

Farms, history leaders honor contest winners

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Farms mayor, city council, other city leaders and members of the Grosse Pointe Farms Historical Advisory Commission honored the seven winners of the historical group's mystery photo contest at Monday night's council meeting.

The contest involved accurately and quickly identifying 12 landmarks around the Grosse Pointe based on photos published on a flyer available at Farms city hall in late summer/early fall of this year.

Some of the landmarks were quite obscure, such as four-inch tall statues on the grave site of a deceased Army and Air Force Sargeant buried at St. Paul Cemetery on Moross.

The historical group's chairman Tom Petz laughed, explaining that he took that photo with a special lense, shooting from a vantage point of laying on the ground.

Winners said it was difficult because the photo made the religious figurines look much larger than they are.

However, Petz said that was not the photo that stumped most contest participants. Rather it was a cupola on top of the Farms Department of Public Works building at 311 Chalfonte.

"People weren't thinking in the vein of the public works building containing such a lovely architectural detail," Petz said.

Most of the twelve photos challenged contest participants to identify landmarks located on public buildings.

One, however, was a weather vane on a

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on can and should live on.

Last year, more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day. Recycling is the one way we can give something back.

Then Recycle.

School district's aging offices get some much-needed repairs

By Shirley A. McShane
Staff Writer

Since the Grosse Pointe school administration's "house" is a pair of historic — and in some places crumbling — schools on St. Clair, steps are now being taken to make it more like home.

Since this summer, the administration has razed a decrepit wooden storage shed behind the buildings, painted and installed new doors on the maintenance garage, power washed the Cadieux school portion of the buildings and is in the process of having its brick and mortar exterior repaired.

Slated to be completed before winter are the painting and caulking of the windows, repair of the wood trim around the soffits and installation of electric lights and outlets in the seven-bay maintenance garage.

Scheduled to begin sometime over the next six months is an architectural study of the building's interior to develop a variety of renovation plans to make better use of the space, said Chris Fenton, assistant superintendent for business.

The district decided last year, with the school board's approval, that it no longer would pursue the possibility of seeking a new home for its administrative offices.

The idea of vacating the buildings at 389 St. Clair surfaces periodically, but, without the funds to finance a move and no practical place to go, coupled with the fact that there were no decent offers when the building and land were offered for sale, the district has opted to stay.

The buildings, the 1906 Cadieux school and the 1915 school building are joined at the first floor level but not at the second-floor. The buildings are structurally sound but in need of both practical repairs and cosmetic makeovers.

"We are concentrating on the exterior needs right now," Fenton said. "Our goal is to see these buildings have a historic designation. Despite all the badmouthing of these buildings, they are historic. I hope

State rep. choices contrasts in beliefs

Democrat Elaine Hartmann and Republican Andrew Richner agree on one thing: it's important for their respective parties to win control of the Michigan House of Representatives, and the first district, which encompasses Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods, is a key battleground in that struggle.

Elaine Hartmann

Elaine Hartmann

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Elaine Hartmann owns an antique shop in Grosse Pointe Park and was a teacher in the Detroit public school system for 34 years. She is a former member of the Grosse Pointe Farms planning commission and was a candidate for the Farms city council.

Hartmann is married and has one daughter, an assistant United States attorney. She has long been active in community affairs, and is proud of her role in preserving the historic Cadieux Farmhouse, located at Cadieux and Notre Dame.

The home, which dates back to the 1850s, was scheduled to be demolished a few years ago, and Hartmann led the effort to raise funds for the purchase and restoration of the house.

As to why she's running for the state house, Hartmann said the answer is simple.

Andrew Richner

"I feel there's a hard, extreme edge in Michigan politics," said Hartmann. "I believe that the Republicans have demonized public education and public school teachers, and I felt that someone had to run against the Republican party, and I decided that that someone would be me, instead of waiting around for someone to run."

Hartmann believes that 1996 is the year of the Democrat and the moderate approach to politics. She has respect for the retiring William Bryant Jr., who she believes was a bit of Republican maverick, which gives him a form of moderation lacking in today's Republican party.

Hartmann strongly opposes the idea of vouchers in public education, and when Gov. John Engler describes public schools as "institutionalized gulags," she fears for the future of public education.

Hartmann also has strong feelings on the issue of abortion and reproductive health issues.

"I am a pro-choice candidate who believes in a woman's private right to reproductive freedom and reproductive health care," Hartmann said.

Hartmann believes that more should be done to improve childcare in Michigan. To that end, she believes that businesses that offer childcare should receive tax breaks, and the state of Michigan must transfer back to the Department of Social Services the responsibility of inspecting licensed daycare centers. It is currently the responsibility of a commerce and industry service department.

County candidates tout their experience over party affiliation

By Amy Andreou Miller
Staff Writer

Both candidates for the First District Wayne County commissioner position are touting their experience, more than their party affiliation, as what will help them most in performing the job when voters select one of them in the Nov. 5 election.

The two candidates for the First District Wayne County commissioner position are, in alphabetical order, Democrat Christopher F. Cavanagh, a Grosse Pointe Woods resident, and Republican Mary Ellen Stempfle, a resident of the City of Grosse Pointe.

Chris Cavanagh

Cavanagh's formal education includes being valedictorian of Gabriel Richard High School in Ann Arbor. He attended University of Notre Dame for two years, returning home when his father, former Detroit mayor Jerome Cavanagh, died in 1979. The younger Cavanagh then attended University of Michigan for two years, but when he was told certain credits from Notre Dame didn't transfer to Michigan, he chose to rebuff completing an undergraduate degree, and instead took a few graduate level courses at Michigan.

He said not officially completing an undergraduate degree may have been a mistake. However, he prefers to focus on the work experience he left U-M for; he began working as an administrative assistant to councilman Jack Kelley doing research, analysis and community relations.

He worked there from 1987-89, and then worked for former Mayor Coleman Young as the manager of the East side Neighborhood City Halls from 1991 to 1993.

While there, he said he brought together the resources of community, business, and government officials to prevent fires on Devil's Night, a event typically marked by arson.

Cavanagh said he couldn't choose one issue as the most important. His goals, if elected, include seeking improvements in public safety, education in Detroit, fiscal responsibility and the environment.

Election

"If we're going to have welfare reform, and people can't get childcare, then people can't work," Hartmann said. "We need more and better childcare facilities, and if licensed facilities aren't inspected, how can people trust them."

Andrew Richner

Grosse Pointe Park resident Andrew Richner, 35, is currently the Wayne County commissioner for Grosse Pointe. He also served on the Grosse Pointe Park City Council, and is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School. He is married and has two children.

He believes that Republican tax and budget policies have been good for Michigan. He said that the state's unemployment rate is below the national average, something that hasn't been true in the state for over 20 years.

"I think it's essential that Republicans stay in power," said Richner. "We must be doing something right. This is an important race because the Republican majority in the state house is only one seat."

Richner also said that it was important to elect him because, with Michigan's new term-limit laws, the district representative will have seniority in two years, when most of the legislature will have to step down because they have served as many terms in office as the law allows.

"The Legislature will have to redraw federal congressional districts by the year 2002, using data from the 2000 census," said Richner. "If elected, I'll be there to fight to put Grosse Pointe into one congressional district, which is what was the case before the 1982 redistricting. I would be in my third and final term, and would have seniority."

Richner also feels it's important to reduce the cost of doing business in Michigan. That's why he'd like to repeal the personal property business tax, a tax on business equipment, which costs Michigan businesses $2 billion a year.

Local governments, which receive revenue from the tax, have opposed its elimination. If the tax is ended, the state must find a way to compensate local municipalities for their financial losses, Richner said.

When it comes to school spending, Richner believes it is important to protect spending in poorer districts, but not at the expense of wealthier districts. He also believes that current school funding mechanisms should be maintained.

On a more local level, Richner is a strong supporter of protecting and maintaining water quality in Lake St. Clair. He said the state must ensure that water quality measures similar to the ones imposed on Fox Creek and Milk River are imposed on Oakland and Macomb county developments. It's fair and it will protect a resource that is of great benefit to Grosse Pointe.

Richner thinks a school voucher system, as long as it does not violate any provisions in the state Constitution, is not a bad idea, and that local school districts ought to have the right to decide whether they will participate in school

He said improvements in the environment mean cleaning up playgrounds and vacant land in the district, which includes not only the Grosse Pointes, Harper Woods, but a Northeast portion of Detroit.

His goals for education include seeking money from companies to put more computers in Detroit school classrooms to make students more marketable in the workplace.

To improve fiscal responsibility, Cavanagh plans on being a watch dog of bids for work done in the district.

Mary Ellen Stempfle

Stempfle has a bachelor's of science degree in urban planning from Michigan State University. She also has a master's degree in Management and Supervision from Central Michigan.

Also, among one of her volunteer activities, serving as vice-chair and treasurer of the Tri-county Detroit Health Council, she started a program for the working poor to receive dental care.

She marshaled resources, succeeding in bringing together dentists willing to perform pro bono care on needy patients.

If Stempfle wins, she says she will resign from her job at Botsford Hospital in order to be a full-time commissioner. Her predecessor, Richner, maintained a legal career in addition to performing the commissioner duties.

"I want to be completely focused on serving the district," she said.

She said she plans to continue the positive leadership the district has enjoyed the past four years under Richner.

"He has exemplified the Republican philosophy of decreasing government, and increasing accountability," she said.

In executing this philosophy, she plans on streamlining processes so that the Grosse Pointes can receive more in county services for the money the constituents pay.

She said her education and experience working for Wade Trim & Associates, a civil engineering firm, has prepared her for working with townships, cities, counties and the state.

Those were her clients then.

Also, while employed there, she used her graduate education in process and systems.

This, she said, will serve her well as commissioner because she will not feel daunted by nebulous tasks set before her. She said she knows how to systematically tackle a problem, work through solutions, and improve services for the district.

Voice expert adds love of music to career

By Chip Chapman
Staff Writer

Many people spend years, even after finishing college, finding what they want to do with their lives. Argentina-born Cristina Jackson-Menaldi knew her calling before completing elementary school.

"My father was a well-known organist and dean of the music department at the University (of Museo Social Argentino)," said Jackson-Menaldi, now of Grosse Pointe Woods. "My brother, sister and I were singing on radio, on television, in choirs all over Argentina. Music was very important to us. It was my life."

Her early singing experience and subsequent educational and professional training led Jackson-Menaldi to become a director and voice pathologist at the Lakeshore Professional Voice Center, part of the Lakeshore Ear, Nose and Throat Center in St. Clair Shores.

Jackson-Menaldi attended a music conservatory in Buenos Aires, where she completed her master's level studies as a choir director and became the first woman choir director in Argentina.

But she was not only interested in singing and music, "I was concerned with the care of the voice," she said. "I understood the problems people had with their voices."

With the help of college mentors, Drs. Renato Segre and Julio Bernaldo de Quiros, renowned in Argentina as creators of speech and language pathology, Jackson-Menaldi was able to pursue a career in speech language pathology and audiology. Because of her background in music, the two doctors suggested Jackson-Menaldi apply her knowledge to professional singers and speakers — a first in Argentina.

POINTER OF INTEREST

After earning her master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Museo Social Argentino and working as an associate professor, Jackson-Menaldi received a fellowship to pursue post-doctorate studies at the University of Paris-Sorbonne, receiving a master's degree in general phonetics and working as a choir director.

In Europe, Jackson-Menaldi was able to study voice techniques of the Sistine Chapel Choir in Rome, the Vienna Boys Choir, the Montserrat Boys Choir in Spain and several French choirs, among them Radio France and Boys Singers of France, where she was the voice coach and voice pathologist.

While in Paris, she met her husband, Jose Luis, an applied mathematics professor and fellow Argentinean, at that country's embassy in France.

"We were married in Paris," she said. "We were planning to return to Argentina. We missed our families. We had sent all of our things back to Argentina when my husband received an invitation to be a visiting professor at Wayne State University."

Jackson-Menaldi came to the United States in 1982. She held the position of adjunct faculty at Michigan State University's department of audiology and speech sciences.

She worked in private practice with City of Grosse Pointe resident Dr. Walter Guevara before helping establish the voice center at the Lakeshore Ear, Nose and Throat Center with the City of Grosse Pointe's Dr. Daniel Dj. Megler.

"It is an ideal place to be, with doctors of otolaryngology," she said.

At the Lakeshore Professional Voice Center, Jackson-Menaldi works with singers, teachers, lawyers, auctioneers — anyone who may put stress on their voice in the course of their work — to help overcome problems they may have.

"Many people do not know how to talk loud or use a microphone correctly," she said. "We have workshops and offer techniques for people who misuse or abuse their voice. It is a multi-disciplinary approach — many doctors help with the diagnosis and treatment."

"I don't like to send a patient to surgery if it is not needed. We try therapy first, and about 90 percent are cured if they follow our advice."

Jackson-Menaldi said that many professionals whose jobs require the use of their voices can prevent many of the problems that occur.

"People need to tune up their voices, before and after they speak or sing," she said, "but many do not have the discipline to do that. Clearing one's throat can irritate or damage vocal chords."

Jackson-Menaldi suggests drinking plenty of water or using a silent cough to clear one's throat. She also recommends that people wear earplugs at concerts and loud places, not only to protect hearing but to avoid trying to talk above the sound level in such places.

Since 1986, Jackson-Menaldi has served as adjunct faculty and associate staff in the department of otolaryngology at the Wayne State University School of Medicine and Harper Hospital. This enables her to keep up with the latest developments in voice research, which she passes on to her patients.

Jackson-Menaldi has also written and published many articles and a book related to voice. "The Normal Voice," written in 1992 for speech and language pathologists and otolaryngologists, gives physicians and therapists a better understanding of voice dynamics. It is currently sold and used throughout South America and Europe.

She is currently working on a second book in pathological voice.

Jackson-Menaldi travels regularly to South America and Europe, where she gives speeches and conducts workshops.

In her spare time she enjoys cooking and music — singing as a member of the St. Paul choir. She has passed her interest in music to her 6-year-old daughter Veronica.

"She loves to sing," Jackson-Menaldi said. "She is also taking piano lessons and ballet."

Jackson-Menaldi has also collaborated with her husband on a research project, developing a program for voice analysis.

"We both love what we are doing," she said. "We are doing what we always wanted to do, but now in a different place."

G.P. Woods get new Firebird for traffic patrol

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Calling it no big deal, Grosse Pointe Woods chief of public safety Jack Patterson said that the city's new traffic enforcement vehicle is a Pontiac Firebird.

"There's a simple reason why we're using a Firebird for traffic enforcement," said Patterson. "We've been using Chevys forever, but we had a hard time trying to get one for traffic enforcement."

It seems that Chevrolet has stopped making Chevrolet Caprices with the full police package, Patterson said. That leaves Ford as the only manufacturer of police cars.

"With the increased demand for Fords, we've been told that Ford officials are worried that demand will outstrip the company's ability to supply police cars," Patterson said. "GM will be putting out a 'Yukon' police vehicle, which is like a Jimmy, but we could not expect to get one of those cars until next spring, at the earliest."

Because the department needed a new traffic car now, it was decided to purchase a Pontiac Firebird. The car has the heavy-duty suspension needed for a police car, and is outfitted with a video camera and all the other usual police equipment you expect to find in a police car. But it's smaller than the large patrol cars needed for transporting prisoners after an arrest.

"It has a V-6 engine, which is just fine for driving in the Woods," Patterson said. "We're a small community — 3.2 square miles — and don't have to have a traffic car with a V-8 engine. If this car were for highway patrolling a V-8 would be needed, so it's not any faster than our regular V-8 engine patrol cars."

The Firebird has the same markings as the city's previous traffic patrol cars, said Patterson. The only real complaint so far from officers is that the car is built lower to the ground than previous patrol cars, and this can make getting in and out a little awkward.

Patterson is also pleased with the cost of the Firebird when compared to a new Ford patrol car. The Pontiac, fully-equipped cost the city about $18,000. The base price of a Ford is $18,000 and when it is equipped the same as the Firebird its price goes up about $3,000.

"Another reason we decided not to wait for a Yukon is because it's an expensive vehicle," Patterson said. "Equipped the way we need it, it would cost about $27,000 or $28,000. That's a lot of money."

The Firebird is also a rear-wheel drive car, which offers advantages in maintenance costs, said Patterson.

A front-wheel drive car that experiences the wear and tear that a police car receives, needs a lot of maintenance, and it costs more to maintain a front-wheel drive car than a rear-wheel drive car, Patterson said.

Our choices for the state, county races

With current county commissioner Andrew Richner of Grosse Pointe Park vacating his seat to run for state Rep. William R. Bryant's long-held post, Grosse Pointers face new representation in both Wayne County and Lansing.

For the First District state representative post, held by Republican Bryant since 1970, we opt for Richner, also a Republican, over his Democratic challenger, Elaine Hartmann of Grosse Pointe Farms — although we have great respect for both candidates.

Richner, began his political career on the Grosse Pointe Park City Council and is now finishing his second term on the county board. As one of only a few Republicans on the 15-member board, we believe Richner excelled in scrutinizing county expenditures and looking out for his constituents in the Pointes.

Richner, an attorney, is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School. He is married and has two children.

He believes Republican fiscal policies have been good for Michigan, pointing out that the state's unemployment rate is below the national average for the first time in over 20 years.

Richner believes it is important for a Republican to keep the First District seat and help maintain GOP control of the House, which is now held by a single-seat margin.

Hartmann owns an antique shop in the Park and was a Detroit school teacher for 34 years. She is a former member of the Grosse Pointe Farms planning commission and previously has run for the Farms council.

She is married and has one daughter, an assistant U.S. attorney. She has been long active in community affairs, and is known for her role in saving the historic Cadieux farmhouse at Jefferson and Notre Dame from the wrecking ball.

She believes the Republicans have "demonized" public education and public school teachers and must be challenged. She sees 1996 as the "year of the Democrat" and seeks a more moderate approach to politics.

Hartmann strongly opposes vouchers for public education, and fears for the future of public education under Gov. John Engler.

She is pro-choice in the matter of abortion, and believes more should be done to improve child care in Michigan.

Clearly, Pointe voters have two clear, excellent choices for state representative, but as stated earlier, we give our nod to Richner with his proven track record in government.

For county commissioner, we have two Grosse Pointers vying for the First District seat on the board — Republican Mary Ellen Stempfle of the City and Democrat Christopher Cavanagh of the Woods.

Stempfle is currently an elected trustee of Wayne County Community College. She earned a bachelor's degree in urban planning from Michigan State University and has a master's degree in management supervision from Center Michigan University.

Stempfle has been very active in local Republican politics and organizations. As commissioner, she would strive to see that First District residents get the most for their tax dollars from Wayne County. To do that, she would like to serve on the county ways and means committee, as well as the public works, public services and senior citizens affairs committees.

Cavanagh is a political consultant with WFR Consulting. He is the son of the former Detroit mayor, the late Jerome Cavanagh, and the brother of former county commissioner David Cavanagh. He attended the University of Notre Dame and the University of Michigan.

He has worked for former Detroit councilman Jack Kelley and was appointed by former Detroit Mayor Coleman Young to manage one of the city's neighborhood city halls.

He, too, said he wants to make sure First District residents get the most for their tax dollars and says the district needs a strong, independent candidate without ties to special interest groups.

While we would have preferred to have more experienced candidates from which to choose, we are comfortable in giving our endorsement to Stempfle, who at least has received past approval by Pointers in their votes for her for WCCC trustee. We further believe her education in urban planning and management will serve her — and Pointe constituents — well downtown.

Stadiums tax good for Detroit

One question facing Grosse Pointe voters in the Nov. 5 election is whether they should back the proposed $240 million in tax increases to help finance the new Lions and Tigers stadiums in downtown Detroit.

We are of two minds about this issue. On one hand, we recognize that Wayne County taxes on hotels and rental cars are already high. And the Nov. 5 Proposition S will add 1 percent to hotel bills, already taxed at 14 percent, and 2 percent to rental car bills, now taxed at 6 percent.

But, we suspect the tax on average Grosse Pointers, even those who rent hotel rooms and automobiles in the course of business and pleasure, will not be terribly onerous, even at the proposed higher rates.

On the other hand, the Grosse Pointes do have a larger interest in Detroit than the service taxes. Many Pointers own businesses, practice their professions or work in Detroit. What benefits Detroit obviously affects those Pointers.

Further, the Ford and Hitch families and organizations have contributed much to Detroit over the years and both are stepping up to the two-stadium proposal with funds of their own. And the Ford Motor Co. has contributed $40 million purchasing the right to name the Lions stadium.

The Hitch family, although relative newcomers to Detroit, also has sought to contribute by its many investments in Detroit sports teams, theaters and other entertainment enterprises.

In the end, by backing these civic enterprises, we in the Pointes would be supporting a major effort to improve the economy of the entire metropolitan area. What would benefit Detroit would benefit the Pointes as well.

Votes yes on Proposition S, vote yes for Detroit.

A 'NO' to casino expansion vote

We were pleased to read that The Detroit News has taken an editorial stance against the statewide casino referendum on Nov. 5 that would authorize up to three casinos in Detroit.

The proposal also would give preference to owners who backed a 1994 gambling referendum in the city. It also would require state regulations and an 18 percent tax be split 55-45 percent between the city and the state's School Aid Fund.

Supporters have been arguing that the Detroit-based casinos would halt the spending of $1 million a day by Detroiters and Michiganders in the Windsor casinos.

But The Detroit News editorial also pointed to substantial weaknesses in the proposal, including the finding by the Citizens Research Council of Michigan that the setting aside of $18 million for "infrastructure" improvements "may not prove to be adequate."

In the end, the newspaper wisely concludes that several important redevelopment efforts, including the two new stadiums that are on the drawing boards, ought to be given a chance to work before

"taking an ill-advised gamble on Proposal E."

That ought to be that. Unfortunately, the same issue that carried the paper's editorial also published a long and generally supportive piece about the development of the Soaring Eagle Casino in Mount Pleasant.

That was written by the paper's business editor, Jon Pepper, who, after visiting Mount Pleasant, found unemployment down and "everything else ... up, including prosperity, petty crime and the number of tour buses rolling in on U.S. 27."

But he reported nothing about what the gambling frenzy has done to the college town: the rise in use of pawn shops, the increase in gambling among college students and many other anti-social conditions that now are plaguing Mount Pleasant.

Why permit more of this gambling activity that carries with it so much damage that the state's two leading law enforcement officials, Attorney General Frank Kelley and Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair, are both strongly opposed to Proposal E?

2nd debate gives Dole a lift

With three weeks left in the 1996 presidential campaign, GOP nominee Bob Dole stepped up his negative campaigning last week against President Clinton in the second and final debate.

Although Dole's advisers felt he had "drawn blood," early post-debate public opinion polls were not quite so generous, draining some of the optimism from a national poll taken just before the debate that had given the challenger new hope by showing that the margin between Dole and Clinton had been cut to less than 10 points.

As last week's debate progressed, Dole appeared to have lost some of his focus. We felt a surge of sympathy for the challenger as he leaned forward awaiting the next question from the audience. He looked old and tired.

For a man in his 70s, Dole has been maintaining a terrific pace ever since the GOP convention, a tough regimen even for a younger man.

Yet Dole's advisers, staffers and friends still believe that his campaign may finally have broken through to high ground and that the long-sought GOP victory is still possible.

We shall see on Nov. 5.

Woods council too slick

To the Editor:

The Woods mayor and council are at it again. First they sneak in a gigantic parking increase in the middle of the summer hoping that no one will notice so they can have more money to spend.

Now they're trying to bypass ordinance 471 and sneak in a gigantic — almost 2.5 times — pay raise on a bedsheet ballot under the guise of correcting charter language. That's what Grosse Pointe Woods proposal 4 on the Nov. 5 ballot does.

But ordinance 471 established the local officers compensation commission for the express purpose of setting the pay of the mayor, council and judge. Furthermore, the commission is due to meet in two months, on Jan. 11, 1997, for their regular session.

Mr. Mayor and council, why are you doing the commission's work, giving yourself huge raises, and locking it into the charter?

Proposal 6 also seeks to bypass ordinance 471 and the commission by determining the effective point of a raise if the mayor and council decide they wish to have a public vote on it. This is completely unnecessary unless you have some self-serving interest in bypassing your own existing ordinances.

Proposal 2 is absolutely self-serving to the mayor and detrimental to citizens by doubling his time in office without any accountability. Proposal 2 is strictly designed to protect the incumbent and provide fewer opportunities for public challenge of such underhanded and self-serving actions as more than doubling your own pay and going around inconvenient ordinances when you don't like them.

Proposal 9, while it does change two obsolete words, more importantly also does the work of the local officers compensation commission by setting the judge's pay and furthermore locks it into the charter. This too deliberately bypasses ordinance 471, and is protective and self-serving of the incumbent.

This leaves proposal 3. Is something wrong with the current system of nominating petitions and getting on the ballot? Will these changes make elections smoother, more efficient, less costly and more open? Or are these changes self-serving?

Thus we have five out of 10 of the Grosse Pointe Woods charter proposals having little, if nothing to do with word corrections, but which are extremely self-serving to the incumbents and/or bypass an existing ordinance. Proposals 2, 3, 4, 6 and 9 deserve a "no" vote.

Mr. Mayor and councilmembers, why do you keep trying to give Grosse Pointe Woods city government a bad name?

Thomas P. Sullivan
Grosse Pointe Woods

Thanks, coaches

To the Editor:

I want to take the opportunity to express my thanks to the 1996 Little League Richmond Raptors coaches Bill Campbell, Joel Patterson, Don DeLaura, Dan Hughes and Jim Pangborn. I've never been involved with a more dedicated group of coaches who made sure that our kids had fun while they steadily improved and learned sportsmanship.

These men held practice for one hour before each game, besides the regular practices. They sacrificed their time so they could help our kids learn baseball and build confidence. At the beginning of the season, our kids were surprised if they made a play. By the end, they were surprised if they didn't.

Afterward, the coaches held a picnic where they presented each child with a T-shirt, a trophy and a certificate. All this was financed by the coaches.

I'd like to commend Amy, our umpire, also, for her constant encouragement. Whether a kid made the play or not, she always had a "way to go," or a "nice try." If a player made a mistake, she'd explain it to him. I also want to commend my son's teammates' parents and families. They were the best sports and the most fun.

If every bunch of kids had these men as role models, sports would be what it once was and every kid would think he could be part of a team.

The tree

There is a stately potted plant presiding over one corner of my dining room. I don't even know what it is. This green, snaky-leaved, tree-like piece of outdoor life has one straight stalk which sprouts an abundant yield of emerald green tendrils that caress the off-white walls.

The almost-tropical, greenhouse-reared plant looks beautiful in the corner, recently cleared to make way for a solid oak cabinet I was planning to purchase. But somewhere between plans to get my house in order for a dinner party and this moment, something happened that brought this plant and me together.

But now that it's here, I think it will stay. How could I possibly move this thing? It's alive and thriving. It looks like it belongs here, matching the oak furniture and hunter green accent pieces in the room. Sometimes, though, it's difficult to look at this prospering potted plant.

Bestowed upon me by default, the plant was given as a token of sympathy to the spouse of a family member and friend who died earlier this month.

The plant was hardly noticed at the funeral home, perhaps mistaken for a permanent decorative accent in the tastefully appointed parlor. Overshadowed and outshined by the explosion of blossoms on parade, no one noticed a patch of green in the room nearly overwhelmed with wreaths, bouquets, baskets and sprays of flora in every possible color combination and arrangement.

This wallflower was the plain Jane with the unfilled

I Say

Shirley A. McShane

dance card, sitting on the sidelines, while her beautiful sisters, dressed in jewel-toned ball gowns, whirled around the dance floor, captivating the audience.

Then the ceremonies came to a close, the last note of music sounded and the room cleared. In the silence, the belles of the ball, in all their blooming glory, were loaded unceremoniously onto metal carts and rolled to the back door, where they beckoned for one last ride home.

The provocatively dressed, showy ones were grabbed by forthwith and taken home to be pampered and adored. By the time I arrived with the last of the mourners on our final exit from the funeral home, the cart contained the last dozen arrangements for our consideration. Then a man in a dark suit came running outside carrying the wicker-basket-bound plant, its snaky leaves jostling this way and that, like a miniature palm twisting in a tropical storm's wind shifts.

He nearly dropped it on the pavement. No one wanted it. We all looked at each other, eyebrows raised, eyes inquiring. Then one by one, we shook our heads. After all, we said, who has room for such a sizable plant? It would only serve as an unpleasant reminder.

I suggested to the group that a relative not present at the moment, who had recently moved into a bigger house, might have an unoccupied corner the plant could claim. With that, I stuffed the thing into the trunk of my car.

Feeling like Holden Caulfield in "The Catcher in the Rye," I suddenly had a surge of pity for the plant, much the way he did for the prostitute's dress hanging pathetically in the hotel room closet. If no one wants it, where will it go?

I then accepted responsibility for this thing with no home, no name and not so much as a card detailing its care and feeding. Without thinking about what I had gotten myself into, I hefted it into the corner of my dining room.

There is something so sad and poetic and ironic about my unplanned guardianship of this plant. It sits in the corner. It sits next to the dining room chair where, if my would-be dinner guest had not unexpectedly died three weeks ago, would have been seated.

Instead, in the absence of his once-vibrant, much-sought-after and never-to-be-had-again presence, I have this plant. It's beautiful. I have vowed to care for it. But it is a poor substitute.

That's life, sometimes, isn't it?

More juvenile justice, fewer excuses

By Robert James Bidinotto

In June 1968, Leslie Allen Williams, then a 14-year-old Michigan youth, broke into a neighbor's home. For that act, he received juvenile probation, and was placed in the foster home of a relative.

Within months, Williams molested his relative's 8-year-old child. His punishment? He was removed from the home, but allowed to continue on probation.

Three charges of breaking and entering and damaging property soon followed. Each crime earned him more wrist-slaps — small fines and more probation.

Thanks to a lax juvenile justice system, Leslie Allen Williams was learning that the law had no teeth. It should hardly be surprising that his crimes began to escalate alarmingly. Each time, he received only a fraction of the punishment the law allowed, and was returned to the streets. Eventually, Williams became a notorious serial killer.

The Williams case illustrates how our legal system sends budding young criminals the wrong message: You aren't morally responsible for your acts, and you won't be held legally accountable.

What should we do about this? Recently, more than 700 Michigan high school debate students were assembled by the Mackinac Center for Public Policy at six workshops around the state to discuss solutions. The consensus was clear among these bright young people in whose hands rests the future of our state: Until we change the system, we won't stop the epidemic of juvenile crime.

Our nation's first juvenile court, established in Chicago in 1899, rejected the idea that children are "capable of criminal intent." Judge Julian Mack wrote that juvenile court judges "must be willing and patient enough to search out the underlying causes of the trouble and to formulate the plan by which... the cure may be effected."

In effect, the courts were to treat youthful offenders therapeutically, not punitively. And they have. Peter Greenwood, director of the Rand Corp.'s Criminal Justice Program, outlines characteristics of modern juvenile justice systems:

1) Absence of legal guilt. Juveniles are not held legally responsible for their acts, but are found "delinquent" — what Greenwood describes as "a defense against criminal responsibility."

2) Treatment rather than punishment. "Many states do not include accountability as one of the guiding principles upon which their treatment is based," Greenwood points out. 3) Environment as a reason to excuse the crime. This is based on the dubious assumption that "forces" in the offender's background "drove" him to commit crimes, that he had little or no choice in what he did.

4. Short-term confinement if any. Probation rather than incarceration is typical; any confinement even for the worst of crimes ends on the 18th birthday in many states, on the 21st in Michigan.

During their formative years, then, young trouble-makers become convinced that the law is a paper tiger. No wonder that each year, we see more and more cases like that of Leslie Allen Williams.

Between 1987 and 1993, arrests of those aged 10 to 17 for all violent crimes shot up 62 percent; between 1984 and 1993, arrest rates among the same age group for murder skyrocketed 169 percent. Though these rates have fallen a little in recent months, they are still many times higher than they were three decades ago.

Teenagers have always committed a disproportionate share of crimes. More than one out of three violent crimes is perpetrated by someone under age 20. Demographers note that the teen population, which declined sharply during the 1980s, will rebound dramatically during the next decade. Many of them worry openly about a coming explosion in violent youth crime.

Clinical psychologist Dr. Stanton E. Samenow has worked with juvenile criminals for over two decades. He is convinced that even children make moral choices — and therefore should be held accountable. "Although they do not choose the environment in which they are raised," he writes, "they do choose how to deal with it." Environment is not irrelevant, he says, "But don't forget, it is the child who ultimately makes the choices."

One thing is certain: Our present approach to juvenile crime hasn't worked. It's time to rethink the basic premise underlying our juvenile justice system. Young people are morally responsible for their acts, and therefore they should be held legally accountable as well.

A rational juvenile justice policy would be the very opposite of much of what we have been doing. It would entail less therapy and swifter, more certain punishment; minimizing excuses such as "his environment made him do it," and basing confinement on the seriousness of the crime, not the perpetrator's age.

In short, a rational reform of the juvenile justice system would compel young people to take responsibility for the consequences of their actions.

Taking a crack at drug houses

"It's a one-day blitz for law enforcement and community groups to help make Detroit safer," says Pointer Craig Yaladoo, an assistant prosecuting attorney for Wayne County. For Pointe (and other) groups who want a crack at this, it's a chance to work with the FBI and Detroit Police Department to seal up inner-city crack houses and abandoned homes and have some fun doing it.

Craig, who describes himself as one of the initiative directors for the Alliance for a Safer Greater Detroit, explains that the anti-crime project has law enforcement teams first sweep the target neighborhoods and make sure the houses are empty. Then community groups arrive to board up and otherwise clean up these places that could otherwise become sites for trouble.

Next sweep is just in time for Devil's Night. "We'll be in the Brightmoor Community in the area around I-96 and Evergreen, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 26," says Craig. "We provide boards, hammers, nails and garbage bags (and lunch), and we ask that people bring their own work gloves and a favorite garden tool."

The Alliance is looking for teams of 10 or more. Interested groups can call Yaladoo's office at (313) 224-8446.

'Tis the season — already?

"When did Christmas arrive here?" FYI asked the clerk on the fourth floor of Hudson's Eastland store, already full of miniature trees, ornaments, Santas, wreaths, ribbons and such. "Right after Labor Day," she said.

The Jacobson's Yule display just inside the Kercheval entrance went up about mid-September.

Merry (four months of) Christmas!

Racking up some Pointes

The wavy steel bike rack went back up in its spot outside Rite-Aid on The Hill last Thursday, and there's at least one Pointe bicyclist who couldn't be happier about it. "I'm delighted it's up — and in time for more good biking weather," says the Farms' Mike Mengden, who had been pushing for its return since it disappeared during last year's brick paving project.

Doggedly correct

"We can't call them 'man's best friend' anymore," quipped the Park's Joe Trowern, judging the "My Dog's Better than Your Dog" amateur pooch show at Windmill Pointe Park a few weekends ago. "Now we have to refer to them as 'Canine-Americans.'"

Sister or saint?

Occasionally I write about people who have left an indelible imprint on my life. Sometimes it is their courage that has been inspirational or a unique part of their personality that has demonstrated characteristics that held great admiration or appeal for me. Today I want to tell you about a woman who is probably the gentlest, yet most generous person I know. This dear lady has spent her life in the service of others. She was a school teacher for over 30 years. She has been involved with Campfire Girls for decades, has served as president of her sorority, works as a mentor in the school system in Florida, where she winters, bowls in two weekly leagues when she is in town and has done remedial tutoring as well as patterning for handicapped children. She is the living illustration of the old maxim, "If you want something done, ask a busy person." If you tell her about someone who is troubled, her immediate response is, "What can I do to help?"

She is a great guest. If you invite her for dinner she will probably arrive with some shrimp, a delicious salad or a home baked pie. She once helped me saw a tree that had blocked the driveway at our cottage, rendering us prisoners until we removed the barricade. She stood by my side when I married, has painted by my side as we fixed up a room. She even throws away dead mice and fish while I scream at her side. I said she was slight and delicate in stature, but this gal is made of steel in her resolve and determination, a tiger in pussycat fur.

The diminutive gal of whom I speak is shy. She isn't the first person you would notice when you enter a room. (This might be attributed to the fact that her three siblings are a vocal lot and competition can be fierce when raised in such a household.) She was the one who would speak softly as she went about her daily routines without complaint. Gentle as a snowflake she would join in family activities, but never disrupt the flow. Although married for many years she did not have children. They came to her through marriage, through teaching and through nieces and nephews, who adore her. She is the one who sits on the floor and plays games with them. She is the one who remembers their birthdays, Valentines Day, Easter and many other occasions with gifts, cards or flowers. Not a holiday passes, whether she is in or out of town, that we don't receive a bouquet for our table, accompanied by a loving card.

Sounds like a saint? I wouldn't argue with you. She certainly is worthy of a statue at the very least. I have so little of value to give to her on the occasion of her birthday this October, so forgive me for taking advantage of this vehicle to wish all possible good things and love to my sister, Goggie.

Caught in act
— twice in a day

A grocery store on Mack in Grosse Pointe Woods suffered two incidents of attempted shoplifting in one afternoon on Oct. 15.

At 3:25 p.m., the manager of the meat department noticed a 49-year-old Harper Woods woman in the store for the second time that day. (Earlier that day eight packages of beef tenderloin turned up missing from the meat counter.)

While keeping a close watch on the woman, the meat department manager said he saw her select various cuts of meat and place them in her shopping cart. As he followed her through the store, he said the packages disappeared from the cart.

He informed the store manager and both watched the woman as she waited in the checkout line. Before she had her items rung up by the cashier, the woman suddenly announced she had to get her mother, who was still in the store shopping, and walked toward the frozen food section of the store.

The meat manager said as he followed her, the woman retrieved packages of meat from her purse and her pants.

When she returned to the register, she was escorted to the back of the store where Grosse Pointe Woods police officers were waiting. The woman was arrested for retail fraud. Police recovered from her $43 in meat: two pork tenderloins, one package of New York strip steaks, one boneless beef rib eye steak and one frozen dinner.

At 5:08 p.m. in the same

PUBLIC SAFETY REPORTS

store, an employee told police she saw a 26-year-old Detroit man stuffing several packages of meat into his jacket. When the man was confronted, he said he was going to put the meat back and pay for it.

Woods police arrested him and recovered $62 worth of meat in his possession, including three packages of New York strip steaks, three lamb chops and one beef tenderloin.

Both suspects were released from police custody while the incidents are being further investigated by police.

Help police help you

The City of Grosse Pointe police, after receiving reports that more than six bicycles were stolen inside of a week, realized that most bicycle owners are not purchasing licenses.

Detective Dennis Van Dale said the $1 licenses help police better investigate or identify stolen bikes and return them to their rightful owners.

Contact your local municipal office to find out where bike licenses may be purchased.

Woman reports suspicious call

A Grosse Pointe Farms woman called police on Oct. 19 after she received an unusual collect phone call around 9:30 a.m.

The caller identified himself as Steve Miller of the FBI, from the Cook County Department of Corrections. The caller told the woman that her name came up during a drug arrest at the Minneapolis airport.

The man wanted her to send $1,000 through Western Union to a woman named Tiffani Ann Henderson in Chicago. If the Farms woman did not cooperate, the caller warned, she would be arrested.

The woman hung up the phone and reported the call to police.

Purse snatching on Mack

A 53-year-old Detroit woman had her purse stolen by force as she was leaving a convenience store in Grosse Pointe Farms at 9:30 p.m. Oct. 18.

The woman said the suspects, two men in their late teens or early 20s, were in the store while she was shopping and followed her out to the parking lot. She heard their footsteps approaching and when she turned around was knocked to the ground as one of them grabbed her purse from her left shoulder.

The suspects also ripped a gold chain off her neck and then fled on foot. The woman suffered minor cuts to the right hand and elbow and right knee. Police are investigating the incident.

Armed robbery in the Park

An armed robbery took place at about 1:12 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 18, at the corner of Korte and Barrington.

The victim, a 42-year-old woman, was walking south on Barrington, near Avodale, when she was passed by two men on foot. She told police that she was concerned, but that the two men seemed to leave the area. However, as she turned east onto Korte, the same two men came up to her, and one of them grabbed her purse, while the other held what appeared to be a handgun on her.

After getting the purse, the two men ran toward what the victim called a black sedan with a driver. The suspects were last seen driving north on Barrington. No injuries were reported.

Garage break-in broken up

A garage break-in was broken up when a neighbor reported to police that a suspect was attempting to enter a garage at a home located in the 700 block of Lakepointe by breaking a glass window pane. The incident was reported at about 8:10 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 20.

Park public safety officers were called to the scene and when they arrived they saw the suspect attempting to take two bicycles from the garage. When he saw police he ran, but was captured in the rear yard of nearby home on Pemberton.

A routine background check revealed that the suspect was free on bond for a larceny from an automobile charge in Detroit. The suspect's bond will be set at his arraignment.

Halloween's a treat when you follow basic safety tips

Ghouls, ghosts and goblins, too, AAA Michigan has Halloween safety tips for you.

On Oct. 31, millions of children around the country will venture into the streets calling, "Trick-or-Treat." Parents, youngsters and motorists need to be alert to ensure safe trick-or-treating this Halloween.

- It's best to trick-or-treat before dark. Wear highly visible face make-up rather than wearing a mask.
- Wear simple costumes that are easy to walk in without tripping and attach reflective tape to make them more visible to motorists.

- Avoid big hats and shoes that can cause youngsters to fall and injure themselves.
- Carry a flashlight to make it easier to see and be seen.

• Cross only at corners, never between parked cars or at the middle of the block.

- Only walk down well-lit streets. If there is no sidewalk, always walk facing traffic as far off the road as possible.

pen to like this building." Fenton said part of the problem with the building's interior is the mishmash of renovations. One room has wood-grain paneling and a dropped ceiling with fluorescent lights. The next room has a high, acoustic tile ceiling with incandescent hanging lights. Each room has a different colored carpet or no carpet at all. The 20,000-square-foot building has five entrances.

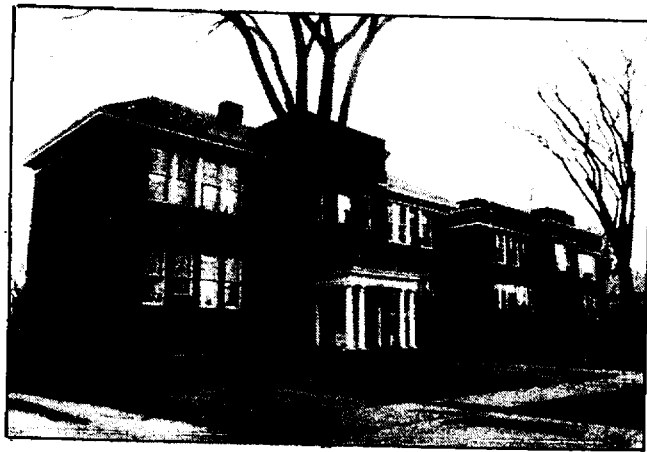

"Every day people come into this building and get lost," he said. "The floor plan is confusing. We are in the process of developing a logical coordinated master plan to address renovation. We haven't decided if it will be done all at once or in phases. It is our hope to have a building that is energy efficient, functional and historically preserved."

Once the school administration has a set of plans to present to the school board and the public, it will seek donations and develop fund raising efforts, he said.

Last week the Cadieux school building exterior was given a power wash, which blasted off a coat of red paint and years of grime, revealing a reddish orange brick face and a brighter appearance.

"Power water washing is a gentler treatment than sand blasting," Fenton said. Because the building needs tuck-pointing, sand blasting would have caused more harm than good. In fact, the older building has several structural cracks in the brick and mortar that stretch from the rooftop to the foundation.

The district has budgeted

The Cadieux school, built in 1906, above, is the older of the two school houses that make up the administrative offices for the Grosse Pointe schools. It recently has had some maintenance and cosmetic repair work done, including tuck pointing to repair damaged bricks. More renovations are planned for both buildings.

approximately $75,000 in its building and site fund to pay for the improvements. The power washing cost about $12,000; shed demolition was $7,000; tuck pointing has cost $3,000 so far; the garage work, exclusive of the electrical work, was done in-house, and cost about $300.

Volunteers needed for 'Great Gatsby'

The Friends of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial are planning a party with a Roaring '20s theme. The Great Gatsby theme event will be next August, but committees have already formed and new volunteers are invited to the next meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 29, at the War Memorial, 32 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms. The Friends are adult volunteers who create new events and activities to support the War Memorial. Friends members range from age 25 to 50 or so and they meet on the first Tuesday of each month. Getting in the mood for the Roaring '20s are, from left, Suzy Berschback, Judy Brownell, Terry and Rosemary Leary, Karla Corio and Lisa Lewandowski. For more information, call the War Memorial at (313) 881-7511.

Oct. 20-26 is school bus safety week

Nationally, each year an average of 20 school-age pedestrians are killed by school buses or vehicles used as school buses. Of the 20 school children killed in school bus loading zones during the 1994-95 school year, 11 were caused by the school bus and nine by passing motorists who failed to stop for the school bus.

Q. What is the greatest hazard for students when using Michigan's school bus transportation system?
A. Data shows that very few students are injured while riding buses. Students are injured most often when preparing to get on a school bus or after getting off. The most serious incidents usually occur when children near the bus, move out of the bus driver's line of sight or dart suddenly across the street without stopping or looking for oncoming traffic.

Q. How many school bus crashes were there in 1995?
A. Last year, 20,184 school buses transported 900,000 students in Michigan while logging 320 million miles. There were 1,423 motor vehicle crashes involving school buses, resulting in 11 deaths and 566 injuries. Most bus crashes were minor, while casualties were usually occupants of another vehicle. In Michigan, vehicles tailgating school buses was the number one cause of school bus crashes.

Q. What can schools do to create a safer environment for children at school bus loading sites?
A. Eliminate vehicle congestion as much as possible where children load and unload. For more information about school bus safety, write the school district's transportation director or AAA Michigan Community Safety Services, One Auto Club Drive, Dearborn, MI 48126.

Q. How can parents help ensure that the ride to and from school is as safe as possible?
A. Make sure the student arrives at the bus stop on time. Also, see that your child waits for the bus in a safe place well off the roadway. When possible, students should be at least 20 feet away from the road. Q. What suggestions do you have for motorists when they encounter a school bus on the road?
A. Drive with extreme caution; children could be nearby. Anticipate the bus stopping and obey this law: When a school bus with flashing overhead red lights is loading or unloading children, motorists must stop at least 20 feet away from the bus and remain stopped until the bus driver turns off the red overhead lights.

Q. How can parents help ensure that the ride to and from school is as safe as possible?
A. Make sure the student arrives at the bus stop on time. Also, see that your child waits

Elaine Hartmann: My Positions Are Clear

Elaine Hartmann on Public Education

Public education in this state is under unprecedented attack in an attempt to convince voters that public schools have failed and to pave the way for a constitutional amendment to permit vouchers. Vouchers take money away from public schools to pay the tuition of a small number of students in private and parochial schools. My opponent supports vouchers (Voters Forum, Calvary Center, 9/26/96). I stand firmly FOR public education and AGAINST vouchers.

Elaine Hartmann on Women's Health Issues

I believe every woman has the right to reproductive health care and to make her own choices about family planning, birth control, and pregnancy. No one should make those decisions for her, least of all the government. Given the chance, my opponent "would vote to make abortion illegal" (Grosse Pointe News, 7/25/96). I will fight to keep a woman's right to choose the law.

Elaine Hartmann on Local School Funding

I believe elected political officials set an example for the community they represent. The Grosse Pointe Public Schools recently held two millage elections before they could secure the funding necessary to operate the schools. Our current state representative took a stand, as did mayors and council members. My opponent took no position and offered no support.

You have a choice. Make it on Nov. 5!

Pointe, Harper Woods residents honored as ALL STAR seniors for their volunteer efforts

Six residents of the Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods will have a "starring role" in the seventh annual Senior "ALL STAR Celebration" on Sunday, Oct. 27, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

Services for Older Citizens Inc. (SOC) will be hosting its volunteer recognition reception honoring senior citizens who have contributed significantly to their time and talent to brighten the lives of others in the community.

This year's honorees are Thomas A. Clark, Peter R. Gilezan, Florence Miller, Jane Kay Nugent, Wayland "Buck" Weaver and John E. Williams.

Clark, of Grosse Pointe Woods, has been devoted to helping others most of his life. When his sons were small, Clark served as president of the Ferry School P.T.A., Cub Scout master and vice president of Little League.

Clark is a charter member (42 years) of the Grosse Pointe Woods Lions Club. He has served in virtually every office and capacity in that organization. He is a Melvin Jones Fellow, the highest distinction awarded in Lions International.

The members of the Grosse Pointe Woods Presbyterian Church know Clark well. During the 48 years he and his wife, Carolyn, have been members, he has held the offices of deacon, trustee, elder, Sunday school teacher and superintendent of the Sunday school.

He's also known as "Mr. Fixanything." He volunteers his plumbing and carpentry talents around the church and in the homes of community elderly.

Recently, Clark was sent to Bulgaria by the Free Trade Union Institute to instruct the former Communist country how to start a business using the capitalist system.

"Helping his fellow man however and whenever he can is the motto Tom lives by," says Mary Dykstra, a longtime friend.

Gilezan is best known for serving on the Grosse Pointe Woods council from 1990-1995. Prior to that, he served on the planning commission for 13 years and chaired council committees on environmental, finance, construction and the Mack Avenue and Milk River studies.

He currently is a member of the Office of Technology Assessment, where he acts as an adviser to the U.S. Congress on technical issues.

As a member volunteer and co-chair of the Detroit/Wayne County Round Table on Sustainable Development, Gilezan studies the redevelopment of properties in Detroit and Wayne County.

In addition, he still has time to teach Sunday school and serve on the vestry of St. Michael's Episcopal Church.

He has held offices on the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, National Industrial Conference Board, Metropolitan Detroit Small Business Campaign for United Foundation, and the Air and Waste Management Association.

Miller, of Grosse Pointe Woods, is a retired Grosse Pointe teacher and school administrator. Since her 1984 retirement, she has filled her days by volunteering all over the metro-Detroit area.

Her leadership roles at the Detroit Institute of Arts earned her the Heart of Gold Award in 1994.

Miller has volunteered with the Detroit Womens Historical Club, Grosse Pointe Womens Club, P.E.O., Richard III Society, the Jane Austin Society and the Grosse Pointe Foundation for Academic Enrichment.

For over 12 years, Miller has been volunteering at Ford Hospital.

She helped set up the Patient Partner Program and she has spent at least one day a week serving as a patient partner.

Volunteerism follows Miller in her church life at St. Michael's Episcopal Church. She has served as a member of the vestry, and the Christian Education and Pastoral Care committee. Currently she sings in the choir.

The past two years she has been a Grosse Pointe Public Library board trustee and served as its secretary in 1994-95. She is presently serving on the board of The Friends of the Grosse Pointe Public Library.

John Bruce, director of the Neighborhood Club, stated, "In my 30 years of working with local government, community organizations and thousands of volunteers, Florence Miller is one of the individuals that I most admire."

Since Nugent's retirement as vice president of Detroit Edison Co. — when she is not on the golf course — she is spending her time actively involved in community affairs.

She is the president of the board of directors of the Children's Home of Detroit. She is also the former president of the board of directors of the Grosse Pointe War Memorial.

In addition, she serves on both the Bon Secours Hospital board and the St. John-Bon Secours Senior Community board.

As an active board member of the Detroit Employer's Service Club, she has worked with young people, encouraging them to train to be professionals.

Nugent also finds time to be active with Leader Dogs for the Blind and volunteers at St. Paul Catholic Church.

Weaver, a Harper Woods resident, is the current president of the Mens Garden Club of Grosse Pointe. He also serves on both the board of directors of Fraternal Order of Police Associates Lodge and the board of directors of the Mens Ecumenical Breakfast held at the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

At his church, St. Michael's Episcopal, Weaver has served on the vestry and chaired the property committee. He is presently an usher, chairman of the church garden club, chairman of seasonal decorations and a member of the property committee.

Alexander Shanoski, a 1993 ALL STAR Award recipient, calls Weaver, "Just an all around nice fellow who is always willing to help."

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Williams knows how to build an entire house in five days. Through his work for Habitat for Humanity, he has helped build several houses for people who would never have a chance to own their own home.

Since his retirement nine years ago, Williams uses his construction knowledge to teach other volunteers building skills. Williams has gone on several work camps with the youth of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church sharing his construction knowledge.

Another volunteer that Williams wears is organizer, promoter and salesman for a fundraising scrip drive for benevolences at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

He is currently volunteering many hours putting together a Senior Mens Club directory.

Past church volunteer activities include serving as elder and trustee, and a member of the worship council.

The ALL STAR Celebration will include food, award presentations and entertainment by the Grunyons. Tickets are $10 and are available at the SOC office, (Barnes school) 20090 Morningside, Grosse Pointe Woods, or by calling (313) 882-9600.

Support for the event is supplied by the MichCon Foundation. All proceeds from the celebration will benefit SOC, which provides services to more than 3,000 residents in the five Grosse Pointes and Harper Woods.

Everyone is encouraged to come and show support of these six outstanding seniors who are helping to make our community a better place.

Woods OKs 3-year contract

By Jim Stickford
Staff Writer

Unlike previous contract negotiations, the Grosse Pointe Woods City Council and members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) easily agreed on a three-year contract Monday night.

City administrator Peter Thomas said that the contract is similar to the previous agreement. There are no changes in medical benefits.

The contract calls for workers to receive a 3 percent pay increase, beginning on Oct. 1, 1996, said Thomas. They will receive a 2 percent increase on April 1, 1997, and another 3 percent increase on July 1, 1997 and again on July 1, 1998. This is in contrast to the last contract negotiations in which agreements weren't reached for a year after the old contract expired. The council voted 6-0 to approve it.

Last-minute registration

The rush of Pointers to get their names on the registration lists for the Nov. 5 election continued right up to the last minute. This picture was taken outside the township offices in the Park Municipal Building just before closing time last Wednesday night. Miss Marjorie Cadieux has just finished registering for her first election. The line to the right was unbroken all the way down the hall and stairs. All of the Pointes reported the heaviest registration in history, including presidential election years. (Grosse Pointe News photo Oct. 24, 1946)

the public."

There was uncommon interest in funeral vehicles this past Labor Day at the traditional Kruse International Classic Car Auction in Auburn, Ind., as a collection was offered for sale at no reserve by Rance Bennett, a funeral coach dealer and restorer in Lowell, Mich.

(A reserve is a minimum price the seller sets on a car going through auction below which it will not sell. "No reserve" means the vehicle will be sold to the highest bidder, no matter how low that bid might be. No reserve sales are very popular with auction-goers, because some real bargains can be had. And were.)

The star of Bennett's collection was a 1916 Cadillac hearse, believed to be the oldest Cadillac hearse in existence. Its body by Giessel was built from hand-carved wood with draperies and full-glass windows for viewing. Bennett had advertised it for sale asking $59,000. It sold at Auburn for $17,000, a rare bargain for the buyer.

The best price brought by Bennett's no-reserve offerings was $35,000 for a 1929 Packard limousine hearse by A.J. Miller Co. Why did the '29 Packard fetch a better price than the much rarer 1916 Cadillac? It is an axiom in the used-car business — and classic cars are, after all, used cars — that condition is everything. The Cadillac was very good, but the Packard was perfect, making it more valuable.

Other hearses sold by Bennett at the no-reserve auction included some rougher units and some real bargains, such as a 1985 Cadillac Victoria Sayers & Scovill, one of the first front-wheel-drive Cadillac hearses, $3,250; a 1957 Cadillac Victoria Sayers and Scovill, $1,750; a 1947 Cadillac Sayers and Scovill, $1,000; a 1947 Cadillac Sayers and Scovill, $600; a 1968 Cadillac Miller-Meteor, $600; a 1935 Pierce-Arrow Eureka, $500; a 1958 Cadillac Miller-Meteor, $450, and a 1955 Pontiac Superior, $200.

Asked if there was a big business in vintage hearse sales, Bennett said: "Not really. Most of our customers are funeral directors. They use these vintage hearses, both motorized and horse-drawn, in their businesses. They are not collectors in the sense that they buy them to drive around in."

Bennett said he is often asked by funeral directors to find an interesting vintage hearse and restore it. "Most of the restorations we do are on pre-World War II vehicles and horse-drawn units," he said.

Hearses were usually built on luxury car chassis by special body builders. Cadillacs, Packards and other luxury cars have been the most popular, but there are also Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Ford Model T hearses to be seen at classic car gatherings and also hearses built on chassis from long-departed (but not forgotten) makers, such as Packard, Marmon and Auburn.

With the special bodies, reinforced frames and beefed-up suspension, hearses usually wound up weighing three tons and up, so they are not economical transportation.

There are many fine old names of hearse builders known to funeral directors and collectors of vintage hearses, but as is true with automobile nameplates of the past, most are gone.

Four major names survive and the hearse-building industry is pretty much an Ohio enterprise now. Most of the market of about 2,500 hearse sales a year are accounted for by Superior Coach, Lima, Ohio, which builds Superior and S&S (Sayers and Scovill) coaches, and CCE Corp., of Norwalk, Ohio, which produces hearses under the brand names Eureka and Miller-Meteor.

While there are a few custom body firms that build a few hearses every year, such as Krystal Koach, of Brea, Calif., most hearses are now built by those two Ohio firms and carry the historic names of Superior, Sayers and Scovill, Eureka and Miller-Meteor.

Other historic funeral coach names no longer active include Giessel, Cunningham and Riddle. "Cunningham, of Rochester, N.Y., built very high-quality hearses, beginning with horse-drawn units in 1838," Bennett said. "They went out of business during the Depression, in 1936, almost 100 years of building very high quality hearses. Early in the century, they built their own engines and chassis, later went to putting their bodies on commercial products."

One of the highest quality builders of vintage hearses was Riddle Coach and Hearse, of Ravenna, Ohio, Bennett added.

"About 85 percent of the hearses built today are built on Cadillac chassis," said Walt McCall, of Windsor, Ont., editor of the Professional Car Society Journal. "Cadillac has canceled its Fleetwood body, which was the favorite. It is now introducing its replacement funeral coach package to meetings of funeral directors, based on the DeVille chassis."

McCall said that in the past such automobiles as Packard,

Auburn, Pierce-Arrow, Lincoln and even Pontiac and Oldsmobile have served as platforms for hearses, but that Cadillac has always had the largest share.

"These cars were used for hearses because of their luxury appointments, the strength and stiffness of the chassis, the power of their engines and the dignified image they provided."

Steve Furry, vice president marketing for CCE funeral coach maker in Norwalk, Ohio, said he anticipates no problem switching to the DeVille chassis. CCE Inc., was created by the merger of Eureka, which had moved from Toronto to Norwalk, with Miller-Meteor.

"We build mostly Cadillacs because that is what the funeral directors want. We build to order. The DeVille hearse will be almost as big as the Fleetwood," he said.

Furry said his firm produces about 600 Eureka and Miller-Meteor coaches a year, about 60 percent of its volume, out of a total market for funeral vehicles of about 2,500.

Most of the rest of those vehicles are produced by Superior and marketed under the Superior and S&S names. Most hearses sell for upwards of $60,000.

Collector Ryan Border, of Mountain View, Calif., a member of the Grim Rides club, has one of the more unusual hearses, not because of its original manufacture but because of what he has done to it and the fact that he uses it as an everyday driver.

It is a 1960 Cadillac Commercial Chassis with body by Superior Coachworks, a Landauette three-way electric sideloader hearse. Its original color was white. It has a 390-cubic-inch Cadillac V-8 and weighs about 6,500 pounds.

Border said the body was kind of rough, with small areas of rust here and there, but it had all the chrome, and, most importantly, all the glass.

"A sideloader is really a neat body," he said. "The front doors open normally, but right behind them are enormous suicide doors, with no pillar between the doors. So when you open both doors, the whole side of the car opens up."

Border said he had the body restored and painted by Almaden Color Service in South San Jose. It is still white, but now it also has flames, "a single-shot three-color fade going from yellow to red, tipped in purple."

He said he drives it almost daily, despite the fact that it gets only 8 miles per gallon.

A reminder: Memory doesn't diminish with age

By Marion Trainor
Special Writer

You forgot where you put your keys and you can't remember if your luncheon date is tomorrow or next week. You sigh and chalk it up to the belief that poor memory is one of the penalties you pay for living a long life.

Sorry, but that excuse won't work anymore.

Experts have found that the difference in what older people remember and what the young remember is very small.

In a study done by Roger Dixon of the Max Planck Institute for Human Behavior, the ability of people in their 30s to recall a short text was compared with the recall of those in their 60s. It was found that given equal verbal skills, there was little difference.

Beyond the assurance that poor memory is not part of the aging process, such studies provide evidence that older people can go on learning as long as the desire to acquire new skills and interests remains.

It may even be possible for them to get more out of learning because they bring to the subject a background of living experience.

The older person who has survived four wars will have a broader base of understanding of the effect of war on people and nations than a younger student whose acquaintance with American history is limited to lectures and the written word.

It is this portfolio of living experience that may account for the differences experts uncovered in the process of remembering between younger and older people.

They found that younger people tend to remember the facts of a story but older people were better at remembering the point of a story.

This seems logical since younger people have little to go on but facts, while someone who has lived a long life can computerize facts into his or her subconscious memory and sort them into a pattern that leads to a conclusion based on life experience.

And what a wealth of experience the older generation of the 1990s has to draw on. If there is one word that characterizes this century it is change — change so rapid that it is remarkable that those who lived through it have been able to assimilate it.

Beside the personal changes that occur in everyone's life, there were rapid changes brought on by technology.

My mother lived in a house that had a step-stone at the curb for ladies alighting from horse-drawn carriages.

She saw the homes of her friends torn down to make way for urban renewal.

But however meaningful these findings concerning the capacity of older people to remember, they don't do much to help with the problem of retrieving misplaced keys or forgotten luncheon dates beyond the assurance that such memory lapses are common to all ages.

It is not only good to know that memory doesn't decline with age, but we are also assured that age does not affect intelligence.

A study done by Raymond Cattell and John Horn found that when intelligence scores did decline during post-retirement, it was generally because older people were made to feel left out.

It was found that sometimes society encourages older people to play the "sick role," a role that exempts them from their normal obligations. This attitude can discourage perfectly capable people from engaging in activities requiring independence and competence.

This self-image and behavior in turn reinforces an image of lowered intelligence when actually the same potential is there, needing only self-motivation.

Do memory and intelligence decline with age?

The answer is no, particularly in this time when older people enjoy greater health and vigor than their predecessors.

Medicare covers winter flu shots for seniors

A new strain of the flu virus is expected to circulate in the United States this winter and health department officials are encouraging the elderly to get their flu shots as soon as possible. Influenza (flu) is a viral infection of the bronchial tubes and lungs. "Elderly people are particularly vulnerable to complications from the flu," said George R. Gerber, M.D., the Medicare medical director for Michigan. "Of the 10,000 to 30,000 Americans who die from influenza every year, more than 80 percent are elderly."

Melinda Dixson, M.D., head of disease control at the Detroit Health Department, agrees. "The elderly are more susceptible to the flu virus," she said. "Flu shots are not 100 percent effective, but if a person catches the virus after getting a flu shot, the illness and its adverse effects will be much less severe."

Seniors need to remember that Medicare pays for flu vac-inations and, second, that they can get flu shots without a physician's order. Gerber also recommends that anyone covered by Medicare get a flu shot unless they have a problem with allergies.

Seniors who have Medicare Part B can receive flu shots upon request without a physician's order and without physician supervision. Medicare recipients can present their Medicare card to any doctor, clinic or city site providing them with a flu shot. The physician or flu shot provider must have a Medicare provider number in order to bill Medicare for payment. Medicare generally will pay for one flu shot per beneficiary each flu season.

Gerber said more seniors are aware that the shots can be received through their private physicians as well as through public health programs at clinics, and senior centers around Detroit.

Dow Jones closes at record high about 6,000 — and rising

By Joseph Mengden
The psychological barrier of 6,000 was finally broken on Monday, Oct. 14, when the Dow Jones Industrials (DJI) index closed at 6,010. The 6,000 level itself was insignificant, since it is only a marker. Arithmetically speaking, 6,000 is one number above 5,999, no more, no less! The same theory applies to the upcoming A.D. 2,000.

Mengden

Each 1,000 increase in the DJI requires less effort, percentagewise. Do you remember way back when the DJI broke the 1,000 level shown in the table right?

Notice that the effect of the market moving from 5,000 to 6,000 was only one-fifth of that required when the market moved from 1,000 to 2,000.

It should also be pointed out that the DJI index is unweighted, in contrast to the S&P 500 index, which is weighted by the number of shares outstanding for each of the 500 component stocks. Thus, in the S&P, a 1 point price increase in a high-cap stock like COCA COLA (KO), which has almost 2.5 billion shares outstanding, has about eight times the effect of a 1 point price increase in FIRST CHICAGO/NBD, which has only about 316 million shares outstanding.

Let's go back to the unweighted DJI (see LTS, August 22, 1996). Each time one of the 30 component stocks has a stock dividend, a stock split, or a spin-off (AT&T recently spun off LUCENT TECHNOLOGIES [LU] shares to T's shareholders, resulting in a decline in T's market price), the DJI "Divisor" is adjusted downward.

You can check the current DJI Divisor each week in BARON'S Market Laboratory Section. On Oct. 14, 1996, it is listed in the top left corner of page MW112, under "DJ Half-Hourly Averages". The Oct. 11 Friday close produced a divisor of 0.33539933, which is fractionally less than the 0.33792816 quoted in the earlier referenced LTS article.

It is interesting to develop a spreadsheet of the 30 DJI stocks, ranked by price. The table, below, shows the number of the DJI stocks in each price range, using closing prices on Friday, Oct. 11, 1996:

The table, right, clearly shows the DJI to be dominated by the "Blue Chips," which are priced at $40 per share, plus. Note that a price increase of 1 point for a $90 stock is about the same as a 1/8 point increase in a $10 stock, percentagewise. The DJI Divisor is worth examining further. If each of the 30 stocks had a price increase of 1 point (which is almost impossible in the real world), the DJI would jump 89.45 points! ($1 per share multiplied by 30, divided by 0.33539933).

Now let's look at the Divisor from another angle. We used to be really impressed by a 50-point rise in the DJI (Big news on the 6 PM, 10 PM and 11 PM TV News!), but that's only an average increase of 1/2 to 5/8 of a point for each of the DJI 30 stocks (50 points multiplied by 0.33539933, divided by 30).

How to find a broker

Last week, LTS suggested you find three referrals for an investment/brokerage firm. Should you look only for an "old firm" (Established A.D. 19XX)? Being old certainly indicates a survival instinct! Or should you look for a "Member, New York Stock Exchange Inc.?" Certainly ownership of a NYSE "seat" shows that the partners/stockholders of that firm have invested over $1 million (market value) in that "seat," their ticket to do business.

Every investment/brokerage firm must be a member of SIPC (Securities Investors Protection Corp.), which insures your account to specific limits. Why not ask if the firm has additional insurance of accounts, over and above the SIPC limits? All firms doing business with the public must be members of the National Association of Securities Dealers Inc. (NASD).

In selecting a stock broker, does age make a difference? Most people feel more comfortable doing business with a professional whose age is within 10 years of their own. LTS suggests that you might deliberately look for someone about 10 years younger than you are. LTS, in earlier life, made the mistake of selecting a dentist and physician who were older. Both have retired, and LTS has had to start another search.

Age is not as important as experience. Why not look for a stock broker with at least 10 years' experience, someone who lived through "Black Monday" in October 1987.

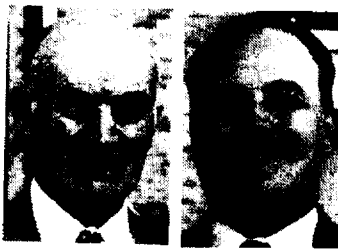

Maxitrol celebrates its 50th

Four current and former Grosse Pointers are kicking off a year-long 50th anniversary celebration for their internationally-recognized manufacturing company, Maxitrol, whose primary products are natural gas pressure regulators and other controls used on industrial, commercial, and residential gas-fired equipment.

Area resident Frank Kern Jr., who founded the company in 1946, participated in the celebration.

Grosse Pointe Park resident Frank Kern III, Maxitrol president and COO, served as master of ceremonies at a recent anniversary party attended by more than 300 employees, retirees and other guests. Former weatherman Sonny Eliot was guest speaker for the event.

"The year-long celebration highlights the major accomplishments of the company and its employees, and provides an opportunity to honor my father, founder of the company,

Dana Commercial Credit receives award

Dana Commercial Credit was awarded last week the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award by President Bill Clinton through the Department of Commerce.

President of Dana Commercial Credit is Grosse Pointe Farms resident J. Stephen Gagne. He has been president since 1986. By virtue of this position, Gagne also serves as president of one of the corporation's core product groups, Dealer Products. Gagne has two children and his wife's name is Julie.

Dana Commercial Credit is a financial and leasing division of the Dana Corporation with offices in Troy, MI.

The Baldrige Award, often described as "the standard of business excellence," was established by Congress in 1987 to promote quality awareness, recognize the quality achievements of companies and publicize successful quality strategies.

In conjunction with private industry, the Commerce Department's National Institute of Standards and Technology manages the award program.

"The people of Dana Commercial Credit are the real winners of this award. They have worked incredibly hard to build a service culture squarely aimed at satisfying customers," said its chairman and CEO Ed Shultz.

Since 1987, 28 companies have won the Baldrige Award. Two awards may be given in each of three categories: manufacturing service and small business.

Since its inception nine years ago, only six companies have won in the service category, one of which is now Dana Commercial Credit. Prior to Dana winning the award this year, the last service award was issued in 1994.

To win the award, Dana Commercial Credit underwent a rigorous, three-step evaluation: an independent review of Dana Commercial Credit's written application by 10 to 12 examiners from public and private sectors, a consensus meeting among seven Baldrige examiners and a site visit by the examiners. Seven criteria were measured: leadership, information and analysis, strategic planning, human resource development and management, process management, business results, and customer focus and satisfaction.

Dana Corporation is a glob-

Holmes was formerly a shareholder with Butzel Long law firm, and a partner with Honigman Miller Schwartz and Cohn law firm. Holmes has worked for the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington D.C.

Bolton

Grosse Pointe Farms resident Richard M. Bolton was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce. He was elected to a two-year term by the full membership of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce. As a Michigan Chamber board member, Bolton will be involved in establishing policy on major economic, legislative, political and social issues that affect Michigan's business and economic climate. Bolton is a partner and head of the corporate, securities and business law practice group of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, VanDusen & Freeman law firm in Detroit.

City of Grosse Pointe resident Gail L. Warden, president and chief executive officer of Henry Ford Health System, received the 1996 Corporate Award last Thursday in Washington, D.C. from the Executive Leadership Council, the nation's most prominent group of African-American corporate executives. The annual award recognizes organizations that create an environment which values the contributions, talents and expertise of minority employees. The council's membership includes management executives from virtually every business, industry and service sector in the country.

FLUID SITUATION

One commonly overlooked maintenance procedure involves replacing the brake fluid. The reason that brake fluid is one of the most neglected and improperly serviced components is that many auto-service manuals suggest draining and flushing the brake system only if there is evidence of fluid contamination or observable deterioration. Contamination and fluid deterioration, however, are inevitable and usually undetectable. By the time their effects are noticeable, damage has already occurred. Brake fluid is exceedingly hygroscopic, meaning that it absorbs moisture from the atmosphere, likely through microscopic openings in flexible brake hoses or through openings around rubber seals. Once the brake fluid is contaminated by moisture, it begins to break down and its ability to prevent corrosion declines along with its boiling point and lubrication properties. This increases the likelihood of dragging brakes and lost braking power.

Checking all fluids—whether brake or transmission or wiper—before going on a long trip is a good idea to help prevent breakdown on the road. At RINKE TOYOTA, we work with our customers to find just what they need. We guarantee our work, our products, and our services. You can reach us at 758-2000, or stop in and see us at 25420 Van Dyke. Turning fun and frolic into gain and loss: Hobbies as businesses

Do you enjoy raising cats, collecting coins, or taking photographs? Would you like to earn valuable tax breaks for doing something you find pleasurable? Then try turning your avocation into a sideline business, recommends the Michigan Association of CPAs. You'll be able to generate additional income, as well as realize some significant tax breaks.

Here's how you may be affected by some of the hobby rules. Traveling to a coin show or planning to attend a conference for stamp collectors? Typically, when you travel on business in connection with a hobby, you won't get much help from Uncle Sam.

Although you must claim the full amount of income you earn from your hobby, hobby-related expenses are generally deductible only to the extent of income produced by the activity. So if you don't generate any income from your hobby, you can't claim any deductions.

What's more, even those hobby expenses which can be deducted are subject to an additional limitation: they are considered miscellaneous itemized deductions, which are deductible only to the extent that they exceed 2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

In contrast, if your activity can be classified as a bona fide business, you may be able to deduct the full amount of your expenses for such things as travel and meetings (and 50 percent of the cost of business meal and entertainment expenses) on Schedule C of your tax return.

Having trouble locating buyers for the Olympics memorabilia you bought? Don't count on getting a break from Uncle Sam for losses you incur if this is a hobby of yours. A hobby loss won't cut your overall tax bill because the tax law stipulates you can't use a hobby loss to offset other income.

In contrast, converting your hobby into a bona fide business means you can deduct a net loss from other income you earn, such as salary. The ability to deduct losses is one of the major tax advantages of running a business as opposed to pursuing a hobby.

Need to purchase a new enlarger for your photography room or storage cases for your collection of Egyptian artifacts? Again, unless you have hobby income, Internal Revenue Service (IRS) rules prohibit you from deducting these hobby costs.

However, such depreciable expenses are deductible from your business income. In addition, if you need to make large equipment purchases, you may be entitled to an expense deduction which allows you to deduct up to $17,500 worth of business equipment in one year.

Other tax-wise reasons to convert your hobby into a business include the possibility of qualifying for the home office deduction and making deductible contributions to a Keogh or SEP plan.

How does the IRS determine whether your activity is a hobby or a for-profit business? The primary determinant is your ability to make a profit at what you are doing. If your efforts result in a profit in three out of five consecutive years, your activity is presumed not to be a hobby by the IRS. Also, if you breed, train, race or show horses and you realize profit in two out of the last seven consecutive years, your activity is presumed not to be a hobby. If you don't meet the three-out-of-five years profit rule, is all lost? Not necessarily. You can request that the IRS hold off on making its determination until you have been in business five years.

You'll need to file Form 5213, "Election to Postpone Determination as to whether the Presumption that Activity Engaged in is For Profit."

If you can prove to the IRS' satisfaction that you have made a genuine effort to earn a profit and that the reason you were not successful was related to special circumstances, the IRS may agree to take a closer look at your case.

Some of the factors the IRS will consider include: the extent to which you carry on the activity in a businesslike manner; the amount of time and effort you put into the activity; your expertise and that of others involved in your activity; your success in carrying out similar activities; the amount of occasional profits your activity realizes; and your financial status.

To increase your chance of gaining the IRS' recognition of your business, CPAs recommend you run your activity in a professional, businesslike manner.

Have business cards and stationery printed, maintain a separate business checking account and telephone number, keep accurate records of the time you put in, and carefully document all business-related expenses.

Now you don't have to go far...to make your money go farther.

G.P. South graduate produces program that helps families of substance abusers

By Amy Andraou Miller
Staff Writer

What if learning the early warning signs of alcohol and drug abuse — and knowing how to respond — were a skill as common as administering CPR?

One Grosse Pointe South High School graduate hopes he can make that true.

Jeff Jay, a graduate of the class of 1973, has produced a program — complete with cassette tapes, audio tape, and workbook — to help people learn about the illness of drug and/or alcohol dependency, and to know how to intervene and get treatment for someone with a problem.

Jay's program is not for the person who has the drinking and/or drug abuse problem. His program is for the family.

And "family" need not be defined as immediate family members, he said. Family can include any individuals who care about the addicted person, including friends, employers, co-workers, clergy, and others.

Jay's program educates the family about what constitutes addiction; what is happening to the body and mind chemistry of an addicted person; how to properly interact with someone who has an addiction; and how to intervene to get help for him or her.

He said the program was critically needed because society still is stuck in the mindset that people ought not to help an addicted person unless the addicted person wants to help himself or herself.

He said the medical profession has not embraced that thought in decades.

"People think that you can't help someone until they hit rock bottom," Jay said.

"This program is all about raising that bottom."

Raising the bottom means not waiting for something terrible to happen — such as a serious car accident, the loss of a job, the breakup of a relationship — to make the addicted person "wake up."

"Why wait for the worst types of intervening factors to occur in the life of an addicted person?" Jay asked.

"It's better to have loved ones perform a structured intervention in the early stages of addiction," he said. "And the sooner people get help, the less damage there is to their bodies."

A 1989 Brown University study showed that substance abusers intervened on by concerned persons had a 64 percent higher success rate in recovery than those in recovery who were not intervened on.

Jay, who has worked around the country as an addiction therapist, has seen addicted people make efforts to kick their bad habits for such transparent reasons as to beat a drunk driving ticket. He noted that they quickly return to their old habits.

"The family unit has tremendous power to affect changes when it comes to chemical dependency," Jay said. "That feels good to know. There is hope."

While families have tremendous power, they also need direction. Family members who exercise common sense in trying to deal with a person with an addiction will likely fail because the addicted person cannot reason when it comes to issues associated with his or her addiction, Jay said.

"Addiction doesn't respond to common sense," he added. Jay's tapes also state that addiction is a chronic, debilitating disease, not a character flaw.

Jay said, "You can yell and scream, plead and beg, reason and persuade, cry or turn away in silence, and still you can't get through to them. And the worst part is, you're talking to someone you love."

"They may look the same, but the reality is they are imprisoned by addiction. What makes it so difficult is that they don't even realize it."

The proper way to deal with someone with an addiction is complex, and better left to the more detailed explanation on the program's cassette tapes.

Essentially, it helps family see that many relatives and friends unwittingly help or enable the disease by covering up for the person with the addiction. They may even tolerate and live within the destructive dynamics established by the addicted.

The program, "Take Charge! with Jeff Jay" — has attracted attention and praise. Families, clergy, educators, and others from around the country deluge Jay with fan letters. Jay and his wife, Debra, now live in Northville. Private and corporate donations have placed a copy of Jay's program in every public library in Washington, D.C., and Florida — two places Jay previously worked as an addiction therapist. Jay's program carries endorsements from health care professionals at top addiction treatment centers such as the Betty Ford Clinic. In fact, his materials were produced in conjunction with the Hanley-Hazelden Center in West Palm Beach, Fla., where he also worked.

His help column is also published in more than 800 newspapers across the country.

Now Jay, director of program development for Brighton Hospital — the oldest substance abuse treatment center in Michigan, hopes Grosse Pointers will "Take Charge!"

According to a Wayne County Health Department survey that several thousand Grosse Pointe and Harper Woods residents filled out last May, the majority of residents believe "taking charge" is precisely what needs to be done.

In the survey, 54 percent cited excessive drinking of alcohol as a risky behavior in which either they or neighbors, friends, and relatives engage.

Statistics show that approximately 100 million people in the nation are related to, or living with, someone with an alcohol problem. That's one out of every three people.

Furthermore, most alcoholics or people with a drug addiction appear as reasonably functional members of society.

Jay said this is particularly true in Grosse Pointe.

"The bottom line is people here look good. Despite having an addiction problem, a person here likely will still dress well, have a good job and salary, drive a nice car, and own a nice home."

That's why it is tough to believe there is a problem.

What constitutes a problem? The National Health Survey classified heavy drinkers as those who consume one or more ounces of alcohol per day.

Many alcoholics do not drink daily, but on weekends only, Jay said.

"People here drink fine wine. Many adopt the attitude if you open a bottle of high quality wine, you must finish that bottle. You don't recork it. That's a dangerous attitude when there are only one or two people sharing that bottle," Jay said.

The bottom line, he said, is someone is an alcoholic if alcohol consumption is impacting any part of his or her life.

"You are an alcoholic if you routinely come home from work, reward yourself with enough drinks that make you fall asleep on your sofa. As benign as that sounds, it is still alcohol affecting your life negatively."

"Only about five percent of alcoholics are on skid row," Jay said.

He once was one of the five percent. The former National Merit Scholar and president of the student government association at South High was already on his way to becoming an alcoholic after high school. He added a little drug experimentation until his great college grades slipped so far, he flunked classes and left before graduating. Six years ago, the 41-year-old man completed a college degree at the University of Minnesota.

His drinking as a teenager and into his 20s left him homeless in San Francisco with a bleeding ulcerated stomach and bleeding colon. At 26, he could have died.

But his family intervened — successfully.

He has been drug and alcohol free since Oct. 4, 1981, he said. Since then he has dedicated himself to helping both people who have drinking and drug addictions like he had, and helping family members learn to intervene as his family did for him.

He is grateful to his family for what they did for him. There weren't low cost, highly accessible programs to guide and give advice.

Jay said he felt that if his family did whatever it took to learn, and succeeded in reaching out to him, that it was likely other families wanted to do the same.

He felt compelled to create an inexpensive, helpful program, he said. It retails for about $100.

To purchase or borrow the tapes, or to speak to Jay, call Brighton Hospital at (810) 227-1211.

Who is Jesus?

By the Rev. Ron Corl

Redeemer United Methodist Church

Who is Jesus? What difference can he make in our lives?

As a Christian I have come to realize that Jesus was and is a historical human being who physically walked this earth some 2,000 years ago. Jesus was a man from Nazareth in Galilee, of ancient Israel.

In Jesus, God revealed to us what God was like — compassionate, loving and forgiving. At the same time God holds the rest of us accountable to be the same — compassionate, loving and forgiving.

Without these qualities in our lives, something is missing.

In the New Testament of the Bible, the Gospel writers Matthew, Mark and Luke tell the story of a rich man who approaches Jesus one day with this question: "What must I do to inherit eternal life?"

The man was well-to-do, had many possessions, and was considered successful in the ways of the world. He was a religious man who worshiped on the Sabbath day. He honored and cared for his parents. He was faithful to his wife. He did not steal or defraud anyone. He was careful not to gossip or tell half-truths about his neighbor. In the eyes of the world he was a "good" man, but Jesus reminded him that only God was completely good.

Jesus really liked this man. He believed he would be a good disciple if — and it was a big "if" — he was willing to detach himself from all that he possessed and follow Jesus in caring for others with love and compassion.

In doing so, the Holy Spirit of God would be alive in him. He would become filled with "love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, generosity, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control." (See Galatians 5:22,23 in the New Testament.)

His treasure would be in heaven. His life would be complete. He would be about to live the life that is eternal.

But alas, he could not, for his possessions had now come to possess him and he could not bring himself to break loose from them. So he went away grieving.

The difference that Jesus makes in one's life, when we follow him, his way and his truth; and when we allow the Holy Spirit of God, of love and compassion to live in and through us, is that we, too, find what has been missing in our lives.

I have discovered that the more I allow the Holy Spirit of God to live in and through me, the more that I follow the "way and truth" of Jesus, the more that my life is complete.

I discover that I am more loving, more joyful, more peaceful, patient, kind, generous, faithful and gentle. I discover then that I have more self-control over my life and can resist the unhealthy temptations of the world and our culture's way of living.

If you believe something is missing in your life, find out who Jesus is and what a difference he can make in your life. Your treasure will be that which is everlasting.

I know this is a hard thing to do, but with God's help it is really possible. Keep trying.

Leningrad Codex: background

In the fifth and sixth centuries, written texts of the Hebrew Bible were painstakingly produced by scribes using consonants alone, indicating neither vowel, accent or cantillation marks.

Concerns about survival of the knowledge required to read, pronounce, chant and understand the text led to the development of the vowel and other marks which are now a common part of the Hebrew Bible. The marks, or points, were developed between the seventh and ninth centuries by a group known as Masoretes.

In addition to the markings, the Masoretic scholars added explanatory notes on the margins of each page.

These collections of critical and explanatory notes are traditionally accepted as an authoritative, interpretive guide, especially regarding pronunciation and grammar. Text which contains both the markings and the marginal notes are referred to as "codex editions."

The first codex of the complete Hebrew Bible dates to the 10th century. Known as the Aleppo Codex, it exists today only in fire-damaged and fragmentary form. The Leningrad Codex was another complete codex produced by the Tiberian School. It dates to the year 1009 CE and is the oldest surviving codex of the complete Hebrew Bible.

Bon Secours Guild

The 100-plus-member Bon Secours Guild sponsors various fundraisers each year to help purchase medical equipment and provide support programs and facilities for Bon Secours Hospital.

New officers for 1996-97 are, from left, Ruth Yeager of St. Clair Shores, corresponding secretary; Betty Grebe of Grosse Pointe Woods, treasurer; Virginia Florence of Grosse Pointe Park, president; Mary Ann Roland of the Woods, vice president; Elaine Griffith of the Woods, recording secretary; and Doris Hoepfer of the Woods, financial secretary/membership.

G.P. Memorial Church celebrates publication of biblical manuscript

The publication of the Leningrad Codex, the oldest surviving manuscript of the complete Hebrew Bible, will be celebrated in Grosse Pointe and Ann Arbor next week.

"It isn't often that religious and academic communities cooperate on a scholarly project," said the Rev. V. Bruce Rigdon, pastor of Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, which will sponsor a celebration of the now-accessible photo-facsimile of the Leningrad Codex.

The celebration will begin on Sunday, Oct. 27, at the 9 and 11 a.m. worship services at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, 16 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Farms. Professor Ralph Williams, director of the University of Michigan's Program of Studies in Religion, will speak at both services. The community is invited.

A dedication service will be held at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 27, at Memorial Church, followed by a dinner at 6 p.m. at the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

Professor James A. Sanders, internationally recognized authority on the Dead Sea Scrolls, will be the speaker at the dinner. Cost of the dinner is $35. Reservations are necessary by Friday, Oct. 25. Call (313) 882-5330.

The original Leningrad Codex dates back to the 11th century and consists of nearly 1,000 handwritten and annotated pages. It was discovered by Abraham Firkovich (1787-1874), a collector of ancient manuscripts, and is the centerpiece of the Firkovich-Antonin Collection, housed in the Saltykov-Shchedrin State Public Library in Leningrad. The manuscript is considered central to every modern presentation of the Bible.

While a facsimile edition of the codex was published in 1971, most of the marginal notes were lost in the process or were unreadable.

In the late 1980s, a group of American scholars began negotiating permission to re-photograph the pages of the codex, using modern techniques. Rigdon was among those instrumental in gaining approval for the project. He made many trips to Russia and was involved in the negotiation process with representatives from a number of institutions, including the Program of Studies in Religion at the University of Michigan.

The celebration of the publication of the Leningrad Codex will continue in Ann Arbor on Monday, Oct. 28, with a free seminar, "Text, Technology, Authority: The Leningrad Codex."

The program will feature University of Michigan professor emeritus David Noel Freedman, editor of the project; and Dr. Astrid Beck, program associate of the College of LS&A's Program on Studies in Religion; and others who will discuss the origin of the text, its transmission, the questions of authority about it and the technology which has made the new edition possible.

The free seminar and a reception afterward will be from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Monday, Oct. 28, in room 1210 of the Chemistry Building at the University of Michigan. The public is invited.

LDRPs make birthing better

By Dr. Minu Kashef
Special Writer

If you asked your great-grandmother about her birthing experience, you'd probably discover that she gave birth at home. Within these familiar surroundings and with family close by, 95 percent of all babies born at the turn of the century were, in fact, born at home.

As more hospitals were built, however, it became "fashionable" for upper-class women to give birth in a hospital. Women liked knowing that a hospital could provide a physician's expertise. By 1940, more than 50 percent of women were choosing hospitals for their birthing experiences and by 1945 some 79 percent of all births were taking place in hospitals.

Dr. Minu Kashef

The 60s birthing "revolution"

Not surprisingly, hospital births increased to 99 percent by 1969. And while the 60s recorded a tremendously large number of hospital births, it was during this same time that a counterrevolution was under way. The women's movement was in full swing and women across the nation were demanding more control over their lives and the birthing process. Now, the "birthing pendulum" was swinging in the reverse direction.

The limited return to home birthing, however, could not satisfy women who were increasingly better-educated and desirous of a birthing experience that was somewhere between home and the hospital.

LDRPs — the best of both worlds

The answer to this demand eventually came in the form of LDRPs (labor/delivery/recovery/post-partum rooms), where women with uncomplicated pregnancies could deliver their newborns. LDRP rooms bring together the best of both worlds — a home-like, family-centered atmosphere within which to give birth that also provides access to medical support and technology, should it be needed. LDRPs allow mothers to experience the birthing process in the comfort of one room instead of being moved to different areas during the multiple stages of labor.

Teens tackle depression in new teaching video

Each year 17 million people suffer from depression — a disease that until recently was not considered a valid explanation for changes in mood or behavior, work performance and social relationships.

Depression also affects young people. Some 10 percent of children and adolescents are suffering from this disease, which can tear a family apart. Sadly enough, most of this suffering can be prevented with proper diagnosis and treatment.

"For many teens depression is a very real and devastating illness," says Sister Janet Ryan, director of pastoral care at Children's Hospital of Michigan. "Kids need to know that there is help for them. They don't have to suffer

Recognizing depression in seniors

Loss of a spouse or friends, side-effects of medication, decreased mobility — lifestyle changes that accompany the aging process and can lead to depression in seniors.

However, if depression is recognized and the root cause can be identified, it may be reversible.

Dr. James D. Adamo, psychiatrist, will help you discover answers for why mother (or another senior in your life) just doesn't seem to be herself lately and what can be done about it at a free community program "Seniors and Depression" from 2:30 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 30, at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital.

"Seniors and Depression" is one in the series of LifeWise 55 informative programs at Henry Ford Cottage designed for people 55 and older. People of all ages, however, are encouraged to attend. For reservations, call (313) 640-2425.

alone." Compared to adults, only a small number of teens experience depression. But alarming statistics are proving that it is not a disease to be ignored, especially in adolescents.

"In the last 30 years we've seen the rate of teen suicide increase by 300 percent," says Ryan. "This is our call to action. Parents, caretakers, and professionals have to listen to what these numbers are telling us — our children need our help."

"Lost & Found: Young People Talk About Depression" is the latest video project produced by Children's Hospital of Michigan.

In it, teens talk about their own struggles with depression and what they did, and still do, to overcome an illness to which most thought they were immune.

In the award-winning video, we are introduced to eight young women and men who share their personal triumphs as they work through and eventually conquer their depression.

These articulate young people are:

• Stephanie, who wrestles with lifelong attempts to satisfy everyone but herself.

• Peter, who used drugs to medicate his feelings of anger and loss after being diagnosed with diabetes.

• Laura and Erika, sisters who reveal sadness and guilt after their father's suicide.

• Donitha, who finds herself in and out of foster homes after reporting abuse by her father.

• John, who traces his depression back to living with chronic kidney disease.

• Kate, John's sister, who fears losing her brother and the potential impact on her family.

• Manuel, who lost a friend in an accident and tells how difficult it is for young men to share their feelings with others.

Some facts about depression:

• Depression among adolescents has increased by 300 percent over the last 30 years.

• Depression is considered a major health problem, with suicide as one of the leading causes of death among young people.

• Sadness and depression are not the same. Sadness is a common experience lasting a short period of time. Depression can last for several weeks, changing moods, social relationships even bodily functions.

• Depression can be caused by a number of factors, including genetics, biochemistry and environment.

Tips for parents:

• Familiarize yourself with the following symptoms of depression: persistent sad, anxious, or "empty" moods, changes in appetite, changes in academic or social habits.

• Get your child help. Use resources, asks friends and family or talk to your family doctor.

• Don't give up too soon. Your child may need to hear more than once that he or she deserves to feel better and can do so with proper treatment.

Birthing Center opens at St. John

On Nov. 18, St. John Hospital and Medical Center will celebrate a special "birth day" with the debut of its new Birthing Center. The opening caps an 18-month, $23 million construction project that expanded both the Obstetric Unit and Intensive Care Unit in the hospital's Concentrated Care Building.

Each birthing suite is essentially self-contained. Everything the mothers, families and staff need to provide care for mothers and newborns is in the mother's room. Each room features private baths and most rooms have whirlpool tubs which can be used as a comfort measure during labor. A convertible couch is also available in each room for fathers or support persons so that they can remain with the mother throughout labor and delivery.

In addition to providing personalized, family-oriented care in a private setting, LDRPs also offer increased opportunities for early mother-baby bonding. At St. John, mothers can keep their babies with them in their suites, allowing more time for mother and baby to form the strong psychological ties that many experts believe are essential for a baby's healthy emotional development. If mothers need some quiet time or rest, a nursery is also available where nursing staff will care for the babies.

St. John's Birthing Center also provides one nurse for both mother and baby so there is greater continuity of care. This one-on-one approach encourages mothers and family members to seek answers to their questions about caring for their newborns.

Shop and compare

Women who are anticipating childbirth should compare hospitals and ask these questions:

- Are LDRPs available?
- Does the clinical staff include physicians who have been specially trained in obstetrics and gynecology? In neonatology (care of newborns)? In perinatology (care of mothers and babies during the late stages of pregnancy and early days after birth)?
- Are specially trained obstetric nurses available?
- Does the hospital offer a Neonatal Intensive Care Unit? Special Care Nursery? High-risk obstetric care for mothers? And 24-hour in-house anesthesiology service?

'Good old days' bring childbirth full circle

Unlike the 1940s when fathers were banished to an out-of-the-way waiting room and mothers were separated from their newborns immediately after birth, health care professionals today recognize the importance of providing a home-like setting for childbirth that focuses on the entire family — mother, father, grandparents and siblings.

In a sense, LDRPs are a return to the days of home birthing that your great-grandmother knew — with the added technology that great-grandma never dreamed possible.

A community open house of the Birthing Center will be held on Sunday, Nov. 10, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. If you have not received your invitation and would like to be a part of this special day, call (800) 237-5646.

Dr. Minu Kashaf of Grosse Pointe Shores is chief of obstetrics and gynecology at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

St. John Hospital celebrates Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists Week

Perhaps you encountered one when you had your first baby or when you underwent knee surgery but you weren't sure what their role was.

Chances are, however, if you need treatment at a hospital you will rely on a certified registered nurse anesthetist to help ease the pain you may otherwise have.

To help celebrate Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist Week, Oct. 21-25, certified nurse anesthetists in Michigan are involved in a public education campaign to help educate individuals about their roles and the anesthesia process.

"Because more than 26 million people undergo some form of anesthesia, we feel it's important for the public to know what we do as well as to be informed of the high level of training that is required in order to provide anesthesia care," says Linda Allemon of Grosse Pointe Woods, who is a CRNA at St. John Hospital and Medical Center.

"One of the common concerns from patients who receive medical treatment is their anxiety about receiving anesthesia. Statistics show that anesthesia is safer and more effective than ever before," adds Denise Visconti, CRNA at St. John.

CRNAs are highly-trained, advanced practice nurses — anesthesia specialists who administer anesthetics, either working independently or in anesthesia groups consisting of both CRNAs and anesthesiologists.

CRNAs practice in every setting in which anesthesia is delivered: traditional hospital surgical suites; obstetrical delivery rooms; the offices of dentists, podiatrists, ophthalmologists; health maintenance organizations (HMOs) and many other health services and facilities.

In the administration of anesthesia, CRNAs perform the same functions as anesthesiologists. They provide anesthetics to patients in collaboration with a physician.

"Because of the advanced specialized care offered at St. John Hospital and Medical Center, CRNAs at St. John are fortunate to have a wide variety of work experience ranging from open heart surgery to neonatal care," adds Allemon.

Hormone replacement therapy: Who needs it? When? Why?

Dr. Scott B. Ransom, obstetrician/gynecologist, will discuss hormone replacement therapy and its purpose and importance to menopausal women at a free community program titled "The Hormone Mystique" on Tuesday, Oct. 29, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital.

Hormone replacement is considered for women who (usually due to menopause) are feeling the effects of low estrogen, including hot flashes, vaginal and urinary tract changes, osteoporosis or emotional changes.

While hormone replacement therapy can relieve the symptoms of low estrogen, it is not risk-free. Each woman must weigh the pros and cons for herself and discuss it with her physician.

Ransom will clarify the signs and symptoms of menopause and offer insights on how to successfully cope with them, with or without hormone therapy. He will discuss the benefits and risks associated with hormone replacement therapy and answer individual questions.

Ransom is division head/medical director for obstetrics and gynecology for the eastern region of Henry Ford Health System. Widely published and a frequent lecturer, Ransom co-authored the book "Gynecology for the Primary Care Provider."

"The Hormone Mystique" is one in the series of WomanWise informative programs at Henry Ford Cottage Hospital designed to meet the health care needs of today's active women and those they care for.

For reservations for the program, call (313) 640-2425.

Alliance for Mentally Ill meets Oct. 28

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill-Eastside, a support group for families and friends of those with mental illnesses, will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 28, at the Henry Ford Nursing Center, 19840 Harper in Harper Woods.

Virginia Skrzyziarz of Hope Network Southeast will discuss the network's programs.

The alliance is selling entertainment books as a fundraiser for brain disorder research for $40. For information, call Margaret at (313) 884-9005 or Frances at (313) 839-9826.

Writers offer plodding prose and a discerning eye

"The Sportswriter"

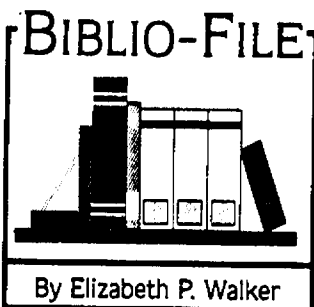

By Richard Ford
Knopf, 243 pages, $25.
"My Summer with George"

By Marilyn French
Knopf, 243 pages, $23.
"The Sportswriter" has an unusual publishing history. In 1986 Richard Ford, the author, introduced his main character, Frank Bascombe, in a paperback, and now 10 years later we have the first hardbound edition of the same book — a process which is exactly reverse of what usually happens. Richard Ford won the Pulitzer Prize last year for "Independence Day," a book which also features Frank Bascombe, a bit older and not much wiser, who continues with his usual foibles and idiosyncrasies.

In this paperback-cum-hardcover novel, Frank Bascombe is a restless 38-year-old, once a writer of fiction but who is now a sportswriter for New York newspapers and magazines. He lives in a comfortable suburban home in New Jersey, but he has lost his wife, whom he continually refers to as "X," a silly mannerism.

The opening chapter shows Bascombe musing whether he should give up his fledgling career: "Why, you might ask, would a man give up a promising literary career — there were some good notices — to become a sportswriter? It's a good question. For now let me say only this: if sports writing teaches you anything, and there is much truth to it as well as plenty of lies, it is that for your life to be worth anything you must sooner or later face the possibility of terrible, searing regret. You must also manage to avoid it or your life will be ruined. I believe I have done these two things. Faced down regret. Avoided ruin.

By Elizabeth P. Walker

And I am still here to tell about it."

Later, in his self-congratulating manner, Bascombe asks: "Why did I quit writing? Forgetting for the moment that I quit writing to become a sportswriter, which is more like being a businessman, or an old-fashioned traveling salesman with a line of novelty household items, than being a genuine writer, since in so many ways words are just our currency, our medium of exchange with our readers, and there is very little that is ever genuinely creative to it all — even if you're not much more than a fly-swat reporter, as I'm not."

Frank Bascombe describes in detail his next sports writing assignment: "Today I'm leaving town for Detroit to begin a profile of a famous ex-football player who lives in the city of Walled Lake, Michigan, and is confined to a wheelchair since a water-skiing accident, but who has become an inspiration to his former teammates by demonstrating courage and determination, going back to college, finishing his degree in communications arts, marrying his black physiotherapist and finally becoming honorary chaplain for his old team. 'Make a contribution' will be my angle. It is the kind of story I enjoy and find easy to write."

There is much more of the same kind of repeatedly unending dialog — or, should I say, monolog? Bascombe is an extremely long-winded and garrulous individual who continually runs off at the mouth, ad infinitum so it seems, all about his life, family, work, and problems in such a non-stop-fashion that a reader is likely to grow very weary, indeed, and even impatient. For me, nothing happens in Bascombe's life to stir me wide awake, although I must admit this is quite definitely a man's book with its male outlook on life.

In pleasant contrast, "My Summer with George" is a lighthearted fantasy of an accomplished woman in her 60s, four times married and now a widow. She lives in a stylish apartment in New York City and spends summers in her Sag Harbor cottage. The author, Marilyn French, has a discerning eye, quick wit, and an uncanny ability to prod into the egos of her characters and their pretensions — all with a good-natured, humorous approach.

Therefore, she succeeds admirably in portraying the female mind and imagination, so different than Richard Ford's probing of the male mystique. Both books provide an interesting counterpoise between the sexes.

Marilyn French allows Hermione Beldame to introduce herself thus: "I've written 87 novels, which averages out to a little over two a year. This was because 40 years ago I had to write three or four a year just to pay the rent; whereas for the last 25 or so years, one a year has been enough to keep me in the highest tax bracket. Eighty-seven books may seem an inordinate number to you, but it is not uncommon for a romance writer. My publishers sometimes advertise me as the queen of romance, but the real queen of romance is Barbara Cartland. She has published over 800 novels. Of course, she's 90, but even if I live that long, I won't equal her. Now that I've slowed down — indeed, taxes make it financially disadvantageous to be more productive — I'll be lucky to top a hundred."

Growing up as a child in shaky financial circumstances, Hermione Beldame relates how, after her father's death, her mother opened a home bakery where she sold her own baked goods. The five children led a hand-to-mouth existence, and young Hermione promised herself that she would escape it some day.

She relates how she chose her name: "Yes, my name was Elsa in those days, Elsa Schutz. You can understand why I changed it. I chose Hermione for two reasons: I found it elegant, and it resembled my father's name, Herman . . . I chose my last name, Beldame, because it meant beautiful lady — fitting for a romance writer."

One summer, at a large cocktail party, Hermione met George, an attractive man in his early 50s. He was a newspaper man from the South spending some time in the big city on business. It was immediate attraction from the moment they laid eyes on one another. Hermione was filled with delightful fantasies of a heated romance between the two, although George, even from the beginning, seemed to hang back a bit reluctantly.

He eventually warmed up a bit during their brief lunches together, but was strangely unwilling to commit himself fully to an affair with her. Hermione employed all her feminine wiles to lure him. She entertained all kinds of delicious fantasies between herself and George on weekends at Sag Harbor and tete-a-tetes at her apartment.

French has written a nice frothy philosophical story of middle-aged love, with tenderness and humor. Her characters, Hermione and George, will long linger in the memory of women readers of a certain age who dream of passion and wild love.

DSO to feature Zukerman tonight

By Alex Sucek
Special Writer

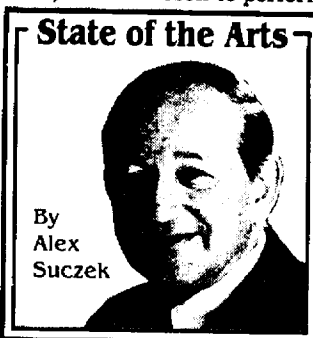

Tonight's concert by the DSO will feature a headline attraction in violinist Pinchas Zukerman performing the Bruch Violin Concerto.

In Maestro Jarvi's programming philosophy, that's the "relaxation for the audience." It is a rich and seductive piece of music and will get a lush performance by this soloist.

For orchestral substance, the concert opens and closes with works by 20th century American composer Roy Harris and the 19th century German genius Robert Schumann. For Jarvi, there are special personal considerations in performing these works.

Jarvi recalls his first encounter with the music of Harris. It was to conduct and record the Symphony No. 3.

Our music director did not find Harris easy to fathom at first. It was only after listening repeatedly to his own recording of the work that he began to understand and develop a liking for it. Since then, he has chosen to perform

State of the Arts

By Alex Sucek

more of Harris' music whenever the opportunity presented itself.

The opening work on this weekend's programs is Harris'

6th Symphony. In Jarvi's opinion, it is technically difficult and satisfying. The harmonies are major and minor together making contrasts that are very original.

Although Harris studied with Aaron Copland in New York and Nadia Boulanger in Paris, there are no recognizable influences. Jarvi sees Harris as a genuinely original American composer who occupies a special place in this nation's music. For his era, he is quite romantic and not tricky, in Jarvi's view.

Closing the program is the Symphony No. 2 by Robert Schumann. Jarvi calls it simply a masterpiece that he has not yet performed in Detroit.

Through a long and close friendship, Schumann's music had a major influence on Brahms. It synthesized and brought into focus everything that had been done by the great composers who preceded him . . . Haydn, Mozart, Schubert and Beethoven, for example.

This, too, is a technically difficult work and the second movement has a great scherzo. It resembles Haydn, Jarvi points out, reminding him especially of Haydn's Symphony No. 104. For conductor and orchestra alike, it is a special joy to perform a symphony like this — one of the all-time great musical creations.

Given the popularity of violinist Zukerman, who has performed with the DSO many times, the program will be given four times: tonight, tomorrow morning and evening and Saturday evening.

For times and tickets call (313) 833-3700.

ULS adds another chapter to its tennis legacy

By Chuck Klonke
Sports Editor

Tennis teams at University Liggett School carry a burden that only a handful of high school squads have to lug around during the course of a season.

The Knights have established such a reputation for excellence that they're expected to capture the state championship every year. Anything less would be a disappointment to many folks.

"We realize there's a lot of pressure on these kids so Bob (co-coach Bob Wood) and I have tried to defuse it," said co-coach Chuck Wright after ULS won its third straight Class C-D girls tennis title and 13th overall.

"We try to tell them to just go out and play the best they can in every match. We don't want to make the whole season the state championship. We told them that even if they didn't win last weekend, it was still an outstanding year because of the way they competed. But you know they put pressure on themselves to do well at the state."

ULS reached the finals in all but one flight of the Class C-D championships at Okemos. The Knights, who had four flight winners, finished with 22 points, while runner-up North Muskegon had 19. Lansing Catholic Central was third with 14 points.

ULS' Leah Killen remained undefeated in two years of high school tennis. She rolled past four opponents at No. 1 singles, losing only four games.

Killen beat Adrienne Radokovic of Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard 6-0, 6-2 in the championship match.

The Knights' Kim Wattrick was just as dominant in No. 2 singles. She lost only four games in three matches and beat Almont's Lisa Rieck 6-1, 6-1 in the final. Last year Wattrick was the state runner-up at first singles.

"Kim has to be one of the top three in the entire state at No. 2," Wright said. "She really helped our team this year. Not only did she move from one to two without complaining but she played some very good tennis all year long."

ULS' first and second doubles teams each repeated as state champions.

Brooke Wright and Kendall Wrigley beat North Muskegon's Abby Cooper and Vanessa Fosse 6-1, 6-3 in a rematch of last year's No. 1 doubles final.

Allison Ricci and Stephanie Roehl defeated Amanda Wegner and Hilary Fosse 6-4, 6-3 in the championship match at second doubles.

"It's tough to repeat," Chuck Wright said. "Everyone is shooting for you when you're state champion. Both of those teams lost only four or five matches all year. They each have a tremendous record."

The two flights where ULS didn't win championships also were instrumental in the Knights being able to edge a strong North Muskegon squad.

"Ann Clark (third singles) beat a girl who beat her badly last year to get to the finals," coach Wright said. "Her 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 come-from-behind victory was a great win for us, especially after we had a tough loss in fourth singles. Ann is one of our most improved players this year."

Wood agreed.

"Ann's victory gave us some breathing room," he said. "She did a great job of hanging in there and competing intensely."

Clark lost in the final to North Muskegon's Brooke Davis, 6-4, 6-3. Davis was a finalist last year, losing to ULS' Rachel Calderon.

The third doubles team of Melissa Berger and Amy Silverston advanced to the finals before losing 7-5, 4-6, 7-5 to North Muskegon's Katie Corcoran and Lauren Panucci. Panucci was half of last year's third doubles champions.

"Melissa and Amy are both first-year varsity players so they did an outstanding job," Wright said. "They had a 4-0 lead in the third set of the final, but then the nerves set in a little. By that time we had things wrapped up."

Christina Oney dropped her first match in No. 4 singles, losing to a North Muskegon player 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

"It was a three-hour marathon," Wright said. "Christina played a great match."

This was Chuck Wright's first year back as coach of the Knights and he enjoyed the experience.

"I'm happy and proud of the girls, but I'm also happy for myself," he said. "After 25 years of coaching, it feels great to win a state title. Every girl on our team was successful. Everybody played their hearts out and competed hard and with class. We're extremely proud of our championship and the way we did it."

"The most important thing is that we won doing things the right way. We didn't care about winning at the expense of good sportsmanship."

"The entire season was an enjoyable one. The girls handled the peaks and valleys well and really learned to understand each other."

Wright and Wood knew that North Muskegon would be a tough opponent at the state meet because the Norsemen had nearly everyone back from last year's runner-up squad. That's where ULS' tough regular-season schedule helped.

"Playing a predominantly Class A schedule helps us immensely in state competition," Wood said. "We like to call the schedule the AP (advanced placement) of high school tennis."

Park home honored

The Michigan Chapter of the American Institute of Architects bestowed the 1995 Michigan Honor Design Award on the John F. Korachis residence in Grosse Pointe Park. Designed by the architectural firm of Constantine George Pappas AIA Architecture/Planning, the project was recognized for the highest design award in Michigan. The design jurors, consisting of noted architects from Iowa, praised this project on its "sensitivity of design, respecting the icon of Alden Dow's 1935 work." The Korachis residence was additionally featured in the AIA Michigan Grosse Pointe Homes Tour for 1994.

Don't be a victim of the pigeon drop(pings)

To a person who enjoys feeding the birds, there are two words that can make your blood pressure rise — squirrels and pigeons. Pigeons are regarded as such a nuisance bird that a ban on ground feeding was recently put into effect in Dearborn.

Not resident to the United States, the rock dove is naturally found in Eurasia and North Africa. Its name is derived from its preferred nesting habitat — rocky cliffs. Having been brought over to the United States in the 1620s to Virginia and in the 1640s to Massachusetts, pigeons have learned to use buildings in the place of cliffs. The pigeon was the first bird to be domesticated in the year 4500 B.C.

Originally, it was raised for its meat but was later used for its message-carrying capabilities. Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo reached England by carrier pigeon four days in advance of the news carried by horse and ship. These homing pigeons use the sun as a compass along with many alternative guidance systems including the Earth's magnetic fields, which aid them on cloudy days.

Homing pigeons are trained by being taken farther and farther from their home loft. Some birds can accomplish the feat of returning home from a distance of 1,000 miles.

Pigeons can be commonly found under freeway bridges and on the roofs of flat-topped buildings. They roost in large, communal groups and also descend in that fashion upon the feeders in our yards. Many times have we heard the lament, "I didn't mind when there were a few of them but then they told all of their friends."

Part of the problem with pigeons is their ability to procreate. They begin raising young early in the year and continue well into the early part of winter. Young are fed for the first few days on pigeon milk, which is provided by both parents.

The mating dances in which the male encircles the female while he coos to her, and their diverse, iridescent plumage can make these birds interesting to watch. We are all familiar with the flocks that visit us at park benches in large cities. Many people get a great deal of pleasure out of feeding these birds. However, the disproportionate numbers that the flocks reach can affect human health because of the birds' droppings.

Opportunistic, pigeons acclimate well to the offerings at a feeder. They will eat all grains that are small enough for them to handle. Pigeons are especially fond of corn and millet, along with agricultural excess grains, such as wheat and milo. But they will also gladly eat oil sunflower and safflower.

Sometimes the use of striped sunflower is helpful in cutting down the number of pigeons that visit your feeding station. Striped sunflower has a thicker shell and the birds are not equipped with a bill that is made for cracking shells open. However, if the seeds are smaller, they will swallow them whole.

Since we can't all have our personal peregrine falcon to keep the pigeon population in check, some of the best defenses against pigeons at a feeding station is to eliminate the places where they can roost, such as a large tray on a tube feeder or the ledge of a wooden feeder. By removing the tray, some seed may fall to the ground where pigeons will gladly help themselves. The trick is to use a tray that they cannot fit on because of their body size. Additionally, the tray will help to eliminate spillage onto the ground.

Pigeons

There is also a great feeder on the market that operates with an adjustment that will close the opening where the seed is dispensed if a heavy bird or squirrel lands on the perch. That feeder along with the use of a larger seed, such as oil or striped sunflower, will allow you to feed the birds that you want and literally shut out the pigeons.

Ground feeding trays have also been designed so that a screen fits around them on all sides which has a mesh large enough for the birds you want, but too small for pigeons to enter. There is also the option of feeding with suet to attract the insect eating birds to your yard, such as chickadees, woodpeckers and nut hatches. Suet is not attractive to pigeons.

Thistle can also successfully be used to attract finches and not be attractive to pigeons.

When pigeons became a problem at my feeders this summer, I eliminated the wooden feeder and switched to the metal "pigeon-proof feeder" and added more thistle and suet feeders. I immediately increased the number of desirable birds in my front and back yards and eliminated the unwanted visitors.

If all else fails, you may call Wild Birds Unlimited to obtain the name of a person that removes pigeons and supplies them to the pigeon-racing community. In one instance, he personally removed 30 pigeons from a customer's yard with the use of a trap.

Retailers have noticed an increase in wood-product purchasing by consumers, according to Pella Window & Door Company.

Popularity of wood products still growing

As a building product, wood has long been considered a reliable and valuable natural resource.

Recent generations, however, have been concerned that the natural resource is being depleted by the home building market. Statistics tell another story.

For instance, the total volume of wood in the United States and Canada has actually increased by more than 25 percent since 1950. According to the Wood Products Promotion Council, wood is the only building material that is increasing its reserve each year.

At the same time, retailers have noticed an increase in wood-product purchasing by consumers.

"Whether it's the home remodeler or the home buyer, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of customers interested in wood products," says Patrick Bushey of Pella Window & Door Company, the local representative of Pella Windows and Doors.

Bushey adds there are a number of reasons why wood windows have witnessed a resurgence in customer interest. One reason is the greater energy efficiency wood offers. Wood is 1,770 times more efficient an insulator than aluminum, according to the Wood Products Promotion Council.

In addition to energy concerns, Bushey says many consumers are choosing wood windows for the aesthetic value. In addition to the natural wood look, the windows can be stained or painted to coordinate with the wood trim of a home, while all-vinyl or all-aluminum windows are usually available in only one or two colors.

Bushey says easy-washing features are an unexpected bonus for most consumers. "We offer a center pivot so both the exterior and interior panes can be washed from inside the home," Bushey adds. "Plus, our wood grilles can easily be replaced without having to touch the glass."

Window buyers should weigh all the benefits of wood vs. other types of windows when making upgrades or new home-buying decisions, Bushey concludes.

For free information about making window decisions, call (800) 847-3552, or visit Pella Corp. on the World Wide Web at <http://www.pella.com>.
