BREAK & BREAK JUMP CUES

The break is the only guaranteed shot in the game, but so many people just pull a cue off the wall when it's time to break the rack. If the key to getting better at pool is consistency – consistent practice with consistent equipment – it's hard to improve that part of your game without your own break stick. That's why we carry a huge selection of specialty break, jump, and break/jump cues for consistency.

SPECIALTY SHAFTS

What is Deflection?

When you hit the cue ball off its vertical axis to create side spin (aka "English"), the ball is going to "squirt" off the tip at an angle opposite of the contact point. At impact, the shaft "deflects" off the cue ball and the Low Deflection shafts significantly reduce the amount of squirt so they shoot straighter and are more forgiving. For more info on Understanding Cue Ball Deflection and English, see our Slow Motion breakdown video on our website in the PoolDawg Academy article section.

What are Carbon Fiber Shafts?

Through years of research and development, top pool cue manufacturers have discovered new ways to leverage the light-weight strength of carbon fiber to build shafts that are not only tough and durable but also flex where they need to for optimal spin and feel. The aerospace grade carbon fiber is ultra-efficient and allows for the least amount of front end mass all but eliminating cue ball squirt.

How Can A Spliced Shaft Help Me?

The grain in a solid wooden shaft creates a natural spine which affects how the ball reacts upon impact. Rotating the cue, even a quarter turn, will change how the shaft performs. By splitting the shaft into ten sections and alternating the direction of the grain, Katana removes natural variances, providing lower deflection and more consistent results.

What's It All Mean?

The most important factor in cue ball deflection is cue end mass. Katana shafts use a ferrule that is half the length with thinner walls to reduce the amount of cue ball "squirt" during play.

PoolDawg Rocks

I've ordered a couple of things from PoolDawg, and the delivery time and quality has always been top notch. It's awesome to have access to a joint that focuses on billiards and does it well. Love them!
