.

In their article, they call it the forgotten Great Lake. The ignored lake. Surrounded by the big guys — Huron, Ontario, Michigan, Erie and Superior — Lake St. Clair is easily overlooked.

The Huron Indians called it Otsiketa (salt) referring to the salt springs near the Clinton River.

Early French settlers called it Lac Chandiere (kettle lake) because of its round shape. Some old Dutch maps named it Kande-kio. On some French maps, it was called Ganatchio.

The lake was christened Sainte Claire more than 300 years ago on a sunny summer day, Aug. 12, 1679, by Father Hennepin, the chaplain of the first sailing ship to enter the lake. Aug. 12 is the feast day of Sainte Claire.

The ship, the Griffin, was built during the winter of 1678-79 on the banks of the Niagara River and was the first sailing vessel ever to explore the Great Lakes.

French explorer Robert de LaSalle commissioned Lt. Henri de Tonti to build the 45-ton ship. The shipbuilders were superstitious and chattered about dire consequences because the ship was to be named after a legendary monster. The griffin had the head, forelegs and wings of an eagle and the body, hind legs and tail of a lion. The builders thought all ships should be named for saints.

LaSalle laughed at the superstitious workmen and had a carved image of a griffin made for the bow of the ship.

LaSalle, Capt. Henri de Tonti and a crew of 16 Frenchmen, including Hennepin, surgeon Jean Michel, notary Jacques La Meterie, partners in the venture Sieur de Boirondet and Sieur d'Autray, and a few Indians set sail on Aug. 7, 1679, into what was, for them, unknown waters.

Hennepin kept a journal. He described the journey past Point Pelee and the islands of Lake Erie. As they sailed by Grosse Ile, Hennepin wrote glowing descriptions of the beautiful straits. He said the shore was open plains and the crew had sighted stags, deer, bear and wild turkey. He described the trees — fruit, walnut, chestnut, plum and apple.

The Griffin sailed up the Detroit River, through Lake St. Clair, up the St. Clair River, through Lake Huron to Michilimackinac and Green Bay, where LaSalle and de Tonti left the ship to pursue other explorations.

During its return trip, the Griffin, loaded with furs, disappeared.

LaSalle later explored the Mississippi.

French canoes were the common vessels of Lake St. Clair during the 1700s. In the late 1800s, Grosse Pointe grew into a posh summer community for wealthy Detroit businessmen. Many owned luxurious yachts. In 1886, a long dock extended into the lake, approximately where Newberry and Lakeshore intersect today. Several steam yachts owned by Grosse Pointers were moored there. During the summer, businessmen traveled to their downtown Detroit offices by a yacht that left at 8:30 a.m. and returned at 4 p.m. every day.

On the 200th anniversary of the christening of Lake St. Clair, Aug. 12, 1879, Grosse Pointers held a ceremony in which the lake was rechristened and the spelling changed from Sainte Claire to Saint Clair.

Because it's so shallow, say writers Alpaugh and Haffner, Lake St. Clair is an area of high biological productivity. The wetlands around the lake provide habitats for fish and migratory birds and offer a controlling force for the movement of the lake's contaminants.

Alpaugh and Haffner point out the unfortunate lack of scientific research of the Lake St. Clair ecosystem. Recently, they said, the Canadian and U.S. governments cooperated on a study of the connecting channels of the Great Lakes and the contaminants that threaten them. "But it failed to recognize Lake St. Clair as an ecological system," they said in their article.

Unanswered questions remain about an increased number of tumors on walleye from the lake. No studies — or guidelines — are available for the people of Walpole Island, a community that depends on the natural resources of the lake for its livelihood. "Fish consumption guidelines established on Lake St. Clair are for the occasional fisherman, not for the person who depends on the resource on a day-to-day basis," they said.

The future of the lake, they said, depends on the attitudes and interest of the communities that surround it. The St. Clair River International Citizens Network, a coalition of groups and individuals from Sarnia, Port Huron, Wallaceburg, Algonac, Windsor and other areas, have expressed concern about the environmental and political significance of the ecosystem.

Alpaugh and Haffner said, "Groups around the lake are looking to create a system of accountability to protect the lake and their uses of the lake."

Young filmmaker uses music in lieu of dialogue

By Jesse Wick
Grosse Pointe News intern

University Liggett School became the backdrop for a surreal and exotic film last month, as junior Brian Schmidt produced "Valsalva."

"I've done away with the more traditional things like plot and dialogue," said Schmidt, son of Josh and Cathy Schmidt of Grosse Pointe. The film is his first, and was made as a term project for his art class.

Schmidt plans to major in film in college, and hopes to attend either New York City College or Temple University. His directing style combines elements of MTV, Federico Fellini and home movies.

"Valsalva" is made up of a series of apparently unrelated short scenes, many (but not all) of which feature a tall young man in a tuxedo named Valsalva.

Although Schmidt says his film has no plot, it essentially chronicles the events of Valsalva's life. "It's sort of biographical, but I try to develop a character without using the confines of a definite story-line. That's why there's only short scenes and not much dialogue."

Music takes the place of dialogue in the film. In most of the scenes, a song communicates the character's emotions. The film also relies heavily on physical actions and imagery.

Valsalva's life begins on a golf course. He wanders happily around sand traps, picking dandelions and stopping to talk to dogs. He is run off the golf course by a golfer, however, and enters human society.

Childhood cancer support group

The Metro Detroit Candlelighters affiliated with St. John Hospital, a support group for parents and health professionals touched by childhood cancer, will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 16 in St. John Hospital's ground floor boardroom.

Believing, "It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness," the group shares goals such as linking parent to parent, exchanging information,

The rest of the film concerns Valsalva's interaction with society and his eventual transformation into a drug pusher. The other characters are all either drug abusers or criminals, and they all worship "the god of materialism," as Schmidt puts it.

No reason is given in the film for Valsalva's turn to crime. He is simply shown handing people plastic bags and counting money.

In the end, Valsalva finds no happiness in his new life. Although he finds friends and wealth, he loses the simple innocence of his life on the golf breaking down social isolation, providing guidance in coping with childhood cancer's effect on all in a family, and identifying patient and family needs so medical and social systems respond adequately.

The group meets the first and third Thursday of each month at St. John Hospital, 22101 Moross west of Mack.

course. He realizes this in the film's climactic scene, when he is sitting at a picnic table with Thompson, one of his new friends. While Thompson sniffs cocaine, Valsalva launches into a demented children's story called "Uncle, Unctious, and Binky."

At the end of the story, Uncle is brutally murdered — and dragged out to a golf course to be buried. Valsalva rises with a shocked look on his face, and the

For children home alone

If your children are home alone, your family can feel more confident if you establish some safety rules, says the National Safety Council.

- Don't let your children carry housekeys in a visible place. Pin keys inside pockets or put them on chains around your children's necks, inside clothing.

- Instruct your children not to open the door to strangers and not to tell an unidentified phone caller that they are home alone.

- Keep a list of important numbers next to the phone — film's last scene shows him lying dead in a sand trap. His last words: "I feel no remorse at all."

"That last line shows how easy it is to lose yourself," Schmidt said. "The movie is about how a pure soul is corrupted by society's problems, things like drugs or money. Once he changes, he knows he can't go back, but he just doesn't care anymore."

The film as a whole would be impossible to understand without Schmidt there to explain it. It's also poorly edited, and the fact that it was filmed with a hand-held video camera means the picture has a tendency to bounce and wobble a lot.

Despite these technical flaws, however, "Valsalva" could be fairly interesting to fans of the surreal. A copy of the film can be obtained for free by sending a blank videocassette to Transcendental Productions, P.O. Box 80812, St. Clair Shores, Mich. 48080.

Schmidt doesn't plan to stop filmmaking with "Valsalva." He is currently working on another project, this time not as a school assignment. "Mickey in Space" involves showing melted film over old Mickey Mouse cartoons. The result is Mickey Mouse with a background green and yellow goo.

"Mickey is my first effort with 8mm film," Schmidt said. "I hope to move entirely into this medium from now on."

Perry Drugs plans delivery service

In response to the congested Hill parking, Perry Drugs, located at 107 Kercheval, has come up with an old-fashioned solution — home delivery.

The idea came from the area's district manager as a response to the drop in business due to the parking situation on the Hill, while the Cottage Hospital parking structure is being built, according to Assistant Manager Iolanda Mattera.

"Our business has dropped because of the parking, and I think this will help," Mattera said.

If a customer calls in an order before 11 a.m., it will be delivered by 5 p.m. that same day, according to a flyer distributed this past weekend. The service is available Monday through Friday from noon to 5 p.m. and only at the Hill store. If a prescription and $25 worth of merchandise is ordered, delivery is free. There is a $3 charge for merchandise delivered without a prescription.

The delivery area runs from Alter Road to Eight Mile Road and from Mack to Jefferson.

"I think this will be real good, especially for older people," she said. "That way they can have their medications delivered to their home for them instead of them having to come out and drive around and around looking for a space."

If the system works, Mattera said it may become a permanent feature for the Farms store and could spread to others in the chain.

City of Grosse Pointe, Michigan PUBLIC NOTICE

IN ACCORDANCE TO THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE SAFE DRINKING WATER ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1986, THE CITY OF GROSSE POINTE WATER AND SEWERAGE DEPARTMENT, AS YOUR WATER SUPPLIER IS PROVIDING THIS INFORMATION TO HELP EDUCATE YOU ON THE POSSIBILITY OF LEAD IN YOUR DRINKING WATER.

There's a growing public concern about lead in our environment. To increase our customer's awareness on this public health issue we are reprinting in part information published by The Detroit Water and Sewerage Department in their notice on this subject.

"Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard."

THE PROBLEM WITH LEAD

Lead is a soft toxic metal known to be harmful to human health if inhaled or ingested. Lead accumulates in the body and its potential for harm depends upon the amount of exposure. Low levels of lead exposure can cause subtle biochemical changes.

"EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women."

There are three potential sources for lead to accumulate in the body: food consumption, airborne pollutants and the third potential source is from your drinking water.

"The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly."

The water provided by the City of Grosse Pointe is purchased from and supplied by Grosse Pointe Farms. The Farms has had this water supply tested for lead by the Michigan Department of Public Health and the results indicate lead was NOT detected.

YOU SHOULD KNOW

Although the water the City provides has no presence of lead — the opportunity for lead to leach into your water supply is still possible.

Typically, lead gets into your water after leaving the water treatment plant. The most likely source of lead contamination is the home or residence plumbing system.

The most common cause is corrosion (a reaction between the water and the lead pipes or solder.)

"Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- If your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- If your home has copper pipes soldered with lead, and
- If the home is less than five years old, or
- If you have soft water, or
- If the water sits in the pipes for several hours without use."

IN THE HOME

Up to the 1900's it was common practice in some areas of the United States, to use lead pipes for interior plumbing. Galvanized and then copper pipes replaced lead pipes however lead solder was used to join these copper pipes.

You can tell if lead pipes are in your home by scratching the pipe with a house key or screwdriver. Lead is a dull grey metal. Lead is soft enough to be easily scratched and will become shiny when scratched.

TO MINIMIZE EXPOSURE

You can minimize exposure to this potential problem for you and your family if you:

- Flush each cold water faucet by allowing the water to run until the water is as cold as it will get. Do this whenever water has been setting in pipes for more than a few hours (such as overnight). This usually takes about 2 minutes. Flushing is important because the water that comes out after flushing has not been in extended contact with lead pipes or lead solder that may be in your household. (Flushing water may be used for non-consumption purposes such as washing dishes, clothes, flushing toilets, or other household tasks; it need not be wasted).
- Never cook or consume water from the hot water faucet. Hot tap water can contain higher levels of lead because lead dissolves more easily in hot water. It is especially important to avoid using hot water from the faucet when preparing baby formula. If you need hot water for consumption for cooking draw water from the cold tap and heat it on the stove or in the microwave. Use only thoroughly flushed water from the cold tap for any consumption.
- It is now a federal law that all material used for repairs or newly installed plumbing be lead-free. Make sure you check with your plumber before any work is done.

The water provided by the City is in compliance with current and proposed future U.S. EPA lead level limitations for safe drinking water.

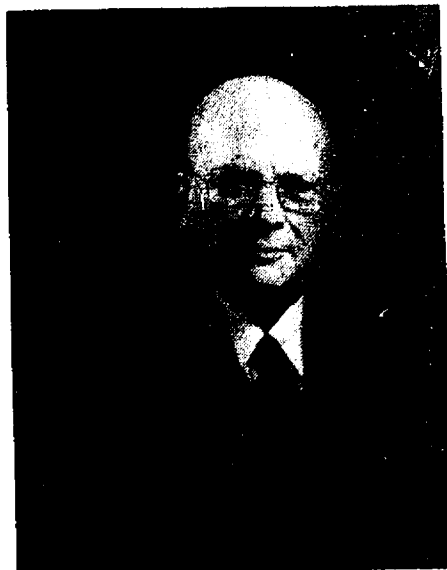

If individuals would like their water tested to determine whether there is a problem with their internal system, reputable private laboratories are available to provide such tests.

For additional information, you may contact the U.S. EPA. The U.S. EPA has a toll free hotline dedicated to this subject — 1-800-426-4791 — and they have also prepared a booklet on this issue.

This information has been approved by the U.S. EPA and meets EPA's lead public notice requirements.

Lifting tips

When you have a heavy load, you can seriously injure your back, hands or feet. The National Safety Council offers these tips on the right way to lift and carry:

- Wear protective clothing — safety shoes and hand protection. However, don't wear gloves around moving machinery.

- Size up the load. Look for nails, splinters or anything that might injure your hands. Tip the load; if it's too heavy or you can't get a comfortable grip, ask for help.

- Lift with your legs, not your back. Squat and keep the object close to you as you slowly straighten your legs.

- When carrying the load, make sure you have firm footing and a clear view of where you're going. Be sure you have proper clearance going through doorways so hands won't be crushed.

These steins aren't for your average mug

By Ronald J. Bernas
Staff Writer

Leave it to the Europeans to elevate beer-drinking to an art form.

Whereas today you have Yuppies drinking foreign beer out of foreign-looking bottles while eating brie and snuggling with their significant other, men in the Middle Ages drank a hearty brew drawn from wooden barrels by a wench in a bar that had no ferns.

The men were also dropping left and right due to the bubonic plague thanks to the hoards of flies that flew in and out of the hearty, beer-like substance they drank.

Beer in that time was made from everything — rotten bread, eggs, cabbage and anything else at hand.

The hinged lid that distinguishes the stein from its poor cousin, the beer mug, was in reaction to a law passed in many European countries that required all food and beverage containers to be covered to prevent contamination.

Steins, from then on, evolved into a fascinating and intricate art form. They provide a history of areas, art processes and people.

Stroh Brewery has collected an impressive number of classic steins and 60 of the most interesting are now on display in the Gallery at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores. The collection, "Classic Steins: The Stroh Brewery Company Collection," will be on display through July 10.

The display includes steins of stoneware, faience, porcelain, glass, wood, silver and ivory and they come from Sweden, Denmark, Austria — and of course, Germany.

The steins display everything from paintings of brewers to coopers in bas-relief to the 12 apostles to a bacchanalian scene. All are works of impeccable craftsmanship. Some have initials or names on them, and one beautiful stein from Creussen, Germany has markings on it that it was given to a couple from their children on the occasion of their 25th anniversary — in 1693. Each tells a story, and each is a piece of history.

The show is a rare treat, for not only are the steins beautifully displayed in the elegance of the Ford estate, they have only been shown publicly once before, in the Stroh pavilion at the Knoxville World Fair in 1982. After this showing, the steins will be displayed at the River Place Stroh Corporate Headquarters.

This large German tankard was carved in high relief from a single tusk. The lid and base are silver, as is the handle and the interior of the stein. The scene is one heck of a party, with a drunken Bacchus as the life of the party.

Challenge and adventure, not pay, lure educated crews to tall ships

By Donald Smith

National Geographic News Service

"Keep regular watches. Wake me if the wind increases above Force 3."

It is just past 4 a.m. on the Atlantic Ocean. Somewhere off the coast of Massachusetts, dawn is closing in, and Peg Brandon, the 29-year-old captain of the schooner Westward, is ready to call it a night. The weather is calm; but at sea, a gentle breeze can quickly develop into a gale.

So, after jotting those terse instructions in a logbook, Brandon retires to her quarters. If she's lucky, she'll catch four hours of rest before returning to work. "I sleep at oddball times here and there," she says. "You get used to it."

Brandon is one of a growing number of college-educated Americans who choose to work at sea on traditional high-masted sailing vessels, commonly called tall ships.

In the bargain, many have traded rush-hour traffic, 9-to-5 hours, and other predictabilities for long days of exhausting physical activity, exposure to the elements, cramped living quarters, and occasional high adventure in exotic settings. Brandon has sailed all over the North Atlantic and around the West Indies and the Caribbean.

Danger is a constant consideration. Last year a freak squall sent the Pride of Baltimore, a 137-foot replica of a 19th-century Baltimore clipper, to the bottom of the Atlantic. Four of her 12-member crew died.

In 1984, 19 crew members and passengers died when heavy seas sank the Marques, a 117-foot square-rigger, during a race from Bermuda to Nova Scotia.

Nevertheless, it's a way of life that continues to attract people from all over the world. Tall ships from many countries will converge on Australia in January 1988 for the nation's bicentennial celebration. About a half-dozen American ships will be among the 40 to 45 vessels expected to make the journey.

It's the challenge of life at sea that appeals to Rex McKeever, 51, a Houston orthopedic surgeon who divides his time between his medical practice and serving as an officer and ship's doctor aboard the Elissa, a 100-year-old, 202-foot barque based in Galveston, Texas.

"I love medicine," McKeever says. "But after 10 or 15 years, you start sounding like a broken record. A patient comes in with a backache, and you plug the backache tape into your brain and hear yourself spitting this stuff out over and over again. It loses a little bit of its challenge. The sea is very challenging."

McKeever, who began sailing small boats in high school, now has a Coast Guard operator's license to operate ships displacing up to 500 tons. He plans eventually to spend half his time aboard ships and the other half practicing medicine.

"I'm not as young as I used to be, and I don't know how long I'm going to want to do this," he says. "But for right now, it sounds fine."

Estimates of the size of this arcane industry are hard to come by. The American Sail Training Association is a trade group of about 150 shipowners who offer courses in handling large sailboats. It has registered Tall Ships as a service mark.

Members' ships range from modest 40-foot sloops to billowy, multi-sail extravaganzas like the Elissa. Many similar vessels are owned by entrepreneurs who operate them as charter boats.

David Brink, an association official, estimates that between 2,000 and 5,000 Americans consider themselves professional tall-ship operators. They include captains, senior officers (mates), engineers and stewards.

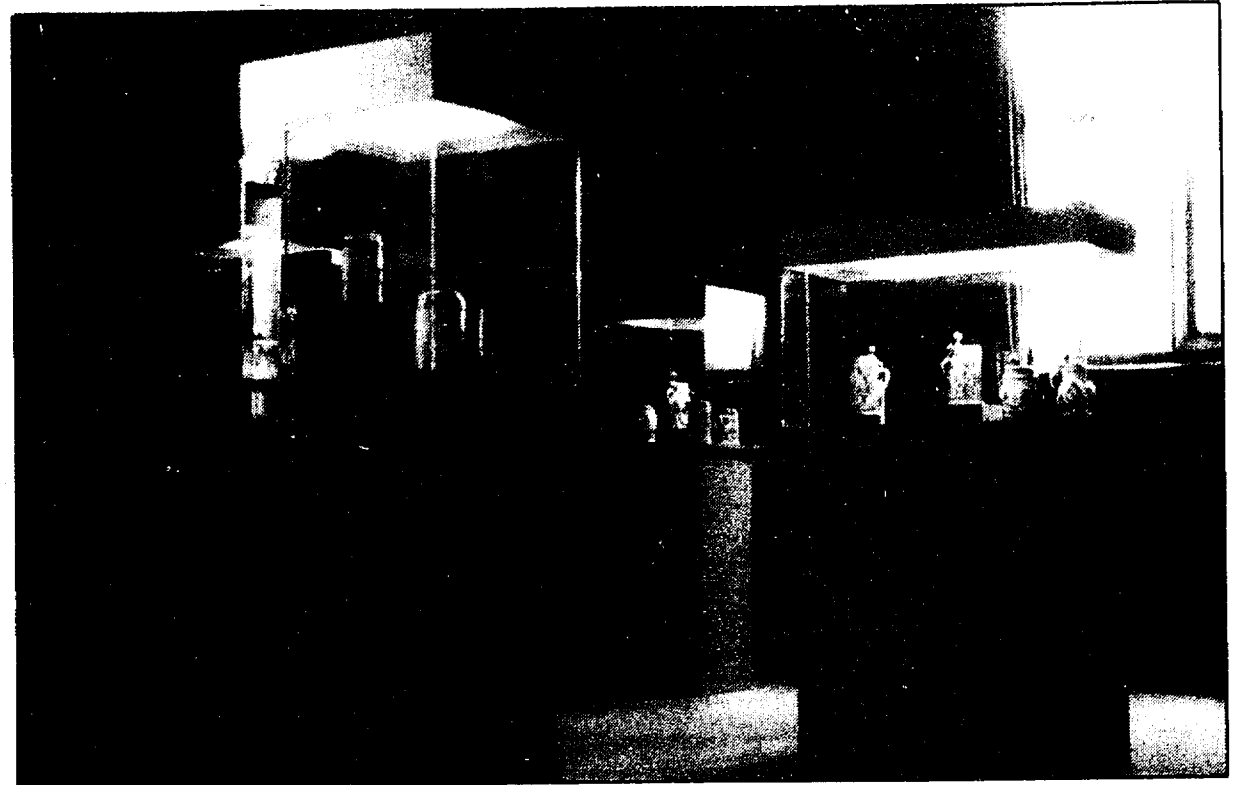

Pay generally is not a big attraction of life aboard a tall ship. The top-ranking officers, who usually are hired by the trip, may average between $30,000 and $35,000 a year. As in sports, however, big-league players command more princely salaries. The captain of the Elissa for example, earns $250 a day during voyages.

Although the officers are the brains of a ship, deckhands perform most of the exhausting chores such as keeping the ship clean and handling the massive sails. Deckhands tend to be volunteers eager to go on voyages, usually as rewards for the long hours they've devoted to maintaining the ships while in harbor.

Most of the yarns tall-ship crews swap involve weather. McKeever recalls a harrowing experience during a trip to Bermuda last year when the Elissa's jib boom — a spar about the size of a telephone pole that extends the bowsprit — snapped in two during a squall.

While large pieces of wood and sail were flying around in the heavy wind, McKeever gripped the ankles of the ship's carpenter as he leaned over the bow to cut loose the lashings with his knife and bring the broken boom aboard. In the process, the carpenter sliced off the tip of his little finger. "We actually were able to graft it back on," McKeever says.

"This is a pretty exciting business," says Peg Brandon. "Everything is very immediate and practical. Of course, there are drawbacks to being at sea for long periods of time. Nobody's home weeding the garden."

Sixty steins from the Stroh Brewery Company Collection are elegantly displayed in the gallery of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House.

Student to participate in ad campaign

Jill Snyder of Grosse Pointe has been selected to participate in a student-run advertising organization at Miami University in Ohio. The organization will travel to London, England this month to produce a full campaign for its 1988 client, BFGoodrich.

Snyder, a senior majoring in marketing, will serve as a marketing consultant and social director for her team.

They will produce a marketing and promotion campaign for BFGoodrich products in the European community. The course began May 16 with two weeks of intensive preparation at Miami University, followed by four weeks in London.

The program is run as a competition, with 60 students divided into three teams, functioning essentially as mini-agencies. Each must produce a full campaign, including marketing research and strategy, media plans, fully produced electronic media and comprehensive artwork and layouts for all print media ads. The campaigns are judged by the clients at the final presentation in London.

Nursing

A battered profession digs in

It's a tough job, but somebody has to do it.

The trouble is, fewer and fewer people are doing it. Nurses are getting fed up with too many hours, too little pay and way too little appreciation.

"People don't have to go into nursing any more — there are many other avenues open to women now. They don't have to be a nurse or a teacher," says Joan Lee, director of nursing at Cottage Hospital.

"For the most part, people attracted to nursing want to help people, but they find the volume of work and the unpopular hours are discouraging.

"People are leaving nursing in droves."

Not everybody is gone. White-gowned men and women still make the rounds, taking temperatures, blood pressures, chatting with patients. Getting another blanket. Adjusting the thermostat. Saving a life.

The comforting cool hand on the fevered brow isn't entirely a relic of the past. But it's endangered. Nurses aren't all Florence Nightingales any more, if indeed, they ever were.

What has happened? Why do a caring nurse's friends challenge her on her choice of profession? Have all nurses thrown in the towel? Would they do it again if they had the choice?

"I think I would. Yeah, I would. Yes, I definitely would," said Cottage nurse Josie Springer. But she said some of her friends think she's crazy.

"I can't picture myself doing anything else," said Marilyn Cito. "Hospitals are what I know. But I don't want my daughter to be a nurse. I told her I wouldn't pay for her schooling if she chooses nursing." Cito laughs as she says it; one isn't sure whether she means it.

Nurses are caught in the same bind as teachers, police, social workers and, yes, journalists. Why the marketplace doesn't financially reward careers that in most cases require considerable advanced education is a constantly frustrating question. There is the nagging feeling that America doesn't care about anything except business. That America mouths a support of health care, public safety, education and the dissemination of information, but won't put its money where its mouth is.

On the job

The day starts before dawn on Cottage Hospital's Two East medical surgical unit. At 6:45 a.m., day shift nurses begin counting medications, checking the narcotics and giving a quick glance at each patient. During the next couple of hours, they retrace their steps, stopping to chat, check blood pressure and evaluate each person's condition.

Cottage is a small community hospital. A few years ago, it experimented with primary nurses, but reverted to the team approach when nurses found they were bogged down in non-nursing functions. Now the nurse visits a patient, takes responsibility for treatments and serves as a liaison between patient and doctor. Aides take on other work like giving baths.

Registered nurse Helen Brandon has nine patients today. It's a heavy load, given that patients tend to be sicker now than in the past. Insurance companies and the government now dictate how long a person can stay in the hospital and what treatment will be reimbursed — and only the sickest end up as in-patients.

Brandon takes time to ask questions. She has to assess the condition of each patient, giving them an acuity rating of 1 through 5. Since eight of the floor's beds are for heart patients on a monitor, most of the ratings are at least 3. When you're a 2, you get to go home.

"That's a change," said nurse Rosemary Young. "We used to have 1's who were in here for observation or tests. Now they won't even let you in."

"How are you feeling today?" Brandon asks each patient. Most rise to the occasion and say they are pretty well. A woman who overdid it with spring cleaning keeps a cheerful smile on her face, growing serious only as she asks about "repairs" to her 10-year-old heart bypass.

"Do you think they'd let me go home to take care of my dog and go to church on Sunday, honey?" she asks Brandon. She worries about her dog if she has to stay in the hospital any length of time, then tells a reporter, "No matter how bad you feel, you can always look around and find somebody who is worse off."

Brandon has been at Cottage less than a year, but has worked as a nurse in other states for 17 years. Although she is currently working part-time, she says "hours are the number one worst problem" in nursing.

Hospitals are bending over backwards to be flexible in assigning hours, says Two East head nurse Marilyn Cito. In a two-week period, there are people who work 80 hours, people who work 72 hours, people who work 32 hours — and now some special shifts that work 70 hours and get paid for 80. Nurses are in such short supply that virtually every hospital uses "pool" or temporary nurses to fill in the blank spots.

There's a flip side to that. "It's really easy to find a job," Brandon said. In the five states where she has worked, "I always picked the hospital closest to home. I went in to tell them I wanted to work, and they said 'when?' I've never had to go through an extensive interview."

Nurse Rosemary Young checks the condition of an elderly man and listens patiently as he tries to sort out his confused state and explain how he came to be in the hospital.

Cottage nurses don't rotate shifts as nurses do at some hospitals, but everyone has to work every other weekend. Nurses, especially those who work on critical wards, suffer from burn-out. And there is an ever-present fear of disease.

"Everybody's afraid of disease now," Cito said. "Now hospitals are taking extreme precautions." Protocols are posted at every nursing station detailing what protective gear — goggles, masks, gloves — is needed for each medical situation. And AIDS is only the most dramatic fear; hepatitis is more contagious.

It can drive a person to work somewhere else.

Pam Rousseau, assistant to the head nurse on Two East, is transferring to admitting. She's also taking some good-natured guff about it.

"It's less stressful, has better hours and no weekends," Rousseau said. "But we're like family here — I didn't make the decision lightly."

"No matter how bad things get here — and sometimes they're awful — we all pull together. It's the laughter that gets us through."

Two days later, the ward is a different place. Nurses, aides, volunteers, cleaning staff swarm in the halls and in the rooms. Doctors fill every seat at the nurses' station, filling out orders. Secretary Janet Spinelli is in constant motion, typing information into the computer, answering the phone, paging people.

Patients who were too sick to get out of bed two days ago are wandering the halls and sitting in the lounge. A patient waves from her bed, feeling that the reporter's familiar face is an old friend. An aide sprints down the stairs with a headset belonging to a man who was just discharged.

The woman with the dog is going home. "I won't hang any more curtains, honey," she promises. "They'll just lie there. It isn't worth a trip to the hospital."

A patient who was looking pretty wan a couple of days ago has pink cheeks again. She has been here 10 days already and is expecting to stay seven more. "Not that I like it," she says, "but if you have to be in the hospital, this is the place to be. It's small and it's friendly."

Rosemary Young is making rounds today. She spends a long time with a patient who is looking forward to going home in a few hours. It turns out they are both from Wisconsin.

"How about those Green Bay Packers," they say to each other. They both remember Packers from the 50s. "How about that Bart Starr," they say.

Young discusses the patient's treatment. He has been learning to inject himself with insulin. They list off his medications.

"Education is a big part of our job," Young says later. "Patients are so much sicker when they go home that we have to make sure they really understand what they're supposed to do. And patients ask more questions today. They used to just do whatever the doctor said."

Young has been in nursing for 30 years, 15 of them at Cottage. Things have changed.

"Have they ever!" she said. "There's much more paperwork, more documentation. I'm sure that's because of lawsuits."

Young said most nurses don't go around worrying all the time about legal liability, but most also carry liability insurance. Most people who sue go after the doctor and the hospital, rather than the nurse — although Young was once named in a lawsuit for an accident that occurred when she wasn't even on the floor.

"I guess my name was on the chart somewhere," she said.

A love affair with a tough job

Professional staff development is seen by many hospitals as the key to a well-run operation. Cottage Hospital is currently reworking its education department to provide more face-to-face contact with staff nurses. Jim Kronk and Josie Springer, both registered nurses, are the two education instructors.

"This is an opportunity for us," Springer said. "We have autonomy — we can make this department what we want it."

At the same time that Springer and Kronk are either putting on classes or finding someone to conduct one, Kronk is visiting other hospitals to review their education programs.

Cottage offers nurses classes on everything from cardiac arrhythmia to customer relations; currently Kronk is checking everyone out on CPR — an annual requirement. No one is required to take most of the classes, but they are necessary for hospital merit raises.

Both nurses love their jobs. Kronk started his professional life as a licensed practical nurse, then went back to school to become a registered nurse. He has worked in a variety of departments — not always in direct patient care — in order to advance his resume. He has only been in the education department for a month.

He has no hesitation in saying he would do the same thing all over again.

Several members of Kronk's family are also nurses. "There's a lot of family shop talk," he said. "Everybody's got a solution (to nursing's problems). It's going to take a cooperative effort... I'm embarrassed sometimes when I see nurses talking on TV about nothing but higher wages."

Kronk said he tends to look on the bright side of nursing: job security and the ease of changing jobs. His wife, also a nurse,

Stories and photos by Nancy Parmenter

Leo H. DeGroot, 85, of East Detroit, beams as he tells his nurse he's ready to go home. He tells an aide that the hospital is wonderful, then spies a reporter and says it again for emphasis. DeGroot, a retired electrician, kept himself and his roommate amused with his retiree's business card: No address. No phone. No business. No worries. No prospects. No money. Although he was in the hospital because of an accidental injury to his arm, DeGroot was instructed again on his heart and diabetic conditions and practiced injecting insulin into an orange. "Nothin' to it," he said.

Stresses and responsibilities

"You couldn't have picked a better time to do a story on nursing," said Joan Lee, director of nursing at Cottage Hospital. "When they hear that a check-out clerk does better than they do, and if the check-out clerk makes a bad decision, it isn't a matter of life and death — well, the stresses are altogether different."

Theresa Durecki is the hospital's nursing recruiter. She knows how hard it is to attract good nurses these days.

"Look at police, fire, truckers, check-out people," she said. "Look at the responsibility of each job (and which one gets the bigger wage). It's a nationwide problem that we don't put our bucks in the proper sequence."

"Right from the hospital vice presidents on down, they would probably double their income in private industry."

As a small community hospital, Cottage operates under some budget constraints. Even in the best of times, it can't afford the wages paid at big, unionized hospitals.

As a hospital that ran more than $1 million in the red last year, Cottage is operating under a wage freeze. A new graduate nurse starts at $11 an hour; the top of the range is $13.45. Other hospitals pay as much as $17 an hour.

"We're losing ground very quickly," said Durecki. "We dare not lose staff because we can't attract new."

That's the down side. The fact is that although some nurses at Cottage have quit, a lot of them are still there. Of 148 positions for registered nurses, 16 remain open; Durecki is looking actively to fill them.

"There's a measure of comfort in working at a small community hospital," Lee said. "You know everybody in the house."

"We hope that people want to work where they're treated well... Nursing students are some of the most idealistic people you'll ever want to see."

Cottage is keeping its emphasis on the personal touch. Lee thinks that's why the community continues to support it. And a walk through a ward bolsters her theory: A woman patient says she has been there so many times she knows the entire staff.

Lee thinks the fact that the staff is non-union helps. "In a profession like health care, I'd be loath to see a union — the community is used to a certain level of patient care," she said.

"It's not the mindset of the culture any more for people to want to sacrifice themselves, but there's a great willingness on the part of the staff to flex and cover when we're short."

"But sometimes they've given all they can give."

Nurses work harder today than they had to only a few years ago. Now DRGs (diagnosis related groupings — insurance jargon) govern length and type of treatment, with the result that patients don't even get into the hospital unless they are very sick. Others are treated as outpatients.

"Each nurse has at least six patients who can't do anything for themselves, and maybe one who can get to the bathroom by himself," Durecki said. "Sicker patients require more skilled staff."

The two are convinced that whatever the problems facing the field, their nurses are rising to the challenge. "Good patient care is beyond price," says Lee.

Two East head nurse Marilyn Cito looks over computerized patient records with unit secretary Janet Spinelli.

Personal involvement

Nurses have more challenges to meet than they used to. Most units have special certification procedures; the more certification a nurse can collect, the more rounded her resume. Nurses are also involved more in hospital policy-making.

It's part of a drive toward greater professionalism.

"We have committees to review procedures, standards, paperwork, patient education," said Two East head nurse Marilyn Cito. "Participation in that makes the nurses feel part of the system."

Two East nurses don't wear nurses' hats any more, either. "Now girls don't feel that wearing a hat makes them a better nurse," Cito said. "And I'm more concerned with how they do their job."

Two East has eight telemetry beds occupied by patients wearing heart monitors. Nurses trained on the monitors are also trained to defibrillate.

"We have intensive training for the heart monitors," Cito said. "But it's important that no matter what the screen shows, we go in and check the patient; this is just machinery."

Pointer

He has been retired for two years and isn't just sitting at home getting on his wife Jennie's nerves. In addition to the two days a week he still goes into his law offices at Kerr, Russell and Weber, he serves on the boards of the Children's Center (now is vice president), the Children's Aid Society (where he was president for 14 years), the Grosse Pointe War Memorial and Grosse Pointe United Church. He is also the co-chair for tonight's art auction to benefit the Children's Center.

"This retirement thing is wearing me out," he said.

In addition to the aforementioned boards, he is the executive director of The Metro Health Foundation, a two-year-old private foundation headquartered in Detroit that makes grants to agencies throughout Michigan. He works there at least three days a week.

The foundation was started when two HMO-type organizations decided to merge. One of the two was non-profit and laws require liquidation of assets of non-profit organizations. The money from the non-profit organization was used to set up Metro Health Foundation.

"When I came on, they had some money, but they didn't have a name, they didn't have an office, they didn't even have a paper clip," he said. "I came to the meeting and I guess I was kind of critical about how they were sitting on their hands and not dispensing the money they had. So they asked me if I wanted to run the organization. I said no. They asked me if I would do it temporarily, and I said sure, I'd do it for six months."

Eighteen months later, Kerr is happy with the organization and his position. "This is a lot of fun," he said.

But it's also a lot of hard work. "To give away money wisely and correctly is harder than I realized. There are hundreds of worthy causes, but what we try to do is to give to smaller groups where a shot in the arm would do a lot for them," he said.

They also will give to larger organizations, as evidenced with their $18,000 grant to the Michigan Cancer Foundation which is earmarked for a study of an area in Detroit whose residents have a larger amount of lung cancer per area than is common, he said.

Metro's net income annually is $400,000, derived from assets of $6 million. The nine-person board of directors wants to dispense $400,000 each year, in two different cycles — spring and fall. This year, they are going in three cycles.

"It's nice to see something concrete that you helped make happen," he said. "I think we all feel good by doing good for others. It's the charitable aspect in all of us."

In between the board meetings and his work, he still finds time to take extensive trips with his wife, both at home and abroad.

He takes his powerboat throughout the Great Lakes every summer. "It's like a summer cottage, only mine floats." He calls the time spent on his boat "maritime research."

He estimates he has traveled more than 45,000 miles on the Great Lakes and this summer he will add nearly 2,000 miles to that total when he will travel from Cheboygan through Georgian Bay through the Trent-Severn System and up the St. Lawrence Seaway and back.

"There are the most beautiful islands there," he said.

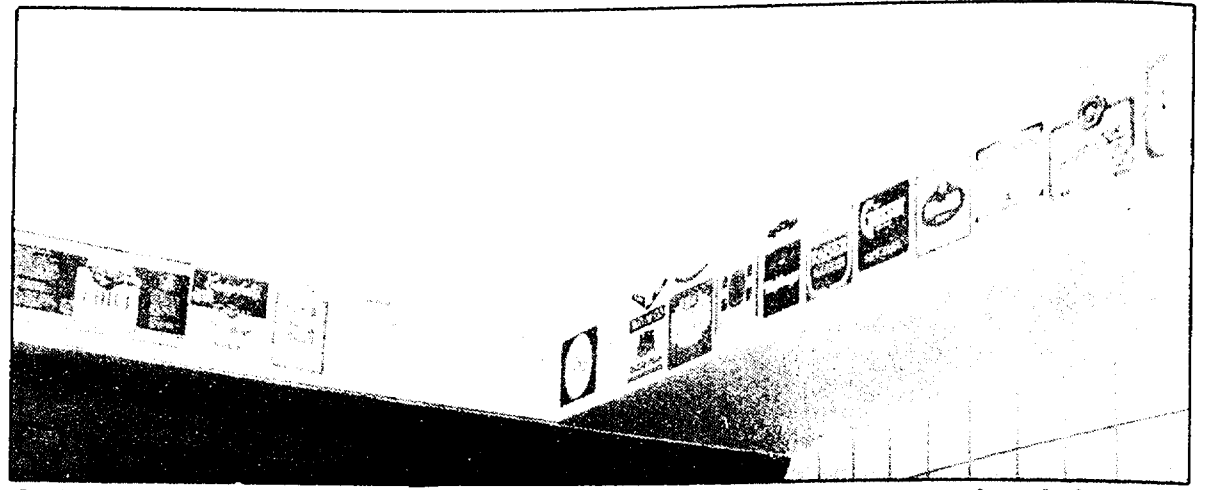

And what does he do on his boat — the Caveat IV — for "Some day when we sell this house, someone's going to look at this bathroom and say, 'My God, he ruined this,'" he said.

His three children, from a first marriage, are scattered throughout the country. None of them are lawyers. "I discouraged that from the start. I told them all, don't be in a business where you have to sell your time."

But Kerr said he wouldn't do it differently if he had to do it again.

"Being a lawyer is not an easy life. The hours are terrible, the stress is terrible — if you do it right."

In the kitchen on the wall near the ceiling are labels from bottles of wine purchased abroad, as well as some not-so-unique labels from domestic companies.

Stewart Kerr in his bathroom, a room wallpapered with hotel bills and posters of he and his wife's European trips.

eight weeks? "Nothing," he said. No fishing, no work, nothing. But he does a lot of reading and eating, because his wife, to whom he's been married for 20 years, is a gourmet cook. "We sit low in the water with all the food and wine we bring on board," he joked.

About the boat's name, (which means Beware), he said, "When I got my first boat I didn't know what I was doing, so I thought I'd warn people."

Many times he said he'll pull up on shore of some small town in Canada and talk to the locals. "That's always interesting."

But the trip will have to remain on a schedule because later this year they are going to England, a lengthy trip which Kerr will document with his camera, as he has done for many of his trips. He has more than 45,000 slides, categorized and organized from trips he has taken. He expects he will take some 2,000 slides this trip, which he will then edit and organize into a concise record of the trip.

His home shows the memorabilia of his many travels and his bathrooms are some of the most interesting around. In one bathroom the walls are papered with maps of the Great Lakes, and in the other, the walls are papered with hotel bills, posters and other memorabilia of the European trips.

Slides from Kerr's trips go from ceiling to floor in two closets.

The 12 metropolitan Detroit area teachers who won the second annual Newsweek-WDIV Outstanding Teacher Awards gathered recently at Detroit's Hotel St. Regis for a banquet in their honor. Alan Frank, left, vice president and general manager of WDIV-TV, and Christopher M. Little, president of Newsweek, present a mock Newsweek magazine with the recipient on the cover to Frances Bassett, a third-grade teacher at Richard Elementary School.

Besides the magazine covers, the teachers received Waterford crystal apples and $2,000 cash grants. In addition, the teachers are being featured in a vignette campaign honoring them, to be aired on WDIV-TV throughout May and June.

tains more in-depth information than any of the pamphlets we have been passing out."

There will be room for 24 students, but Ulmer said the program can be started with fewer.

"The number of teachers hired will depend on the number of students enrolled in the program," she said. "The legal ratio of teachers to students is 10 to one, but we hope to have a ratio of six or seven to one."

The program will run year-round, and will close only on legal holidays. It will not follow the public school calendar.

"We plan on opening one week before school opens," Ulmer said. "We have found, in checking other programs, that the first week of school is a very hectic week, and parents putting their children into a new program don't have the time to devote to getting them settled in. This way the children will be settled, before their brothers and sisters start school."

Ulmer said she believes strongly in the program she has helped developed, and said there are a lot of advantages in choosing a day care program affiliated with a school district. She said that though the program is fully paid for by the user, its affiliation with the district means there will be resource people and some access to things as audio-visual equipment.

"We can do things other programs can't without a great deal of expense," she said.

Ulmer said she is looking forward to the program starting and added, "There is a lot of excitement in working with kids at this age. They're a lot of fun."

Vote "YES" Monday, June 13. It's Vital!

Tips for Parents

The following 10 tips are for parents who are concerned about teen alcohol use. They're part of a pamphlet, "Preventing Teenage Drinking Problems," and are the result of a 1986 Michigan State University survey of thousands of high school students and their parents.

1. Recognize that your teen is probably doing what most other teens do — attending drinking parties — riding with a drunk driver — consuming more alcohol than you might suspect.
 2. Openly express your concern and disapproval regarding drinking and drugs. Some teenagers may be unaware of their parents' negative attitudes.
 3. Stress your rules clearly and firmly.
 4. Monitor social activities and let your teens know you're checking up on them. Be alert to signs of alcohol consumption when they arrive home.
 5. Spell out consequences for breaking rules and follow through. Grounding and/or withholding car privileges are some punishments that other parents use.
 6. Talk often with other parents and develop contacts which will provide mutual support for enforcing the rules.
 7. Restrict sources of alcohol. Watch the household alcohol supply and remember that you, as parents, are role models for your teens.
 8. Be aware that your teen may host a party or invite friends over when you're out for the evening or away for the weekend. Take precautions to prevent this.
 9. Support the efforts of police and school personnel. Instruct your teenager to obey laws. Cooperate with officials when you're notified of an infraction.
 10. Get involved in a local group combatting teen alcohol problems. SAC² and Safe Homes are two Grosse Pointe organizations that are working to discourage teen alcohol and drug use.

Elizabeth Bertschinger, left, and Louise Lyall celebrate 35 years of friendship and service as American Red Cross volunteers at St. John Hospital.

They serve!

It's rare to find one individual who has volunteered for one organization for 30 years; it's incredible to find two people who have worked together as volunteers for that long.

Louise Lyall and Elizabeth Bertschinger, both of Grosse Pointe, Red Cross volunteers at St. John Hospital since 1958, were honored at a recent volunteer recognition ceremony by the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Things have changed a lot since Lyall and Bertschinger first started volunteering. In the beginning, most of their time was spent in the nursery — cleaning and changing diapers.

"We used to diaper newborn babies, wrap them up and take them to their mothers," Lyall said. "They would then unwrap them and count their toes and fingers."

Now, Lyall and Bertschinger deliver mail to patients in the morning and admit patients and wheel them around the hospital in the afternoon.

They both speak enthusiastically of the rewards of volunteering. "You get such a good feeling when you are helping other people," Bertschinger said. "It gives you an uplift."

"It's probably more helpful to me than it is to the patient," Lyall said. "I like everything about it."

The Red Cross has a variety of challenging volunteer opportunities available for other spirited people like Lyall and Bertschinger. Information on volunteer opportunities for residents of the Grosse Pointes is available from the Red Cross office at 100 Mack Avenue at John R., Detroit, telephone 494-2860.

Electrical safety tips available

If you want to make your home electrically safe, government safety experts will help you do it.

May is National Electrical Safety Month and the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is again offering its free 12-page electrical home safety checklist to consumers. The brochure conducts homeowners and apartment dwellers on a room-by-room inspection of the living quarters so that commonplace electrical hazards may be found and eliminated.

CPSC said a home electrical fire happens every three minutes each day adding up to an estimated 174,000 home electrical fires each year. These fires claim 950 lives and injure 5,500 people.

Consumers may obtain a free copy of the electrical home safety checklist by calling the agency's toll-free hotline at 1-800-638-2772 or by writing Electrical Safety, Washington, D.C. 20207.

Art auction

Children's Center Fine Art Auction committee members, from left, A. Stewart Kerr of Grosse Pointe Woods, Osei Akoto, Arthur Nicoll and Jacqueline Love, look at framed copies of the 18th and 19th century Japanese woodcuts, "Matters of the Moon." The woodcut is just one example of the art to be auctioned tonight, June 9, at 6:30 p.m. in the ballroom of the Hotel St. Regis.

The event is an art auction for the benefit of the Children's Center, Michigan's largest community based provider of mental health and related services for children and their families. Cost is $150 per couple for patrons, $50 for general admission. Patrons will attend a 5:30 p.m. preview, receive a complimentary piece of art and enjoy a light supper and a lecture on art appraisal. General admission guests will enjoy light refreshments before the auction. For more information, call Osei Akoto at 831-5535.

QUIT THE SMOKING HABIT FOR GOOD

Develop a new habit — not smoking! Like any other habit, it takes time and practice to learn. The key to living as a nonsmoker is to avoid letting your urges lead you to smoke.

Urges often take place at predictable times. The trick is to anticipate these times and find ways to cope with them without smoking. Research shows that the most difficult place to resist the urge to smoke is the most familiar: at home. The activities most closely associated with urges are eating, partying, and drinking. And, not surprisingly, most urges occur when a smoker is present.

Here are seven major coping skills to help you fight the urge to smoke.

- List your reasons for quitting. Review it whenever the urge strikes.
- Know when you're rationalizing. Don't talk yourself into smoking again.
- Anticipate those things that give you an urge to smoke and prepare in advance how to avoid them.

- Reward yourself for not smoking. It will remind you of the fact that what you're doing is important.

- Use positive thoughts. Remind yourself of how much you've accomplished and how far you've come.

- Use relaxation techniques to help you cope with urges to smoke. Instead of having a cigarette, take a long deep breath.

- Seek support from family and friends. A buddy system is a great technique.

Finally, when you have an urge to reach for a cigarette reach for the phone instead. Former smokers who want to stay off the habit can get help through the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER. This free, public service provides self-help tips, literature, referrals, and a hand to hold until the urge passes.

REMEMBER TO VOTE MONDAY, JUNE 13th

Paid for by the Committee to Elect Tim Howlett, 1032 Kensington, Grosse Pointe Park, MI 48230

Third World women become new force for conservation

In many developing countries, women often bear the highest costs of environmental problems. Deforestation, for example, causes soil erosion, depletes the supply of firewood, and exposes springs to sunlight, causing the water to evaporate. Since women traditionally raise crops, collect firewood, and carry water, the burden of deforestation thus falls most heavily on them.

Now, according to International Wildlife magazine, women in the Third World are taking matters into their own hands and are scoring some remarkable conservation successes.

In Ghana, a women's group decided to change a system for smoking fish that wasted huge quantities of wood and emitted harmful fumes. The women developed a safer smoker that consumes one-tenth as much wood, and the technology has spread to five West African countries.

In 1974, local women in the Himalayan region of India threw their arms around trees to stop loggers from cutting down an ash forest. The incident sparked a national environmental movement called "Chipko," or "Hug a Tree." In the 1980s, the Chipko women successfully filed suit to shut down limestone mines that were destroying hillsides.

In Jamaica, women have started a non-polluting, solar energy salt-extraction project that brings income to rural women and offers a model solution to the country's dependence on imported salt.

Women have a prominent role in the management of natural resources in Kenya as well as in the rest of Africa. Eighty to 90 percent of African farmers are women. In addition, African women face the daily challenge to provide fuel for their homes' open hearths.

In Kenya, where 90 percent of the indigenous forest has been razed in the last century, the biggest and best-known project that involves women is the Green Belt Movement. Founded in 1977, the project has been responsible for the planting of nearly five million trees. Miniature forests have sprung up on school and church grounds; more than 500 communities have their own tree nurseries; and 25,000 households now have thriving woodlots.

The founder of this vital effort is 47-year-old Wangari Maathai, a biologist and pioneer of both the environmental movement and the struggle for women's rights. The daughter of a farm laborer, she became the first Kenyan woman to earn a Ph.D., and she was acclaimed at the U.N. Decade for Women Conference in 1985 as one of four women with the greatest positive impact on the environment.

Maathai became an environmental activist out of necessity. "When I would visit the village where I was born, I saw whole forests had been cleared for cultivation and timber," she recalls. "People were moving onto hilly slopes and riverbeds and marginal areas that were only bush when I was a child. Springs were drying up. I was shocked to find children suffering from kwa-shiorkor (a form of malnutrition), because my community was supposed to be a rich, coffee-growing area. It was an eye-opener to learn that malnutrition was connected to a lack of fuel. People were eating less of the nutritious foods, like beans and maize, and were opting for refined foods like rice because they require less cooking.

So Maathai founded the Green Belt Movement in 1977, symbolically planting seven trees in Nairobi. At its simplest level, the movement is a tree-planting project. But its long-term goals are more ambitious, everything from making rural populations self-sufficient in fuel wood and reversing desertification to educating people and improving the image of women.

Maathai's most important goal was to raise environmental awareness, and she first needed to interest women in Kenya's villages to plant trees.

"Our bait was firewood," says Lillian Njehu, a local leader in the project. "We told the women that if they plant their own trees, they won't have to walk 16 kilometers for firewood. At first we did a lot of promotion, but now people come to us and say, 'Where are our seedlings?'"

Local women's groups hear about the movement, mostly by word of mouth, and then apply to start a nursery. The Green Belt supplies the equipment and trains and pays an attendant chosen by the women themselves. When the nursery is under way, Green Belt helps distribute trees and educates the women on the best ways to take care of them.

Accountants in demand

Accounting, a traditional "old line" profession, is emerging with new pizzazz as one of the hot job fields of 1988, according to John Crusoe, director of Placement Services at Wayne State University.

Crusoe said that computer use, new tax laws, consulting services, and the restructuring of the American business community have opened new gates of opportunity in the profession.

Crusoe also bases his A rating for the field on the recruiting demands of what he calls the "big eight" public accounting firms in Southeastern Michigan — Arthur Andersen & Co., Arthur Young, Coopers & Lybrand, Deloitte Haskins & Sells, Ernst & Whinney, Peat Marwick Main & Co., Price Waterhouse, and Touche Ross.

Crusoe points out that approximately 50 percent of the interviews conducted on campus for accounting graduates are with the "big eight" firms. And demand for accounting grads has jumped steadily each year, last year by 44 percent. And Crusoe says the future looks even better.

Most surprising, Crusoe said is the interest shown in female accounting graduates during job recruiting. Although 43 percent of WSU 1987 grads were women, an impressive 55 percent landed job offers from the "big eight," he said.

It's noteworthy, he adds, that a growing number of women are entering the accounting profession each year. He believes accounting is in the vanguard of breaking the tradition of male-dominated workplaces, adding, "Women with mathematics skills are especially likely to study accounting and to succeed in landing a job because of seemingly more democratic hiring practices of the major accounting firms."

Crusoe also said that the "big eight" have not compromised standards and are insisting on high grade point averages. The average grade point of students who receive job offers (women and men) was 3.4 (B-plus).

Salaries in the field are rising too, along with increased demand for accounting graduates. Crusoe said a new graduate entering public accounting can expect to earn in excess of $23,000 a year. This represents a 9.3 percent gain over last year.

Working women

Between 1957 and 1987, married women entered the labor market in record numbers and their participation rate more than doubled — to 68 percent, while the rate for single women remained around 80 percent, and that for widowed, divorced or separated women rose to 79 percent, according to the March issue of the Monthly Labor Review, a U.S. Labor Department publication.

Working women

Today, seven of 10 men between 25 and 54 years of age are in the labor force, according to the Monthly Labor Review, a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. This reflects the women's strong attachment to the labor force which has increased dramatically since the end of World War II.

Sew it up

At Brownell Middle School these days, baseball players do more than hit and field. They make their own duffel bags and mend their own uniforms, and when the game is over, they can go home and whip up a winning meal, all because of their Life Skills courses offered by Lynne Mogk. The curriculum is designed to teach students skills needed to live independently and is attended by both boys and girls. Here, Mogk watches as a few of her students, from left, Eric Lindsay, Tim Saitta and Ted Hanawalt, all seventh-graders, demonstrate their sewing skills in Basic Homemaking.

Congressional art competition winners announced

Congressman Dennis Hertel (D-Harper Woods) announced the winners of the 14th Congressional District "Artistic Discovery" art competition for high school students at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House May 7.

A drawing by David Brumm of Lutheran High School East was named the winner and will be displayed later this year in a special national exhibition in a corridor leading to the United States Capitol.

Brumm's drawing was one of more than 80 entries submitted by high school students from the 14th Congressional District as part of the 1988 competition. Second place honors went to Dennis Bagnasco of East Detroit High School. Brumm also took third place with an acrylic painting.

Hertel also offered special thanks to Harry Blatt, owner of Artco Custom Framing of Harper Woods for his complimentary framing of the winning entry. He also thanked Rainy Day Creative World of Grosse Pointe for donating a $75 gift certificate as the first place prize, Macomb Community College for the art display panels and Janush Brothers of Detroit for transportation of the display panels.

All-night grad party planned

The Grosse Pointe South Mother's Club will again sponsor the traditional all-night graduation party at the War Memorial, Wednesday, June 15.

The doors to the non-date, casual-dress celebration will open at 10:30 following the ceremonies for the class of 1988. There will be no admission after 11 p.m.

"This is the Time" is the theme for this year's party. Decorations in the school colors, including balloons, flowers and streamers, will set the scene for the festivities.

This special event, for South's seniors only, will feature continuous entertainment and food to last all night. As in the past years, there will be appearances by a hypnotist, a fortune teller, a disc jockey and a caricaturist as well as casino games and prizes.

The party will conclude with a sunrise service on the banks of Lake St. Clair at approximately 6 a.m. Reservations can be made for members of the class of '88 by sending name, address and a $15 check to Grosse Pointe South High School, 11 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe, Mich. 48230.

Youth dance

The War Memorial will sponsor a School's Out Celebration Party for middle school students, Thursday, June 16, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

All students in grades 6-8, who reside in or attend school in Grosse Pointe, are invited to attend the final youth dance of the 1987-88 school year.

Tickets are $3.75 per person and must be purchased in advance. Students must show school I.D. when purchasing tickets (limit two per person).

Parents who would like to chaperone the dance should call the War Memorial, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Volunteers are urgently needed to keep activities such as youth dances going. Parents will receive a complimentary ticket for their student.

Dominican offers summer program

Dominican High School will offer a six-week summer school program from June 20 to July 29. Courses may be taken to strengthen skills or for enrichment.

Final registration is June 17. For more information, call the school office at 882-8500.

South raises $2,000 for Detroit Zoo

The Environmental Science class at Grosse Pointe South recently contributed more than $2,000 to the Detroit Zoological Society. Students enrolled in this class have been traditionally raising money for the Detroit Zoo for 14 years.

The junior/senior level class is taught by environmental science instructor Greg Heffner, who initiated the program in 1974. Contributions, which were raised from bake sales and bowl-thons, will benefit the Lion House renovation.

"Our students raise the money on their own time, after school. By contributing to the Detroit Zoo, they feel that they are personally playing a part in helping to preserve the animals," Heffner said.

A check was presented to Executive Director Charles Hammond when the class recently visited the zoo. They enjoyed a tractor train tour of the park, highlighted by a stop at the world-class chimpanzee exhibit site where Hammond gave them a brief overview.

The continuing support from the students represents their commitment to helping the animals, Hammond said. "Each year without fail the students of Grosse Pointe South High School raise money for the zoo. There isn't another school group in this area which has been so generous," he added.

The Detroit Zoological Society is a non-profit organization formed to encourage memberships and provide Detroit Zoological Parks with financial support for new exhibits, major renovations educational programs and wildlife purchases.

Golwala is the son of Drs. Raman and Arvinda Golwala of Grosse Pointe.

Student Spotlight

Tim McGahey

Each week in this column, we will focus on the work of a student. It can be a poem, a drawing, a short story, a picture of a scientific experiment or a wood-working project, a book review.

The following was written by Tim McGahey, a seventh-grader at St. Clare of Montefalco School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tim McGahey of Grosse Pointe Farms.

How to Waterski

If you really want to learn how to waterski, you are crazy! (Just kidding, a little writer's humor.) You must have great patience, steady knees, real strong bones and a set of thick guts. The equipment consists of a tow rope, a boat that can go at least 20 miles per hour (or you won't be skiing, you'll be drowning), and a set of skis (long ones if you are more experienced, but if you are reading this you obviously need short ones). Here are a few steps to help you (I hope):

1. Attach skis to your feet (not to your hands), not too loose or when you fall you might break your nose, but, then again, not too tight or you might dislocate a leg or something.

2. For safety's sake put on a safety vest or ski belt that is in your weight limits (not the Jolly Green Giant's or Ernie the Elf's). Wet suits are the most comfortable, but I'm not trying to teach you to scuba dive, although that is what you could be doing, if you do not follow the directions.

3. Now that you are ready, take a leap into the freezing cold water of the lake (you can't ski in a swimming pool) and scream you lungs out! Notice that you cannot swim with skis on your feet. Don't panic; this is normal. The vest will protect you from drowning if it holds your weight. (See rule 2)

4. At about this time you should be adjusting yourself to the shock of the water temperature. Take the tow rope in your hands and get a good grip on the handle (for what's ahead). Make sure your rope is between your legs and the tips of your skis are just out of the water or when you get up you'll spin around in two circles and take a nose dive into the water. OH! By the way, make sure that the rope is firmly attached to the back of the boat or this could be your most embarrassing moment. Have the driver of the boat untie the boat from the dock (this is very important!) and drive the boat slowly out in front of you.

5. Bend your legs slightly at the knees and when you feel ready say "go." "let her rip," "take off," "fly away," "let her happen captain" or some other word you and the driver of the boat have worked out ahead of time. Be careful, because some times when you say "whoa," the driver thinks you said "go," and this can cause great chaos.

6. If you feel yourself rising, tighten your leg muscles; it sometimes helps (but then again maybe not). Did you fall the first time? That's OK. That is the sign of a normal skier and you were not born with skis on your feet. Usually it takes 13 to 15 tries to get up on skis.

7. Try number 82 and you finally are up. Now what do you do? You are out there all alone and all you can hear is the sound of the motor. People are snapping pictures and there are screams of joy that you finally got up. Now what? I hope you did not bring these instructions with you because dampness and paper do not mix and by now you should be very damp.

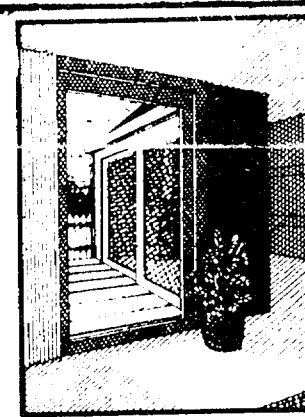

8. Now just stand there, don't move a muscle, enjoy the scenery! Whatever you do, DON'T LOOK DOWN! I think you are going too fast, don't you?

If you think you are going too fast point your thumb down. NO, don't let go with both hands! Wipe out! As I was saying, when you want to go faster you point your thumb up and when you want to slow down point your thumb down. (No these are not finger exercises).

9. Follow steps 1 to 6 and get up again. You're up? Great! Motion for a small circle. (You must be getting tired.) Get ready for the most thrilling part of the ride... letting go. You are coming to the dock. Keep your knees steady and your arms straight. Now slowly shift your weight towards shore. You should feel yourself moving towards and over the curling wake. When you are about 50 feet away from the dock (I hope you are not near-sighted), tighten your leg muscles and let go of the rope. You should glide for a few feet and then fall backwards. SPLASH! You are safe! That wasn't so bad, was it? You are now a full-fledged, true black and blue water skier. Anyone want to try surfing?

This space is open to any student in the Grosse Pointe public or private school system from grades 1 through 12.

Airport X-rays

Summer is finally here and many of you are already planning your vacations. Part of vacation preparation is taking your camera out of winter hibernation, buying film, and getting geared up for those memorable holiday shots.

Well, if getting there by air is on the agenda, stop and ponder this important fact: Airport X-ray screening devices may be hazardous to your film's health.

What a shame it would be to return home with those treasured rolls of vacation pictures only to have had them hopelessly damaged by airport X-rays.

This potential problem has been compounded in recent years by the introduction of super fast films which are far more sensitive to X-ray damage than slower speed films. As you all know, Kodak currently offers Kodacolor 1000 film and will soon introduce T-Max 3200. Konica has a 3200 ASA color print film as does Fuji with 1600 ASA.

To add to the problem, X-rays have a cumulative effect on film: that is, if you're making three or four plane stops, your film is more likely to be harmed by repeated X-raying.

Many travelers, aware of possible X-ray damage, place their film in check-through luggage thinking it will be safe there. Not so! This may be the worst place to store film. Check-through baggage is subject to spot checks with high dosage X-ray units which increase the likelihood of ruined film.

Are there some things you can do to reduce or eliminate the danger of X-rays to your film? Absolutely.

To begin with, you can purchase a lead-lined film pouch. The lining will protect your film from potentially damaging X-rays.

Secondly, and if convenient, have your film processed while on your trip. You'll not only get to see the results of your photographic skills sooner, but airport X-rays can't harm developed film.

Thirdly, exercise your traveler's rights at domestic airports and request that your film bypass the screening units in favor of a visual inspection. By arriving early and being polite, you usually won't have any problems with security personnel.

By taking some simple precautions at the airport, you can be assured that those unforgettable photos will arrive home happy and healthy from a pleasant trip.

Lake Front Park bids accepted

After much discussion and months of setbacks, the bids for site improvements and the playground at Lake Front Park were awarded by the Woods council Monday night.

Foremost Development Corp. will do the site improvements which include construction of a play area with wood tie walls, wood trellis sunshelter, reinforced concrete walks and complete lighting and electrical supplies. The price tag is $74,658.

Most of the work will begin within 30 days after signing the contract. Concrete and sunshelter construction will begin after the pool closes on Labor Day.

The playground equipment bid was awarded to Engan/Tooley & Associates for $13,130.

Although Engan/Tooley was not the low bidder (Jack Golden Associates was, at $10,623), it was the only one to meet or exceed all the specifications required by the city regarding products and safety standards, according to James C. Scott & Assoc., the city's landscape architect consultants who drew up the specifications at council request.

The playground will have a 16-foot spiral slide with a safety canopy, a 10-foot straight slide, five-, six-, and seven-foot decks, swings, posts, a horizontal ladder, a 10-foot climbing pole and rope, 10 eight-foot benches and spring animals.

The bids had to be rejected in March due to apparent discrepancies in what was being bid by the companies.

— Ronald J. Bernas

Choose paver carefully

Homeowners are urged to be especially cautious this time of the year as paving companies, commonly referred to as "gypsy pavers," enter the state for hit-and-run work. They leave the consumer with a driveway that will eventually reveal poor-quality materials and/or poor workmanship, with no recourse. Poor quality is not always evident immediately. Several weeks to several months may pass before problems begin to show.

Gypsy-pavers traditionally have no actual local business address. They sell asphalt paving door-to-door, usually alleging some sort of special deal requiring cash payment.

Their propositions are intended to have special appeal for homeowners who are susceptible to a sales pitch that is offered as a bargain. They have also been known to use the name of a reputable local asphalt supplier in order to win over customer confidence.

Homeowners should be cautious when approached with such offers. If there is any doubt about the reputation of the paving firm, local credit and bank references should be requested. Most importantly, the homeowner should insist on a written contract with a warranty.

For an overview of asphalt paving, and helpful hints, consumers may call the Hot Mix Hot Line 1-800-292-5959, and request the pamphlet titled "Asphalt Driveway Paving and Maintenance — Tips for Homeowners."

Air travel tips brochure available

The Michigan Consumers Council has published a new brochure of interest to consumers who travel by air.

"Air Travel Tips" discusses what air passengers need to know in the age of airline deregulation.

The brochure outlines consumer rights if they are "bumped" from a flight or their luggage is lost.

Specifically detailed are when a passenger is entitled to compensation under federal law if a flight is delayed or cancelled, the amount a consumer can collect if luggage is lost, and who to contact if a non-safety related problem arises with an airline.

The brochure also offers advice on how air passengers can reduce the possibility of travel problems. Consumers are advised to plan to arrive at the airport at least one hour before the scheduled departure time; place proper identification of all luggage on the outside and inside the bags; lock all bags to prevent missing or stolen items, and to carry all valuables, medicine and important documents in a carry-on bag.

Free copies of "Air Travel Tips" are available from the Michigan Consumers Council, 414 Hollister Building, Lansing, Mich. 48933; telephone (517) 373-0947. The hearing impaired may call the Council's TDD number at (517) 373-0701.

Denler & Co. interior designers celebrate golden anniversary

By Peter A. Salinas
Staff Writer

The Hill was just that 50 years ago — a hill.

William H. Denler, an interior designer, has had his shop, William Denler & Co., located in this upscale shopping district in the Farms for 50 years, and he celebrated his golden anniversary with family, longtime associates and invited guests last week.

Denler, a fellow with the American Society of Interior Designers, will mark another milestone later this month by celebrating his 80th birthday.

Starting out with a shop in the Punch and Judy building on June 1, 1938, Denler said the area was mostly open field from Kercheval to Grosse Pointe Boulevard.

He graduated with a degree in architecture from the University of Michigan in 1931, then studied interior design in Munich, Germany and elsewhere in Europe.

He used his degree in architecture by designing several houses, but then felt he could contribute more in the interior design field. He landed a job doing design work for the First National Bank properties.

"I really appreciate the challenges interior design offers," Denler said. "One is always dealing with different people and the various situations they have. I like to make things more attractive and to give people better surroundings in which to live."

Denler and his wife Olga moved to the Farms after their marriage in 1936. Denler was raised in the Palmer Park area of Detroit.

Over the years the couple has traveled extensively to acquire antiques and items for their clients.

"We traveled a lot in Europe," he said, "especially in England, France and Italy."

In any of those three countries, Denler said, one could find antiques at reasonable prices.

"It is not as easy to do today," Denler said. "Things are harder to find."

Not catering at all to trends or fads, Denler said the classic and traditional styles are timeless and will always be in demand. His co-worker, Jack Tarpley, has worked with Denler for more than 30 years and has similar tastes.

"That's a difficult question," said Tarpley when asked what style of furniture he preferred. "I would have to say 18th century French and English."

Denler's reputation among Grosse Pointers spread around the country and literally around the world. His jobs completed here led to jobs at second homes in the deep south, out west and on the east coast. He's taken his skills to the Carribean, Canada and even the West Indies.

He said he likes the Hill, and feels the diversity of shops makes the area all the more unique.

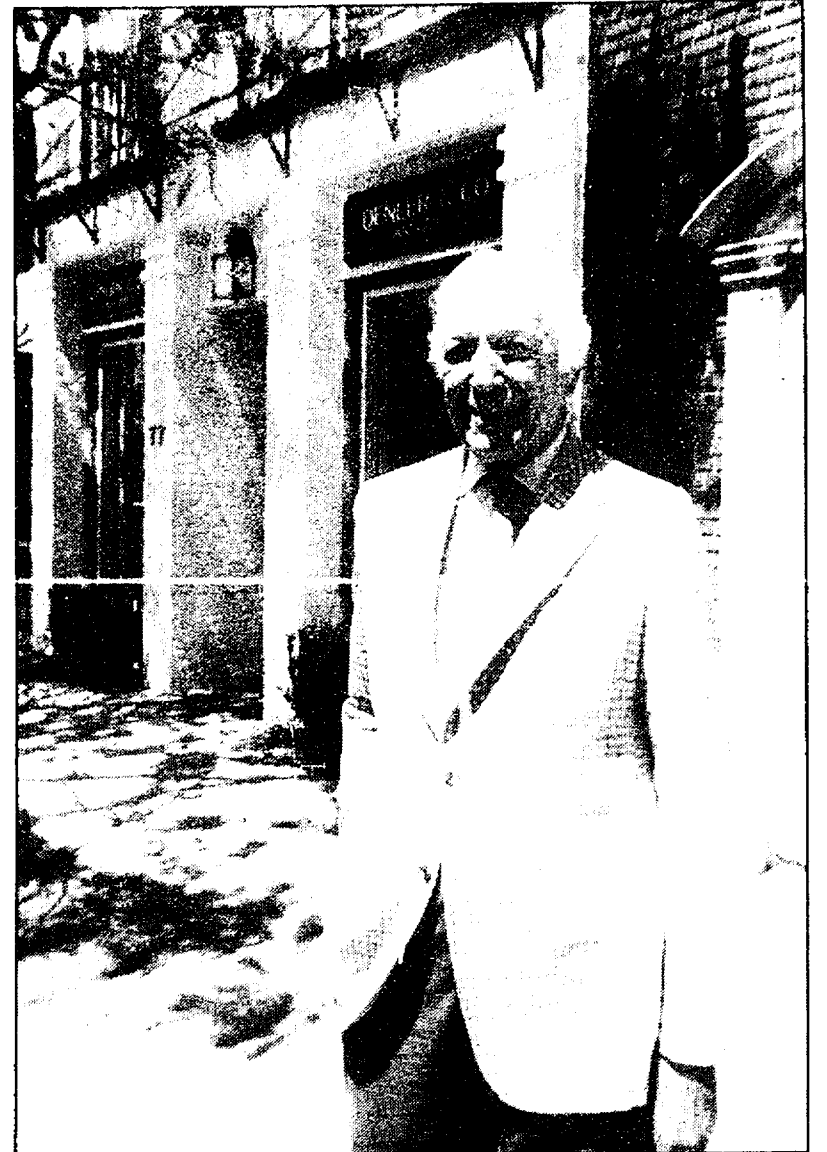

"The Hill is a well-maintained commercial area and is different from other commercial districts because of its location and exclusiveness," Denler noted.

When he moved to his present

William Denler started his interior design business when his was one of the few businesses on the now-bustling Hill shopping area.

location at 77 Kercheval, he had no neighbors. Soon a gift shop called Sign of the Mermaid, located next to his shop, moved in. Soon after Punch and Judy Toyland opened up down the street.

Denler said the Hill developed at a rapid pace until World War II, when new construction came to a halt. He said the real activity began after the war and that by 1950 there were twice as many shops as there were in 1945.

"There has been almost continuous development and changes on the Hill ever since," Denler said. "When I built this building, there was just one floor, then I added the second floor."

Over the years, Denler has been aided by a capable staff, including Jane Mitchell, who has been with Denler for more than 40 years.

Denler's studio has six employees today and all have various expertise in a variety of interior design specialties.

Homearama showcases latest designs, materials

By Pat Paholsky
Editor

Coordinating the efforts of a dozen different builders, each with his or her own architect, interior designer and landscaper, isn't easy. Particularly when they're all putting up houses on the same cul de sac at the same time.

That's what the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan and Chateau Land Development Co. accomplished recently. The result is Homearama. The showcase of new idea homes in Clinton Township runs through June 19.

This is the second time that John Boll, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Chateau Land Development Co., has been involved with Homearama. The company's first experience in the development of Farm Brook in Oakland County a few years ago convinced him to become involved again, this time on the east side.

After meeting the guidelines set by the builders association, Chateau was given the green light. The company installed underground utilities, paved roads, recorded the plats and then pulled the builders together.

"It's quite a commitment for them, too," said Boll, a Grosse Pointe Shores resident.

The Dunham Pointe subdivision is located on Dunham Road, east of Heydenreich Road, south of M-59 and east of Romeo Plank Road.

This is the sixth year for Homearama and the second year it's being held on the east side. The west side Homearama will open June 29 and continue through July 24 in West Bloomfield. It will feature 18 showcase homes ranging from $250,000 to $400,000.

The Dunham Pointe homes are from $125,000 to $250,000 and each incorporates the individual building team's latest ideas in design, construction techniques and materials, interior decoration, landscaping design and energy conservation.

Homearama is open to the public from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Admission is $4 and includes a plan book for all of the homes. Discount coupons, for Monday through Friday, are available at all locations of Detroit Edison and Standard Federal Bank, co-sponsors of this Homearama along with the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

There is free parking. Refreshments are available.

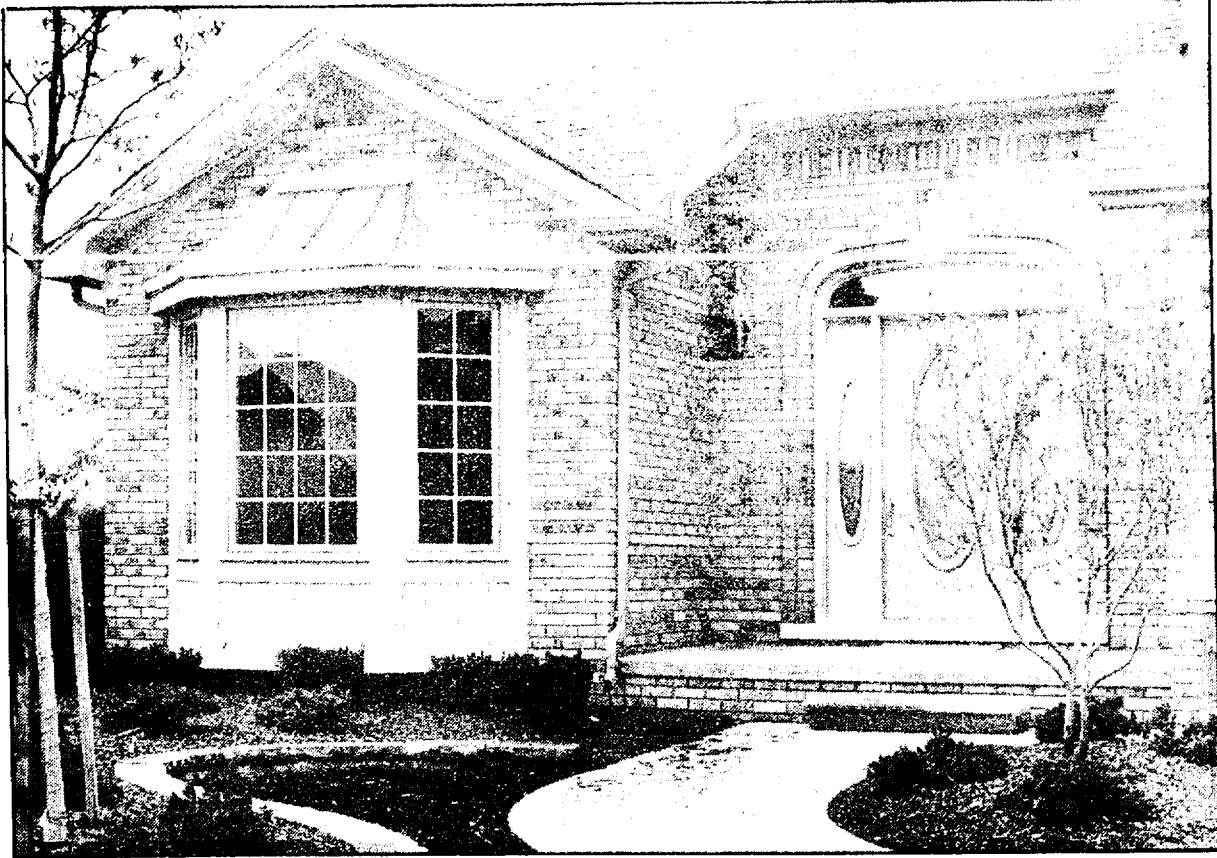

For the first time, the furniture in most of the idea homes will be put up for sale on the last day, June 19.

John Boll

The Dunham Pointe subdivision is part of a 1,000-home community known as Rivergate, which Chateau is developing. To date, 600 homes have been built on the property, Boll said.

Besides developing residential properties, Chateau developed Pointe Industrial Park near Homearama on M-59, a 20-acre property. The company has also built 160 apartment units. Chateau was begun 21 years ago when Boll and his partner, Joe Ministrelli, built their first mobile home community. Since then, the company has built more than 10,000 mobile home sites known as Chateau Estates.

Bay windows are a hot item in new homes, especial idea homes like "The Camille," one of 12 in Homearama in Clinton Township. Homearama continues through June 19.

Don Oliver

Colonial acquires bank

The former Colonial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Grosse Pointe Woods, now Colonial Central Savings Bank, F.S.B., recently acquired the insured savings accounts as well as eight branch facilities of American Federal Savings of Anderson, Ind.

Don Oliver, mortgage administrator at Colonial Central, said, "This acquisition will allow Colonial to provide additional thrift and mortgage services interstate."

Oliver was part of Colonial's transition team of executives appointed by President Mark L.

Mudge. The team worked in concert with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to make the take-over operation run smoothly.

The take-over was supervised by the FSLIC and sanctioned by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Colonial Central is part of the Central Holding Company of Mount Clemens, as is Central Mortgage Corp. with offices in 10 states, and The Keim Group, Ltd., a real estate operation with more than 100 franchises in Michigan, Florida and California.

Chamber luncheon scheduled

The Metro East Chamber of Commerce, which serves the business communities of St. Clair Shores, Roseville, Harper Woods, Fraser and the Grosse Pointes, will meet Tuesday, June 14, at the Barrister House, 21801 Harper, St. Clair Shores. Cocktails (cash bar) are at 11:30 a.m., and luncheon is at noon.

Tickets are $10, and the luncheon is open to the general public.

The speaker will be Dr. Albert L. Lorenzo, president of Macomb Community College. His subject will be "Future Trends: Workers and Workplace." Reservations are necessary and may be made by calling 777-2741.

Gryphon to close Hill gallery

The Gryphon Gallery will be closing its retail shop at 99 Kercheval Avenue in Grosse Pointe Farms.

The "Michigan Artists' Show," which opened June 2 and runs through July 14, will be the last show of the summer. After July 14, the gallery will be open by appointment only for the rest of the summer.

"We've had a very positive response to the art we have shown over the past couple of years," said Cynthia Ruffner, gallery owner. "The opening receptions have been well-attended and we've had favorable reviews from the press. Unfortunately the retail gallery has not made economic sense so far. We have developed good base of clients who we will continue to serve on a private, appointment-only basis. Without the retail operation to take care of, we'll have more time to spend with customers personally and meet their individual interests."

Gryphon plans to operate a small gallery in the Penobscot Building located in downtown Detroit.

Johnson joins War Memorial board

Mark R. Weber, Grosse Pointe War Memorial president, announced the appointment of Wesley R. Johnson to the association's board of directors.

Wesley R. Johnson

A Farms resident, Johnson is president and director of the Economic Club of Detroit. He joins the 16-member volunteer board, headed by chairman John D. Lewis.

Also serving on the board are Charles W. Davis Jr., John D. Durno, Georgiann G. Henritzky, M. Jane Kay, Richard W. Kay, A. Stewart Kerr, Margot W. Kessler, William B. Lafer, Frances B. Mead, Ronald C. Morketter, Frances D. Shelden, Frank J. Sladen Jr., Barbara N. Weiss and John F. Youngblood.

The War Memorial is a non-profit civic, cultural and educational association, established in 1949 as a living memorial to the men and women of the five Grosse Pointes who gave their lives in service to their country. It is located at 32 Lakeshore Road, in the former home of the Russel A. Alger Jr. family.

Honored

The Grosse Pointe Academy was recently honored with a regional award by the Detroit Chapter of the American Institute of Architects for the new Laura Elizabeth Timmis Early School building. Dedicated in 1987, the building was erected through a contribution by the Michael T. Timmis family in memory of their daughter Laura, a former Academy student. The building was designed by the architectural firm of Kirk & Koskela Architects, and is an addition to the original 1887 Early School.

worries more about bringing disease home to their children. Springer said she worries about liability.

"I always worry about liability — always," she said.

It's a justifiable concern. Springer and Kronk are responsible for training all the new nursing hires in an eight-week orientation program.

"We have a big responsibility," she said. "We're saying these people are OK to work in this hospital."

The responsibility can weigh heavily. "I'll wake up in the middle of the night, remembering that I forgot to chart a medication," Kronk said. "I can't go back to sleep till I call in."

Nursing's down sides seem to be balanced by its up sides. Cottage nurses earn less than most — but they stay because they like the friendly atmosphere of a small community hospital. The television image of the nurse as "the airhead assisting the doctor" is balanced by the nationwide drive for more professional requirements.

But sometimes nurses feel that they're taking it from both sides. "Sometimes nurses get dumped on," Kronk said. "Doctors get irate. Families get irate. Nurses should have assertiveness training. There are lots of emotions to deal with."

"One day you'll have families just reaming you up the wall," Springer added. "The next day someone is so nice."

So is all this frustration the reason nurses wake you up in the middle of the night to give you a sleeping pill? Kronk threw his head back and laughed.

"We're trying to be sensitive to that."

Who is a nurse, anyway?

There are several routes to becoming a nurse — enough to confuse the average layman. Adding to the confusion is the fact that there is currently a battle within the ranks over changes intended to lead to greater professionalism.

At present, a one-year vocational program leads to the licensed practical nurse designation. That would be phased out under a bill now being discussed in the state legislature.

The route to the registered nurse certification is more varied. Years ago, many hospitals offered two-year training programs. Locally, only Henry Ford Hospital still offers training.

Community colleges offer a two-year associate's degree with an RN. These students receive more education in principles and theory. Hospital-trained nurses have more clinical experience.

Four-year colleges and universities offer a bachelor of nursing — also an RN.

Under the proposed legislation, the LPNs, the hospital-trained diploma nurses and the associate-degreed nurses would be combined in a new category of technical nurses. Eventually the LPNs would be phased out. Not surprisingly, professional organizations representing these nurses are opposed to the proposal.

Nurses with bachelor's degrees would become "professional nurses" with more supervisory roles. These nurses tend to favor the legislation on the grounds that it would bring more professionalism to their jobs.

Park's pool, bathrooms not up to par, residents say

By Margie Reins Smith
Staff Writer

The city of Grosse Pointe Park received some complaints about the condition of Windmill Pointe Park after the Memorial Day weekend.

"We always get a few complaints at the beginning of the season," said Acting City Manager Dale Krajniak. "It's a matter of catch-up at the beginning of the year. The reason, primarily, is that the staff is made up of students on summer break."

Complaints about bathroom facilities were due to the humidity from the showers. Any dirt that is tracked in, he said, immediately turned to mud. "We're looking into purchasing mats for the floor," Krajniak said.

A staff of 45 serves both city parks, but the complete staff is not available until school is out. Krajniak said only about 30 staff workers were available on Memorial Day weekend.

"Park personnel also spent a lot of time removing sandbags that had been placed between Fox Creek and the tennis courts," he said. "This takes time."

Krajniak said the city received some complaints about the pool. "Prior to Memorial Day weekend, the maple trees dropped more pods than usual. The Tuesday before Memorial Day, these caused the pool's filter system to back up. The pool was cloudy."

The pool water is tested each morning before the pool opens, Krajniak said. "It tested OK. It just was not as clear as usual."

James M. Fisher, M.D., a Grosse Pointe pediatrician, said that too much chlorine may cause a rash in swimmers who are sensitive to chlorine. The rash would show up immediately, he said, and would go away after being washed off with clear water and waiting a day or so.

Fisher said a type of conjunctivitis — a viral infection in the eyes — can also be transmitted in public pools.

Underchlorinated water, he said, may cause all sorts of things such as impetigo or a rash caused by pseudomonas, a bacteria.

"People get this from hot tubs," Fisher said. "There's not much of a chance for (pseudomonas) to survive in a chlorinated pool."

Pavarotti planning

Getting ready for the 'Great One' — It's been a ball for Michigan Opera Theatre staff, volunteers

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

This Saturday, Detroit's Joe Louis Arena will be packed with an excited crowd, which should reach fever pitch by 4 p.m., when their favorite superstar steps into the spotlight in the arena, which until recently has been the home of championship hockey, the Great Gretzky and arena football.

Only this time, fans will have exchanged their "Wave for the Wings Towels" for "High-C Hankies" in honor of the day's special guest: famed tenor Luciano Pavarotti. After more than a year in planning, a date change and two site changes, the Pavarotti in Concert benefit for the Michigan Opera Theatre is just two days away.

"It's 'Lu-lu Land' here," chuckled MOT's director of volunteer activities, Sheila Ingwersen of Grosse Pointe. By Monday, only a few benefit tickets ($500 each, including VIP concert seating, admission to the Opera Ball and dinner with Pavarotti; or $250, for VIP seating and pre-concert cocktails) remained, Ingwersen said.

Most of the concert/Opera Ball details have been taken care of by volunteers and by Monday, most of Ingwersen's volunteer committees had completed their tasks — with some notable exceptions: the drivers who will pick up Pavarotti and his entourage sometime today and the decorations committee, which will swoop down on the Cobo Convention Center's Riverview Ballroom Saturday morning and transform it into "a rather elegant summer evening in Detroit."

A Friday night event in the ballroom necessitates the late start on the decorations. "There's also an arena football game in Joe Louis on Friday, so everyone will be toiling late into the night, I'm sure, getting things ready," Ingwersen said.

But the menu is ready.

Opera Ball attendees will enjoy such sumptuous summer fare as chilled sweet melon and basil soup, cold poached salmon with American caviar and champagne sauce, sliced filet of beef tenderloin with morel mushrooms, a variety of greens and something called "Over the Rainbow," a concoction of layered Bavarian cream and raspberry filling.

Pavarotti is ready.

He's lost 85 pounds, is in fine voice and is even expected to attend the world premiere of his one-man exhibition of 26 paintings, planned for 6 p.m. Friday, June 10, in the Adam Strohm Hall of the Detroit Main Library.

Pavarotti's program is ready.

The concert will include opera arias from Donizetti's "L'Elisir D'Amore, Verdi's "Luisa Miller," Cilea's "L'Arlesiana," Giordano's "Fedora," and Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci," plus a variety of Neopolitan songs.

And — barring any last minute changes in the weather — the wardrobes are ready.

"I've heard that some women are bringing a change of clothes, (one dress for the concert and another for the ball) but I know we won't," Ingwersen said, referring to herself and her staff. "What you've got on when you head downtown at 1:30 Saturday is it."

Despite the enormous task inherent in bringing a major star to town for a one-day performance, Ingwersen said that there have been very few problems along the way.

The original concert date of June 25 was changed to June 11 to accommodate Pavarotti's schedule and along with it, the Opera Ball was re-booked into the Masonic Temple. Then in the last three weeks, Cobo's Riverview Ballroom was again available and plans were made to switch the reception there.

"Actually, we've accomplished it with a few meetings and a lot of help from the Ford Motor Company's special projects department. They've been working very closely with us and having people like them, whose expertise is in moving 700 people from one place to the other the way we will Saturday, has been just wonderful," Ingwersen said.

Concert-goers who will attend the Opera Ball will be bused from Joe Louis Arena to the ballroom. "I'm glad the Ford people helped us on that one. If I'd had to do it myself and we were still at the Masonic Temple, I had planned on having the 17 buses load up one at a time and head straight down Cass.

"The Ford guy looked at me and told me that one bus just makes it through every light on Cass. It would have taken all night that way. Thank heavens we had people who do these things all the time," Ingwersen said.

What Ingwersen doesn't get to do all the time is get ready for and attend a Pavarotti concert. "It's been a lot of fun and very exciting, despite the hustle and bustle.

"But no, I won't be able to stop and listen to 'The Pav.' The staff will be busy with other things . . . hovering behind the potted palms back stage, making sure all goes well."

The "Great One" — tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

Tales of old trees and new . . . and summer blooms on view

By Ellen Probert
Special Writer

Taxus are beautiful evergreen trees and shrubs that are native to North America, Europe and Asia. They are better known to most of us as members of the Yew family. The name yew comes from Latin.

There are many varieties, all very ornamental, and most of them easy to grow and maintain. Yews are among the finest evergreens for landscaping use, partly because they are very slow-growing, sometimes taking 25 to 30 years to attain a height of three feet, definitely not to be used if you are in a hurry for a high hedge, but invaluable for a formal maze or geometrical garden.

The Franz Nursery in Napoleon, Ohio, recently sent an eight-year-old yew of new variety to the Grosse Pointe Garden Center, which has presented it to the Grosse Pointe War Memorial. It has been planted in the loggia. Approved by the United States Patent Office and duly numbered, this new strain of evergreen, officially listed as "Taxus X Media 'Gwen,'" has blue-green pine-needle foliage. It is an attractive, compact, globe-shaped little tree.

Yew trees have a very long life span: there are trees in England which are known to be more than 1,000 years old. Perhaps because they can become so on Belle Isle has opened its summer display of lovely blooms. Maintaining its six-shows-a-year schedule keeps the horticultural staff busy, but the changing seasons invariably are marked, year after year, with memorable will present its annual membership event, this year a lecture at 10:30 a.m. by Marilyn Hempstead of Fox Hill Farm to be followed by a luncheon. It is too late for reservations to attend this part of the event, but if you plan to arrive after 1:30 p.m. you can attend the last hour of the mini-fair and see and buy herbal treasures of all kinds. These include potpourris, wreaths, baskets, foods and fresh herbs, as well as garden accessories and decorations, silk flowers and much more.

Still on the subject of herbs, if you are ever in St. Louis, you might visit the famous Herb Garden for the Blind. Sighted or not, you will find it a memorable experience. All the plants have Braille labels. Visitors are encouraged to touch and to pick sprigs from the plants, and everything is planned for texture and scent, with color only incidental.

When we think of rice we usually think of the Oriental countries and when we think of the Indians of Michigan in early days we think of corn as their staple food. Oddly enough the two thoughts can easily merge. Some historians writing about the Indians in Michigan in the years 1670 to 1700 commented on the almost Oriental appearance of some of the people they saw. They went on to mention, as part of a long list of the food supplies of the Indians of this region: fish, wild game, native fruits, berries, and nuts, and the cultivation of maize, or corn, and other crops, the large wild rice fields which were among the tribal assets of the Algonquins in particular, as well as some of the Chippewas and Ottawas. Very often the possession of wild rice fields was one of the causes of wars between the Indian nations.

Wild rice gathering is still a large industry for Michigan Indians. The next time you buy rice at the supermarket look at the packages of wild rice for the tribal identification on the package.

In the old English Flower calendar the flower for the month of June is the honeysuckle. In China, the flower for June is the blossom of the pomegranate, which is the symbol of progeny, posterity and genealogy. And in Japan is marked by the special blooms of the peony.

The Gardener's Shed

venerable they were much revered by the ancient Druids and were also known in Elizabethan England as Witch's Trees. In the Victorian era yews were often planted in cemeteries and were symbols of death, grief and sorrow, along with the weeping willow. But it is intriguing to realize that in the Celtic countries the yew symbolizes faith and resurrection rather than death and grief, the opposite side of the coin, as it were.

During the warm summer months the Conservatory is shaded and provides a cool, moist setting for many varieties of fuchsias, caladiums, gloxinias, coleus and a great number of foliage plants. It's a wonderful place to go to escape from hot city streets.

The dahlia display in the outdoor gardens is also a noteworthy show at this time of the year.

French Festival is coming

Magicians, acrobats, historic re-enactments and French food will be part of the 16th Annual French Festival of Detroit, Saturday and Sunday, July 16 and 17, at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

New this year are classic costumes and cultural activities which reflect the festival's 18th century theme. Highlights include Compagnie de la Marine, which coordinates groups re-enacting an 18th century camp.

"The French people and French culture have been very important to the history of Detroit," said Warren S. Wilkinson, president of the French Festival of Detroit. "We believe that this year's blending of theme, food and fun will be entertaining and informative. The festival should be more than booths, food, song and dance. Activities that we have added will be well-rounded family fun."

The French Festival of Detroit is a non-profit organization dedicated to recognizing and preserving the French heritage in Detroit. Its activities have included the replacing of Lafayette's bust; major donations to the Detroit Historical Museum for its French Period exhibit of Old Detroit; French room for Wayne State University and sponsoring local school students on educational trips to France.

For more information, contact the Grosse Pointe War Memorial, 881-7511.

Art on the Pointe celebrates its fifth, NEGC's 25th

It's Art on the Pointe time again and this weekend, there'll be a double celebration, marking the fifth annual Art on the Pointe and the 25th year that Northeast Guidance Center has provided its services to the east area.

Art on the Pointe visitors can stroll the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12, enjoying the popular juried art fair which features over 150 artists, delicious food and refreshments, music and magic . . . for the benefit of community mental health.

The grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House at 1100 Lakeshore are a backdrop for artists who offer their designs for sale, or just for perusing Art on the Pointe. Colorful booths will display oil and watercolor paintings, pottery, unusual jewelry, etchings, sculpture, fiber art and more.

Fair hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. Admission is $1. Parking is across from the gatehouse. Tours of the Ford House (for an additional fee) are available.

For more information, call 824-8000.

Art on the Pointe is a project of the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center. The Assistance League is a group of willing volunteers who believe that the worth of a community can be measured by how it treats those who are in need and that good mental health care is vital to a healthy environment.

The center serves the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and northeastern Detroit through its outpatient building on Harvard and East Warren, the new Lakepointe Center on the I-94 service drive between Allard and Vernier, the administration offices on East Warren at Lakeview and the Community Support Program at Charlevoix at Chalmers.

The NEGC offers counseling and therapy, support groups, treatment for drugs and alcohol abuse, adjustment after mental illness hospitalization, special services to children and adolescents, to adults and to seniors. It is accredited by the Joint Commission of Healthcare Organizations.

The NEGC sponsors Snyders Memorial Series, in conjunction with the St. Joseph's Home on Cadieux Road, a program for seniors and their families features the discussion of relationships and interaction with aging parents and relatives.

The FAST project, Families and Schools Together, works on the problem of frequent tardiness from school. And the Community Support Program provides help to those emerging from hospital psychiatric care. Designed to help clients function in a normal lifestyle, the staff of social workers, psychologists, therapists and nurses help patients resume activities of daily living.

The NEGC emphasizes the need for prevention. Difficulties on the job, coping with personal loss, depression, adjusting to a major change can all be reasons to look for guidance before there is a major problem.

The NEGC is supported through fees for services, charitable donations, a contract with the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board and through fundraisers such as Art on the Pointe.

Which makes this weekend's celebration all the more special.

A champagne evening:

Congressman Dennis Hertel will be the guest of honor at a "Champagne Evening" hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gardella of Grosse Pointe Shores from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 10, at their home.

The event is a fundraiser to aid Hertel in his 1988 re-election campaign. Admission is by ticket only ($100 per person). For more information, call 882-9296.

Evening in Paris:

Grosse Pointe Park residents Karen and John Schultes hosted "An Evening in Paris" party for more than 100 guests in the Detroit Historical Museum May 24.

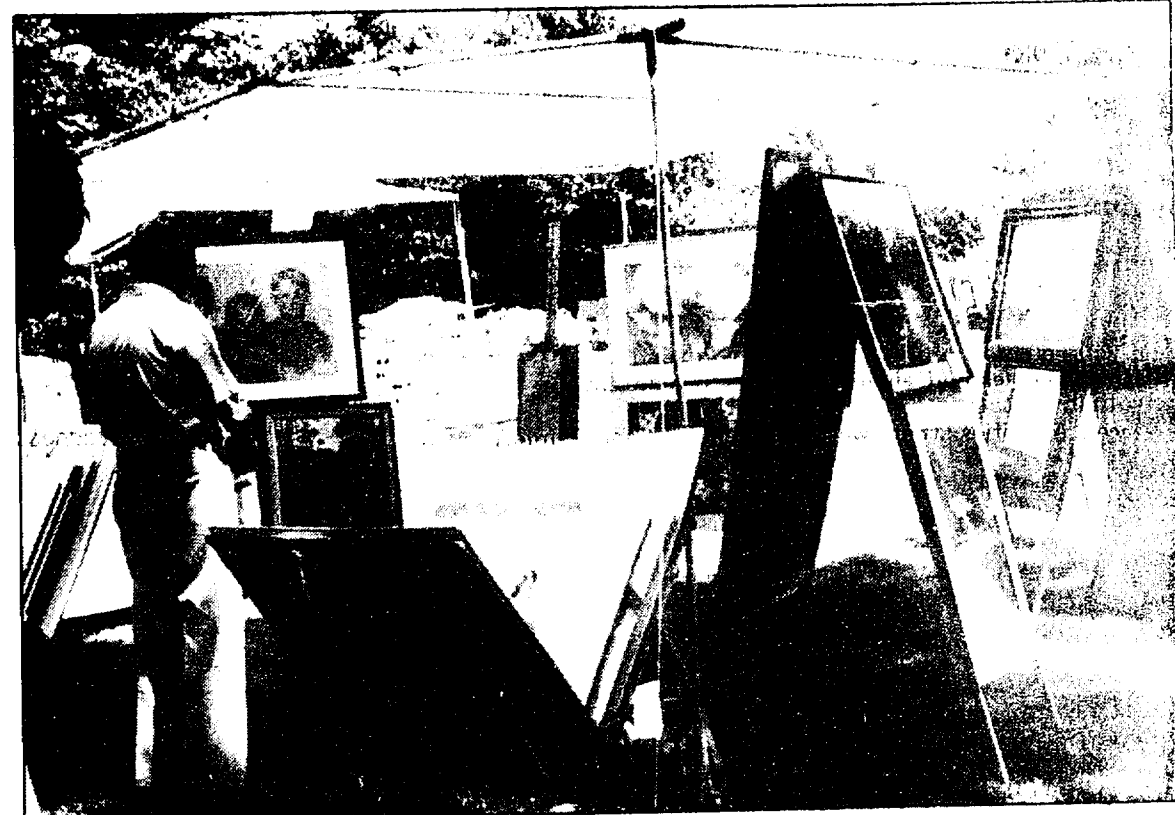

The event was held in honor of Michigan Opera Theatre's production of Puccini's romantic "La Boheme," which ran May 28 and June 1 and 4 at the Masonic Temple.

For the evening, the old streets of Detroit beneath the museum's main floor were decorated in the colorful style of Paris in the 1840s, replete with Moulin Rouge dancers and casino, street mimes and vendors, painters, caricaturists and fortune tellers. Harpist Onita Saunders also entertained.

With 150 artists, Art on the Pointe - set for this Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12 - definitely offers something for everyone, from woodworking items (left) to the oils and pastels of Grosse Pointe artist Bette Prudden (below). Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; admission is $1. Art on the Pointe - at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House - is sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center.

John and Karen Schultes of Grosse Pointe Park at their recent "Evening in Paris" party.

Regina senior wins Art on Pointe poster contest

Regina High School senior Angela Glinski has won first place in the Art on the Pointe poster contest.

Glinski, 17, of East Detroit, designed her poster in this first competition sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center for its fifth annual art show. She was among 25 local students who submitted entries.

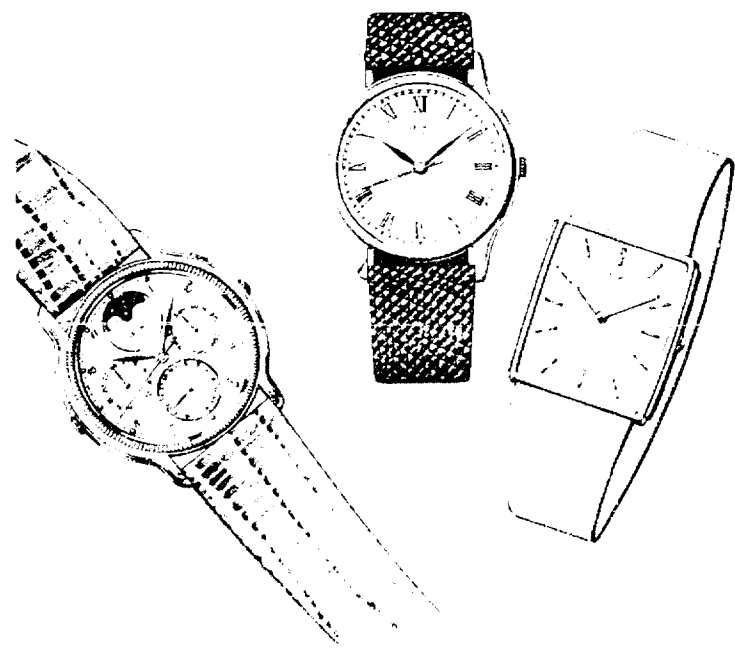

Glinski's poster, comprised of a mountain set in a triangle with a sun behind the point giving a silhouette effect, will be reproduced and sold at Art on the Pointe. Art on the Pointe is set for Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12, on the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House.

Benefit for Cass Tech is tonight

A theater party for the new Lily Tomlin movie "Big Business," will kick off a major fundraising effort to renovate 80-year-old Cass Tech High School's auditorium. The 1,700-seat AMC Americana 8 Theater in Southfield will be reserved for Cass Tech students, alumni, faculty, parents and friends on Monday, June 13, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $10 for donors, $25 for patrons and $100 for angels. Checks should be made payable to Cass Tech AR Fund and mailed to Cass Tech, 2421 Second Avenue, Detroit, 48201.

Art on the Pointe celebrates its fifth, NEGC's 25th

It's Art on the Pointe time again and this weekend, there'll be a double celebration, marking the fifth annual Art on the Pointe and the 25th year that Northeast Guidance Center has provided its services to the east area.

Art on the Pointe visitors can stroll the grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12, enjoying the popular juried art fair which features over 150 artists, delicious food and refreshments, music and magic . . . for the benefit of community mental health.

The grounds of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House at 1100 Lakeshore are a backdrop for artists who offer their designs for sale, or just for perusing Art on the Pointe. Colorful booths will display oil and watercolor paintings, pottery, unusual jewelry, etchings, sculpture, fiber art and more.

Fair hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. Admission is $1. Parking is across from the gatehouse. Tours of the Ford House (for an additional fee) are available.

For more information, call 824-8000.

Art on the Pointe is a project of the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center. The Assistance League is a group of willing volunteers who believe that the worth of a community can be measured by how it treats those who are in need and that good mental health care is vital to a healthy environment.

The center serves the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods and northeastern Detroit through its outpatient building on Harvard and East Warren, the new Lakepointe Center on the I-94 service drive between Allard and Vernier, the administration offices on East Warren at Lakeview and the Community Support Program at Charlevoix at Chalmers.

The NEGC offers counseling and therapy, support groups, treatment for drugs and alcohol abuse, adjustment after mental illness hospitalization, special services to children and adolescents, to adults and to seniors. It is accredited by the Joint Commission of Healthcare Organizations.

The NEGC sponsors Snyder's Memorial Series, in conjunction with the St. Joseph's Home on Cadieux Road, a program for seniors and their families features the discussion of relationships and interaction with aging parents and relatives.

The FAST project, Families and Schools Together, works on the problem of frequent tardiness from school. And the Community Support Program provides help to those emerging from hospital psychiatric care. Designed to help clients function in a normal lifestyle, the staff of social workers, psychologists, therapists and nurses help patients resume activities of daily living.

The NEGC emphasizes the need for prevention. Difficulties on the job, coping with personal loss, depression, adjusting to a major change can all be reasons to look for guidance before there is a major problem.

The NEGC is supported through fees for services, charitable donations, a contract with the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board and through fundraisers such as Art on the Pointe.

Which makes this weekend's celebration all the more special.

A champagne evening:

Congressman Dennis Hertel will be the guest of honor at a "Champagne Evening" hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gardella of Grosse Pointe Shores from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 10, at their home.

The event is a fundraiser to aid Hertel in his 1988 re-election campaign. Admission is by ticket only ($100 per person). For more information, call 882-9296.

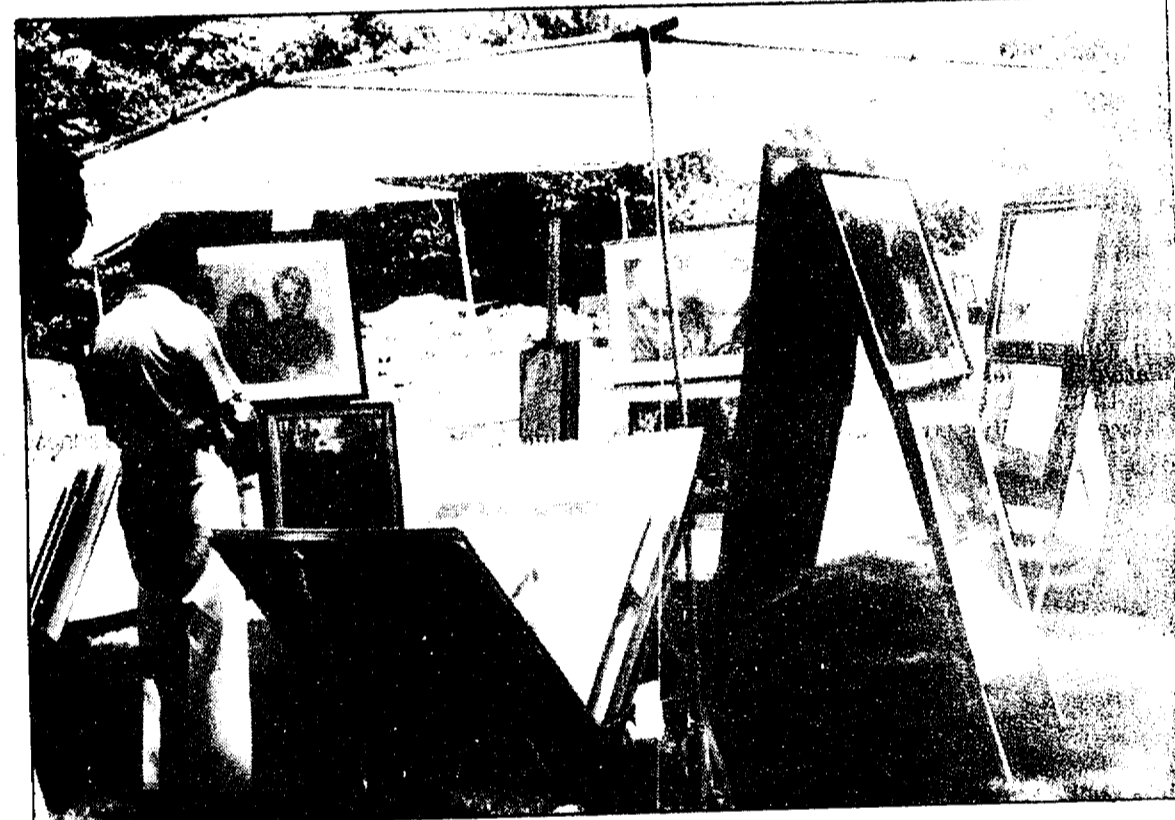

Evening in Paris:

Grosse Pointe Park residents Karen and John Schultes hosted "An Evening in Paris" party for more than 100 guests in the Detroit Historical Museum May 24.

The event was held in honor of Michigan Opera Theatre's production of Puccini's romantic "La Boheme," which ran May 28 and June 1 and 4 at the Masonic Temple.

For the evening, the old streets of Detroit beneath the museum's main floor were decorated in the colorful style of Paris in the 1840s, replete with Moulin Rouge dancers and casino, street mimes and vendors, painters, caricaturists and fortune tellers. Harpist Onita Saunders also entertained.

With 150 artists, Art on the Pointe — set for this Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12 — definitely offers something for everyone, from woodworking items (left) to the oils and pastels of Grosse Pointe artist Bette Prudden (below). Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; admission is $1. Art on the Pointe — at the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House — is sponsored by the Assistance League to the Northeast Guidance Center.

The Pastor's Corner

In search of self

By The Rev. Tom Schomaker
Jefferson Avenue United Methodist

The late actor Peter Sellers once appeared on "The Muppet Show." Kermit the Frog suggested the actor just "relax and be yourself." Sellers replied: "I could never be myself... you see, there is no me. I do not exist."

In "Parables, Etc.," James Hewitt reminds us that Time Magazine reaffirmed Sellers' admission. "The real Peter Sellers is virtually a cipher... the accumulation of all the roles he's played and all the people he's met."

Undoubtedly, Sellers sought his own identity. Responding to the question "Who am I?" is a life-long endeavor for the human species. All of us pick up signals at least as early as birth to answer the question. We ask others' impressions and inner messages to put together our self-identity. Most of us eventually settle into an acceptable understanding of ourselves and our worth, but find cause to reassess at various crossroads of our life journeys.

Thomas Merton tells us "... the problem of sanctity and salvation is in fact the problem of finding out who I am and of discovering my true self." That drives us back to self-discovery.

Another approach was expressed by the young person who exclaimed: "I could know myself better if there weren't so many of me." That ever-elusive self compounds the difficulties of discovery.

Less helpful to themselves are those who do not ask questions, for fear there are no answers. We hear the story of those who seldom make housecalls on themselves for fear they will find nobody home.

Even the serenity of others is little consolation. Instead of inspiring us, our friends who seem secure often leave us threatened. That which might calm us, agitates us within.

The "who am I?" question is best answered by moving away from it. One step removed but closer to home is the question, "Whose am I?" This gives a personal point of reference.

As Dietrich Bohnhoeffer was awaiting execution in a Nazi prison camp near the end of World War II, he was troubled by the question of self-identity. Other prisoners saw him behave calmly, in control, as though life was his to command. Guards gave him respect other prisoners could not

Answering the call

Making final vows was natural step for Bon Secours Nursing Center's associate administrator

By Peggy O'Connor Andrzejczyk
Assistant Editor/Feature Editor

There was no great bolt of lightning, no sacred voices singing in the background when Sister Patricia Ann Dowling decided to become a member of the Sisters of Bon Secours. It just doesn't work that way, Sister Patricia says.

"It was more a gradual thing. To me it was a call to answer, just as we are all called to the single life or marriage. And I just didn't wake up one day and decide to be a nun."

What she did was finish her undergraduate studies in hotel, restaurant and travel administration at the University of Massachusetts. She worked for a while in the hotel and restaurant business and at the same time, got involved in the activities of her local church.

"I started to think about what I wanted to do with my life and what a vocation would mean to me. I wondered how I could utilize my talents in the church."

When she gradually became aware of the importance a religious vocation had for her, Sister Patricia went to her father's cousin, a member of the Holy Child religious community.

"I was fortunate that there was someone I could ask questions and begin to discern what God was calling me to. Through her, I began to inquire how to search out different orders and congregations which would be right for me," Sister Patricia recalls.

One of those was the order of the Sisters of Bon Secours. "I became familiar with their work in health care. Bon Secours drew me with its whole sense of warmth. It has a down-to-earth sense about itself and I like that."

Sister Patricia felt that she could employ her management background in the Sisters of Bon Secours' health care system. And more importantly, she realized that she could "give myself in service to Bon Secours as a sister."

At that point, there was still a long road ahead of Patricia Ann Dowling, candidate for the sisterhood. Following the initial application to the Sisters of Bon Secours, the formal process includes a candidacy of six months to two years, a two-year novitiate, first vows and then final vows, which are made some three to nine years later.

"I decided to remain in my candidacy for two years to see if I fit into the lifestyle. After that came my novitiate, the first year of which is intense study of a whole gamut of topics and the time to reflect on them. In the second year, we lived in the community, integrating what we had learned with the experiences of life."

That portion of the formation process is what Sister Patricia had been waiting for — that, and the time after she made her first vows and was able to work full time in the ministry.

"It's a phase in which you integrate your life of prayer with your ministry to the point where you are living out the call you have. For me, it was a chance to continue the healing ministry of Jesus and the work of the Sisters of Bon Secours," Sister Patricia says.

In 1985, she received her master's degree in health service administration from George Washington University. That was shortly after she had arrived in Michigan to help open the Bon Secours Nursing Care Center. She has served as associate administrator of the facility since then.

"About a year and a half ago, I got to the point where I decided there was a sense of rightness about what I was doing. I

Metro Health Foundation makes grants to area organizations

The Metro Health Foundation (MHF) has awarded its first series of grants to nine Metropolitan Detroit area organizations. The monies, totalling $187,978, will be used to help community agencies provide additional health care.

Founded in 1986, the private Foundation is headquartered in Detroit but makes grants to agencies throughout Michigan. The grants awarded were:

- Casa Maria Family Services, Detroit, $50,000 for health care to minorities, especially Hispanic whose language and cultural barriers impeded them from receiving appropriate care.

- Catholic Social Services of Macomb County, $25,000 for a one-year comprehensive, outpatient, family alcoholism treatment program.

- Catholic Social Services of Wayne County, $25,000 for a program assisting single young parents.
- Children's Aid Society of Wayne County, $10,050 for updating its preventive medical program.
- Crossroads, Detroit, $10,000 for therapeutic prescription drugs and supplies.
- Eastwood clinics, based in Detroit, $9,000 for the partial purchase of a van to transport clients in its substance abuse and mental health programs.
- Family Life Education Council (FLEC), Grosse Pointe, Harper Woods and Detroit, $20,000 for a clinic providing testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases, pregnancy testing and counseling, and birth control information and counseling.
- Planned Parenthood League, Inc., Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties, $28,928 for an educational and motivational program aimed at young men.
- United Community Services of Metropolitan Detroit, $10,000 for emergency medication in its Tribute Fund program.
- Coalition on Temporary Shelter, Detroit, $26,500 for a lift-equipped van to transport physically handicapped and other homeless guests at COTS to health agencies and other support services.

- Foundation for Exceptional Children, Grosse Pointe, $10,000 to expand its therapy program.
- Michigan Lupus Foundation, St. Clair Shores, $20,000 for a variety of educational programs and services for both patients and their families.

Other board members are: Southfield resident Doris M. Fell, executive director of Friendship House in Hamtramck; Bloomfield Hills resident Paul Jannott, senior vice president, Bank of Commerce; Farmington Hills resident Richard Justice, Electronic Data Systems Corp.

MHF's net income annually is $400,000, derived from assets of $6 million. The original source of monies for the Foundation came from Group Health Plan, a non-profit HMO before it merged with United Health Service, headquartered in Oakland Co.

MHF board members from De-demand. He saw himself differently — "Restless and longing, sick, like a bird in a cage, struggling for breath." Bonhoeffer's discovery offers us all a gift. "Who am I?" he wrote. "They mock me, these lonely questions of mine. Whoever I am, thou knowest, O God, I am thine." Personal self-discovery is less threatening and less anxious if it rests in the awareness that before all, we belong to God. It is God's world we share. That reference place also gives us a fresh way of making our decisions about ourselves, world peace, social justice, our money and our time. We best know ourselves by taking a step back and discovering where we are and why.

knew that I could commit myself to the lifestyle of a religious and do so knowing it would be a life-long commitment.

"It wasn't like being knocked off a horse like St. Paul," Sister Patricia says, smiling. "It was just a sense of rightness, of knowing that I could continue to grow as a person. To me, that's the critical part of any choice in life."

Sister Patricia describes the day she made her final vows as one of mixed emotions.

"I was nervous and excited. My family was there, as were the friends I had developed over the years. It was a day of great anticipation."

She made her final vows on May 21. Sister Patricia's family participated in the liturgy; her father was one of three witnesses who gave statements on her behalf. "I had asked two sisters and my father — people who had known me through 11 years of seeking my vocation — to serve as my witnesses. They spoke about the growth and commitment I had made in pursuing the religious life."

"It was a very special moment. I think it took a lot for my father to say, 'Yes, my daughter is a woman who feels strongly enough to commit herself to the religious life and I feel she has made a good decision.' I was very proud of my father."

Sister Patricia expressed her commitment to the philosophy and mission of the Sisters of Bon Secours and professed vows of obedience, poverty and celibacy. She received a ring and a cross symbolizing community membership.

Sister Patricia looks at her newly-made commitment as not being much different from a marriage.

"It is a marriage, of sorts. When you are married you have good and bad days and hardship and good times to go through, just as I do as a religious. In a marriage, it takes trust and faith in the other person. In the religious life, it takes just as much trust and faith."

Religious life for Sister Patricia includes her ministry through the Bon Secours Nursing Center. She has a variety of duties, among them the responsibility for assuring quality of services and maintenance of the building.

"Sure, it's a lot like running a hotel," Sister Patricia says. "When you manage a hotel, you are concerned over the comfort of the guests. That's our priority here, too. Our concern is the resident and what we have to do to provide the maximum of care and comfort."

"It's difficult to do these days, because of the limited level of reimbursement from the state.

Also, we are seeing a more frail older adult who requires more medical care."

It adds up to a fine job of juggling for Sister Patricia and her associate administrators, but one to which she looks forward, she says.

"Part of our mission here is also to carry our spiritual goals. And that is important to me. I have found what I was looking for. This is the answer to a call."

Friendship Tea

Gathering in the Pointe last week to discuss final plans for the Detroit Review Club's annual Friendship Tea were, from left, past president and program chairman Betty Gerisch of Bloomfield Hills, retiring president Blanche Keigen of Grosse Pointe, past president Inez Mullaney of Grosse Pointe and incoming president Mary Lee Balmer of Birmingham.

The Friendship Tea will be held Tuesday, June 14, at the Echo Lake home of Dr. and Mrs. Morris Lipnik. Mrs. Keigen was DRC president in 1978-80 and again in 1986-88. She and new president Mrs. Balmer will be official hostesses at the tea.

The DRC will celebrate its 97th year in November. It was founded on Nov. 30, 1891. Anna Dodge was an honorary member for many years and Delphine Dodge Ashbaugh served as president from 1908-1910. She became president of the Detroit Federation and was a charter member of the General Federation.

Deeplands Garden Club

The Deeplands Garden Club will meet at the home of Fern Reid at noon Monday, June 13. Each member is requested to bring a picnic dish to serve four. Following the election of officers, ideas will be exchanged and plans made for next year's programs.

Five Pointes Garden Club

The Five Pointes Garden Club will meet on Monday, June 20, at 10:45 a.m. at St. Michael Episcopal Church in Grosse Pointe Woods. Members will car pool to the Edison Inn for the year's final luncheon meeting.

Another season comes to an end

The grades are in, the books are being returned and the lockers are now empty. The sports uniforms are being washed and stored, and the players are looking back on seasons that were successful, disappointing, or mediocre.

With the conclusion of school comes the conclusion of prep sports. It's a sad time for many as they say their goodbyes to their favorite coach, teammate or water boy. It's a thought of finishing school, but it's also a difficult time to say Sayonara to friends, the school and the fields.

When I graduated from high school the last thing I did was go back to the baseball field and stand at second base and fondly recall the memories that crossed home plate, touched first base and of course, went through my legs. It was something I needed to do because those are the fondest memories I have.

With another year concluded, the record books say it all, but I'd like to recall some of the most memorable moments of sports that occurred at North, South and University Liggett School during the past school year.

- The girls' tennis team at ULS celebrated its eighth straight state tennis title.
- South's football team advanced to round two of the state playoffs; the furthest any Blue Devil football team has gone in the playoffs.
- North's wrestling team had three members advance to the state finals. They were: John Shefferly, William Lewis headed to University of Chicago's wrestling program) and Dave Van Dale.
- North's girls' basketball team won its first district title with a 41-28 win over Lake Shore. Mary Lex had 10 second-half points and Heather Mergos poured in 15 for North.
- ULS' girls' hockey team became the first girls' team in the state to offer varsity ice hockey.
- North's hockey team was nipped by Trenton (5-3) in the regionals despite leading by two goals in the third period. At the end of the season, Link Bessert, Bob Poulos and Wayne Houle were named to the All-State team.
- South's Bill Huntington and ULS' Steve Stoyka also were named to the All-State hockey team.
- South's baseball team tied for the Eastern Michigan League title; a second straight league championship.
- North's Bob Straske is an All-State cross country runner.
- North's Marc deManigold, Van Dale and Karl Schultz help the Norsemen to a White Division football championship and later sign to play collegiate football at Notre Dame, Western Michigan and Holy Cross.
- In track, South's girls' team falls 1/2 point shy of winning a regional title, but they win an unprecedented third straight league crown.
- ULS' John Yancey, headed for the University of Kentucky on a tennis scholarship, and Dawn Martin are named Prince All-American tennis players.

Zysk retires from tennis, teaching after 29 years

By Rob Fulton
 Sports Editor

One wouldn't expect a 51-year-old teacher to pack his bags and head for a 140-acre farm filled with Christmas trees, but it's too late to change the mind of Don Zysk.

Zysk, whose retirement from South's tennis courts and classroom is effective June 30, will now have time to savor some of life's finer things as he heads into a new occupation — retirement.

"I've got plenty of things to keep me busy," he said. "Having that farm in Lake City certainly gives me something else to do besides the daily things."

Zysk was the first varsity tennis coach at South when the program was born in 1960, and has taught economics and government for more than 29 years.

"It's been a long time," he said, "but teaching and coaching has done a great deal for me."

Admittedly, Zysk will miss the classroom, the kids and the athletes, but primarily, he'll long for his peers.

"It's the building and everything that goes with it," said Zysk. "I've taught with these people for over 20 years and since we're moving we won't see some of them as often. That, I will miss greatly."

Zysk, and his wife Carolyn, will relocate to Lake City, Mich., but during the long winter months, they'll hit the sand and surf in the Sunshine State.

"During the cold months, we'll head to Florida," he said smiling. "This year we bought a home down there close to the water so that will help my fishing."

An avid fisherman, golfer, gardener and of course, tennis buff, Zysk is not the type of person who will sleep the day away.

"I love the outdoors," he said. "I'll be able to spend more time with my wife and that will be nice. It's accurate to say we (Carolyn and I) do a lot together because we both enjoy most of the same things."

For 29 years the Zysks have shared more than rods and reels. They've shared re-warmed meals, rainy days on the tennis courts and long hours separated from one another.

"I have to sympathize with any wife of a coach," Zysk said. "Rarely do coaches get home before 6, 7, or 8 o'clock at night. That leaves the wife with plenty of responsibilities, especially when the kids are younger. But now we'll be able to share more of them."

Zysk's children, Tim, 29, and Andrew, 27, are now on their own.

According to Zysk, retirement will open up a few more doors.

"I've enjoyed it," he said. "The main reason I'm getting out is because there are many things I can't do because they should be done during the school year."

Zysk, who has led South to 15 Eastern Michigan League titles since 1973, picked up his last piece of championship material after the Blue Devils won another regional tennis title three weeks ago.

"This is the last award," Zysk said as he positioned the trophy on his desk. "This one is the last one, but I remember all of them."

Zysk is going to clean the classroom for the last time, and last weekend he made his final appearance as a coach in the state finals.

"I know I'll be done coaching, but it will now be fun to watch (tennis)," he said. "One thing I have planned is to go back to Midland each year for the state finals."

Retirement isn't something that Zysk contemplated over night. After almost four years, he finally decided, along with his wife, that 1988 would mark the start of their new life.

"It wasn't a spur of the moment decision," he said. "My wife and I sat down three to four years ago and gave it every consideration. It's something we've both been looking forward to for some time."

On June 17, when the school closes for the summer, Zysk will walk out for the last time. But, it won't feel like a true retirement until the Labor Day weekend rolls around and he doesn't have to prepare a lesson plan.

"During the summers we spend a lot of time in Lake City," he said. "Around July 4, you start counting down the days until you have to go back, but this year I won't have to make that 200-mile trip to get back to South."

Is that when retirement will settle in?

"Probably," he said. "I won't feel like I'm retired until next fall."

Zysk has put in endless hours of time, effort and concern for the tennis team as well as his students. He has enjoyed the days of economics and government, tennis balls and matches, but now with retirement clearly on the horizon, spending time in the great outdoors — with his wife — takes precedent.

When asked if he would consider himself a modern-day Grizzly Adams, Zysk casually said, "I don't like to sleep in tents, but I do like the outdoors."

'My wife and I sat down three to four years ago and gave it every consideration. It's something we've both been looking forward to for some time.' — Don Zysk.

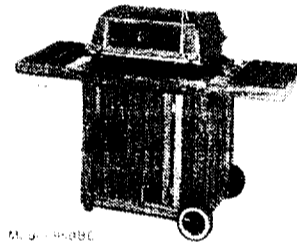

Don Zysk sits at his desk of 29 years with the 1988 Regional tennis trophy — his last award as a coach.

Boating week emphasizes no alcohol

With national safe boating week in full swing, American boaters are being reminded to follow safety tips relating to boat equipment, swimming ability, and weather conditions. While many will meticulously follow their safety checklists, there will be thousands who will overlook the one hazard they could most easily control — drinking while boating.

Each year approximately 1,200 American boaters do not reach their destinations because they die in boating accidents. Fifty-percent of those deaths are alcohol-related, according to the U.S. Coast Guard. The Coast Guard predicts there may be as many as 60,000 boating accidents this year.

The problem is that with little or no licensing required for pleasure boat operators, almost anyone can head out onto the water. An inexperienced and intoxicated boater endangers not only his own life but the lives of other boaters.

Operating a boat while intoxicated is a federal offense subject to a $1,000 fine. Penalties increase for causing death or injury. A growing number of states are enforcing safe-boating laws.

While these laws may prevent some alcohol-related fatalities, there will always be those who think drinking and driving applies only to cars. Many who would never drive drunk in their cars think it's perfectly safe to operate a boat while drinking. For these people, the National Safe Boating Council offers an alcohol "cause and effect" list.

• Alcohol affects a person's balance. A minute of dizziness may not cause a problem in a restaurant, but in an unstable boat it could mean a fall overboard.

• Alcohol can seriously restrict your vision, particularly at night. It can create tunnel vision; reducing peripheral vision.

• Alcohol induces fatigue. Add a boat's motion, engine noise, sun, wind and glare and the boater operator may not be able to react in time to avoid a boating accident.

Laws for safe boating supply only half the solution toward preventing alcohol-related tragedies. Unless each and every boater makes the conscious decision to moderate alcohol intake while racing across the waves, hopes for truly safe water will, at best, flounder.

It's only a nick on the slab of memories, but it's some of the more memorable happenings which occurred during the school year. Some of these kids have done the job, dropped a pass, ran into a hurdle or put the ball in the wrong hoop, but those are the unique portions of sports that will be magnified when the 1987-88 school year is reviewed.

Norsemen bow out of tournament

By Rob Fulton
Sports Editor

Rick Regalado did his part on the mound, but without hitting and defense his three-hitter and 14 strikeouts went unnoticed.

Regalado, who finished 8-3 on the year, was the losing pitcher as North's baseball team was eliminated from District 12 play by East Detroit, 6-0.

The Norsemen only managed four hits, committed five errors and the six runs the Shamrocks pushed across were unearned. The other damaging blow came in the sixth inning when East Detroit, a tri-champ of the Eastern Michigan League, scored five times — with the help of three Norsemen errors.

"When you give a team five or more outs in an inning, they are going to beat you," said North coach Frank Sumbera. "I have to give East Detroit credit, because they made the plays, but we didn't give it our best effort."

Regalado walked four, but his sterling performance was wasted as the Norsemen never got untracked.

"He was mowing them down," Sumbera said about Regalado's nine strike outs in the first four innings, "but the defense wasn't making the plays behind him. You can't ask a guy to pitch any better, but I'm sure that it was tough for him to concentrate when he wasn't getting any defense."

North trailed by a run at the end of five, but spoiled a chance to tie it, or go-ahead in the third.

Marty Pochmara, who had one of four hits for North, led off with a single but was forced out on a Jason DeYonker bunt.

"I don't think he was out at second," said Sumbera. "I thought he beat the throw, but that's not what hurt us."

What hurt the White Division champs of the Macomb Area Conference, was the inability to string some hits together. Chuck Thomas singled and Steve Neiman followed the second out of the inning with a base on balls.

"We had two outs and bases loaded and we thought we were about to explode for some runs," Sumbera said, "but then Scott Schorer hit a sinking line drive into right and the right fielder made a nice sliding, diving catch to take us out of it."

"It was probably what we needed to ignite us," Sumbera added, "but we didn't get it."

Dan Unger and Schorer punched out hits off of East Detroit's Phil Van Assche.

"I'm disappointed because of the way we lost," said Sumbera. "We committed two errors early on and that seemed to set the tempo."

"It's a hard way to end the season," Sumbera added. "After the game the kids were very quiet. I think it's very difficult to say anything because we didn't put our best effort forward."

Girls' track

Liz Bolden, one of the most talented runners in the state, proved tough once again as she finished fourth in the 400 run with a record-breaking time of 58.3 at the state track meet in Ypsilanti.

Bolden also finished eighth in the long jump when she left her mark at 17-feet, two and one-half inches.

Shannon Andrewes ran a 2:26 in the 800, while Nikki Van Oppens ran the 3200 in 12:35. Tina Strader fared quite well with a jump of 14-10 in the long jump.

At the Blue Devil Relays, North's Missy Carson and Allison Liebold went 1-2 in the open 1600. Martha Spiewak, Sam Henson and Liz Bakonovich combined to win the shot put relay. Katie Loeher, Amy Nerone, Lisa Williams and Nikki Van Oppens finished first in the distance medley.

Four individuals from South's boys' track team represented the Blue Devils at the state meet at Eastern Michigan University last weekend and garnered some attention.

South didn't score any points as a team, but some outstanding performances were enough to make the foursome happy.

Joe Reynolds tossed the discus 144-feet, Mark Sonnenberg ran a 4:30 in the 1600-meter run, Pat Bruce cleared the high jump bar at 6-3 and Kyle Schomaker ran a 15.8 in the 110 high hurdles against the state's best track athletes.

Girls' track

The Lady Blue Devils enjoyed a successful final week of the season as they took first in the 10th annual Blue Devil Relays, and ran several season-best times in the state championships in Ypsilanti.

South's 400-meter relay team of Denise Brown, Julie Burke, Reba Uthappa and Traci Lee ran the fastest time ever recorded for a Lady Blue Devil team (51.6) in the state finals. The same four came back to run a 1:49 in the 800 relay, breaking the magical 1:50 mark for the second time this year.

In the 3200 relay, South's Jenny Barber, Elizabeth Kraft, Toni Tedesco and Wendy Berger ran a season-best 9:58. Kraft later ran a 2:26 in the 800, and Julie Nichols ran a fine race in the 1600 run.

At the 9th-10th grade Blue Devil Relays, the South girls compiled 130 points to out-distance the field of schools. North was second and Sterling Heights finished third.

South's Pat Bruce clears the bar at 6-feet, 7-inches in the regionals; it was the jump that qualified him for the state meet where he jumped 6-3.

More power for you

By Cristina Staats

For years boaters were reduced to limited use of hand tools aboard their boats because of no electricity to drive the more convenient and popular power tools. If a major repair was required, boaters pulled into port where they could "plug in."

All that has changed now. There has been a revolution in the power tool market, and new tools are appearing in the stores at reasonable prices. Improvement in the power capacity has greatly influenced the development of these tools. The rechargeability and compactness of the new nickel-cadmium batteries created limitless possibilities for manufacturers.

The greater the power capacity of the tool, the more work it can do on a single charge. The less expensive tools have built in batteries which limits capacity and requires frequent recharging. The higher quality tools may have removable batteries and can be charged in shorter periods of time.

Cordless drills were the first to appear. Boaters rejoiced! They now had a fast and easy alternative to the old-fashioned hand drill. The drill seemed to wobble when one tried to drill into something hard, like fiberglass, and jumped around and scratched the surrounding area. These drills required rechargeable batteries, and were easily recharged when at the dock. Although the early entries into the cordless market were only one-speed, one-direction, they certainly found homes on many boats. Now there are variable speed drills with both a forward and reverse feature.

Another cordless tool that finds the welcome mat always out, is the cordless vacuum. Their predecessors, designed for automobiles, plugged into 12-volt cigarette car lighters, which many skippers installed on their boats in order to utilize these vacuums. Such installation is no longer necessary. The cordless variety now comes with rechargeable batteries as well. These are great boat cleaner-upperers. They have great suction, and some even are able to pick up liquids, with a wet-or-dry feature.

Since those two cordless products hit the market, sales soared. Manufacturers realized the potential, and now there is a variety of cordless hand tools for the boat owner to choose from.

A stroll through the hardware store may reveal brand names like Makita, Black & Decker, Milwaukee or Bosch. Most of these companies have a cordless screwdriver. These can be ideal for boaters when driving screws in areas of the boat where access is difficult. Makita even makes a right-angled cordless screwdriver, and Milwaukee makes one that is hinged in the middle. Makita and Milwaukee have cordless circular saws. The others have cordless jig-saws. Some of the companies have sanders, and combination tools, like drill/screwdriver combinations.

Another cordless is the rechargeable flashlight. Makita and Black & Decker have flashlights that use the same batteries and chargers as some of their other tools. It makes sense to choose tools that do use the same chargers and batteries. Most companies make different battery and charger sizes, so some attention must be paid to this little detail.

Now is a good time to take your stroll through the tool section — with Father's Day just around the corner, you have plenty of time to look around for the perfect cordless tool for the boat.

Lady Knights get booted by Foley

On June 4, University Liggett School's girls' varsity soccer team returned to the regional finals of the state's Class B-C-D tournament with the idea of avenging last year's defeat to the same competitor — Bishop Foley. However, it wasn't meant to be as ULS lost, 5-1.

Top-ranked Foley came out strongly, but the Lady Knights defended well and frequently counter-attacked. With just under four minutes to go in the first half, ULS tied the score on Meghan Brady's 20th goal of the season. Lynne Connor assisted.

In the second half, ULS struggled to clear the ball and were unable to generate any attack. After almost 20 minutes of constant pressure, ULS snapped and gave up the winning goal. Foley scored again minutes later, and then added two goals down the stretch to advance.

"We did well to stay with them as long as we did," said ULS coach David Bakhurst. "They were bigger, stronger and faster, but I'm proud of the girls to get into the final eight in Class B-C-D." ULS finished 11-5-1.

Pointe girls advance

The U-14 PGSA Mustangs upset the Troy Express, 1-0, to move into the semifinals of the prestigious Michigan State Cup Competition.

The Mustangs scored early in the game, when Heather Heide scored on a pass from Ashley Moran.

Feeling

By Deanna Hawthorne

Fit Starting an exercise program

You've made the commitment to begin an exercise program. Good for you. You've made the right decision to achieve today's ideal of trim, firm and healthy good looks.

If you are sedentary at present, you should ideally have a checkup by your physician to include an examination of the cardiovascular system, blood pressure, muscles and joints. Your blood should be analyzed for cholesterol and triglycerides and a resting electrocardiogram should be evaluated.

Some experts, such as Per Olof Astrand, M.D. of the Swedish College of Physical Education, feel that "it is more important to have a medical checkup to see if it will be safe for your heart if you do not exercise and remain sedentary." I tend to agree.

Exercise can be dangerous to certain people, however. According to the American Heart Association, approximately 10 percent of normal male adults over 35 have hidden heart disease, compared to approximately 1 percent of men below age 35. To be safe, check it out; especially if you're over 40 and sedentary.

It is reasonable that if you are under 40, have been exercising two or three times weekly for years and have constantly remained in good health, your medical evaluation would turn out normal and you may forego this evaluation.

Sedentary? Over 40? Should I or shouldn't I? The following medical questionnaire is in accordance with the principles of exercise programming set forth by the AHA and the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

If you answer yes to any of these questions, it is advised you consult your physician before beginning an exercise program.

- Has a doctor ever said you had heart trouble?
- Have you ever had rheumatic fever, growing pains, twitching of the limbs, or rheumatic heart disease?

- Did you ever have, or do you now have a heart murmur?

- Have you ever had a suspected coronary occlusion, attack or insufficiency?
- Have you ever had an abnormal electrocardiogram (ECG)?

- Have you ever had an electrocardiogram taken while you were exercising (such as climbing up and down steps) in an abnormal fashion?

- Have you ever had pain or pressure or a squeezing feeling in the chest which occurred while exercising?

- If you climb a few flights of stairs fairly rapidly, do you have tightness or pressing pain in your chest?

- Do you get pressure or pain in the chest if you walk in the cold wind or get a cold breath of air?

- Have you had bouts of rapid heart action, irregular heart action or palpitations?

- Have you ever taken digitalis, quinidine or any drug for your heart?

- Have you ever received nitroglycerin; sometimes labeled TNG, NTG, or any tablets for chest pain which you use by placing them under tongue?

Alternating an exercise routine

Jogging's fine, but how about alternatives?

By Jesse Wick
Grosse Pointe News Intern

If you're jogging six days a week you might not be doing yourself as much good as you think you are, according to orthopedic surgeon Dr. Donald Garver Jr. of St. John Hospital.

"Jogging is somewhat of a dangerous trap that people fall into," Garver said. "When you jog all the weight of your body is transferred down through your legs to your feet every time they hit the ground. That takes its toll. Imagine how many tons of weight are put on your feet every mile."

Joggers can be setting themselves up for injury, especially if they run every day without a break, Garver said. "Something is eventually going to give out in everyone," he said.

Garver recommends low-impact exercise, or exercise which doesn't transfer weight to the feet. Examples of low-impact exercises are biking, swimming, and weightlifting.

Joggers should alternate running with another form of exercise, Garver said. Instead of running six days a week, they should run three and do low-impact exercise on the alternate days.

"Body-builders have known for years that, if you pump iron six days a week, you only break down and don't build up," Garver said.

According to Garver, the same holds true for running. Runners need rest days to build back muscle they have torn down while running, and also to keep the stress on their legs to a minimum.

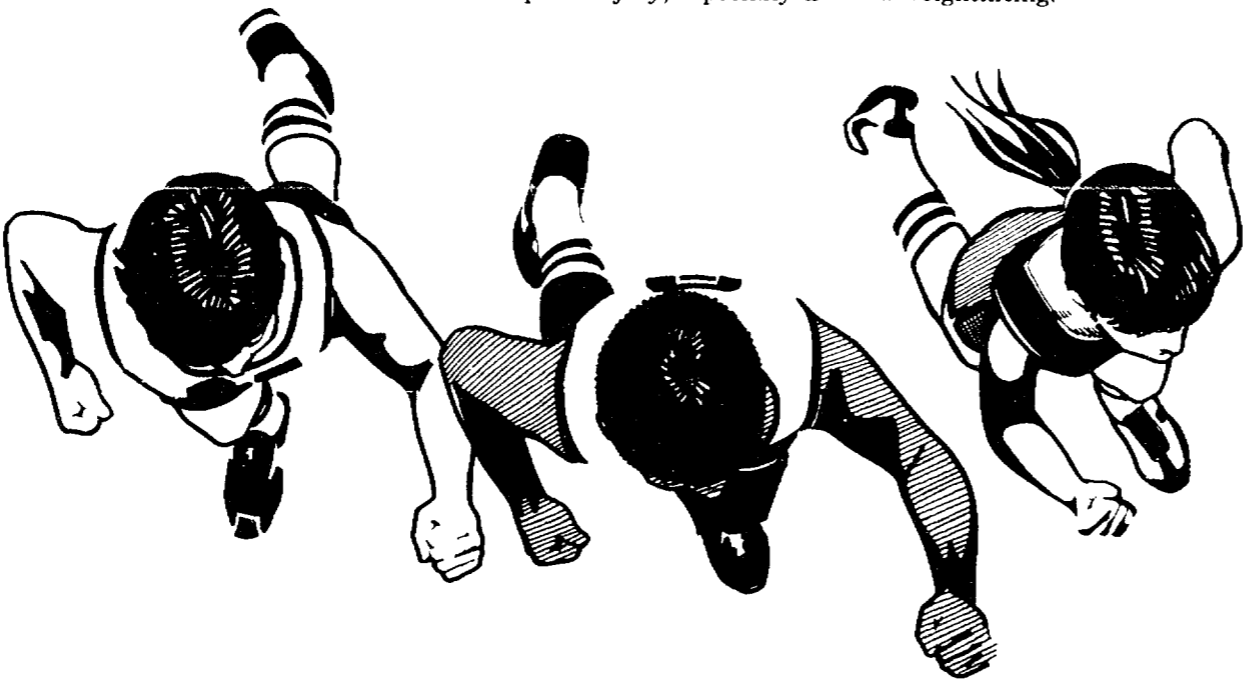

By alternating running with low-impact exercise, or "cross training," Garver said, injury can be avoided.

"Running has become compulsive for a lot of people," Garver said. "People run to relax and relieve tension. A lot of people have found that they can do the same thing with other forms of exercise, like weightlifting." Garver also said, "Running isn't for everyone. Obviously, the heavier a person is the more weight is going to be put on their legs. You can get your heart rate up in a number of different ways. For instance, in biking, you pump your legs like crazy, but you're sitting down."

"No one has proven that running alone will wear out your legs, but for people who are compulsive runners, it would be smart to combine running with another kind of exercise and get a more balanced workout. All exercise needs aren't going to be satisfied by running."

"Even the world class marathon runners are constantly fighting injury. It's better to take a rest."

Smart

Recipes for a slim and healthy summer

Whether you choose to light up those grills in your own backyard, the local park, or picnic with friends in the country, you can enjoy summer's fun eating times and still stay slim; or become a slimmer you with the right menu plans.

Here are a few recipe ideas from Diet Center. All of them are easy to prepare, yet pleasing to the eye and thinning to the body.

Appetizers

Diet Center Pate

- 8 oz. chicken livers
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 hard-boiled eggs
- 2 tsp. onion powder
- 2 tsp. celery flakes
- 1/2 tsp. mustard powder
- 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
- 1/2 tsp. dill weed
- dash of cayenne pepper
- dash of salt

Combine all ingredients except the eggs in a saucepan and simmer until the chicken livers are tender. Drain the liquid and save. Put 1 tblsp. of liquid in blender, add livers, one at a time, blend at low speed with each addition. Add more liquid during the blending as needed. Add the eggs, one at a time, to blend to a thick but spreadable consistency. Chill. Taste for seasonings. Adjust if needed.

Serve on sliced cucumbers, zucchini circles, or in celery stalks. Also good on crackers, such as Diet Center Wheat Sveltes, or similar no-salt-type cracker.

Veggie platter/dip

- 8 oz. Mori-Nu Tofu
- 3 tblsp. lemon juice
- 1 cup frozen, chopped spinach (thaw and drain)
- 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
- 1/4 tsp. dill weed
- 1/4 tsp. onion powder
- 1 stalk celery, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup finely chopped onion

Blend lemon juice and tofu in blender. Pour into bowl, add remaining ingredients. Chill.

On large circular platter, place bowl of tofu in center. Arrange lettuce leaves around platter. Place vegetables on lettuce, such as celery stalks, mushroom caps, broccoli spears, cauliflower, zucchini slices, green and red sweet peppers.

From the grill

Chicken ka-bobs

- 6-8 boneless chicken breasts
- 2 tblsp. lime juice
- mushroom caps
- onion slices
- green and red pepper slices
- tomato wedges
- zucchini slices

Cut chicken breasts into medium pieces for the skewers. Marinate chicken pieces in lime juice for 5 to 10 minutes (no more than 10). Place chicken pieces and vegetable selections on skewers, alternating between chicken and vegetables. (If using wooden skewers, soak them in water for 30 minutes before using.) Grill ka-bobs on grill for approximately 10 minutes, rotating skewers.

Tofu and Egg Salad

- 2 pkgs. Mori-Nu-Tofu
- 1 tsp. dijon-style mustard
- 1/2 tsp. garlic powder
- 2 tblsp. green onion, minced
- 2 stalks celery, finely chopped
- 2 slices green pepper, diced
- 3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
- 1/2 tsp. dill weed
- salt and pepper to taste

Drain tofu, cut into 1/2 inch cubes, now combine all ingredients. Toss lightly to mix and meld flavors. Chill. Serve on crackers, or whole wheat bread slices.

Grilled Fish Steaks

Select fish steaks, such as halibut or sword fish, rub with garlic powder. Place on hot grill, cook for approximately 5 minutes, each side. In the final 2-3 minutes, baste fish with mustard mix.

Mustard Magic

Blend 2 parts dijon-style mustard with one part lemon juice and use to baste fish steaks. May also be used to baste chicken breasts.

Frosty thirst quenchers

Cooler calada

- 16 oz. orange diet soda
- 2 tblsp. Diet Center Vanilla Protein Powder
- 3 drops coconut extract
- 1/4 tsp. vanilla extract
- 3 ice cubes

Place all ingredients in blender. Whip until ice is crushed. Pour into chilled glasses.

Mock Cold Duck

- 6 cans diet soda, (such as black cherry, raspberry)
- 3 cans diet lemon-lime soda
- 1/3 cup apple cider vinegar
- dash of liquid sweetener

Combine all ingredients in a large sealed container, stir. Chill for at least 24 hours to 3 days.

Lemon pie

- 2 cups water
- 1 1/2 pkgs. Knox gelatin

- 1 tblsp. vanilla extract
- 2 tsp. Crystal Lite Lemon Mix
- 1 pkg. Mori-Nu Tofu
- 1 tsp. lemon or orange peel
- 2 tblsp. non-fat dry milk
- 4 drops food coloring (optional)
- 2 tsp. artificial sweetener

Add gelatin to 1 cup of cold water. Let stand for one minute. Add this mixture to other cup of water and stir over heat until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Mix remaining ingredients in food processor or blender.

Fold tofu mixture with gelatin mixture, and blend with a spoon until well mixed. Pour into baked pie shell and chill.

Pie shell

- 1 apple shredded in food processor, or grate without skin.
- 1 egg
- 1 tsp. artificial sweetener

Mix together in a bowl. Press into an 8 or 9 inch pie plate, that you have sprayed with a vegetable spray. Bake at 375° until brown, (15-20 minutes.) Remove from oven. Cool before adding filling.

* A note on tofu -- I have specifically requested you use Mori-Nu tofu in some of the recipes. This tofu is superior to others because it is easier to work with, and it is hermetically sealed to assure freshness. It does make a difference in the recipes. Available at Diet Center and local health food stores.

Gershwin's 'Girl Crazy' is refreshing, enjoyable

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Girl Crazy," the zesty musical at the Birmingham Theatre, has delighted audiences since 1920.

It has verve and style and most importantly, respect and appreciation, for the original George and Ira Gershwin score. It has not been deleted or caricatured as some productions have been in an effort to modernize it. The same 14 songs that sent audiences away humming when the show made its debut are included. They are beautifully rendered in both song and dance.

The syncopated jazz sound of George and the witty chatty lyrics of Ira remains one of the American theater's finest offerings. "Embraceable You," "I Got Rhythm," "But Not For Me" and "Bidin' My Time" not only make "Girl Crazy" an enduring musical, but have become favorites in the music world and have been recorded by almost every pop and jazz singer in the business.

The plot of "Girl Crazy" is typical of the bright, breezy, innocent stories of the '30s musicals.

Danny Churchill (Guy Stroman) is banished to an Arizona desert ranch by his wealthy father who thinks that the boy is girl crazy. Danny arrives all gus-sied up and ready for action on what he thinks is a dude ranch. What he finds is a run-down house in a sleepy town that doesn't have a gas station (no one has a car), no nightlife and the crowning blow — no girls.

There is only one, Molly Gray, the postmistress. Danny falls in love with her, but she is wary of his attention.

Although Danny is serious about Molly, it doesn't deter him from importing a chorus of girls and a group of jazzed-up cowboys from New York. Besides stirring up a little action, he turns the old homestead into a gambling casino, hires a casino boss, Slick Fothergill (Jeffrey Blair Cornell), who brings with him his lusty wife, Kate (Lorna Luft).

With story and cast in order, the show kicks off to a rousing mixture of song, dance and comedy.

With all this going for it, the fun and spirit of the show rests with Lorna Luft as Kate Fothergill, the part played by Ethel Merman in the 1930 production.

Lorna is more than equal to her role with her dynamic voice and brassy stage presence. When she belts out "Sam and Delilah," "Boy What Love Has Done To Me," and the show-stopper, "I Got Rhythm," her voice bounces off the rafters from her enthusiastic delivery.

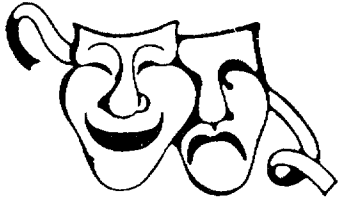

It is interesting to note that Luft's mother, the late Judy Garland, appeared in the 1943 film of "Girl Crazy" opposite Mickey Rooney.

"Girl Crazy" is wonderful hot weather fare. It's light, refreshing and thoroughly enjoyable.

The production of "Girl Crazy" has been extended and will run through July 10.

'Au Revoir, Les Enfants' is powerful, moving film

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Au Revoir, Les Enfants," the powerful and moving autobiographical film, is the one movie for which French Director Louis Malle said he'd like to be remembered.

For more than 40 years, he pondered how to approach filming it. Last year the film was shot and won the top prize at the Venice Film Festival and recently won most of the important Oscars, the French equivalent of Oscar.

A harsh and tragic story, it's one that must have taken a great deal of courage to write. It must not have been easy to portray one's self as a self-centered young boy, oblivious to another's suffering as Malle does in Julian.

During World War II, 11-year-old Louis Malle was sent to a Catholic boarding school 50 miles south of Paris. It was a Spartan life, far different from the one the boys there were accustomed to as children of rich and influential families. The food was meager and plain. There was little or no heat. The boys shivered in their classes. Nor was there any hot water.

It was an atmosphere that reflected a world beset by the war outside the school walls, not only the hardship but also some of its violence. The favorite recreation was a brutal game of attack played on tall stilts. It was played with a ferocity aimed at dismounting the opponents without regard to injury.

With the resilience of youth, most of the boys adjust. It was more difficult for Julien. Always his mother's favorite, he misses her attention. He enjoys being the top student in his class, but he is lonely, angry and indifferent to the feelings of others. He is his own universe.

The little world he has built up for himself is disrupted when three new boys arrive at the school in January 1944. One of them is enigmatic, Jean Bonnet (Raphael Fejto).

Julien resents Jean when he outshines him in class. He is outraged when the literature teacher terms his composition pretentious and Jean's, as sensitive.

Curious to know more about him, Julien searches his locker and finds out that Jean is not Jean Bonnet but Jean Kipplestein.

After spending a scary night in the woods, when they are separated from the class during an outing, the boys become friends. It is a wary friendship made so by Julien's knowledge of Jean's secret, a knowledge that gives him power over the quiet boy.

When he invites Jean to lunch on visitor's day with him and his mother, there is a cruelty in the obvious satisfaction he gets watching Jean's reaction when the Gestapo enters the dining room and threatens to demand identification from each of the guests.

There are others who know Jean's secret, each of them holds fate in his hands — a fate that can be determined by a small incident.

The monks who belong to the French Resistance and run the boarding school know. They are kind and sympathetic but when Jean approaches the communion rail, the priest, bound by rules, cannot give him the wafer. A sure tip-off, it goes unnoticed.

Another who knows is the orphan kitchen boy, Joseph. When he is fired for stealing, he tips off the Nazis.

When a German officer enters the classroom looking for Jean, no one speaks. As he is about to leave, he catches a glance between the two boys, a glance of friendship, but one that becomes a glance of betrayal.

Malle describes the scene: "I sat there in my desk as Bonnet gathered his pencils, shook hands with us and went with the German officer. And then we clapped for Father Jacques, the priest who tried to conceal the three boys. We knew all four were in great danger. But it wasn't until the end of the war that we found they weren't coming back."

The film takes its title from the last words Father Jacques said before they led him away, "Au revoir, les enfants."

"On that day," Malle says, "my whole life changed. It was my first understanding of evil, my first understanding of helplessness, my first real experience as a man."

Later Malle learned that the three boys had been sent immediately to an Auschwitz gas chamber.

"Au Revoir, Les Enfants" is an intensely complex film. On the surface, it is a tragic but simple story of the ambiguous friendship between two boys and the effect of an unholy war on their lives. But it is an intricately wrapped package that carries with it the reminder that moral decision may confront us at any moment.

'Dominick and Eugene' is story of brotherly love

By Marian Trainor
Special Writer

"Dominick and Eugene" is a moving story of twin brothers who struggle and triumph over terrific odds to defeat the past and achieve a future. Dominick (Tom Hulce) is brain-damaged. Eugene (Ray Lotta) is brilliant and is studying to be a doctor.

The two share an apartment in a working class Pittsburgh neighborhood.

Eugene, intensely protective of Dominick, flies into a rage whenever anyone gives him a hard time or tries to use him. There is a mutual dependence. Dominick works as a garbage collector to earn money to help Eugene with his education.

Most of the time Dominick is happy and gets along well. He knows he is different, but with Eugene's assurance that he is capable of thinking, that he only needs more time to figure things out, he develops self-confidence and an acceptance of himself.

There is more than mutual dependence between the brothers. The film takes time to show many instances that there is also love.

Their somewhat restricted lives open up when Jamie Lee Curtis, a medical student, hires Eugene as a tutor. She likes and understands Dominick and he in turn accepts her, even when he realizes that Eugene has more than a tutor's interest in her.

A tragedy precipitates a better understanding between the brothers and sets them free to live their own lives, independent of each other.

"Dominick and Eugene" is a story of brotherly love. Although one of them is retarded, there is no feeling that his twin finds him a burden or a duty.

Tom Hulce, a former DeWolter, won acclaim for his "A-madeus." Although Dominick does not provide the same range of emotions, he makes the most of his role, helped along by a camera that takes time to close in and watch his expressions change as he slowly comprehends a situation.

Memorable scenes show Dominick running with his dog in a sunlit meadow, dancing to a rock 'n' roll beat and enjoying a comic book with a boy he has made friends with on his route.

Ray Lotta turns in a steady performance as the patient but persistent brother determined to make Dominick self-sufficient. He has a seething good looks that effectively delivers his ambiguous feelings about choosing between Dominick and his career.

'Dundee' sequel doesn't measure up

By Michael Chapp
Special Writer

"Crocodile Dundee" was successful because it had an engaging lead character and it stayed faithful to its simple storyline. There was no extra baggage. The film, like its title character, was filled with down-home charm and cordiality. As a result, viewers who saw it couldn't wait for a sequel.

If only we had. "Crocodile Dundee II" makes just about every mistake its predecessor avoided. It quickly gets bogged down in a routine plot and then never quite recovers. Dundee (Paul Hogan) is still just as innocent and naive as he was before, and his girlfriend, reporter Sue Charleston (Linda Kozlowski) is as charming as ever.

stream of one-liners about life's follies. The strength of the first film was its characters, not its situation.

The weakness of the second film is that there's too much situation and not enough character.

Sue, who has possession of photographs that would put a South American drug czar behind bars, has been kidnapped. Dundee takes it upon himself to find and rescue her in his own inimitable style. He succeeds, but when the bad guys come looking for them in their posh New York apartment, and police protection seems useless, they flee Down Under.

The chase continues. But here, Dundee has the advantage. One by one, with the help of his Walking Creek friends and the aborigines, he turns his predators into prisoners. This Rambo-style approach to the plot takes up most of the film's running time.

That in itself is not bad. What is disappointing is that we see very little of Dundee's humor and unique disposition; there are only occasional glimpses into the heart of the "Crocodile" that most viewers remember fondly. In the opening moments, for example, Dundee goes fishing with dynamite in New York Harbor. Later, his method of dealing with a guy threatening him to jump off a building is good for a few laughs.

But in general, those episodes are few and far between.

Dundee's winning character traits are all but lost because he spends more time prowling, scheming and brooding in this picture than spewing off a

Don't Play With Stroke.

You can't afford to lose. Strokes are serious, and although they can put anyone out of the running, blacks are at a higher risk than whites. In fact, 38% of all black men and 39% of all black women have high blood pressure, the greatest risk factor for stroke.

Here are a few rules that can help you come out a winner:

- If you are on high blood pressure medication, take it exactly as prescribed. Don't run out of pills, even for a single day.
- Know what you should weigh and work to maintain that weight.
- Follow your doctor's advice about exercise.
- Eat a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and reduce salt intake.
- Don't smoke cigarettes.
- Know the warning signs of stroke.

For more information, contact the American Heart Association.
