MEDIA OPERATIONS SPOTLIGHT: KEVIN TRAINOR

Kevin Trainor wears a lot of hats during the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic. First and foremost, he serves in the role of communications liaison for participating teams. He's the one who makes sure that life goes smoothly for team personnel as they deal with the hectic pace of bowl week. KT - as he is affectionately known by friends and colleagues - is blessed with a quick wit and an infectious personality that keeps everyone upbeat and smiling all week long. Everyone loves KT. He began his involvement with the CBAA media operations team in 1992 as a student at the University of Arkansas. Now, some 32 years later, Trainor has risen through the ranks to become the Razorbacks' Senior Associate Athletics Director for Public Relations and Former Student-Athlete Engagement. It's a demanding job, however he and his family rarely miss an opportunity to spend the holidays in North Texas to assist in the bowl's media efforts. On its 88th anniversary, the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic proudly salutes Kevin Trainor for his many years of dedication in creating the Cotton Bowl Experience for the nation's media.

FOUNDED

In January 1936, Dallas oilman and entrepreneur J. Curtis Sanford established the Cotton Bowl Classic. During that year, Sanford applied for a copyright to the name "Cotton Bowl," then entered into an agreement with the State Fair of Texas for the rental of its stadium the following New Year's Day. The first Cotton Bowl Classic was played on January 1, 1937, when TCU defeated Marquette, 16-6.

THE COLLEGE FOOTBALL PLAYOFF

The Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic was selected on April 24, 2013, as one of six bowl games to comprise the College Football Playoff. During this 12-year agreement, the Classic has been a part of a rotation hosting the national semifinals once every three years. Next season, the CFP expands to 12 teams. In the new format, the top-four seeds receive a bye with first-round games contested at campus sites. The winning teams then advance to bowl sites to compete in the quarterfinal and semifinal rounds. The two teams that emerge from the semifinals will play for the National Championship at a neutral site.

TEAM SELECTION PROCESS

A 13-member committee appointed by the College Football Playoff selects the pairings for the six bowl games. This selection process takes place on the first Sunday in December. In the current format, when the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic is not hosting a national semifinal, the Playoff selection committee assigns a displaced conference champion, a top-ranked champion from a non-contract conference, or another highly ranked team as the game's participants.

NETWORK TELEVISION

ESPN is the television home of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic. ESPN provides the Classic with a vast global presence across its family of networks and digital platforms. Dave Pasch and Dusty Dvoracek are calling the action from the booth with Tom Luginbill reporting from the sideline.

NETWORK RADIO

The Goodyear Cotton Bowl will be heard around the world on ESPN Radio. Launched on January 1, 1992, ESPN Radio broadcasts to hundreds of affiliates around the country as well as subscribers of SiriusXM Satellite Radio in the USA and Canada. The network's content is also streamed online and via mobile applications. Brad Sham is calling the play-by-play, Kirk Morrison serves as color analyst, and Taylor McGregor reports from the sideline.

AT&T STADIUM

Construction began on AT&T Stadium in April 2006, and was completed in June, 2009, at a cost of $1.3 billion. As one of the largest domed structures in the world, the stadium has a seating capacity that is expandable to more than 100,000. The venue is the home of one of the largest HD video boards that stretches nearly 60 yards in length. Suspended 90 feet above the playing field, the video board weighs 1.2 million pounds. A retractable roof soars 320 feet above the field and emulates that of Texas Stadium. The roof has the ability to open or close in just 10 minutes. Other notable features of the stadium are two end zone doors that can be opened or closed in six minutes. The exterior of the stadium is covered with more than a half-million square feet of glass and stone. The amenities the stadium has to offer include eight acres of outside entertainment space in the two end zone plazas, as well as six end zone platforms that can host pregame functions or increase the stadium's seating capacity. AT&T Stadium offers more than 300 suites to fans, and 3,227 television monitors that are distributed throughout the nine-story structure. One of the featured attractions at the stadium is the Dallas Cowboys Art Collection which consists of 92 works of art by 62 established and emerging artists.

TEAM INFORMATION

As the home team, Ohio State is wearing its traditional scarlet and gray uniform. Missouri is the visitor and wearing all-black uniforms.

NORTH TEXAS

The Arlington/Dallas/Fort Worth area has a population of more than 7.7 million people and ranks as the fourth largest metropolitan area in the United States.

COTTON BOWL FOUNDATION

Since its creation in 2016, the Cotton Bowl Foundation has remained steadfast in its goal to make lasting impacts and contributions in the North Texas community.

The official foundation of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic continues its mission to impact those who play the game, attend the game and support the game of football. From its grants program to the College Football Playoff Foundation Big Day for Teachers to North Texas Giving Day, the Foundation has supported a diverse collection of organizations and initiatives striving to uplift the North Texas community and beyond over the past year.

2023-24 COTTON BOWL FOUNDATION GRANT RECIPIENTS

In its signature giving opportunity of the year, the Cotton Bowl Foundation awarded $285,000 to six deserving organizations as a part of its 2023-24 grants initiative.

The six organizations extended grants were Girls Inc. of Tarrant County ($100,000), Communities in Schools of Greater Tarrant County ($50,000), Communities in Schools of the Dallas Region ($50,000), Big Thought ($50,000), AT LAST! ($25,000) and HOPE Tutoring Center ($10,000).

WALLY TRIPLETT-COTTON BOWL FOOTBALL PLAYER DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

The CBAA and Cotton Bowl Foundation presented a $75,000 endowed gift to Penn State to help fund the creation of the Wally Triplett-Cotton Bowl Football Player Development Program in honor of the 75th anniversary of Triplett and Dennie Hoggard being the first two Black players to play in the Cotton Bowl Classic. The on-field presentation took place during the Nittany Lions' Senior Day game against Rutgers on Nov. 18.

2023 COLLEGE FOOTBALL PLAYOFF FOUNDATION BIG DAY FOR TEACHERS

The Cotton Bowl Foundation and College Football Playoff (CFP) Foundation honored the past and celebrated the present and future on Sept. 19 at the Mount Auburn STEAM Academy in east Dallas.

The two foundations and three North Texas-based bowl games teamed up to celebrate the CFP Foundation's 10 years of inspiring and empowering educators and surprise teachers to show appreciation for their hard work and dedication in the classroom.

During the presentation that featured 1987 Heisman Trophy winner, 2009 College Football Hall of Fame inductee, Cotton Bowl Classic and Mount Auburn alum Tim Brown, the Cotton Bowl Foundation and CFP Foundation awarded grants totaling $200,000 - $50,000 each to Catch Up & Read, City Teaching Alliance, The Educator Collective and United to Learn. The two foundations also surprised Michelle Reyes, a first-year art teacher at Mount Auburn, with a $1,000 donor-choose gift card, a backpack filled with gifts and two tickets to this year's Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

2023 NORTH TEXAS GIVING DAY

The Cotton Bowl Foundation enjoyed another record-setting North Texas Giving Day this past September, raising an all-time high of $92,750 to support the 25th anniversary of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic Art Contest.

The dollar amount raised came from 57 donors, including $25,000 matching grants each from Amazon and the CFP Foundation. Amazon, the presenting sponsor of North Texas Giving Day, surprised the official foundation of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic on the actual day of giving (Sept. 21) live on WFAA-TV's Daybreak with an additional $10,000 donation.

THANKSGIVING MEGA MOBILE MARKET

The Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic and Tarrant Area Food Bank partnered up once again with several community partners to host its fourth Thanksgiving Mega Mobile Market on Nov. 17 at AT&T Stadium.

This year's event distributed Thanksgiving-related meals to 5,000 families. In total, 350,000 pounds of food and 292,000 meals were distributed in Tarrant Area Food Bank's largest mass food distribution event of the year. The Cotton Bowl Classic and Tarrant Area Food Bank once again captained a team of community partners that included support from AT&T Stadium and the Dallas Cowboys, American Airlines and the Arlington Police and Fire departments. The protein and portions of the food distributed were secured by MW Cares Foundation and MW Logistics, Albertsons/Tom Thumb and The Big Good. Whataburger and TicketeStore helped provide food and beverages for the 400 volunteers on hand for the event.

This year's Mega Mobile Market marked the fourth straight year that the Tarrant Area Food Bank and the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic teamed up to host a holiday distribution event and the fifth time the two organizations have collaborated to lead mass distribution events at AT&T Stadium. The five Mega Mobile Markets at AT&T Stadium (November 2020, May 2021, November 2021, November 2022 and November 2023) have combined to provide food to more than 23,300 families.

COTTON BOWL CLASSIC ART CONTEST

The Cotton Bowl Classic Art Contest is celebrating its 25th anniversary in style. This year's beloved Classic tradition, supported by Amazon, is using the dollars generated from North Texas Giving Day to distribute $500 grants to 171 elementary campuses for art supplies, support art-centric programs and create experiences for elementary students across North Texas.

A record number of 12,054 entries were received for this year's Art Contest. The students' submissions have been laminated to be distributed as gifts to the participating teams and used as placemats at selected Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic events during bowl week. The first, second and third-place winners per category are set to have their artwork proudly displayed at their respective schools and at AT&T Stadium inside the CBAA offices throughout the year. This year's winners are also scheduled to be recognized in an on-field presentation during the 88th Classic.

RANGERETTES SCHOLARSHIP

For over two decades, the Cotton Bowl Foundation has funded a scholarship in honor of the Kilgore College Rangerettes, a game day fixture since founder Gussie Nell Davis first introduced the Sweethearts of the Gridiron to the Classic in 1949.

The endowed scholarship invested with the Texas Presbyterian Foundation via Kilgore College Foundation is awarded each academic year to a deserving member of the squad. Alyssa Tai McBain, a freshman from El Paso, Texas, was awarded the CBAA Rangerettes scholarship for the 2023-24 academic year.

LEARN MORE ABOUT THE COTTON BOWL FOUNDATION

The Cotton Bowl Foundation has awarded more than $3 million in grants and financial support benefiting non-profit organizations in the surrounding communities. For more information, please visit cottonbowlfoundation.org.

REMEMBERING BRAD BRADLEY

It's been said that having your picture taken by James. T. "Brad" Bradley was a badge of honor. Every year during bowl week, Mr. Bradley could be spotted on the sideline, in the press box or working social events at the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic capturing the atmosphere of bowl week. He worked 75 Cotton Bowl Classics dating back to New Year's Day 1948. It would have been 76 had it not been for restrictions imposed upon the 2020 Classic due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Age never slowed him down. If a sports-related event was going on in or around Dallas or Arlington, more than likely he would be there ready to go to work. However, as impossible as it seems, things have changed. The world said goodbye to Mr. Bradley on Friday, Oct. 13, 2023, when he passed away at the age of 101. This Cotton Bowl Classic Hall of Famer will be missed but his memory lives on.

Threatening

The dream of J. Curtis Sanford finally became a reality, a New Year's Day bowl game in Dallas, and the teams selected to kick off this new venture were the TCU Horned Frogs and the Marquette Golden Avalanche. It was a game that pitted two of the nation's premier passers, TCU's Slingin' Sammy Baugh and Marquette's Ray "Buzz" Buivid. Buivid had finished third in the balloting that season for the Heisman Trophy while Baugh was fourth. Two solid teams led by two outstanding athletes gave Sanford's new bowl the kind of drawing card it so desperately needed.

However, the duel between these two All-Americans never materialized. The TCU line stole the show, swarming Buivid time after time and never allowed Marquette's highly publicized Art Guepe to become a factor. Before the game aged five minutes, TCU jumped to a 3-0 lead on a 33-yard field goal by L. D. Meyer, the nephew of Frog coach Dutch Meyer. Minutes later, the Avalanche answered back when Guepe knifed through Purple defenders en route to a 60-yard punt return and the Avalanche's only score. But, before the opening quarter had expired, Meyer struck again, combining with Baugh for a 55-yard scoring play to push TCU back in front for good, 10-6. The first quarter proved to be a thrill a minute. In the second period, Baugh and company went to work again, driving 62 yards for one last Frog touchdown. Marquette was expecting TCU to put the ball in the air and that's precisely what the Frogs did. With the ball resting on the Avalanche 18, Vic Montgomery took the snap and looked downfield for Meyer. Meyer worked himself free between Guepe and another Hilltopper, leaped high for the pass, juggled it momentarily and tucked it away as he crossed the goal line.

The two teams produced 22 points in the first two quarters. By halftime, the scoring came to a sudden stop. Seeing victory slipping away, Marquette tried to open up with Buivid's passing, only to see the TCU lineman come tearing through to squelch each threat. Midway through the contest, Coach Meyer had used all 27 men on his bench. Frog reserves, led by a young sophomore named Davey O'Brien, played a greater part of the last half.

In total, Meyer accounted for each of TCU's 16 points—a field goal, two touchdowns and an extra point. A gritty performance. As for the game itself, it was a fine beginning for what would become an age-old classic. A fitting end came in the game's waning minutes. With TCU reserves on the field and Baugh and company on the bench, Coach Meyer reinserted his star player into the game at the insistence of the crowd who wanted to see Sammy play one last time.

The name Byron "Whizzer" White will forever be associated with the second Cotton Bowl Classic. White was the leader of an unbeaten and much celebrated Colorado team that roared into Dallas to face the Owls of Rice Institute. White was one of those athletes who could do it all: he could run, pass, score, kick, and most of all, was an aggressive defender. An outstanding All-America on the field, off the field White was a Rhodes Scholar who would go on to hold a seat on the United States Supreme Court. In every sense of the word, White was a star.

Rice didn't possess the glowing press clippings as the Buffaloes. The Owls were a sophomore-laden team which had fought an uphill battle to earn the first bowl bid in Rice football history. But one weapon Rice did have was a gifted young halfback named Ernie Lain. At the end of the 1937 season, Grantland Rice referred to Lain as "football's greatest sophomore back." Promoters built their pre-game hype around

White and Lain, and in this second New Year's Day Classic, they more than lived up to the billing.

The first quarter could have served as a Colorado season-highlight film. On the game's third play, the Owls coughed up the football at their own 40-yard line and Colorado quickly took advantage of the Rice turnover. Moving inside the Rice 10, the Buffaloes were faced with a fourth down situation. White responded by passing nine yards to Joe Antonio for the game's first touchdown.

It was the intention of Rice coach Jimmy Kitts to start his upperclassmen and keep Lain on the sideline in the first quarter. But, shortly after the Colorado score, Lain trotted onto the field to take control of the Owls' offense. However, on the series' first play, White presented Lain with an unexpected welcoming. Lain dropped back to throw, fired and found White standing in the way. He hauled in the interception and galloped 47 yards into the end zone. White added the extra point to give Colorado a quick 14-0 lead.

That set the stage for one of the Classic's greatest comebacks. Lain hit Jake Schuehle with a 13-yard scoring strike to get the Owls on the scoreboard. Then, on its next possession, Lain led Rice back to the end zone, powering over from the three to even the score at 14. Before the contest reached intermission, it was Lain again taking control, passing 37 yards to Ollie Cordill for the go-ahead score. It was an explosive second quarter as the Owls posted 21 points on the scoreboard to overcome the early 14-point deficit. Leading 21-14 at the start of the third period, Lain still was far from through, taking to the air again to toss an 11-yard scoring pass to Frank Steen.

Even though the Classic was still in its infancy stage, this was a game that recorded several long-standing records. White's 47-yard interception return stood for 50 years as the longest in history. The 21 points scored by the Owls stood for 40 years as the highest scoring second quarter until Notre Dame equalled the feat against Texas in 1978. Finally, Lain's three touchdown passes were not to be equalled until Doug Flutie came along in the 1985 Classic. The Cotton Bowl Classic was only two years old, yet already had produced some outstanding performances that would stand for years as the standard by which future games would be measured.

Ideal

If football had a collegiate "darling" in 1938, then it must have been St. Mary's College of California by a landslide. In fact, sportswriters went as far as to tag the Gaels as America's No. 1 Cinderella team. St. Mary's counted 31 sophomores on it's 47-man roster. Still, the youthful Gaels came to Texas with an impressive 5-2-0 record to face unbeaten Texas Tech, the nation's 11th-ranked team. The Red Raiders had compiled a 10-0 record and felt a Cotton Bowl Classic victory might enhance their chances of gaining admission into the Southwest Conference.

But, St. Mary's stood in the way. Turnovers proved to be Tech's downfall, as the Gaels picked off five Red Raider passes and scooped up three Tech fumbles. By halftime, St. Mary's held a 14-0 lead on touchdown runs by Ed Heffernan and sophomore sensation Michael Klotovich. As the third quarter came to an end, the Gaels extended their lead to 20-0 when Whitey Smith returned an interception 24 yards for the Gaels' third and final score. It was a tough day for Tech. Everytime the Raiders worked themselves out of a hole, St. Mary's Jerry Dowd, the nation's leading punter, kicked them back in.

However, it was in the final period that the Red Raiders finally got to work, and it was the arm of Gene Barnett that sparked the comeback. With the ball resting at its 24, Tech launched its bid, moving steadily up the field to reach the Gaels' 33-yard line. On first down, Barnett faded back to pass. Just as his protection was beginning to cave in, he flipped a short screen pass to Elmer Tarbox who was waiting with a solid wall of blockers ahead of him. Tarbox made the reception and then swivel-hipped his way downfield, outrunning Klotovich to the end zone for Tech's first score. Four minutes later, Barnett came through again. This time throwing on fourth down to his tallest receiver, E. J. McKnight, for 31 yards and the touchdown. A missed extra point attempt left Tech trailing by seven.

Barnett now readied himself for one last scoring attempt. Late in the fourth quarter, Barnett dropped back to throw again behind good protection and let it fly for George Webb. Webb made the catch with nothing but the goal line in front of him. But, Lou Rimassa made what had to be the defensive play of the game, hauling Webb down from behind. The play cover 60 yards, however the Raiders could go no further than the Gaels' 15-yard line. It was a sensational finish, but on this day, the Sanford Trophy was meant to go home with those California "darlings."

Had it not been for the efforts of J. Curtis Sanford, there might not have been a 1940 Cotton Bowl Classic to remember. Undefeated Texas A&M, champions of the Southwest Conference, turned down the Cotton Bowl's invitation in favor of the Sugar Bowl. When Tennessee also turned down the Classic Committee's invitation, it was suggested that the 1940 game be cancelled. Fearing such action would kill the future of the Cotton Bowl, Sanford took on the job of staging the game single handedly. Soon, telegrams began to pour in from Boston College and Clemson supporters. Both had good records and good ball clubs, and Sanford happily extended the invitation.

Ironically, this was the game that introduced coach Jess Neely to the Southwest Conference. Neely soon was to leave the South Carolina school for Rice where he would lead the Owls to three Cotton Bowl appearances. Neely brought his 8-1 Clemson Tigers to Dallas to face coach Frank Leahy's 9-1 Boston College Eagles. The first quarter saw both teams move the football, but neither could punch the ball across the goal line. Then on the final play of the quarter, Charley O'Rourke returned a Clemson punt 27 yards to the Tigers' 13-yard line, putting the Eagles in scoring position. Unable to move, and facing fourth down and 10, Alex Lukachik, a substitute end, came into the game and dropped back to boot a wind-blown three-pointer squarely between the uprights. The kick was good for 36 yards and Boston College owned a 3-0 advantage.

After the exchange of punts, Clemson began its scoring march from its own 43. Charlie Timmons and Banks McFadden did most of the work on the drive. With Timmons and his favorite spinner play working to perfection, coupled with a 20-yard gallop by McFadden to the Boston College 30, Clemson moved within the shadow of the goalpost. Timmons finished off the drive as he powered over from the Eagles' one-yard line for the go-ahead touchdown midway through the second quarter. Shad Bryant missed the extra point, but the day's scoring was over.

This was a game of “firsts.” It marked the first sellout for the Cotton Bowl Classic with 45,000 fans looking on to see Texas A&M challenge Fordham, a powerhouse from the East and a team coached by Jim Crowley, the famed Notre Dame Four Horseman. The Aggies were winners of 19 consecutive games before losing their season finale to Texas. The loss dropped A&M from second to sixth in the national poll. No. 12 Fordham also had held a lofty ranking during the season, reaching as high as third before falling to St. Mary’s, 9-6. The 1941 game promised a classic battle between two outstanding football programs. Also making for a memorable day was that in 1941, the Cotton Bowl came under the sponsorship of the Southwest Conference.

Maybe just as memorable was Earl “Alabama” Smith’s “hideout pass.” Smith was a surprise starter in the Aggies’ backfield, and his first half performance left little indication as to what was to come. Trailing 6-0 at the start of the third quarter, it was time for the Aggies to spring the play on the unsuspecting Rams. Instead of returning to the huddle after a play that gained three yards, Smith trotted toward the east sideline while his teammates rushed to the huddle. Still undetected, Smith took off on the snap, heading straight downfield. Quarterback Marion Pugh whirled around, retreated to his 25 and let go a long, graceful spiral. Startled fans, along with the Ram defense, looked for a receiver.

By now, Smith was several yards behind Fordham defensive back Len Eshmont and only had to turn and momentarily slow his pace to take the pass on the 35. Regaining his stride, he easily outdistanced the surprised Eshmont in his race for the end zone. It was that 62-yard scoring play which put the Aggies back into the ball game, 6-6.

On its next possession, A&M scored again when All-America fullback Jarrin’ John Kimbrough crashed over from the one. This time Pugh redeemed himself for missing his first conversion attempt and the Aggies had a 13-6 lead as the contest moved into the final period. Jim Blumenstock’s 15-yard touchdown run brought Fordham within one of the Aggies, but Steve Hudacek’s try for the extra point was blocked by A&M lineman Martin Ruby. The football sailed high in the air, hit the crossbar and bounced back toward the line of scrimmage. Twelve minutes remained on the clock although from that point on the Rams never seriously threatened.

This game proved the point that statistics can lie: Alabama made only one first down, gained just 59 yards on the ground, 16 in the air, and punted 16 times. But, the Crimson Tide scored 29 points — and won! Seven Aggie interceptions and five lost fumbles made first downs unnecessary. No question about it, this Classic was out of the ordinary.

While this became another Cotton Bowl known for its turnovers, it also was a game remembered for its many punt returns. Texas A&M sophomore Leo Daniels returned five for 104 yards, including a 44-yarder which set up the Aggies' first score. Alabama halfback Jimmy Nelson also got in on the punt return act, racing through Aggie defenders 72 yards for the Tide's second and go-ahead touchdown. It was Nelson's first of two scoring runs, and continues to rank as the longest punt return in Classic history. His second score came on a 21-yard gallop that gave Alabama a 20-7 third quarter lead. Defensively, Nelson was just as strong, as he intercepted two Aggie passes. All-America Holt Rast also had a hand in the Alabama victory, catching the Tide's only pass to set up a score and later returned an interception 10 yards for the final Alabama touchdown.

To top things off, this was the first war-time Cotton Bowl. At halftime, 31 Texas, Oklahoma and Alabama men took the oath of enlistment in the Naval Air Corps, included in this group were senior Martin Ruby - Texas A&M's great lineman; Sam Porter, a reserve A&M halfback; and Alabama fullback Paul Spencer. These men, who trotted onto the Cotton Bowl turf earlier that afternoon as civilians, played the last half as members of an even greater team...Uncle Sam's.

For three quarters, this Classic was all Texas. The 11th-ranked Longhorns were making their first-ever bowl appearance and their performance after 45 minutes of play left little doubt they were keyed up for this one. A four-yard pass from Roy McKay to Max Minor, and a 60-yard punt return by Jackie Field gave the Longhorns a comfortable 14-0 lead heading into the fourth quarter over No. 5 Georgia Tech.

With the game apparently well in hand, Texas coach D. X. Bible decided it might be time to send in his reserves. Tech saw this as a chance to move. It started with Bob Sheldon's 33-yard strike to Jack Marshall at the Longhorn 23. Southpaw Clint Castleberry, the Yellow Jackets' brilliant freshman, followed with a pass to Jack Helms for a first down on the Texas six. Three downs later, Georgia Tech had gained just two yards. Expecting a fourth down pass, the Horns relaxed its front wall. Tech started the play as if to pass, but Dave Eldredge came back to take a handoff on the ancient Statue of Liberty play and circled the Texas right end for the score. Tech was within seven.

The Texas offense failed to move and punted poorly for just 14 yards to the Georgia Tech 46. Three and a half minutes were left to play. Eddie Prokop, Tech's third passer for the day, connected with Sheldon for 12 to the Texas 42. Two plays later, Prokop fired again, finding Marshall leaping high for the pass at the Longhorn nine. An offside penalty then cost the Yellow Jackets five precious yards. But on the next play, Ralph Plaster scampered to the Texas five on a beautifully executed triple handoff. However, this is where Texas put the brakes on Tech's comeback hopes. The Texas linemen, led by the savage charge of Stan Mauldin, shut down the Tech scoring threat on three successive plays. With the football at their own four, the Longhorns took over, ran out the clock and handed Tech its first bowl defeat.

that would produce the answer. But, it didn't. The elements, the great equalizer of sporting events, all but ruled out a valid answer. First came the cold, and then the rain. By halftime, Texas coach D. X. Bible had called the weather the worst he had seen in 30 years of coaching.

Texas entered the game ranked 14th nationally, the Ramblers had fallen out of the Top 20 after losing their last contest of the season. Still, Randolph Field had Dobbs, who was playing in his third consecutive bowl game, and undoubtedly was one of the nation's outstanding players. He led the country in total offense, accounting for 1,867 yards for the year, completed 106 passes for 1,431 yards, threw for 20 touchdowns, and gained 421 yards rushing. In addition, Dobbs was the Ramblers' punter, averaging 40.2 points per kick. His favorite receiver was Leslie "Tex" Aulds, who had grabbed 34 passes for 588 yards during the course of the season.

It was the combination of Corporal Dobbs and Aulds that got on the board first, a 16-yard first quarter strike. Texas answered in the second quarter following a Dobbs fumble on the Randolph 42-yard line. Two plays later, Ralph Ellsworth hooked up with George McCall for a 35-yard scoring pass to even things at 7-7 by halftime. Both teams threatened in the second half but the elements joined the side of the defense, and the Cotton Bowl had its first tie.

The contest also produced another first: former Texas A&M standout Martin Ruby became the first man to star for two Classic teams. He was named as the outstanding player for Texas A&M two years earlier against Alabama, and again today for Randolph Field.

For years, TCU defied logic. The Frogs always seemed to win when they were picked to lose, and lose when expected to win. Today, they lost—decisively—and they were expected to. The Cowboys of Oklahoma A&M were the class of the Missouri Valley Conference, and in their last game, clobbered Oklahoma, 28-6. In fact, A&M's only loss came at the hands of a naval military team in Norman. Meanwhile, TCU had staged upset after upset to earn its bid to the Cotton Bowl.

In addition to having more size and speed than their counterparts, the Cowboys also had an 18-year old All-America back named Bob Fenimore, the nation's total offense leader, and a 190-pound freshman named Jim Spavital. Fenimore recorded Oklahoma A&M's first score on a one-yard plunge over right tackle. Minutes later, Spavital tore through a quick-opening hole at left guard and raced 52 yards for the Cowboys second touchdown with less than nine minutes gone on the clock.

Fenimore put A&M back on the scoreboard in the third period with an eight yard run, and in the fourth quarter Joe Thomas and Mack Creager both scored on plunges from the one-yard line. Long drives accounted for all five Cowboy touchdowns, or at least long distances. Here's how they went: 59 yards for the first score; 61 yards on the second; 62 yards for the third; 40 yards on the fourth; and 66 yards for the fifth score. The end result was a 34-0 shutout for the Cowboys in one of the most lopsided games ever in the Classic.

This Classic broke records for breaking records. . . and it's not surprising to find that the incomparable Bobby Layne was behind it all. Here were the team records established during the course of the afternoon: Most Points Scored-40, by Texas; Most First Downs-22, by Missouri; Most Yards Passing-234, by Texas; Most Yards Rushing-408, by Missouri; Highest Passing Percentage-.928 on 13 completions in 14 attempts, by Texas; Most Total Yards Gained-514, by Missouri; and a two-team record for total offense-950 total yards, 514 by the Tigers and 436 by the Longhorns.

Bobby Layne was responsible for all 40 Texas points; he threw for two touchdowns, ran for three scores, was on the receiving end of a 50-yard bomb for another and kicked four extra points. When Layne wasn't scoring touchdowns, he was completing 11-of-12 passes for the best passing day ever in Cotton Bowl history, a .917 completion percentage. Layne completed his first eight passes, and his favorite target that day was All-America receiver Hub Bechtol, who caught a then-Cotton Bowl record eight passes. With 67 points scored in one afternoon, there's no question this Classic was an enjoyable and exciting one for the spectator. However, one can rest assured that Missouri coach Chauncey Simpson could have gone without seeing Layne's amazing feats. But after the game, Simpson came to the Texas bus, shook Layne's hand and said, "I never saw a better job by anybody."

Indeed, Layne's performance was awesome, but he wasn't a one-man act by any means. He received tremendous support from his teammates. However, when the subject of the greatest individual Cotton Bowl performance arises, the name of Bobby Layne must be considered.

Not even the most dedicated of mail carriers could have been expected to brave the elements on this New Year's Day. In ice, sleet, snow, and rain, Arkansas battled LSU to a scoreless tie. Gametime temperatures were in the 20's and uninviting snow banks surrounded the field. LSU coach Bernie Moore called it "the worst football weather I've seen in 35 years of coaching." The game was sold out weeks in advance, and despite the weather conditions, a surprising number of the 45,507 tickets sold turned out to see the highly regarded Tigers tackle the underdog Razorbacks.

While the Classic posted its first 0-0 tie, it was a game that will be remembered most for the play of the gritty Arkansas defense. Johnny Lyons who reported the game for the Houston Post wrote, "Statistically, LSU wore 'em out. As far as hitting goes, Arkansas wore the Tigers out."

Five times, two in the first half and three times in the second, LSU moved the ball inside the Razorback 20. Five times the Porkers threw them back. Time and again, the Tigers seemed to be on the march. Arkansas rose to the occasion each time.

While the defense was marvelous, the Hogs' offense was plagued with problems. The Razorbacks made one first down, gained only 54 yards, and failed to complete any of their four passes. In the fourth quarter alone, Arkansas managed only four offensive snaps.

Meanwhile, with Y. A. Tittle at the helm, LSU moved the ball at will between the 20's. Late in the fourth quarter, the Tigers penetrated the Porkers' 10-yard line twice, driving once to the one and the second time to the four. The Hogs' Floyd Thomas turned back the first LSU threat, stopping Ray Coates in his tracks shy of the goal line. Moments later, the Arkansas defenders swarmed Willard Landry for no gain at the four and the Tigers were forced to go for a field goal. But, the rabbit's foot belonged to the Razorbacks as a bad snap from center prevented the Tigers from ever getting off the attempt.

SMU's Doak Walker and Penn State's Elwood Petchel matched brilliance in one of the Classic's most even battles. It was the first Cotton Bowl game played between two undefeated teams. The Mustangs carried a 9-0-1 mark, the tie coming in their final regular season contest with arch-rival TCU. The Nittany Lions, on the other hand, were undefeated and untied, 9-0-0. It was No. 3 SMU vs. No. 4 Penn State.

Penn State clearly was the class of the East, averaging more than 300 yards with a solid ground game as its chief weapon.

To go with its potent offense, Penn State also was considered to possess the nation's best defense. But, SMU had the great Doak Walker, who on this particular day was observing his 21st birthday. Much has been written about Walker through the years. To this day, he is considered as one of the greatest all-around backs in Southwest Conference history. It was bound to be a historic afternoon.

It took Walker just eight plays to guide the Ponies 82 yards to paydirt on their first offensive possession. After moving to the SMU 47, Walker faded far back in the pocket and whipped a high, long pass to Paul Page who had worked himself free behind the Lion secondary. Page pulled in the pass at the 13 and dashed into the end zone. Walker booted the extra point and SMU led, 7-0. Two possessions later, SMU found the end zone again. Following a punt return to the Penn State 37, the Mustangs began a seven play march with Walker crashing over from the two for the score. This time Walker's extra point attempt was wide, but with 90 seconds remaining in the half, things seemed well in hand for the Ponies.

That's when Petchel took control for the Nittany Lions. On fourth and 15 at the Mustangs' 38, and less than a minute to play in the half, Petchel launched a pass for Larry Cooney, a third-team back who had logged just ten minutes of playing time all season. Cooney gathered it in for a touchdown. Ed Czekaj added the extra point and as the half ended, Penn State trailed by six. Midway through the third period following his 27-yard punt return to the SMU nine, Petchel again went to the air and passed six yards to Wallace Triplett to tie the score. But, with a chance to give the Lions the lead, Czekaj failed to convert on the extra point try and the game remained tied, 13-13.

Penn State made one last gasp for victory. Petchel hit Bob Hicks for 24 yards to the SMU 37 with just two seconds on the scoreboard clock. Time out was called and the game's final play was mapped out. The target would be Dennie Hoggard. Petchel took the snap and looked downfield for his receiver in the end zone. Hoggard made a diving attempt for the ball, had it momentarily, but it slipped away. The game was over.

Ironically, it proved to be another 24 years before the 13-13 tie was finally broken. Czekaj returned to the Cotton Bowl in 1972 as Penn State's athletic director. Before his Nittany Lions battled Texas, Czekaj was determined to give it one more try. Sure enough, his kick sailed true through the uprights. No asterisk was needed, however. Historians still refused to change the score.

SMU returned to the Classic for the second straight year with what many called a dream backfield—Doak Walker, the two-time All-America and the winner of the 1948 Heisman Trophy; Gilbert Johnson considered to be a great passer; and Dick McKissack and Paul Page, a pair of devastating blockers.

With this group, the Mustangs added an outstanding sophomore, Kyle Rote. In two years, the Mustangs had won 17 regular-season games, lost just one, and tied two. For Walker, the 22-year old was having his second consecutive birthday party in the Cotton Bowl.

Oregon also had its share of gridiron heroes, and the Ducks were generally considered the best team on the West Coast. Oregon was noted for its powerful attack, good defense and a great passer named Norm Van Brocklin.

In addition to its superstar lineup, this Classic is noted for the quick kick. Midway through the first period and faced with a second down and eight, Walker caught the Ducks by surprise. Before Oregon realized what was happening, Walker took three of four fleeting backward steps and boomed a 79-yarder that died inside the Ducks' one-yard line. Later, in the second quarter, and with the ball resting on the SMU four, it was Rote's turn to demonstrate the advantages of a good kicking game. Standing in the end zone and only a few yards behind the line of scrimmage, Rote took the snap and with a powerful swing of his right leg, got off an 84-yarder, booming it all the way to the Oregon 12. Needless to say, these two punts still rank as the two longest in Classic history.

When they weren't kicking the daylights out of the football, Walker and Rote took their toll on the Oregon defense, scoring SMU's first two touchdowns. Van Brocklin put Oregon on the scoreboard for the first time in the fourth quarter with a 24-yard pass to Dick Wilkins. SMU all but put the game away when "Chicken" Roberts slashed eight yards for a 21-6 lead. The Mustangs left little doubt that on this New Year's Day, they had performed at their dazzling best.

RICE 27 NORTH CAROLINA 13

1950 JANUARY 2

ATTENDANCE: 75,000

The running of Billy Burkhalter and the receiving of "Froggy" Williams left little doubt as to which team would emerge as the Cotton Bowl champion in the 14th renewal of the Classic. Rice built a 14-0 lead by halftime, and once the third quarter got underway, the Owls kept right on rolling. Throughout the 1949 season, the Owls had resembled finely tuned machines. Seldom did Rice make mistakes. They ran through the Southwest Conference schedule with ease. Today was no exception.

Rice was ranked fifth nationally with a 9-1-0 record, while North Carolina weighed in at 7-3-0 and was ranked 16th. While not quite as successful as the Owls, the Tar Heels still commanded national attention, primarily because of its highly publicized running back, Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice.

As expected, North Carolina was no match for the Owls who had less trouble disposing of the Southern Conference champions than they did with most of the SWC teams that tried to block their path to the Cotton Bowl. Undefeated in two previous post-season games, Rice had to whip three 1949 bowl champions within the conference to earn the bid.

The two teams fought to a standstill in the game's opening quarter, but Rice unloaded on the visitors in the second when quarterback Tobin Rote hooked up with Burkhalter for a 44-yard scoring pass. Bobby Lantrip put Rice back on the scoreboard just before halftime on a three-yard run and the Owls were up 14-0. The Owls didn't miss a beat in the third quarter. On its second possession, Rice traveled 77 yards in just six plays for its third touchdown with Rote hitting Williams for the final 17 yards. Burkhalter followed with a 12-yard fourth quarter run to give the Owls a 27-0 lead before North Carolina could answer in the last eight minutes.

The Cotton Bowl was celebrating its 15th anniversary and the 1951 game was projected to be a true classic struggle between the nation's No. 3 and No. 4 teams. Texas and Tennessee promised to be a top attraction. Both teams carried 9-1 records into Dallas along with a pair of outstanding defensive units. When the day was done, there was no question that this would go down as one of the Classic's roughest and hardest hitting games ever.

Hank Lauricella sparked the Volunteers to an early 7-0 lead, galloping 75 yards to the Texas five to start Tennessee's march on its second possession. Seconds later, Herky Payne passed to John Gruble for the score. Texas also gained its first score of the afternoon on the heels of a big play. Backed up deep inside the 10, Tennessee faced fourth down and a punting situation. Lauricella was kicking from his end zone when the Longhorns' Jim "Buck" Lansford saw his chance to cash in on a golden opportunity. Lansford crashed through to block Lauricella's kick and Texas gained possession at the Vols' eight. On fourth down, Byron Townsend skirted the left side for the touchdown. Moments later, Texas moved in front, driving from its 33 before Gib Dawson snared a 35-yard scoring strike from Ben Tompkins.

At the half, Texas led by a touchdown, 14-7, and the score held up through the third period. But as the quarter closed, Tennessee was mounting a drive. Led by Lauricella and fellow halfbacks Andy Kozar and Jimmy Hahn, the Vols methodically drove the football down the Longhorns' throats, 82 yards in 16 plays. Kozar covered the final five yards to bring Tennessee within one, 14-13. But, the extra point attempt by Pat Shires was wide, and with 10 minutes left to play, Texas was able to breathe a collective sigh of relief; only temporarily, however.

For Tennessee, Christmas came a week late. The Longhorns picked a most inopportune time to lose their only fumble of the game. Tennessee made the recovery at the Texas 43. Four plays later, the Vols were knocking at the goal line. Kozar bulled over from the one with the winning score.

KENTUCKY TCU

1952

This proved to be a day of frustration for TCU, but for Paul "Bear" Bryant, it was a day of redemption. A pre-season choice to capture the national championship, the Bear's Kentucky Wildcats had fallen upon hard times and ended the regular season at 7-4. The Frogs also had their ups and downs during the course of the year, and headed into their New Year's Day bout with a lackluster 6-4 mark.

TCU had demonstrated an uncanny knack of coming through when the chips were down throughout the conference campaign after being picked to finish as low as fourth. But against Kentucky, the Frogs never quite made it over the hump. Four long TCU drives failed to produce points. Three drives came to crashing halts inside the Wildcats' 10-yard stripe; once at the eight, another at the five, and finally, at the one. While TCU couldn't cash in on its opportunities, Kentucky failed to convert a long drive into points only once.

By halftime, Kentucky had moved to a 13-0 lead. Quarterback Babe Parilli had paced the Wildcats' attack with a pair of scoring tosses to Emery Clark. It wasn't until the third period that TCU finally got on the scoreboard. Bobby Jack Floyd, the Frogs' big fullback, took a direct snap from center, shot through a hole at left guard, cut to the left sideline and galloped 43 yards for TCU's only score. It took the Frogs only four plays and a minute and 37 seconds to travel the 80 yards for the touchdown.

But, the Frogs momentum was short lived. TCU could get no closer than the Kentucky 40. Meanwhile, Ed Hamilton helped the Wildcats seal the door shut by adding an insurance score with 25 seconds left to play.

If revenge was a motive, then Texas certainly proved its point. Two years earlier, the Vols had scored a 20-14 upset of the Longhorns in the 1951 Classic. Today, however, the Horns added a much different chapter in their second of three meetings with Tennessee in the New Year's Day Classic.

This was the first nationally televised Cotton Bowl, and the Longhorns found such exposure much to their liking. Tennessee won the toss, elected to defend the south goal and Texas got the ball. With T Jones at quarterback, the Horns marched from their own 16 to the Tennessee 31 before the Volunteer defense stiffened. Gib Dawson came on to punt and booted the Vols into a hole, all the way down to the Tennessee five. On first down, the Vols' Dave Griffith dropped into the end zone as if to punt. That was his first mistake. The second came when he decided to run. Carlton Massey, the Longhorns' hugh defensive lineman, along with Pod Price, Clifford Polk and Jim Rosser, rushed in to smash Griffith to the ground behind the goal line for a safety. With the game less than eight minutes old, Texas held a 2-0 lead.

Tennessee's luck didn't improve the next time it touched the ball. Texas again became the beneficiary of a Volunteer error when Ray Byrd coughed it up at the Tennessee 22, and Polk again was in the right place at the right time to make the recovery. Flawless execution led Texas to the end zone. Gib Dawson carried for the final four yards and with the extra point, it was a 9-0 contest.

Texas returned to the end zone in the fourth quarter after Rosser recovered yet another Tennessee fumble at the Volunteer 26. Seven plays later, the scoreboard read 16-0, Texas. And that's the way it stood.

The celebrated bench tackle by Alabama's Tommy Lewis overshadowed the awesome performance of Rice's Dicky Maegle, who set all-time bowl records with 265 yards rushing and touchdown runs of 79, 95, and 34 yards. For the day, Maegle (then known as Moegle) averaged an unbelievable 24.1 yards per play on just 11 carries. Yet, it's Lewis who people seem to remember best.

Lewis put the Crimson Tide ahead early on a one-yard plunge, but a blocked extra point left the score 6-0. Maegle tied it up on the first play of the second period with a magnificent 79-yard run; at that point, the longest scoring run ever in the Classic. Leroy Fenstemaker's extra point gave Rice the lead for good, but there was plenty more to come.

Minutes later, Alabama moved back into scoring position but fumbled the ball away to the Owls at the Rice 10-yard line. On the first play, Rice was penalized five yards for illegal procedure. Now, facing a first-and-15 situation, history was in the making. Taking a handoff from Fenstemaker, Maegle began his famous run around right end. The Owl line blocked perfectly. Blois Bridges made the block which allowed Maegle to turn the corner. Mac Taylor flattened another Alabama defender, and Gordon Kellogg took out the last man—Bart Starr, the defensive left halfback—and Maegle was long gone.

As Maegle approached midfield, Lewis leaped off the bench, stepped around a couple of teammates, ran laterally down the sideline before throwing a perfect block into Maegle's blind side as he hit the 42-yard mark. As some 75,000 fans looked on in disbelief, game announcers fumbled for words to describe what had just taken place. Maegle lay motionless on the turf. Referee Cliff Shaw, who had been following the play up the field, hesitated for a moment, and then shot his arms over his head, signaling touchdown. Some sportswriters were divided in their opinions on whether Maegle would have scored, although Maegle had teammate Dick Chapman nearby to screen Bill Oliver, the only Alabama player who appeared to have a shot at making a touchdown saving tackle. Almost a year later, writers participating in an Associated Press year-end poll, voted the 95-yard play as the sports oddity of 1954.

Maegle went on to score his third touchdown of the day, a 34-yard run which may have been his best individual effort of the game, and the Owls walked away with a 28-6 victory. It was the third Classic triumph in as many visits for Rice. But, no matter what else may have happened that day, it was the Maegle-Lewis collision that will be remembered most. A quick check of the record book and one can understand why. Complete with an asterisk, Maegle's 95-yard gallop remains as the longest—if not the most talked about—play in Cotton Bowl history.

Henry Moore, Arkansas

Those Arkansas fans came calling, some 20,000 of them, to watch their tenth-ranked Razorbacks battle the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech in the 19th Cotton Bowl Classic. Picked to finish sixth in the seven team Southwest Conference, the Hogs stormed through the regular season losing only twice: to LSU by a point, and by a touchdown to SMU. Tech, on the other hand, was a team rich in bowl tradition, and was the only school of its time to win three major bowl games in succession. This was Georgia Tech's second appearance in the Classic, having fallen victim to Texas 12 years earlier, and no doubt was anxious to redeem itself.

Arkansas won the toss, elected to kickoff, and then saw its strategy almost backfire as the Yellow Jackets launched a 60-yard march to the Hogs' five-yard line. After a little more than nine minutes in the making, the drive stalled and Wade Mitchell's 21-yard field goal attempt sailed wide. Now, it was the Razorbacks turn to move the football.

Taking over at the 20, Arkansas made its first effort its best, driving 80 yards behind quarterback George Walker. Walker carried over from the three to put the Hogs on top, but missed the extra point. Yet, after turning back a strong scoring threat by Tech, and then driving the length of the field themselves, the Razorbacks were brimming with confidence.

Tech abandoned its passing attack in the third quarter in favor of a potent ground game. With just over five minutes to play in the period, Paul Rotenberry drew the Jackets even with the Hogs on a three-yard scoring run. Mitchell's extra point moved Tech in front, 7-6. Later, as the fourth quarter was getting underway, a short Arkansas punt of just 19 yards set up the Rambling Wreck in excellent field position on the Hogs' 43. From there, it took 10 plays for Tech to punch it across the Arkansas goal as Mitchell plowed over from the one.

Mitchell's extra point attempt was perfect and Tech increased its lead to 14-6. Arkansas crossed midfield only twice after its impressive second quarter drive, and in the final two quarters, the Hogs managed only eight yards rushing. This was the Razorbacks' first bowl defeat, and Tech's ninth post-season victory in 11 bowls. Even more notable was this fact: the Yellow Jackets now could boast of victory in each of the four major bowls.

The game was no more than a few seconds old, yet TCU already found itself in a troublesome position. Returning the opening kickoff, Chuck Curtis, the Frogs' outstanding quarterback, sustained two broken ribs and an injured right shoulder. Curtis, an all-conference performer, was the one player TCU could not afford to lose. Suddenly, backup quarterback Dick Finney was thrust into battle to fill a rather large hole left by Curtis.

Turnovers plagued both teams early, although TCU finally managed to get its offense cranked up late in the first quarter. Ray Taylor set up the Frogs' first score, taking Finney's handoff and dashed 34 yards to the Ole Miss one. Jim Swink, TCU's consensus All-America halfback and the nation's leading scorer with 20 touchdowns, bulled over from the one to lift the Frogs to a 7-0 lead.

Swink came back to help the Frogs build a 13-0 cushion on TCU's next possession. Taking over on its own 25 after the Rebels failed to convert a fake field goal attempt, TCU quickly worked its way back into scoring position. Swink, on his third carry in the drive, barreled over right tackle on a quick opener and sprinted 39 yards to the end zone. Harold Pollard's extra point attempt was good, but an illegal procedure penalty wiped out the play and Pollard had to kick again. Although it didn't seem to be vital at the time, Pollard's second attempt missed the mark.

Now, with their collective backs to the wall, Ole Miss quarterback Eagle Day began to rally the Rebel forces. Day's first two pass attempts covered 28 and 14 yards, moving Ole Miss to the TCU 24. Paige Cothren broke for a 21-yard gain to the three and on the next play crashed into the end zone for Ole Miss' first touchdown. Cothren's placement was good, and the TCU advantage had melted to six.

By the third quarter, the tide had turned toward the Rebels. Although neither team was able to cross the goal line, Ole Miss was clearly in control. With 9:34 left to play, Day made his move. A fourth down gamble on the TCU 45 paid off as Day passed to Cothren for 13 yards, keeping alive a drive that began at the Ole Miss 42. Six minutes were left to play. Third down found the Rebels at the TCU 30. Day dropped back to pass, couldn't find an open receiver and was forced to scramble. With his battle-torn jersey flapping in the breeze, Day cut through the heart of the Frog defenders before Finney stopped him at the five. The damage was done for TCU. Day then pitched out to Billy Lott who outran everyone around right end for the score. Again, Cothren's point after attempt was good and Ole Miss pulled ahead, 14-13. In the process, the Rebels gained their first ever major-bowl victory.

This Classic was all it was advertised to be: a wild offensive show. TCU earned its second straight Cotton Bowl appearance even though the Frogs wound up the conference campaign second to Texas A&M. The Aggies had roared through the SWC undefeated, but NCAA imposed sanctions prevented them from participating in post-season play.

Selected as the Frogs' opponent was once-beaten Syracuse. The Orange was ranked eighth nationally, but their main attraction was Jim Brown, the consensus All-America halfback who could do a little bit of everything with the football. The Classic was billed as a rushing duel between Brown and TCU's great halfback Jim Swink, an All-America selection for the second consecutive year.

TCU, making its fifth Cotton Bowl appearance, spent an afternoon capitalizing on Syracuse mistakes, and started each of its touchdown drives following turnovers. On the strength of quarterback Chuck Curtis' arm, the Frogs struck for 14 first half points. Curtis combined with John Nikkel for six yards to begin the scoring barrage, and a fumble recovery at the Syracuse 35 set up the Frogs' second touchdown. Curtis finished it off with an eight-yard toss to Jim Shofner.

Down by 14 points, Brown began a virtual one-man show to bring the Orange back. Brown returned the TCU kickoff 30 yards, and then netted 59 of the remaining 70 yards which led to Syracuse's first touchdown. By halftime, Brown had scored on runs of two and four yards, and to boot, added both extra points. The score remained deadlocked for much of the third quarter until a Brown fumble gave the Purples new life at their own 40-yard line. Again, Curtis was instrumental in the Frogs' attack, carrying the last seven yards to move TCU back into the lead, 21-14.

TCU returned to the scoreboard early in the final period after recovering yet another fumble, this one at the TCU 31. Nine plays later, Swink powered his way into the end zone to give TCU a 28-14 advantage.

Time certainly was against them now, but Syracuse wasn't through, neither was Brown. On the ensuing kickoff, Brown rambled 46 yards to the TCU 49, and moments later, plunged one yard over right tackle for the score. It was here that TCU's Chico Mendoza made the play of the day, crashing through to block Brown's extra point attempt. The clock was an even bigger factor now for Syracuse, trailing 28-20. But, in the game's dying minutes, the Orange started its final drive. With 1:16 left, Charles Zimmerman hit Jim Ridlon with a 27-yard scoring pass. Down by two, Syracuse surprisingly kicked off deep rather than the expected onside kick. TCU played it safe and ran out the clock, putting an end to one of the wildest scoring Classics ever.

NAVY RICE 20 07

Navy became the first Eastern team ever to win the Cotton Bowl, and for Rice, the 1958 Classic not only was the Owls' first post-season loss, but was the first for their coach, Jess Neely. It also marked the last Cotton Bowl appearance for Rice.

The Cotton Bowl had been courting Navy for three years only to have Army nix the Middies post-season plans each time. This year, however, Navy roasted Army with a 14-0 defeat, and immediately after the game the players voted to accept the New Year's Day invitation to Dallas. The Cotton Bowl was the only post-season game that season to have both teams ranked among the nation's Top 10: Navy was fifth and Rice was eighth. It also boasted of more All-America's than any other bowl: three-King Hill of Rice, and Navy's Tom Forrestal and Bob Reifsnnyder. The two teams appeared to be a perfect match.

The game was billed as a passing duel between Hill and Forrestal. However, the duel never came about. Hill suffered through one of the worst days of his career. Instead, it turned into a Forrestal-Frank Ryan battle. Ryan, also was regarded as an excellent passer, and the fight was on, or so it seemed.

After replacing Hill on the Owls' third possession of the day, Ryan bobbled his first snap from center, and Navy recovered at the Rice 33. It took the Middies eight plays to punch it across, and with 48 seconds remaining in the quarter, Navy led 6-0. The Middies came right back for their second score of the afternoon. Forrestal was the key to a 66-yard drive, firing four completions for 45 yards, rushing for six himself, and ended the march with a 13-yard pitchout to Harry Hurst for the touchdown.

Leading 13-0 at the half, Navy had all but shut down the Owls, limiting Rice to just one first down. Bad luck continued to follow the Owls into the second half. Raymond Chilton fumbled on the Owls' fourth play of the third quarter, and Navy again was on its way. Gaining possession at the Rice 20, the Middies took two plays to reach the end zone. Ned Oldham took the pitchout from Forrestal and went 19 yards for the score. Oldham then added the extra point, and with less than four minutes gone in the second half, Navy was in total command, 20-0.

By the time Rice found its way onto the scoreboard late in the third quarter, the game was all but over. Forrestal enjoyed one of the most successful days of his career, completing 13 passes for the day, as did Ryan, to break the old completion mark of 12 established the previous year by TCU's Chuck Curtis. Forrestal was a near unanimous choice for outstanding player, receiving 51 of the 54 votes cast.

It was so even that Air Force's total offense was just four yards better than TCU's, 231 to 227. But, there also were 13 fumbles and five missed field goals. Weather was not a major factor, as had been the case in the first scoreless stalemate back in 1947 when Arkansas and LSU found Mother Nature to be a bigger obstacle to overcome than the opposition's defense.

Both teams carried top ten rankings into this 23rd Classic. No. 6 Air Force finished the year 9-0-1 for its first undefeated season, tying Big Ten champ Iowa, 13-13. TCU, 8-2-0 and ranked tenth nationally, rolled through the Southwest Conference unbeaten until a season ending loss to arch-rival SMU, 20-13.

Today, however, was a much different story for the two Cotton Bowl teams. Each time the Falcons or Frogs threatened to move, an untimely fumble cropped up to put an abrupt ending to what appeared to be a promising drive. After recovering one of TCU's three lost fumbles of the day, Air Force mounted its most serious threat from its 42. In 10 plays, the Falcons had moved to the Frogs' eight-yard line. That's when TCU dug in. Air Force could get no closer than the six and it was field goal time. George Pupich stepped back for the attempt, the ball was placed down at the 12, and Pupich had little trouble in getting the kick away, but it sailed wide and to the left.

The final 30 minutes were more of the same. Air Force received the second half kickoff, and again began to drive, reaching the TCU 12. From there, quarterback Rich Mayo fired a nine-yard completion to Tom Jozwiak, but a five-yard illegal procedure penalty wiped out the play and the ball was moved back to the 17. The Falcons couldn't move and Pupich was called on again for field goal duty. This time the attempt came from 34 yards out, and just like his first, this one sailed wide of the uprights.

Pupich later missed another three-point attempt, a 52-yarder, and the Frogs took that as a signal to move, driving all the way to the Falcon eight. But that's where the Frogs' coughed up the football. Time soon ran out and the Cotton Bowl recorded its second 0-0 battle.

This was the first in a series of five Classics over an eleven year stretch that had the national championship riding on the outcome. No. 1 Syracuse, complete with a perfect 10-0-0 record, rolled into Dallas to face once-beaten and fourth-ranked Texas. It was the first meeting between the schools on the gridiron, but the heated battle that quickly took place left the impression the two were bitter rivals. At one point in the second quarter, tempers flared to such extent that it appeared a full-scale brawl might erupt. At game's end, charges were flying from both camps of "dirty play." Outside of the name calling and various accusations of unethical conduct, this Classic produced spectacular football in every phase of the game. There were long plays, heart-rendering goal line stands, and bristling defense.

The Orange, making its second trip to Dallas in three years, was the recognized national champions, having completed the school's first undefeated and untied season in its 71-year grid history. Syracuse absolutely dominated NCAA statistics that season. They came to Dallas looking for their first major bowl victory. Texas had finished in a three-way tie for the SWC title, but entered the game a heavy underdog.

The Classic was just seconds old when the first of the fireworks exploded. Penalized back to his 13-yard line on a holding call, Syracuse quarterback Dave Sarette pitched out to halfback Ger Schwedes, who in turn looked downfield for a streaking Ernie Davis. Schwedes fired the halfback pass and Davis made the reception on the run at his 43. Texas defender Jack Collins leaped high, and just barely touched the ball, but not quite enough to keep Davis from making the grab. Davis was all alone in the open field and raced to the end zone for an 87-yard scoring play, the Classic's longest pass ever. Davis, who would win the coveted Heisman Trophy as a senior in 1961, scored again in the second quarter, and for the day, was on the receiving end of two, two-point conversions.

Not to be outdone, Texas also took advantage of the big play that afternoon. After spotting Syracuse a 15-0 lead, quarterback Bobby Lackey struck with the bomb, a 69-yarder to Collins. However, the Longhorns' bid for two came up short as Rene Ramirez was stopped short of the goal line. In the fourth quarter, Lackey put the Longhorns on the scoreboard for the final time, diving in from the one. Lackey then passed to Richard Shulte for the conversion.

This game marked the Classic's Silver Anniversary, as well as a dazzling performance by Arkansas' spectacular halfback, Lance Alworth. But, it was the men from Duke, led by Don Altman, the Blue Devil quarterback, Claude "Tee" Moorman, the All-America "lonesome end," and big Dave Unser that had the final say.

For three quarters, Alworth enjoyed a tremendous afternoon, running, receiving, returning kickoffs and punts as well as handling the Hogs' punting chores, while under intense pressure from Duke's massive defenders. His most exciting play of the day came in the third quarter. Arkansas was forced to punt at the Blue Devil 41. The snap was high and Alworth had to leap to control it. When he came down, four Duke linemen were less than a step away, ready to make the kill. Alworth took off to his right, cut downfield and while running at near top speed, dropped the ball and kicked it. The ball angled toward the corner and bounced out of bounds at the two. It was an unbelievable play. Duke kicked the ball back to the Razorbacks two plays later and it was Alworth again who provided the suspense. Taking it at the Duke 49, Alworth — the nation's leading punt returner — shot through an opening and was in the clear, on his way to the end zone for his first return touchdown. The way both teams' defensive units were playing, Alworth's score seemed enough to win even though Mickey Cissell's extra point attempt was blocked by Unser.

But, as much as the third period belonged to Arkansas, the fourth quarter momentum swung to the Blue Devils. Returning an Alworth punt to its 27, Duke launched its one big drive of the afternoon. Slowly and methodically, Altman directed the Duke attack. Ten minutes remained. Five times Altman connected with Moorman, his favorite receiver, in their march up the field. For most of the afternoon, Moorman truly was "lonesome." At times he never joined his teammates in the huddle.

With the ball resting on the Arkansas 30, Alworth almost came up with yet another big play, as he leaped in front of Moorman for a sure interception. But, the ball slipped through his grasp and into the Duke receiver's hands. The drive ended with Altman's nine-yard scoring toss to Moorman. The score now tied, Art Browning added the extra point, and with 2:45 left, the Blue Devils held a slim 7-6 advantage. As Alworth retreated near his goal line to receive the Duke kickoff, there still was a glimmer of hope. But just as he prepared to turn on his remarkable speed, Unser came up with his second key play of the afternoon, crashing into Alworth at the 32. The ball tumbled free and Duke recovered. For Arkansas, the game was over.

Both Texas and Ole Miss had gained the No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll during the regular season. The Longhorns held the top spot during the first two weeks of November before TCU knocked them from the unbeaten ranks. Ole Miss had moved into first-place on October 9th. Even though both had suffered unexpected midseason losses, neither team had dropped very far in the polls. On New Year's Day, the 26th Cotton Bowl featured a top attraction: No. 3 Texas vs. No. 5 Ole Miss, both 9-1-0.

The Rebels were the nation's total offense leader, and second in passing. Texas was the nation's second best rushing team and the fourth best in total offense. Ole Miss was led by three gifted quarterbacks: Doug Elmore, Glynn Griffing, and Perry Lee Dunn. The Longhorns had four running backs ranked among the Southwest Conference's top ten rushers: James Saxton, Jerry Cook, Tommy Ford, and Ray Poage. Both teams also boasted solid defenses. This Classic was bound to be one for the ages, and it was.

Never had an SWC team defeated Ole Miss in a post-season bowl game, but by halftime Texas appeared well on its way to becoming the first. Saxton, Texas' All-America tailback who led the SWC in rushing that season, gave the Horns an early 6-0 lead, plunging one yard for the score. The touchdown was set up on an interception, the Longhorns' second of five for the day.

The Longhorn offense flexed its offensive muscle again in the second period, driving 72 yards in nine plays. Quarterback Mike Cotten led the Texas rampage, moving the Horns to the Ole Miss 24. At that point, Cotten rolled right and hit Jack Collins with a perfect toss at the 16. Aided by Charles Talbert's crunching block, Collins sidestepped two defenders and sprinted into the end zone. To offset the missed extra point after the first score. Texas elected to go for two, but it, too, failed as Collins was stopped a yard short of the goal line.

At this point, Texas was threatening to turn the game into a rout. It was the first time in 17 games the Ole Miss defense had allowed a pair of touchdowns, and it was the first time in eight years the Rebels had trailed by a dozen points at the half. But, in the second half, the Rebels let it be known that 12 points might not necessarily be enough to win. Taking over on their own 14, after Saxton pulled off a 73-yard quick kick, the Rebels began to roll. Within four minutes, Ole Miss was on the scoreboard. Griffing passed 20 yards to Reed Davis, to trim the Texas lead to 12-7.

Only five points separated the two teams and tension began to build. The clock had ticked down to the 8:20 mark and it was time for the Texas defense to take over. Already the Horns had snared five interceptions, but to win more big plays had to be made.

A short punt gave Ole Miss field position at its 45, and it took just six plays for Griffing to reach the Texas 23. But, just when things began to look promising for the Rebels, their luck evaporated. Safety Duke Carlisle batted down a third down pass, and on fourth-and-two, end Bob Moses stepped forward for Texas. As Griffing pulled away from center he slipped and never had time to recover. Moses met him head-on to stuff the play for a yard loss. The ball went over on downs to Texas and Ole Miss never seriously threatened again. The Horns ran out the clock and the SWC recorded its first-ever bowl victory over the Rebels.

For the first time in 39 years, Texas went through its regular-season campaign unbeaten. At 9-0-1, the Longhorns' only blemish was a 14-14 tie with Rice in late October. Again, Texas found itself back in the Cotton Bowl, and for the second year in a row, the Longhorns would face an opponent from the Southeastern Conference. For LSU, it had been 16 years since its last appearance in the Classic, and it wasn't a memorable experience, battling Arkansas to a 0-0 tie.

But this time around, the goose egg ended up on only one side of the scoreboard thanks to a pair of Tiger quarterbacks named Lynn Amedee and Jimmy Field. LSU abandoned its conservative "three yards and a cloud of dust" offensive philosophy for a high flying aerial assault on the Texas defense. The Tigers had completed only 40 passes during the entire season. This was another day, however, as LSU completed 13 of 21 pass attempts, two shy of the record 15 completions set the previous year by 'Ole Miss.

The Tigers' big offensive gun was All-America halfback Jerry Stovall, and for Texas, Ray Poage, Tommy Ford, and Jerry Cook were the chief offensive threats. Johnny Treadwell was the Longhorns' defensive leader while LSU relied on its famed "Chinese Bandits."

Neither team could generate a sustained drive in the first quarter of play, but late in the second period, with Amedee and Field alternating at quarterback, the Tigers began to move, driving from their 20 to the Texas five-yard line. LSU had used all of its time outs, and with the clock rolling, the Tigers had no choice on third down but to go for three. Field dashed in with the kicking tee and Amedee booted home a 23-yarder with just eight seconds left. This was the Classic's first field goal since the 1942 game and was only the fourth in its 27-year history.

Texas jumped into the frying pan to begin the second half, fumbling the kickoff at the 37. In two minutes, LSU had increased its lead to 10-0. Facing third and nine from the Texas 22, Field dropped back to pass and looked hopelessly trapped by the Longhorn pass rush. Suddenly, Field saw daylight, cutback behind the Texas pursuit and raced 22 yards for his first touchdown of the year. Amedee recorded his second field goal late in the game, connecting on a 37-yarder with 4:58 left to shutout the Horns, 13-0.

The pre-game furor over which team deserved the No. 1 ranking. Texas, with a perfect 10-0-0 record, was ranked No. 1 in the final regular-season rankings. Navy was just a step behind the Longhorns at No. 2 with a 9-1-0 mark. In addition to the lofty rankings involved, Navy also boasted the 1963 Heisman Trophy winner, quarterback Roger Staubach. However, it was Duke Carlisle, the Longhorns' defensive ace in the '62 Classic, who stole the show. Moved to quarterback at the start of the season, Carlisle enjoyed a spectacular afternoon, passing for two touchdowns and running for another. As expected, the Texas defense was spectacular, holding an offense that averaged better than 31 points per game to just six, and minus 14 yards rushing.

Outland Trophy winner Scott Appleton was the defensive ringleader.

The eastern press had proclaimed for weeks that Navy, not Texas, was the nation's best even though the Middies had lost to SMU by a 32-28 count. It was one of the biggest upsets of the year, and it happened on this very Cotton Bowl turf. Always rich in football tradition, Texas was in the midst of its most successful era to date; winning its first national championship, two consecutive undefeated seasons, and competing in its third straight Cotton Bowl Classic.

Texas won the toss, elected to receive and on the game's sixth play Carlisle went for the bomb. The target was 18-year old Phil Harris, the youngest man on the field, flying down the left sideline. Harris grabbed the pass at the Navy 45 and galloped into the end zone. The play covered 58 yards and it marked the eighth time in 11 games that season that Texas had scored on its first possession. Six minutes into the second quarter, the Carlisle-Harris combo hooked up again, this time for a 63-yard scoring play. A fumble recovery at the Navy 34 set up yet another touchdown for the Longhorns before the half. Carlisle went the final nine yards and at intermission the Horns were up, 21-0.

Texas produced its last score of the game late in the third quarter to boost its lead to 28-0. Fearing a shutout, Navy went to work with Staubach at the helm. For the day, Staubach completed a record 21 of his 31 passing attempts. It was Staubach's arm that led Navy to its only touchdown, completing four passes for a total of 57 yards on a 75-yard drive. Staubach carried over from the two to end the day's scoring.

This was to be Arkansas' finest hour. The Razorbacks, undefeated (10-0-0) and ranked second nationally behind Alabama in the final Associated Press and United Press International polls, had something to prove. When the day was done, Arkansas had more than proven itself as a legitimate heir to the national crown. Alabama was the wire service champ and nothing could be done to reverse that decision. But, the Grantland Rice award, voted by the Football Writers of America and presented after the completion of post-season play to what it considered the nation's best football team, still lay in the balance. But, to reach the pinnacle, the Hogs first had to dispose of No. 6 Nebraska which would be no easy chore. After a little more than three quarters of play, Arkansas' chances of doing just that looked slim.

The Razorbacks had jumped to an early 3-0 lead on their first possession when Tom McKnelly's 31-yard field goal split the uprights. However, the three point advantage was short-lived. Nebraska's beefy Cornhuskers utilized the big play in the second quarter to move in front, and sophomore halfback Harry Wilson led the way. Slipping down the sideline, Wilson took a Bob Churchich pass 36 yards to the Arkansas 18. Moments later, Churchich ripped through the Razorback defense for 10, and on the next play Wilson went over right guard for the touchdown. The score and subsequent extra point gave coach Bob Devaney's well drilled Huskers a 7-3 lead which held up almost to the end.

The game clock showed 9:21 when Arkansas quarterback Fred Marshall launched the comeback. The Hogs found themselves 80 yards away from destiny and with precious little time to achieve it. Marshall started the drive throwing for 12 yards to Jerry Lamb. He then came right back with an 11-yard strike to Bobby Burnett out of the backfield. Three plays later, the Hogs were at the Nebraska 43. Flushed from the pocket as he was looking to pass, Marshall wiggled free and dashed up the middle for 10 yards. Now came the clincher. Marshall came out firing and found halfback Jim Lindsey open at the 25. Lindsey took the pass and rambled to the Husker five. The play covered 28 yards. From there, Burnett leaped tacklers to reach the three, then took a pitchout from Marshall, turned the corner and carried a defender with him as he crossed the goal line. With 4:41 left to play, McKnelly boomed the final point through the post, 10-7.

The Razorbacks were Cotton Bowl champions for the first time. Things fell into place after that. Later in the evening, arch-rival Texas came through for the Hogs in the Orange Bowl, knocking off Alabama 21-17 to open the door for Arkansas' first ever national title. For the second consecutive year, the Cotton Bowl held the key to the national championship.

For the second time in four years, the Bengal Tigers presented coach Charles McClendon with a perfect Cotton Bowl game. Unranked LSU (7-3-0) sprang one of the Classic's biggest upsets, downing No. 2 Arkansas, 14-7, and ended college football's longest winning streak at 22. The Hogs (10-0-0) last defeat came by the same score, on the same Cotton Bowl turf, to SMU in the ninth game of 1963. That also was the last time the Hogs had been blanked in the final two quarters until the Bengals turned the trick on that day.

Arkansas had not beaten LSU since 1929, and in the 1947 Classic the two teams battled to a scoreless tie. But, things were different now. The Razorbacks were the heavy favorites, and the unexpected happened. Prone to turnovers and injuries throughout the season, LSU did not yield a fumble or an interception to the Hogs while quarterback Pat Screen handled the mixture of short passing and the inside power game to perfection.

But it didn't start out that way. On its second possession, Arkansas rolled 87 yards on 11 brilliantly executed plays en route to its only score. Harry Jones dazzled the Tigers with power sweeps and Bobby Burnett pounded the middle. Quarterback Jon Brittenum was in total control, and whipped a 19-yard aerial to Bobby Crockett for the touchdown. The drive consumed just 1:27 and the Razorbacks were on the scoreboard, 7-0.

The Tigers roared back two possessions later for an 80 yard march of their own. Tailbacks Jim Dousay and Joe Labruzzo pounded the middle of the Hogs' defense repeatedly with short but effective gains that led to the Arkansas end zone. The LSU drive consisted of 16 plays, and by the time Labruzzo carried over from the three, a full 8:17 had elapsed. Doug Moreau's kick tied it at 7-7. Three plays after the LSU touchdown, Brittenum was forced to the sideline with a shoulder injury. His replacement, Ronny South, fumbled on the very next play at the Arkansas 34. LSU seized the momentum. Labruzzo again hammered for short yardage, carrying on five consecutive plays, the last one took him over for the score with 18 seconds left in the half and LSU led for the first time.

Brittenum returned to duty for the Hogs in the third quarter and twice moved Arkansas inside LSU territory, only to come up empty each time. LSU couldn't move the ball at all and failed to gain a first down the entire period. However, as the fourth quarter rolled around, momentum had shifted again. LSU began a march that would take them all the way to the Arkansas two before the Hog defense forced the Tigers to go for three. But, the kick sailed wide and the Hogs had escaped.

Twice in the closing minutes, Brittenum took his Hogs on long drives, only to be intercepted at the LSU 20 to kill the first one, and time simply ran out on them at the end with the ball on the Tiger 24. LSU had done it again. Three years before, they surprised mighty Texas, 13-0. Now the victim was Arkansas, 14-7.

Actually, this was the second Cotton Bowl Classic played in 1966 — it was played on Saturday, Dec. 31. But, regardless when the game was held, Georgia was simply too strong for the SMU Mustangs who were making their first Cotton Bowl appearance since the days of Doak Walker, 18 years before.

The Bulldogs opened in spectacular fashion. Kent Lawrence, Georgia's miniature sophomore halfback, sprinted 74 yards on the Bulldogs' third play to stake an early 7-0 lead. Minutes later, SMU began to threaten after a poor Georgia punt traveled just 15 yards to the Bulldog 34. The Mustangs jumped on the opportunity, driving to the Georgia five where Dennis Partee was called on to trim the Bulldog lead back to four. Partee's 22-yard attempt was perfect and SMU was on the scoreboard.

The ensuing kickoff came to Lawrence and again he was off to the races, returning the kick 36 yards. Georgia was back on the move. Lawrence combined with Ronnie Jenkins to push the Dawgs into scoring range, setting up Bobby Etter's 28-yard placement. Etter's kick stretched the Georgia lead to 10-3, but the first half still was far from over.

The second quarter found the Bulldogs knocking on the door again with the ball at the Pony 22. Two plays later, Billy Payne wrestled Kirby Moore's 20-yard toss away from SMU defender Floyd Burke for Georgia's third score.

Just before halftime, SMU put together its only sustained offensive spurt of the day. However, the Mustangs did it the hard way, overcoming three illegal procedure penalties during the course of the 72-yard drive. Jerry LeVias, the SWC Player of the Year, sparked the drive with a pair of key receptions, and Mike Richardson got the touchdown, diving over right guard for the final yard to narrow the Georgia lead to 17-9.

Georgia continued its domination of the game through the third quarter, rolling up 24 offensive plays to the Mustangs' 11. The score remained at 17-9 as the two teams headed into the final 15 minutes, but not for long. The quarter opened with the Dawgs at the SMU five, and in two plays, Jenkins had gained his first touchdown and Georgia's last. The score increased to 24-9, and time was becoming a factor. SMU's best shot came two possessions later after a pass interception set the Mustangs up at the Georgia 40 with 7:11 left. On first down, White passed to Larry Jernigan for 38 yards to the Bulldog two. However, that's as far as they went. Three plays produced minus yardage and Georgia took over at its five to quell the SMU threat.

Sitting at the edge of their seats, nearly 74,000 chilled fans waited for the "Bear" and his troops to pull off a miracle. Eighth-ranked Alabama was on the verge of upset by unranked Texas A&M, 20-16. Neither the Aggie nor Crimson Tide faithful could believe what they were seeing. Aggie coach Gene Stallings was minutes away from pulling off the biggest upset of his young coaching career, and the victim would be his former mentor at A&M, Paul "Bear" Bryant.

The Aggies played Bryant-like, clutch football the full 60 minutes, turning an Alabama interception and fumble into first half touchdowns to lead 13-10 at halftime. Then, midway through the third quarter, A&M turned a short, 28-yard Alabama punt into its final score of the afternoon. Stallings utilized the element of surprise to its fullest sending his quarterback Edd Hargett into the game with instructions to air out the stadium. In the first half alone, Hargett put the ball up 21 times.

While the Aggies performed flawlessly, the Tide was playing totally out of character. When Hargett threw for 28 yards to split end Barney Harris at the Alabama 15, Bryant's men on the field numbered only ten. The play set up A&M's first score, another Hargett pass completion to Larry Stegent that covered the final 13 yards to tie the game at 7-7.

The Tide surged back in front, 10-7, on the first play of the second quarter on the strength of Steve Davis' 36-yard field goal. The score held up until the final minute of the half when Hargett fired a seven-yard shot to Tommy Maxwell. Just 21 seconds were left and the Aggies grabbed the lead for the first time, 13-10.

Then came the third quarter and Wendell Housley added to the A&M lead, bowling over three Bama defenders for 20 yards and boosted the score to 20-10. But, Alabama had been quiet for too long. The Tide took the A&M kickoff and went to work, driving 83 yards in nine plays to get within four and set up a dramatic finish.

Time was at a minimum when Alabama started its final rally. Driving from its own 20, Bama moved the ball with sheer determination. Quarterback Kenny Stabler was at the controls. A holding call accessed to the Aggies soon advanced the ball to the Tide 44. Within seconds, Stabler had his team at the A&M 35 with a first down. Bryant's pacing along the sideline quickened.

However, that's when the Tide began to fall apart. Three straight passes fell incomplete. A fourth down pass gained six to the 29, four yards shy of the needed first down. For Alabama, the miracle never came. The ball went over to A&M and it was just a matter of time before the Aggies claimed their first Cotton Bowl Classic victory in 27 years.

It was the rubber match in the Cotton Bowl series between Texas and Tennessee. In 1951, the Volunteers scored a 20-14 upset over the Longhorns, but two years later in 1953, Texas returned the favor with a 16-0 pounding of the Vols. But, the licking Tennessee absorbed 16 years earlier was by no means comparable to the beating it would take today.

It was the first Classic display of the Wishbone T formation and all of college football may have been a little in awe that day of the 36-13 pasting the Longhorns applied to the Vols. Newspaper headlines the next day proclaimed Texas had taken "The Street to Success." Of course, the reference was to the Horns' outstanding young quarterback James Street, who directed the Texas offense with sheer precision. Street had taken over the Longhorns' quarterback duties two games into the season, and it was the beginning of a legendary career.

The Texas offense had never been more ruthless. By halftime, the Horns had all but crushed Tennessee, 28-0. Known for its awesome running game, Texas unloaded upon the Volunteers with a full round of artillery. Street and receiver Cotton Speyrer hooked up for two of the Classic's longest scoring plays ever, a 78-yard bomb in the opening quarter, and a 79-yarder late in the third. And if the aerial show wasn't scary enough, the vaunted Tennessee defense frantically looked for ways to plug up leaks that allowed the heralded Texas running backs to storm for 279 yards. The trio of Chris Gilbert, Steve Worster, and Ted Koy comprised one of the SWC's most talented offensive units in history, and each scored on plays that might be regarded as near monuments to offensive execution and blocking techniques.

Worster started the Texas scoring avalanche on a 14-yard blast. Then came the bomb from Street to Speyrer, and five minutes into the second quarter, Koy slashed nine yards for the third Texas touchdown. Gilbert added the fourth with 1:17 left in the half, taking a Street pitchout five yards for the score. Street then passed to Speyrer for the two-point conversion, and the Longhorns had the game completely out of reach, 28-0.

With the offense demonstrating complete domination of the Vols, the Texas defense almost went unnoticed. But, it shouldn't have. Seldom had the Steers been more deadly. The two Tennessee quarterbacks never had a chance against the muscle of Bill Atessis, Loyd Wainscott, Leo Brooks and Bill Zapalac, as well as the secondary work applied by Tom Campbell, Bill Bradley, and Ronnie Ehrig. This was a blue-ribbon day for the Longhorns, yet only eight of Texas' 22 starters were seniors. It was evident an even bigger victory was not too far away.

Collegiate football's centennial season soon would come to a flashy end, and for the grand finale, the nation's eyes would focus upon Dallas and the 34th annual Cotton Bowl. For this Classic would become a dream matchup; Texas, ranked No. 1 and proclaimed national champions by President Richard Nixon, versus Notre Dame, the legendary gridiron powerhouse, making its first post-season appearance in 45 years.

This truly was to become one of the Classic's memorable games. The Longhorns were fresh from their famed 15-14 come-from-behind victory over No. 2 Arkansas, known best as "The Big Shootout." Texas was a perfect 10-0-0. Ninth-ranked Notre Dame carried an 8-1-1 mark to Dallas. But, more notably was the fact the only other time the Fighting Irish had gone bowling was in the 1925 Rose Bowl when the legendary Four Horsemen led the way to a 27-10 defeat of Stanford. Now, 45 years later, three of the surviving Four Horsemen would come to Texas to spread Irish lore for the bowl-starved Notre Dame loyalists.

The Irish had plenty of incentive to keep its perfect bowl record intact, and when Notre Dame jumped to a 10-0 lead, the game looked to have the makings of the centennial season's most colossal upset. The Longhorns won the toss and elected to kick. In trotted quarterback Joe Theismann to direct the Irish on a 72-yard march up the field en route to Scott Hempel's 26-yard field goal. The 3-0 Notre Dame lead held up for the remainder of the first quarter. Then, 12 seconds into the second, Theismann unloaded the bomb. Just as he turned to throw, Tom Gatewood slipped behind Longhorn defender Danny Lester. The pass was on target and Gatewood went in for an easy 54-yard score.

Down 10-0, Texas roared back. James Street, the Longhorns' brilliant Wishbone quarterback, took control and in nine plays had Texas in the end zone. A 17-yard pass to Cotton Speyrer, another completion of 16 yards to Randy Peschel, and a 17-yard sprint by halfback Jim Bertelsen moved the Horns to the Notre Dame 10. Three plays later, Bertelsen crashed the goal line to cut the Irish lead back to three, 10-7.

That's the way it stood as the teams changed ends of the field to begin the fourth quarter. By then, however, Texas was on a roll, moving from its 23 to the Notre Dame 37. From there, Street and company continued to grind out the yardage with halfback Ted Koy gaining the last three to put the Horns ahead for the first time, 14-10. Now, it was Notre Dame's turn to move. Theismann started the drive at his 20 and ended it with a 24-yard scoring toss to halfback Jim Yoder. The Irish were back in front, 17-14, but not for long. The game clock was ticking with 6:47 left, enough time for one more Texas drive...and it was a classic. The march was good for 76 yards in 17 plays, and the key was a fourth down play at the Irish ten. Street had to hurry his throw under duress to Speyrer. The pass was short, but Speyrer stopped, turned back and made a diving catch just before the ball hit the ground at the two. Seconds later, reserve halfback Billy Dale plunged over from the one with just 1:08 left. With that, Texas wrapped up its second national championship.

Walter Robertson of the Dallas Morning News may have summed it up best when he wrote, "The initial temptation would be to rank the Texas-Arkansas game as tops for the first 100 years of college football, and then start the second centennial running with this one."

Only coach Ara Parseghian and his players could say for sure, but if revenge was a motive, then the Fighting Irish more than settled their score with No. 1 Texas. Notre Dame caused nine Texas fumbles, and All-America quarterback Joe Theismann accounted for the first 18 of the Irish's 24 points to end the Longhorns' winning streak at 30. Ironically, the longest winning streak in college football history also died by the same sword more than 14 years earlier, when an equally inspired Notre Dame team snapped Oklahoma's 47-game unbeaten string with a 7-0 upset.

This time, the Irish did it in the most touted bowl rematch ever after Texas escaped with a 21-17 victory in the dying minutes of the 1970 Classic. Notre Dame blitzed across all three of its touchdowns in a span of ten minutes during the first and second quarters, and then dug in to make sure Texas never regained control.

Both teams displayed their offensive fireworks in the first half as the Irish built up a 24-11 advantage that held up until the final buzzer. Texas quarterback Eddie Phillips, who would set a Classic total offense record with 363 yards before the afternoon was over, put the Longhorns in motion early, scampering 63 yards off the triple option before Ralph Stepaniak drug him down at the Notre Dame 10. But, the Horns couldn't take advantage of Phillips' long-gainer and called on Happy Feller to boot a 23-yard field goal for an early 3-0 advantage.

The Texas lead was short-lived, however. Moving from their own 20, the Irish quickly drove to their go-ahead touchdown. Theismann finished it off with a 26-yard completion to his All-America receiver Tom Gatewood. Notre Dame then came right back to score again following a Texas fumble at the Horn 13. Theismann carried over from the three and the Irish led 14-3 at the end of the first quarter. Notre Dame soon expanded its advantage to 21-3 in the opening minutes of the second, and Theismann again was the one responsible for the score, keeping for the final 15 yards. Texas put together one last sustained drive, as Phillips began operations at the Longhorn 16. It was a typical Texas-style march, totaling 18 plays and seven minutes. Of those 84 yards, Phillips ran or passed for 72 of them. Halfback Jim Bertelsen carried for the final two and Danny Lester added the two-point conversion to make it 21-11. Just before the half ended, Notre Dame returned to the scoreboard for the last time when Scott Hempel booted a 36-yard field goal.

The final 30 minutes went scoreless, but Notre Dame had this game on ice long before the half. Coach Ara Parseghian had found a cure for the powerful Texas triple option.

COTTON BOWL
TEXAS VS. PENN STATE - $1.00

Chalk one up for Penn State. The Nittany Lions stormed through, over and around Texas in every phase of the game to score a resounding 30-6 victory. Rarely had a Darrell Royal team been subjected to a licking such as the one Penn State doled out in the 36th annual Cotton Bowl. The Lions were aching for redemption after closing the season at Tennessee with a 31-11 loss to the Vols, depriving them of an undefeated season and a lofty national ranking. With the defeat, Penn State skidded from fifth to tenth before reaching Dallas. Unfortunately for Texas, the two teams crossed paths at a most inopportune time.

So thorough was the Penn State domination, the Longhorns failed to score a touchdown for the first time in 80 games, dating back to October, 1964, when a pair of field goals gave them a 6-3 decision over Rice. Neither Eddie Phillips nor Donnie Wigginton could fire up what had been a consistent Texas Wishbone attack. Coach Joe Paterno's team had all the ingredients of a great ball club: a clever quarterback with John Hufnagel, an All-America halfback in Lydell Mitchell, a sturdy offensive line headed by tackle Dave Joyner, and an alert defense stocked with heroes, namely Bruce Bannon.

The first half turned into a kicking exhibition between the Longhorns' Steve Valek and the Lions' Alberto Vitiello. Texas won that battle as Valek booted a 29-yarder at the close of the first quarter. Vitiello hammered one through from 21 yards out early in the second, and Valek came back to add a 40-yarder just as the first half expired. No one realized it at the time, but that's also when the Texas scoring punch expired. For the game, the Longhorns fumbled five times and lost three. Each time, Penn State converted the Texas turnover into points.

Phillips began the Nittany Lions second half charge, fumbling on the Horns' third play and Penn State made the recovery at the Texas 41. It was only a matter of time. Penn State drove the rest of the way for what turned out to be the clinching touchdown. Mitchell crashed over from the one and the Lions were in front, 10-6. Within three minutes, the lead grew to 17-6 when Hufnagel hit Scott Skarzynski streaking down the sideline for a 65-yard surprise. The nearest Texas defender was 20 yards away. Penn State never let up after that. The Lions next three possessions turned into 13 points and the final result was decisive, 30-6.

Not even an inflamed pair of tonsils could prevent Texas from springing a 17-13 surprise on No. 4 Alabama. The tonsils belonged to Texas quarterback Alan Lowry who spent a sleepless New Year's Eve and at game time was on the verge of admitting that he just couldn't play. For the Longhorns sake, it never reached that point. For it was Lowry who made the difference in the end.

The Horns were spending their fifth straight holiday in Dallas, and were determined to put an end to their two-game losing streak in the Classic. No doubt, Texas partisans were relieved to see Alabama jump onto the scoreboard first when Greg Gantt kicked himself into the Cotton Bowl record book with a 50-yard field goal. Scoring first was not a profitable practice. In the last three Classics, the team that scored first, and coincidentally by a field goal, went on to lose the game. So, Gantt's record three-pointer couldn't have been more encouraging.

However, when the Crimson Tide moved in front 10-0, things suddenly didn't look so promising. The game was barely 10 minutes old when Wilbur Jackson took a pitchout, turned the corner, and zoomed 31 yards into the end zone. All 10 Alabama points were the result of a pair of Lowry interceptions. Steve Wade snagged both of them, his second return went for 42 yards and set the stage for Jackson's sprint. Billy Schott got Texas on the scoreboard in the opening minutes of the second quarter with a 24-yard field goal, but the Tide's Bill Davis answered right back as the gun sounded to end the first half with a 30-yard effort that just cleared the crossbar. At the half, Alabama was comfortably in front, 13-3.

While everything seemed to go against the Longhorns in the first half, things finally began to click in the second. Running back Roosevelt Leaks, the Longhorns' sophomore sensation, was outstanding. Leaks gained 37 of his 120 total yards in Texas' 59-yard scoring drive early in the third quarter that shot the Horns back into the picture. Lowry got the touchdown to move Texas within three. The score remained 13-10 as the game rolled into the final quarter. Then Lowry began to work his magic. Terry Melancon had just intercepted his second pass of the game, this time in the Texas end zone to kill an Alabama scoring threat. The clock was down to 7:42 when the Horns put the ball in play at the 20. Soon, Texas had crossed midfield to the Alabama 42 on the strength of two long pass completions. Two rushing plays moved the ball to the 34, and Lowry was ready to pull off the day's biggest play.

It was by design all the way. Lowry took the snap on the third and two, hid the ball on his hip and executed the bootleg to perfection. Lowry rolled to his left, then cut sharply to the sideline and outran everyone for the goal line and the game-winning touchdown. It was a gutsy call. Some claimed Lowry had stepped out of bounds at the 10. He said no, his teammates said no, and the officials said no.

Alabama tied to rally, however linebacker Randy Braband would have none of it. On fourth and inches at the Texas 43, Braband roared through to smother the Bama running back for a yard loss. Only 1:52 was left to play when Braband made his stirring defensive play and, in effect, slammed the door on the Crimson Tide's comeback hopes.

This was a game of streaks. Texas was making its sixth consecutive trip to the Cotton Bowl. And, for the fifth straight year, the team that took a 3-0 lead lost the game. The Longhorns were unlucky enough to gain that distinction, too. For Nebraska, the Cornhuskers awarded their coach Tom Osborne with his first bowl victory. It was a convincing one, too. The fact the Huskers beat the eighth-ranked Longhorns wasn't nearly as shocking as the method in which they went about it. With the exception of a brilliant goal line stand in the closing seconds of the first half, Texas had very little to cheer about.

For once, Roosevelt Leaks, Texas' All-America fullback, was not a factor, unless his freakish second quarter fumble could be considered as such. The Longhorns had scored on their first possession when Billy Schott banged through a 22-yard field goal. The score was set up by a Nebraska fumble. The second period began in much the same fashion as the first. The Huskers turned the football over on an interception at their 32. Texas was ready to cash in again. Leaks gained three yards on first down, but on the next play, was hit hard and the ball shot straight up in the air. Defensive end Steve Manstedt couldn't have been in better position. Manstedt saw the ball squirt up, grabbed it and dashed 65 yards to the Texas six before the Longhorns could drag him down. The end result was Rich Sanger's 24-yard field goal that tied the score, at 3-3.

Seconds before the half, Nebraska was denied a golden opportunity. Moving from their own 20, the Huskers used less than four minutes to reach all the way to the Texas one. The clock was down to 1:29, more than enough time to punch the ball across. First and goal turned into second and third down, and the ball hadn't moved. Each time, the Huskers were turned away by a solid Texas wall of defenders, inspired by linebacker Wade Johnston. The final blast came from Maury Damkroger and Johnston was there to stuff him again short of the goal line as time ran out.

The second half turned into a much different game. Nebraska received inspired leadership from backup quarterback Steve Runty who led the Huskers to two third quarter scores. The first came at the 3:05 mark on Ritch Bahe's 12-yard run. A minute and a half later, Tony Davis put the Huskers ahead 16-3 on a three-yard pitchout. Sanger returned early in the fourth quarter to nail the lid shut with his 43-yard field goal that made it 19-3.

Steve Beaird, Baylor

The 1974 Southwest Conference campaign was dubbed the “Miracle on the Brazos.” Baylor had claimed its first SWC championship in 50 seasons and earned its first ever berth into the Classic. In fact, it was Baylor’s first New Year’s Day bowl appearance since 1957. The Bears even kept alive the Cotton Bowl streak for teams that score first, lose. While Baylor was new to such New Year’s Day activities, Penn State was full of bowl-wise veterans, and it was the school’s third trip to Dallas.

Five times in their 10-victory season, the Nittany Lions came from behind to win. Today would become their sixth. For two and a half quarters, Baylor’s Bears played like old hands before the Eastern powerhouse. The two teams traded first quarter turnovers before Baylor began its march to a 7-0 lead. Penn State had just picked off a Neal Jeffrey pass at the Baylor 23. But, two plays later, the Nittany Lions coughed up the ball themselves at the Bear 16. That set the stage for the impressive Baylor drive. In four minutes, Jeffrey had his team in scoring position. Steve Beaird went the last four yards and Baylor was on the scoreboard with only 41 seconds left in the opening quarter.

Moving the football really wasn’t a problem for the Lions in the first half, but punching it across the goal line was. It wasn’t until the clock ticked down to 1:13 in the half that Penn State finally cracked the scoreboard with a 25-yard Matt Bahr field goal. When play resumed in the third quarter, it was quarterback Tom Shuman’s turn to shine, engineering an 80-yard Penn State drive that put them in the lead for the first time at 10-7. Shuman threw strikes of 42 and 20 yards to his tight end Dan Natale to fuel the march, while Tom Donchez ended it with a one-yard plunge up the middle for a 10-7 lead. The Bears came roaring back in the waning minutes of the quarter to regain the lead when Jeffrey hit Ricky Thompson for 35 yards, making it a 14-10 ballgame.

The seesaw battle continued. With its next possession, Penn State took the lead for good. Starting from their 48, Donchez gained three on first down, and Shuman decided it was time to go deep. Freshman Jimmy Cefalo worked his way behind Baylor defensive back Scooter Reed and Shuman’s pass was on the money. Cefalo made the grab at the nine and then cruised in for the score, 17-14. It was more of the same in the fourth quarter. Penn State turned each possession into points: Cefalo scored from the three; Bahr hit another field goal; Shuman kept at left guard for two and the touchdown which made it 34-14; and linebacker Joe Jackson scooped up Baylor’s outside kick on the last play of the game and ran 50 yards for the final score. Penn State’s 41 points was a Classic record.

It's true that football is a sixty minute game. However, Arkansas was living proof after the 40th annual Classic that two minutes time can mean all the difference between winning and losing. But by New Year's Day, the Hogs had become accustomed to pressure situations. To reach the Cotton Bowl, the Razorbacks had to knock off unbeaten and second-ranked Texas A&M in the last game of the season. And they did, ambushing the Aggies 31-6 to create a three-way tie for the Southwest Conference championship with A&M and Texas. Now, riding a five-game winning streak to Dallas, the final obstacle would be No. 12 Georgia.

Very little good happened for the 18th-ranked Porkers in the first 28 minutes of the contest. In fact, Georgia kept the football for all but seven plays of the first period, and when the score reached 10-0, it looked as if the Dawgs might blow the Hogs right out of the stadium. A field goal on the Bulldogs' first possession, followed by a 21-yard touchdown pass midway through the second quarter, had dumped Arkansas into a very deep hole. But, once the clock struck two minutes, things began to change. On first down at the Georgia 15, Bulldog quarterback Matt Robinson unwittingly turned the game around. Clobbered by the Hogs' Mark Lewis and Johnny Meadors, Robinson fumbled, and linebacker Hal McAfee scooped up the loose ball. Three plays went by and the Razorbacks had moved just three yards. Out came placekicker Steve Little to boot a 39-yard field goal, and Arkansas suddenly was back in the game.

When Little's kick sailed through the uprights, halftime was only 50 seconds away. By then, the Junkyard Dawgs were on the verge of self-destruction. Georgia coach Vince Dooley wanted to head-off Arkansas' newfound confidence. So, he reached deep into his bag of tricks and pulled out the "shoe-string play." It was a no huddle, reverse pass to the quarterback. But, it didn't work, Hog safety Tommy Harris broke up the play, deflecting Ray Goff's lateral pass to Gene Washington. The ball spurted free and "Mr. Reliable," Hal McAfee, again was on the spot to make his second fumble recovery of the afternoon. It was a costly mistake. Just 25 seconds were left to play in the first half, yet Arkansas had the ball at the Georgia 13. Depleted of time outs, quarterback Scott Bull quickly flipped a pass to running back Ike Forte, who turned upfield and rambled 12 yards to the Georgia one. Forte scored on the next play. In a matter of seconds, the Hogs had erased Georgia's ten point lead. The score stood 10-10 at the half.

From the time the gimmick play backfired, Georgia was unable to move past its own 30-yard line until Arkansas had put the score completely out of reach. Three missed field goals denied the Hogs the opportunity to break the deadlock in the third quarter. But, in the fourth, Arkansas more than made up for its missed chances. It all started with Bull's 35-yard bomb to Freddie Douglas, setting up Rolland Fuchs' five-yard touchdown run for the tie-breaker, 17-10. Then the dam burst. Another Georgia turnover led to the Hogs' third touchdown, and then late in the game, Forte returned to the end zone to give Arkansas a 31-10 victory.

With the 1976 season, Houston accomplished what few teams in the nation could ever hope for — join a major conference and in its first season, grab a share of the championship and play in a major bowl game. The 1977 Classic was the Cougars' first New Year's Day bowl game since 1952, and they made the most of it. Houston attacked the undefeated Terrapins relentlessly. By the time the first quarter had come to an end, the Cougars held a commanding 21-0 lead. No other team in Cotton Bowl history had rung up as many points in the opening period as had Houston. Yet, here were the Cougars, relative newcomers to all the festivities that go along with a major bowl appearance, and enjoying every minute of it, or at least the first 48.

Maryland was the 10th team in the Classic's 41-year existence to appear in Dallas undefeated. The Terps were 11-0-0, and naturally, were eyeing a possible national championship as well as boosting the football image of the Atlantic Coast Conference. All the ingredients were there for a classic battle. With the exception of the first three quarters, that's exactly what it turned out to be.

The Cougars had trouble hanging onto the football all season long, and on their first possession, added yet another turnover to its list, as quarterback Danny Davis fumbled at his 36-yard line. This was the break the Terps had been hoping for, but things didn't go as expected for them either. Moving to the UH 10, the Terps could go no further, called on Ed Loncar for the field goal, but the kick was wide. Breathing a sigh of relief, the Cougars quickly went to work, putting together drives of 80, 38, and 24 yards en route to their 21 first quarter points. Dyrall Thomas got the first touchdown, rushing for 11 yards. Alois Blackwell then blazed 33 yards for the second score, set up by a blocked punt, and then came back two minutes later with a one-yard run to all but douse Maryland's national championship plans.

By the time the contest had reached the start of the fourth quarter, the Cougars were in front, 27-14. Suddenly, momentum swung to the Terps, adding a bit of drama to what once looked like a Houston runaway. Aided by another UH fumble and quarterback Mark Manges' pin-point passing, Maryland soon was back on the scoreboard, cutting the deficit to a mere six points, 27-21. It wasn't a promising position for the Cougars, and two possessions later, things looked even worse. Houston was backed up deep at its own 11, faced with a must first down situation. Davis dropped back to pass and quickly was surrounded by a fierce Terp pass rush.

But, he got the pass off and flanker Robert Lavergne made the most important catch of the season for the Cougars at the 24. It was a miracle pass and bailed Houston out of a very deep hole. From that point, the Cougs drove to their final score, a 28-yard Lennard Coplin field goal with only 18 seconds left to play.

For the fourth time in history, Texas came to the Cotton Bowl equipped with the nation's No. 1 ranking and a spotless season record. The Longhorns rolled through the SWC race with ease to win their first championship in four seasons. When it came time to tender bowl invitations, fifth-ranked Notre Dame, without hesitation, turned down all others to come to Dallas with the avowed intention of beating the Longhorns and propelling themselves to yet another national championship.

This classic was a headline attraction. It featured college football's Heisman Trophy winner — Earl Campbell, the Outland Trophy winner — Brad Shearer, both of Texas; the Lombardi and Maxwell Award winner — Ross Browner, and the Walter Camp Award winner — Ken MacAfee, both of Notre Dame. As a junior, Browner was awarded the Outland as the season's outstanding interior lineman.

Six major individual awards, along with the country's top ranked team and No. 5 Notre Dame, all rolled into one New Year's Day Classic. On paper, Texas had the edge in every department, a team with more ways than one to deliver a knockout punch. Campbell was a franchise running back. Of his 1,744 yards gained that season, more than a thousand of them came after he had been hit at least once. Durable and hard to bring down was his trademark.

But, the game was barely two minutes old when a fumble by Texas quarterback Randy McEachern gave the ball to the Irish at the Longhorn 32, setting up a 47-yard field goal by Dave Reeve. The Longhorns answered right back with Russell Erxleben's 42-yard boot. So, at the end of the first quarter, the teams had battled to a 3-3 tie. But, by then, Notre Dame was well on its way to cashing in on its second fumble recovery. On the first play of the second period, Terry Eurick stepped over left tackle for six yards and the Irish had their first touchdown of the game and led, 10-3. In less than two minutes, quarterback Joe Montana had his team ready to score again. This drive also began with a Texas fumble deep in its own end of the field. Eurick rambled 10 yards to the goal line and Notre Dame was off and running, 17-3.

Before the game was 23 minutes old, the Irish had moved in front 24-3 and there was no catching them.

Although the Irish were aided by six uncharacteristic turnovers, they were in no way mere benefactors of Texas mistakes. Notre Dame controlled the line of scrimmage, offensively and defensively. Texas' only touchdown was set up on a pass interference call on the final play of the first half. For the day, two Notre Dame backs rushed for a hundred yards or more, Jerome Heavens gained 101 yards and Vagas Ferguson an even 100. When the game was over, the two teams had virtually traded places in the national rankings. The Fighting Irish vaulted to the No. 1 spot, while the Longhorns fell to fourth, marking the seventh time the national championship had been won or lost at the Cotton Bowl.

Knute Rockne must have been looking down upon the Cotton Bowl festivities on this cold and windy day as the Fighting Irish staged one of the greatest comebacks in bowl history. Weather conditions were less than ideal, but even the elements couldn't offset the classic matchup between Notre Dame's Power-I and the Houston Veer, and the man who invented it, Bill Yeoman. The Cougars boasted of two backs who rushed for more than a thousand yards each, Emmett King and Randy Love, along with a quarterback named Danny Davis, a born leader with a knack of making something out of nothing. Of course, Notre Dame returned to Dallas with its unflappable miracle man, quarterback Joe Montana.

The stage was set for a great show and the teams promptly delivered. The temperature at kickoff was 20 degrees with a wind chill factor of minus-six. The winds were whipping in at 15 to 20 mph, and it got worse after that, especially for Houston. The Fighting Irish jumped to a 12-0 first quarter lead, taking advantage of a pair of Cougar fumbles. Then the momentum shifted, Davis threw to his flanker Willis Adams for the first score, and minutes later, Love carried over from the one to push Houston ahead 14-12 with 6:27 left in the first half. After gaining the lead, the Cougars scored on its next two possessions, both off the toe of Ken Hatfield on 21-yard and 34-yard field goals. By the end of the first half, the two teams had traded positions, the Cougars were up by eight, 20-12. When the two teams changed ends of the field to begin the final period, Houston had increased its lead to 34-12.

That's the way the score stood until the 7:37 mark when the Irish began their comeback. Notre Dame's Tony Belden roared in to block a Houston punt. The ball shot up in the air and came back down into the arms of Steve Cichy who burst out of a crowd and raced 33 yards for the Irish touchdown. Montana, who missed most of the third quarter because of below-normal body temperature, threw for the two-point conversion and it was a 34-20 ballgame. Momentarily, however. Following a Houston punt, Montana took his team 61 yards to the end zone again. What once appeared to be an almost insurmountable 22-point Cougar advantage had quickly evaporated to six. But time was becoming a factor, 4:15 was left to play and the Irish had to hurry.

In two minutes, Notre Dame was threatening again. Montana had just ripped 16 yards for an apparent first down to the UH 20, but was stripped of the ball by linebacker David Hodge and Houston took over. The clock was down to 1:50 and all UH needed was one first down. They never got it. Gambling on fourth and one at its 29, Houston called the dive, but Notre Dame's Joe Gramke and Mike Calhoun stopped King in his tracks. The Fighting Irish had the ball, just 29 yards away from paydirt and 28 seconds to get it there. In succession, Montana scrambled for 11, then hit Kris Haines for a gain of 10 to the eight. The clock stopped as Haines stepped out of bounds. Six seconds were left, and Montana again went for Haines in the corner of the end zone. The pass fell incomplete. Two seconds left, Montana called the same play to Haines, and this time the two connected. With no time left, the score was tied, and Dallas native Joe Unis came on to add the extra point. Illegal procedure was called on the first kick, forcing Unis to try again. It was a pressurized kick, but Unis came through. What a finish — 35-34, Notre Dame!

Houston stamped itself in 1979 as a Cotton Bowl team, having earned its third appearance in the Classic in just four seasons as a competing member of the Southwest Conference. The Cougars' opponent was tradition-rich Nebraska, an established bowl veteran, making its 18th post-season visit and third trip to the Cotton Bowl. Both teams were ranked among the nation's top ten teams, the Huskers were seventh and the Cougars were eighth, and each had logged identical 10-1-0 records. Houston was the SWC co-champion, while Nebraska suffered its only loss at the hands of Oklahoma, 17-14, to end the season as the Big Eight runner-up.

The two teams mirrored one another in almost every way. No wonder the game went down to the final 12 seconds before declaring a winner. At the end of the first quarter, Nebraska had taken a 7-0 lead. The Huskers put together one of its patented 14-play, 85-yard drives to take the lead with 5:13 remaining in the opening period. Jarvis Redwine, the Cornhuskers great junior "I" back, skirted the left side for nine yards and the score. Meanwhile, Houston was floundering offensively, and at the end of the first quarter had just 28 total yards, all on the ground. Something had to change and Houston coach Bill Yeoman decided it had to be at quarterback. So, in came Terry Elston and the Cougars gained the spark they desperately needed.

Elston got the drive off and rolling with a nine-yard keeper to the Cougar 38. As Elston went down, so did a penalty flag, and the Huskers were penalized 15 yards for grabbing the Houston quarterback's face mask. The ball now was on the Nebraska 47, and two running plays gained four yards to the 42. Then Elston dropped back to pass for the first time and the target would be Lonell Phea. The play covered 27 yards to the Husker 15. Elston then rolled seven yards around the right side, and finished off the 71-yard march with an eight-yard sprint around left end. The game was tied at 7-7, and 12 minutes were left to play in the first half. Yeoman's decision to replace his starting quarterback, Delrick Brown, with Elston more than paid off.

The third quarter turned into a punting exhibition as seven of the two teams' eight total possessions failed to produce a first down. However, the fourth quarter saw plenty of offense as both teams surged to the lead. Houston jumped to a 10-7 advantage on a 41-yard Ken Hatfield field goal, and Nebraska moved in front on Jeff Quinn's six-yard scoring toss to his tight end Jeff Finn. The Huskers' score looked to be the game-clincher, coming with just 3:56 remaining. Trailing 14-10, the Cougars needed a touchdown, a field goal would do them no good. Elston went back to work with Houston 66 yards away. He used his time wisely, moving the Cougars steadily up the field. By the time they reached inside the Cornhusker 10, only 40 seconds were left to play. Elston gained four to the five, then lost one back to the six. The Cougars regrouped quickly and Elston stopped the clock with an incompletion. The clock now was down to 19 seconds and Houston was out of time outs. It was fourth and one, and Elston retreated one last time, looked and fired five yards deep into the end zone to Eric Herring. It was a pin-point pass and it had to go through two defenders to reach its target. But, it got there. Houston inflicted upon the Huskers exactly what Notre Dame had done to them one year earlier, scoring on a last second play to win for another great Cotton Bowl finish.

The legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant rolled his Alabama Crimson Tide into the Cotton Bowl, and then rolled right back to Tuscaloosa with what was then the third most decisive victory in Classic history. Baylor was ranked sixth by the Associated Press after completing the year at 10-1-0, its best record in 79 seasons of football.

Only twice before had the Bears claimed a higher national ranking: third in 1953 and fourth in 1937, both times in early November. But, this was their best ever regular-season finish, and the Bears were anxious to line up against the team that handed them a 45-0 spanking the year before.

However, when the game was over, it was apparent Alabama had failed to read the Bears' impressive newsclips. Instead, the Tide seemed more interested in capitalizing on seven Baylor turnovers. Offensively, Alabama brought its own football to Dallas, keeping it away from the Bears all afternoon. Defensively, the Tide left the best offense in the Southwest Conference in shambles, limiting Baylor to just 158 total yards and only 54 on the ground, while piling up 339 yards of its own on 79 offensive plays.

Four of Alabama's six scores came on the heels of Baylor turnovers. The Tide took an early 6-0 lead on two Peter Kim field goals, and Baylor gained its only points for the day when tackle Tommy Tabor nailed Alabama's freshman quarterback Walter Lewis in the end zone for a safety. At the end of the first quarter, the Tide held a slim 6-2 advantage. Soon the lead was expanded to 13-2 as Major Ogilvie leaped over from the one for the touchdown. In the process, Ogilvie became the first player in NCAA history to post rushing touchdowns in four consecutive bowl games.

The lead grew to 16-2 late in the third quarter when Kim tied a Cotton Bowl record with his third field goal of the game, this one from 42 yards out. Alabama then blew the game wide open in the fourth period with touchdown drives of 57 and 66 yards. The final tally was set up on Joe Carter's 56-yard romp to the Baylor five with just over 3:35 to play. Mark Nix got the score as Alabama attacked the Bears' right side for the final three yards on fourth down. In total, the Crimson Tide utilized 13 ball carriers to keep Baylor guessing the entire afternoon. Defensively, Bama all but shut down the SWC's leading rusher, Walter Abercrombie, limiting him to nine yards in eight attempts. It was a thorough whipping as Alabama chalked up its sixth consecutive bowl victory.

Paul "Bear" Bryant had been to the Cotton Bowl before, four times in fact, but he never came to Dallas as collegiate football's all-time winningest coach. A 28-17 defeat of Auburn in the Crimson Tide's season finale pushed Bryant one victory ahead of the legendary Amos Alonzo Stagg with 315 career wins.

On top of Bryant's record setting string of victories, Alabama also was looking to collect its seventh consecutive post-season triumph. But to do it, the Tide had to defeat Texas... no easy task. Alabama had never beaten the Longhorns in seven games. Bryant had accomplished the feat just once in nine tries, a 34-21 triumph in 1956 when he was the coach of Texas A&M. His career mark against the Horns was 1-7-1, the tie coming in the 1960 Bluebonnet Bowl when the two teams battled to a 3-3 stalemate.

The Tide was ranked third nationally, while the Longhorns entered the 46th annual Classic at No. 6. It was bound to be a battle. But, Texas was ready for them, although it took the Horns three full quarters and almost five minutes into the fourth before they finally found their way into the Alabama end zone. Bama had just scored its tenth point off the toe of Peter Kim, and the Longhorns had only 10:28 left to rally. Jitter Fields returned the ensuing kickoff 22 yards to give Texas excellent field position at the 40. Quarterback Robert Brewer came back onto the field for the eighth time which turned out to be the charm the Longhorns had been looking for all afternoon.

In five plays, he had the Horns at the Alabama 30, their deepest penetration of the game. But, two incomplete passes left them staring at third and 10. Brewer was faced with a key play. A sprint out pass was the call, but once at the line of scrimmage, he took one look at the Alabama defensive alignment and called time out. Brief consultation along the sideline produced the perfect play, a quarterback draw. Sure enough, Bama was caught totally by surprise. The Tide came with a full-scale blitz, and then parted wide enough for Brewer to scamper untouched all the way to the end zone.

That was the play that broke the Crimson Tide's back. Alabama could manage only two first downs after Brewer's run. Down by three, Texas came alive. Within five minutes, the Longhorns were driving again, and with 2:05 left, sophomore fullback Terry Orr scored his first touchdown of the year. The Horns were in front for the first time, 14-10. But, plenty of time remained for an Alabama reprisal. Joey Jones returned the kickoff 61 yards to the Texas 38. On the first play, quarterback Walter Lewis went to the well, only to come up dry. Texas free safety William Graham picked off the pass and was immediately tackled at the one. Three Brewer sneaks moved the ball to the four, and a two-yard delay of game penalty moved it back to the two with 56 seconds left.

Then came a bit of Texas strategy, punter John Goodson, standing near the back line of the end zone, took the snap, and did an eight second dance before stepping out of bounds for a safety. Now, Texas had the room it needed to get off a punt. Alabama was out of time outs, and by the time they got the ball, only 43 seconds were left to play and victory was nowhere in sight.

This Classic offered a little bit of everything: a tremendous SMU running game, commonly known as the Pony Express, and headlined by Eric Dickerson, the SWC's all-time career rusher, and stablemate Craig James. On the other side of the field, first-year coach Foge Fazio was ready to unleash heralded quarterback Dan Marino and a potent pro-style passing attack. These two teams had very little in common, except for the fact both were accustomed to winning. The Mustangs had put together their first undefeated season since 1947, when the great Doak Walker led SMU to a 9-0-2 record. Over the last two seasons, SMU had compiled a 20-1-1 record. Pittsburgh also owned one of the collegiate game's best records. In four seasons, the Panthers had rolled up 42 victories and just five losses. Together, these two teams combined for a .906 winning percentage.

But, this year, only SMU was playing for a national championship. The Ponies were the nation's only unbeaten team at 10-0-1, yet were ranked at No. 4. Pitt was 9-2-0 and ranked sixth. But, the odds were not in the Panthers' favor. During the whole season, Pitt had faced the option play only 12 times, and in their pre-bowl preparation, the Panthers spent 90 per cent of their practice time focusing in on the option attack.

The first quarter turned into a free-for-all. Pitt opened the contest driving 71 yards to the SMU one, only to be turned away when Joe McCall dropped the ball at the goal line and SMU safety Wes Hopkins made the recovery at the two. From there, the Mustangs went on a tear, marching all the way to the Panther seven on a drive that consumed nearly nine and a half minutes, 91 yards and 20 plays. Yet, SMU also came up empty when quarterback Lance McIlhenny fumbled on a second down at the Pitt seven.

The Cotton Bowl then witnessed its first scoreless first half since the 1961 Classic, but in the third quarter, Pitt finally cracked the scoreboard on Eric Schubert's 43-yard field goal. Heading into the final period, SMU trailed 3-0, but was well on its way to victory. McIlhenny took over 80 yards away with 4:34 left in the third. Within three minutes, he would produce the biggest play of the afternoon. Needing 21 yards on second down, McIlhenny retreated to throw, looked downfield and hit Bobby Leach with a 42-yard strike to the Pitt 20. Three plays later, SMU had a first down at the Panther nine. McIlhenny then performed his slight of hand magic, faking up the middle to Dickerson, then faked the pitch to James, and in a fraction of a second, cut back inside and past the grasp of Pitt linebacker Yogi Jones at the four to score standing up. McIlhenny's run pushed SMU to the lead, 7-3, with 13:43 to play.

Still, Pitt was good for two more assaults. Marino moved the Panthers to the SMU seven. On third down, he scrambled to his right, had to hurry his throw and safety Blane Smith picked it off in the end zone. Pitt's last drive reached the Mustang 37, but Marino could go no further. He simply ran out of bullets.

1984 COTTON BOWL CLASSIC

Again, the Cotton Bowl found itself holding a key to the national title. For the sixth time, Texas came to Dallas unbeaten and with a lofty national ranking at stake. The Longhorns were a perfect 11-0-0 and held down the No. 2 spot in the Top 20 poll. A victory over No. 7 Georgia would put the Horns in a favorable position to move into first place should top-ranked Nebraska stumble later that evening against Miami in the Orange Bowl. However, it was the Longhorns that stumbled first.

With a little more than four and a half minutes to play, Texas looked to be in good shape, holding a 9-3 margin over the Bulldogs in a game dominated by outstanding defense and field goals. Texas freshman Jeff Ward had kicked the Longhorns to an apparant victory. Ward opened the game with a 22-yard field goal on Texas' first possession and added back-to-back efforts in the third quarter to tie a Classic field goal record. Georgia's only score also came on a field goal with Kevin Butler in the first quarter.

When the clock struck the 4:35 mark in the fourth period, the Texas defense again had forced a frustrated Bulldog offense into a punting situation at the Georgia 34-yard line. Only twice in the second half had the Dawgs managed to move the football into Texas territory. In came Chip Andrews to punt the ball away for the eighth time. With the clock becoming a factor, and Georgia growing more and more desperate as each second passed, Texas became fearful of a possible fake. The Longhorns elected not to bring in their regular punt return unit, and Craig Curry replaced Jitter Fields as the return man. Andrews got the kick away, a 43-yarder and Curry moved into position to make the catch. But, Curry dropped the ball and the Bulldogs' Gary Moss was on the spot to make the recovery at the Texas 23.

In a matter of seconds, the Longhorns' fortunes had taken a severe turn for the worse. Three plays after the fumbled punt, Texas' hopes for the No. 1 spot went down the drain. Georgia quarterback John Lastinger, working the option around the right side, broke free at the line of scrimmage, turned up field and carried 17 yards for the touchdown. Butler added the extra point with 3:22 left and the underdog Dawgs had a 10-9 victory. The Longhorns had suffered their first defeat when they could least afford it. Seven hours later, top-ranked Nebraska met the same fate. Miami pulled off a 31-30 upset over the Huskers, and used the victory to climb into first place.

Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie became the seventh Heisman Trophy winner to make a New Year's Day appearance in the Cotton Bowl. With Flutie came the eyes of the nation. Throughout the year, the 5-9 superstar pulled off miracle after miracle, and by the time he and Boston College had reached Dallas, the name Doug Flutie and his school were virtual household words. The most unforgettable play of the 1984 college football season involved Boston College. It truly was a miracle. Miami (Fla.) had just taken a 45-41 lead with 28 seconds left to play. At that point, it looked hopeless for the Eagles, but Flutie went to work. On the game's last play, he pulled off the incredible. As the clock expired, Flutie took the snap and rolled to his right, stopped and uncorked a 48-yard "Hail Mary" pass to Gerard Phelan in the end zone. Somehow, Phelan made the catch as he fell to the ground, and Boston College posted an amazing 47-45 victory over the defending national champions. It was that kind of season for the Eagles.

While the "Magic Flutie" was driving Boston College to a 9-2 season in the East, Houston was involved in one of the wildest championship scrambles in the history of the Southwest Conference. Heading into the season's final weekend, five teams were in contention for the title. Yet, waiting until the last minute to decide things had become par for the course in the SWC. Since 1959, 12 conference championships had gone down to the final week. But, this was the tightest race ever, and when it was over, Houston had secured the coveted host role in the Cotton Bowl. So, the stage was set for the 49th Classic. It was bound to be a record breaking performance... and it was.

Flutie opened the flood gates early. To begin the Eagles' second possession, the Heisman winner launched a 63-yard bomb to Kelvin Martin, sending BC in front, 7-0. Minutes later, Flutie went to the air again, this time to Troy Stradford over the middle for eight yards and a touchdown. And before the game was 30 minutes old, Flutie had tied a long-standing Classic record, tossing his third touchdown pass, a 13-yarder to Phelan, his clutch receiver. Houston also jumped into the record book in the first half when Earl Allen returned the Eagles' third kickoff 98 yards for the Cougars' first score. Quarterback Gerald Landry led Houston back to the end zone 22 seconds before the half, hitting Larry Shepherd for 15 yards.

At intermission, the Eagles held a commanding 31-14 lead. But, the third quarter belonged totally to Houston. Fullback Raymond Tate crashed over from the two with four minutes left to make it 31-21. Less than a minute later, safety Audrey McMillian picked off a Flutie pass and returned it 25 yards for a touchdown, drawing the Cougars within three, 31-28. Houston appeared to be in high gear and on the road to a major upset. But, the Cougars never could deliver the knockout punch.

Momentum shifted back to Boston College in the fourth quarter. With 9:46 left to play, the Eagles launched the drive that would dash the Cougars' hopes of an upset. The 44-yard drive consisted of nine consecutive rushing plays, Steve Strachan carried over from the four with just under six minutes left to push BC back to a comfortable 38-28 lead. Stradford then sealed the door shut moments later with his second touchdown of the afternoon, galloping 18 yards with 1:08 on the clock. Stradford's run propelled the Eagles to a 45-28 victory and boosted his rushing total for the day to 196, the second highest rushing performance ever in the Cotton Bowl. From the start there was little doubt that this game was destined to go down as one of the wildest offensive seminars the Classic had ever seen.

Fifty years of history, a Heisman Trophy winner and a team making its first New Year's Day appearance in Dallas in 18 years presented the Cotton Bowl a unique twist for its Golden Anniversary game. Texas A&M, a school rich in tradition but absent from the Cotton Bowl since 1968, brought a sparkling 9-2 record to Dallas to face Auburn. At 8-3, the Tigers had finished fifth in the Southeastern Conference. However, with the presence of running back Bo Jackson, Auburn was very much in the nation's eye.

Jackson gave the Cotton Bowl its second consecutive Heisman winner. And, true to the 50's theme, Jackson was the 50th player to win the coveted award as college football's outstanding player. As for Auburn, the Tigers were playing in their second golden anniversary game. In 1984, Auburn had participated in the 50th Sugar Bowl Classic. As for the two coaches, A&M's Jackie Sherrill had once played under Auburn's Pat Dye when Dye was an assistant coach at Alabama. It seemed the ironies of coincidence were endless.

While Auburn relied primarily on its Heisman winner, A&M was more balanced. Offensively, the Aggies were averaging 419.3 yards per contest. Defensively, the numbers were just as impressive, yielding just 281.9 yards per game. A&M dominated the SWC in both categories. Still, Jackson gained the lion's share of the media attention during Cotton Bowl week. But, waiting in the wings for the spotlight to shine was A&M quarterback Kevin Murray. Murray virtually robbed the Auburn defense blind, passing for a record 292 yards. By halftime, his passing total of 184 yards was good enough to place ninth in the bowl's record book. But, at that point, he barely had gotten started.

The first two quarters saw the lead change hands four times, Auburn scored first, followed by a pair of A&M touchdowns. With the Aggies holding a 12-7 lead, Jackson then turned a routine screen pass into a 73-yard scoring play to move the Tigers back in front, 13-12. A Scott Slater field goal just before the half gave A&M a 15-13 advantage heading into the third quarter. By the time the fourth period rolled around, A&M still was clinging to a slim 21-16 lead.

But, Auburn was ready to challenge. Moving from their own six-yard line, the Tigers chewed almost eight minutes off the clock. As the third quarter came to an end, Auburn had driven to the A&M six. It took the Tigers 14 plays to move 88 yards. Now, with a first-and-goal situation on the Aggies' doorstep, Auburn was primed to regain the lead.

However, that's when A&M erected its brick wall. Three consecutive bursts by Jackson netted only four yards. With fourth down at the two, the decision was to go with Jackson one more time. It may have been the game's biggest play. The Heisman winner drove into the middle of the line only to come face-to-face with A&M's freshman linebacker Basil Jackson. The play lost a yard, and maybe more for Auburn.

A&M's goal line stand was short-lived, however. Auburn held the Aggies to one first down and soon was threatening again, moving to the A&M 27. But, another fourth down situation left the Tigers two yards short. Jackson again got the call, and the A&M defense broke up the play.

With Auburn's scoring threats put to rest, Murray took charge. It took the Aggie sophomore just nine plays to seal the A&M victory. Two long pass plays moved the Aggies into scoring position. On second down at the Auburn nine, Murray connected with running back Keith Woodside for the touchdown with 2:22 left to play. A two-point conversion pushed A&M to a 29-16 lead.

Seconds later, strong safety Domingo Bryant snagged his second pass interception of the day to set the Aggies up for one last score. It came with just three seconds left when Anthony Toney powered over from the one, wrapping up a hard-earned Aggie victory, 36-16.

The Cotton Bowl couldn't have asked for a better way to open a new era. Having completed its first 50 years of New Year's Day classics, the 51st renewal would feature a team from the storied Big Ten Conference, a long-time member of the Cotton Bowl's wish list.

At 9-3, Ohio State brought the Big Ten co-championship to Dallas, despite a heartbreaking 26-24 loss to arch-rival Michigan in the Buckeyes' final game. It had been since 1982 that Ohio State last faced a SWC opponent, and it had been 16 years since the Buckeyes last faced Texas A&M, the Southwest Conference champions. Ohio State owned the series between the two schools at 2-0-0, downing A&M in 1963 and 1970.

But, in 1986, the 9-2 Aggies emerged as the SWC's most dominant team, and earned the right to play in the Cotton Bowl for the second consecutive year. A year earlier, A&M bombed Auburn 36-16 to win the Classic's Golden Anniversary game and now was in position to become only the second SWC team ever to win back-to-back Cotton Bowl trophies.

The Aggies lived by the pass and depended largely on the arm of quarterback Kevin Murray, twice the SWC's Offensive Player of the Year. In the Cotton Bowl's 50th game, Murray established a Classic passing record of 292 yards in the Aggies' defeat of Auburn. To offset Murray's passing, Ohio State looked to its defense, led by All-America linebacker Chris Spielman, a Heisman and Outland Trophy contender.

The first half proved to be a virtual stalemate. The Aggies were able to move the ball early, but sputtered near the goal line and were forced to settle for a pair of Scot Slater field goals. Meanwhile, the Buckeyes utilized the big play for their only score of the half. All-America receiver Cris Carter provided the spark with a spectacular 34-yard catch, out jumping two Aggie defenders near midfield. Moments later quarterback Jim Karsatos' three-yard run completed an 80-yard drive that gave the Buckeyes a 7-6 halftime edge.

It wasn't to be close for long, however. On the third play of the second half, the Ohio State defense took control of the game. Murray faced third down at the Aggie 15 and needed 13 yards for the first down. Murray looked to throw and in the direction of tight end Rod Bernstine. Spielman read the play, stepped in front of Bernstine, made the interception and raced 24 yards into the left side of the end zone. In a matter of seconds Ohio State had jumped to a 14-6 lead.

Spielman's was the first of five Buckeye interceptions, and on A&M's next possession, rover Sonny Gordon grabbed the second. Within four minutes, Ohio State was back on the scoreboard. Tailback Vince Workman rambled eight yards for the score and the Buckeyes were virtually out of reach, 21-6.

So overwhelming were Ohio State's defensive tactics, the Aggies found themselves on the verge of self-destruction. The Buckeyes absolutely shut down the A&M passing game. Spielman was everywhere, especially when A&M was least expecting him. After the Aggies closed the gap to 21-12 with just 9:10 left to play, Spielman foiled another A&M opportunity with his second interception of the afternoon. Three minutes later, linebacker Michael Kee sealed the Ohio State victory, picking off yet another Murray pass. Kee returned the interception 49 yards for the Buckeyes' final score. The touchdown pushed the score to 28-12 and A&M's reign as Cotton Bowl champions was over.

The 52nd Cotton Bowl was a homecoming of sorts for Notre Dame and Texas A&M. The Fighting Irish, celebrating their 100th season of college football, were making their fifth trip to Dallas on New Year's Day; the Aggies were playing their third consecutive and sixth overall visit to the Classic. Both teams were looking to rekindle old memories.

Notre Dame claimed its seventh national championship in the 1978 Cotton Bowl and had won three of its four appearances during the 1970's. Texas A&M also had enjoyed marked success in the Cotton Bowl and seemed to own a standing invitation to Dallas. Coach Jackie Sherrill again led the Aggies to the Southwest Conference title, and became just the second coach ever to lead his team to three consecutive appearances in the Classic.

An added bonus to the 1988 Cotton Bowl was Notre Dame's Tim Brown, a Dallas native and the 53rd winner of the Heisman Trophy. Brown's presence marked the third time in four seasons the Heisman winner would play in the Cotton Bowl. He also was the Irish's seventh Heisman winner, but the first ever to play in a bowl game.

Brown and the Irish were the talk of the town, and the excitement led right up to kickoff. The game was barely three minutes old when Brown delivered. Having returned the opening kickoff 37 yards, Brown helped Notre Dame gain an early lead when quarterback Terry Andrysiak hit his All-America receiver with a 17-yard scoring pass.

Down 7-0, the Aggies countered on Scott Slater's 26-yard field goal on the final play of the first quarter, but at that point the game belonged clearly to Notre Dame. The Irish took the ensuing kickoff and marched 51 yards for Ted Gradel's 36-yard field goal and a 10-3 advantage. Four minutes later, Notre Dame was on the move again. Driving from their own 20, Andrysiak and Brown quickly moved the Irish back into scoring position. On second down at the A&M 18, Andrysiak dropped back to pass and his target was tight end Andy Heck. A&M's Alex Morris read the play and made a leaping interception in the corner of the end zone for what proved to be the key play of the game.

The Aggies seized the opportunity and stormed through the Notre Dame defense, needing only six plays to move 80 yards and tie the game. Freshman running back Darren Lewis ended the drive, surprising the Irish defense by throwing 24 yards to Tony Thompson for the touchdown. Things got worse for Notre Dame. On their first play following the A&M score, the Irish fumbled the ball back to the Aggies. Tony Jones made the recovery at the Notre Dame 21 and four plays later, freshman running back Larry Horton carried two yards for the go-ahead score. A successful two-point conversion pushed the Aggies to an 18-10 halftime lead. Texas A&M didn't let up in the second half. Quarterback Bucky Richardson, another one of the Aggies' talented freshmen, scored twice to ice the game, and Slater added another field goal.

Taking a cue from the offense, Aggie defenders began to dominate, setting up four of A&M's six scores with turnovers. The A&M "Wrecking Crew," composed of linebackers Adam Bob, Aaron Wallace, Dana Batiste, and John Roper, and noseguard Sammy O'Brien, smothered the Notre Dame attack. After catching six passes for 105 yards in the game's first 22 minutes, Brown was shut down completely and did not make another reception following Morris' key interception. It was a decisive victory for A&M, 35-10.

It proved to be a game of firsts, and topping the list was the name of the game itself. On the eve of its 53rd anniversary, the Classic was unveiling a new title as the result of a long-term agreement with the Mobil Corporation in August. This would be the first "Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic."

And, just as the name implied, circumstances surrounding this particular Classic would be much different from all the rest. Arkansas earned its first trip to Dallas in 13 years and in record-setting fashion. The Hogs wrapped up the Southwest Conference title on October 29, the earliest date in the SWC's 74 seasons. Arkansas' Ken Hatfield also was establishing a bit of history as the first player ever to return to the Mobil Cotton Bowl as head coach.

UCLA also was a first for the Classic. The Bruins were the first representative from the Pacific-10 Conference and the first West Coast team since 1949 to play in the Mobil Cotton Bowl. UCLA and its coach, Terry Donahue, also were making a bid to become the first team and the first coach to win seven consecutive bowl games. It seemed as if the lists of "firsts" were almost endless in this matchup.

Both teams mirrored each other in the polls. The 10-1 Razorbacks were ranked eighth, losing only to Miami, Fla., in their final game of the regular season. The Bruins carried a 9-2 record to Dallas and were ranked ninth. However, the similarities would end there between the two teams. Arkansas was a ball control team, thriving on the triple option. UCLA offered a pro-style passing attack, relying on the arm of Troy Aikman, the NFL's projected No. 1 draft pick.

Aikman proved his worth early, leading the Bruins to a pair of long scoring drives in the second quarter. The first began on the UCLA seven, and resulted in a 93-yard, 19-play touchdown march. Leading 7-0, the Bruins came right back on their next possession, moving 74 yards for the score in 10 plays. At halftime, UCLA held a 14-0 advantage.

The Bruin offense was operating to perfection. Behind Aikman, the Bruins completed 19-of-27 pass attempts for 172 yards and kept Arkansas' defense completely off balance. Tailback Shawn Wills was just as impressive rushing for 120 yards, a freshman record for the Classic. At one point in the game, UCLA converted 13-of-14 third-down situations.

Still, the key to UCLA's decisive 17-3 victory was its dominating defense. Led by noseguard Jim Wahler, the Bruins totally shut down Arkansas' powerful flexbone, holding the Hogs to just 42 yards in total offense. Seven of Arkansas' 10 possessions ended in three downs or less, and the Razorback offense never advanced past its own 41-yard line.

Defensively, the Razorbacks played a typically strong game. The Hogs forced three turnovers and held UCLA to just two touchdowns and the Bruins' second-lowest point total of the season. Linebacker LaSalle Harper was outstanding, earning MVP honors with his 20 tackles, a fumble recovery and one pass interception. In fact, Harper's fumble recovery at the Bruin 47 led to Arkansas' only score. Kendall Trainor's 49-yard field goal in the third quarter was the second-longest in Classic history.

But, in the end, the game belonged totally to UCLA. The Bruins controlled the ball and the clock for almost 43 minutes. While Donahue earned his first victory against the SWC, he and the Bruins claimed something even more significant: a record seventh consecutive bowl victory.

The 54th Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic was a family matter. Even though 18 years had passed since Tennessee and Arkansas last faced one another, this contest resembled a classic family reunion. It started in the offices of the head coaches and athletic directors. In 1964, Tennessee coach Johnny Majors served as Frank Broyles' secondary coach at Arkansas. Majors' prize defender at the time was Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield. It was a memorable year for Broyles, Majors and Hatfield. The Hogs won the national championship with a victory over Nebraska at the Cotton Bowl.

These family ties went even deeper. Doug Dickey, the Volunteers' athletic director, was a member of Broyles' original Arkansas coaching staff in 1958. Later, as head coach at Tennessee, Dickey returned to Dallas for the 1969 Classic when his freshman coach was a young Ken Hatfield. Now, years later, all four returned to Dallas to meet again, although on opposite sides of the field.

And, what a reunion it turned out to be! Tennessee and Arkansas literally set records for breaking records. The Vols and Hogs combined for an unbelievable 1,038 yards in offense. Chuck Webb, Tennessee's elusive freshman tailback, ripped through the Arkansas defense for a near-record 250-yard performance. Webb fell just short of the legendary rushing mark of 265 yards established in 1954 by Dicky Maegle of Rice.

The scoring rampage began with the opening kickoff. Tennessee drove the ball 61 yards in 12 plays for a 23-yard Greg Burke field goal and a 3-0 lead. Arkansas also turned its first possession into points when fullback Barry Foster crashed over from the one for a touchdown and an early 6-3 Razorback advantage.

Turnovers plagued Arkansas' next two possessions. Fullback Kerwin Price killed the first drive, fumbling at the Volunteer nine. Then came the most crucial mistake of the day. Quarterback Quinn Grovey marched the Hogs to the Tennessee two-yard line. On second down, Grovey rolled right and looked into the end zone for his tight end Billy Winston. Suddenly, freshman safety Carl Pickens stepped in front of Winston, picked off Grovey's pass and returned the ball to the Volunteer 13.

Pickens' key interception ignited an offensive explosion by Tennessee. Quarterback Andy Kelly went for the bomb on second down and connected with receiver Anthony Morgan for a 84-yard touchdown strike, the second-longest in Classic history. By halftime the Vols had built a 17-6 advantage, wresting the momentum totally away from Arkansas.

The Hogs' first possession of the second half also ended with a turnover when Foster fumbled at the Tennessee 32. The Volunteers quickly capitalized on Arkansas' misfortune. Webb broke loose for a 42-yard gain on first down, and Kelly finished off the drive with a one-yard scoring toss to fullback Greg Amsler for a 24-6 lead. The Razorbacks chopped the score back to 24-13 on their next possession, but Webb again proved to be Tennessee's most lethal weapon. The freshman leaped through another hole in the Arkansas defense and ran 78 yards for the Vols' final score of the day. Tennessee held a commanding 31-13 lead.

Arkansas charged into the game's final period in a fit of desperation. Fourteen seconds into the quarter, Foster scored from the one and then added the two-point conversion to cut the lead to 31-21. The Hogs threatened on their next possession, reaching the Tennessee nine before turning the ball over on downs. Minutes later, Arkansas fell short again, missing a 44-yard field goal attempt.

Tennessee couldn't sustain a drive and Arkansas had the ball again. With 1:25 left to play, Grovey unloaded to Winston for a 67-yard scoring play. Now, trailing 31-27, the Hogs tried an onside kick, but Tennessee's Alvin Harper quickly pounced on the ball at midfield. The Vols then ran out the clock and brought to an end one of the wildest offensive shows the Classic had seen in years.

At first glance, the 55th Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic appeared to have all the trimmings of a national title game. It matched No. 3 Texas, the champions of the Southwest Conference, and No. 4 Miami, college football's defending national champions.

After a seven-year absence, the Longhorns were set to return to a bowl they once owned. The 1991 Classic marked an unprecedented 19th appearance for Texas, yet the Horns hadn't been able to earn a trip to Dallas since January 2, 1984. Ironically, that date became a turning point for both the Texas and Miami programs. It was the day the fifth-ranked Hurricanes claimed their first football national championship, upsetting No. 1 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, 31-30. Just hours before, Texas lost its bid for a fourth national title when Georgia surprised the second-ranked Longhorns at the Cotton Bowl, 10-9.

It was a day that saw the birth of a new college dynasty. During the next six seasons, Miami put together a streak of six consecutive New Year's Day bowl appearances, won 86.3 percent of its games, and earned two more national championships. The Hurricanes ended the 1990 regular season having rolled up 86 consecutive appearances in the Associated Press Top 10. Texas, on the other hand, saw its football fortunes decline. The Longhorns' winning percentage dipped to 52.9 percent for the remainder of the decade, and produced only three bowl appearances, none of which came on New Year's Day.

Now, on the eve of the 1991 Mobil Cotton Bowl, the two programs had literally traded places. Miami, the "Team of the 80's," was the established national power. Texas was now the challenger, having recently resurfaced with hopes of restoring its name among the football elite. However, the Longhorns were destined to wait another day to regain past glory. From the beginning, this New Year's Day belonged solely to the Hurricanes.

Five Texas turnovers and a missed field goal attempt led to a record six Miami touchdowns. The Hurricane scoring barrage began with their first possession, and it proved to be an omen for the day. Before Miami ever touched the football, two consecutive deadball penalties had the Hurricanes looking at a first-and-40 situation. It took quarterback Craig Erickson just three plays to lead the 'Canes to a first down at the Texas 29-yard line. Seconds later, place kicker Carlos Huerta put Miami on the scoreboard for the first time with a 28-yard field goal.

Huerta struck again on the Hurricanes' next possession, connecting on a 50-yard attempt that tied a Classic record. Two possessions later, defensive tackle Russell Maryland, Miami's Outland Trophy winner, created the 'Canes first turnover with a bone-jarring sack of Texas quarterback Peter Gardere. The ball came loose and within two plays, Erickson registered his first of four scoring passes.

Erickson's touchdown toss to Wesley Carroll covered 12 yards. The Erickson-Carroll duo hooked up again late in the second quarter with a 24-yard scoring strike, and by halftime Miami owned a commanding 19-3 advantage. Only Michael Pollak's 29-yard field goal kept the Longhorns from a scoreless first half.

Miami intensified its attack at the start of the third quarter. Sophomore linebacker Darrin Smith intercepted a Gardere pass and roared 34 yards for the 'Canes third touchdown and a 26-3 lead. Texas threatened on its next possession, but Pollak's 54-yard field goal attempt fell short and put the Hurricanes in position for yet another Erickson scoring pass. This one ended up in the hands of receiver Randal Hill, a 48-yard bomb. At the end of the third quarter, Miami was rolling with a 33-3 lead.

Erickson still wasn't through. Early in the fourth period he found tight end Randy Bethel in the end zone with a four-yard toss for his fourth touchdown pass of the day, eclipsing a Classic record that had stood for 53 years. Miami's third pass interception set up its final score, this one coming on the ground when fullback Leonard Conley broke loose for a 26-yard touchdown run. The Hurricanes' 46-3 victory left few doubters. Miami departed Dallas in record fashion.

Outstanding defense and Mother Nature worked in tandem to create offensive headaches for Florida State and Texas A&M in the 56th Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic. Rain was a heavy contributor in the record number of turnovers that plagued both teams, but not so much as a group of fleet-footed, hard-hitting defenders who stole the spotlight from two potent offenses and turned the Classic into a low-scoring, 10-2 Florida State victory.

The 10-2-0 Seminoles were ranked fifth nationally after holding onto the No. 1 ranking for the first 12 weeks of the season. Texas A&M was ninth in the final regular-season rankings at 10-1-0, winners of nine straight games. But Florida State was the established power.

Bobby Bowden owned college football's best post-season winning percentage, guiding the Seminoles to their 10th consecutive bowl appearance and a fifth straight season of 10 or more victories. While Bowden was firmly entrenched in Tallahassee, R. C. Slocum was launching a successful head coaching career with the Aggies. No other coach in A&M's 97-year history had won more games in his first three seasons than Slocum.

Yet, when the two teams collided, holding onto the football was almost too much to ask. Together, the Seminoles and Aggies spent New Year's Day combining for 13 turnovers, tying a 33-year old Classic record. Texas A&M fumbled eight times and lost seven, and was intercepted twice. Florida State lost one of three fumbles and then endured four pass interceptions. Certainly, this wasn't the type of game everyone expected.

Perhaps the most telling play of the day occurred on the Aggies' initial possession. Freshman Greg Hill broke loose on a 39-yard run and appeared to be on his way for a score before being dragged down at the one by cornerback Errol McCorvey. The football squirted loose and rolled through the end zone and out of bounds. Florida State was awarded possession of the football at the two-yard line and the Seminoles were breathing a heavy sigh of relief.

Hoping to seize momentum from A&M's missed touchdown opportunity, Florida State quarterback Casey Weldon looked to strike quickly. Rolling to his right, the Heisman Trophy runnerup was trapped in the end zone and thrown to the ground for a safety by Quentin Coryatt, A&M's swift inside linebacker. The Aggies led 2-0, but the squandered scoring opportunity would haunt them throughout the day.

Midway through the first quarter, receiver Tony Harrison beat Florida State's Terrell Buckley on a flag pattern inside the five-yard line. Quarterback Bucky Richardson threw a perfect pass, but the wide-open Harrison dropped the ball in full stride. Another missed opportunity occurred in the second quarter. Strong safety Chris Crooms intercepted Weldon at the Seminole 42, and returned the ball for an apparent touchdown. However, officials ruled that Crooms had stepped out of bounds at the 26-yard line while running down the sideline. Three plays later, Buckley came up with a key interception, picking off Richardson in the end zone to turn back another A&M scoring threat.

While the Texas A&M offense sputtered, Florida State was ready to capitalize. Cornerback Clifton Abraham's fumble recovery at the Aggie 46 set up a drive that resulted in the game's only touchdown. Weldon's four-yard bootleg around right end put Florida State ahead 7-2 just before the end of the first period. The teams then battled through two scoreless quarters, although another fumble recovery on the second half kickoff almost helped the Seminoles increase their lead, but Dan Mowery's 42-yard field goal attempt sailed wide left.

Offensive miscues took their toll on the Aggies well into the fourth quarter. Crooms second interception gave A&M hope and the ball at Florida State's 16. But, freshman Wilbert Biggens fumbled the football right back to the Seminoles on a double reverse. Defensive end Dan Footman scooped up the loose ball and Florida State took control. Soon, the Seminoles would drive for the game-clinching score, a 27-yard field goal by Gerry Thomas with 2:40 to play.

Even though defense controlled the game's tempo, Sean Jackson clearly was the offensive spark for the Seminoles. The sophomore was thrust into the starting lineup in the absence of standout tailback Amp Lee. Jackson rushed for 119 yards on 27 carries and was named the game's outstanding offensive player. Florida State's triumph also tied UCLA's national record of seven post-season victories in consecutive seasons and Bowden boosted his career bowl record to 11-3-1 for a .767 winning percentage, the best in college football.

In 1993, the newly formed College Football Bowl Coalition produced one of the most interesting matchups in the 57-years of the Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic. Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M played its way into the New Year's Day Classic for the second consecutive year, and in the process became the bowl's first-ever 12-0-0 team. In fact, only five teams in NCAA history had compiled such a record. The unbeaten Aggies climbed to No. 4 nationally and were paired with fifth-ranked Notre Dame, a team that had rolled through the regular season with a 9-1-1 mark.

On selection day, the Fighting Irish may have been the hottest team in the country. Notre Dame won its last seven games after a mid-season loss to Stanford, including four consecutive victories over Top 25 teams to end the year. A return to Dallas marked Notre Dame's sixth trip to the Classic and its sixth consecutive post-season appearance under Lou Holtz. His first bowl trip with the Irish was in the 1988 Classic when Texas A&M scored a convincing 35-10 victory over Notre Dame. Now, five years later, this game had a special appeal in what would be only the second meeting ever for these two football programs.

Both teams were solid. The Irish were noted for an efficient ground attack behind tailback Reggie Brooks and fullback Jerome Bettis, and quarterback Rick Mirer was regarded as one of college football's finest passers. Defensively, Texas A&M was as hard-nosed as ever, led by linebacker Marcus Buckley who captained the Aggies' dominating "Wrecking Crew." It appeared to be a perfect match between Notre Dame's veterans and Texas A&M's talented youngsters. And, for the game's first 29 minutes and 24 seconds, it was. The Aggies' blitzing defensive scheme kept the potent Irish attack in check. Then, in the final minute of the half, came the one electric play that turned the complexion of the game completely toward Notre Dame.

With 45 seconds to play and facing third and 10 at the A&M 40, Mirer flipped a screen pass to split end Lake Dawson. Sprinting toward the middle of the field, Dawson received a block from guard Todd Norman who took out the Aggies' All-America free safety Patrick Bates. Dawson cut up field behind his blockers and sailed for the end zone. In seconds, the defensive stalemate had come to an end. This one play, executed to perfection, neutralized the effectiveness of A&M's blitzing defense the rest of the afternoon. Momentum flashed quickly to Notre Dame as the first half wound to a close.

Confident and leading 7-0, Notre Dame jumped on the Aggies to start the third quarter. On their first possession, the Irish drove 65 yards in 10 plays. Mirer ended the drive by hitting Bettis on a 26-yard scoring play, increasing the margin to 14-0. Notre Dame's next offensive series covered 87 yards but ended at the A&M four-yard line. Brooks fumbled on first down and the Aggies momentarily dodged a big bullet. However, two plays later the Irish got the ball right back when A&M quarterback Corey Pullig coughed up the football and into the waiting arms of linebacker Demetrius DuBose at the 11. Thirty seconds later, Bettis barreled over from the one for Notre Dame's third touchdown and a 21-0 lead.

The Irish saved their best drive of the day for early in the fourth quarter. Notre Dame chewed up 82 yards in 16 plays and consumed more than nine minutes of the clock. Again, Bettis ended the drive with a four-yard touchdown run, his third score of the game. Only 5:03 was left to play and Notre Dame literally had dominated the second half in workmanlike fashion, methodically wearing down the Aggie defense while en route to a 28-3 victory.

Defensively, Notre Dame was relentless. Texas A&M couldn't generate a first down until late in the second quarter. The longest Aggie drive of the day was 46 yards, and the closest they came to the goal line was the Notre Dame 24. Terry Venetoulis' 41-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter came after the Irish had taken a three touchdown lead. Fueling the Notre Dame defensive effort was senior Devon McDonald who logged 10 tackles, four behind the line of scrimmage for 22 yards in losses. Indeed, Notre Dame was impressive. The Irish limited Texas A&M, a team averaging better than 385 yards and 28 points a game, to just 165 yards and three points. Offensively, Notre Dame played to its strength, rushing for 290 yards and rolling up 439 yards overall. Brooks ran for 115 yards on 22 attempts, and Mirer completed 8-of-16 pass attempts for 119 yards and two touchdowns. But, statistics aside, the turning point in this Notre Dame victory can be traced back to that one decisive play near the end of the first half. Mirer's middle screen pass play to Dawson was just the spark the Irish needed to set this runaway train in motion.

The term Deja Vu certainly didn't apply to this game. Even though Notre Dame and Texas A&M found themselves on familiar ground, the 1994 Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic had nothing in common with the one that took place one year before. In the 1993 Classic, Notre Dame jumped on the unbeaten Aggies for an easy 28-3 victory. Now, 365 days later, the matchup was the same, but the style of play was all together different. Not since the days of Notre Dame and Texas in the early 1970s had the Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic featured a repeat matchup. At 10-1-0, Notre Dame continued to maintain aspirations of winning its ninth national championship. A season-ending upset at the hands of Boston College had knocked the Irish from the top of the polls, but with a strong showing in Dallas the fourth-ranked Irish were hopeful of regaining No. 1.

Texas A&M also carried an impressive 10-1-0 record into the Classic and was ranked seventh in the final Associated Press poll of the regular season. An early season loss at Oklahoma derailed the Aggies' dreams of a national title. However, the Aggies were now on a roll with a nine-game winning streak, including a third straight Southwest Conference championship. It was was a record-setting season for the Aggies. Texas A&M became the first SWC team ever to post three consecutive perfect seasons in conference play with a 22-0 mark.

Sunny skies and 62 degrees greeted both teams at kickoff. Weather conditions were perfect. Texas A&M won the toss, deferred the option, and Notre Dame elected to receive. The Aggies were looking for their defense to establish control early, and when the first Irish possession began inside the 10-yard line, the A&M strategy appeared sound. But, it didn't take long for Notre Dame's methodical ground attack to spring to life. Irish running back Lee Becton ripped through the A&M defense for 11 yards on the first play of the game and Notre Dame's 79-yard scoring drive was underway. All but one of the 13 plays in the Irish drive came on the ground. Quarterback Kevin McDougal's slashing 19-yard option run around right end pushed Notre Dame to a quick 7-0 lead.

Texas A&M answered right back on its first possession. On the Aggies' third play from scrimmage, quarterback Corey Pullig connected with Rodney Thomas for 21 yards to set the tone for the A&M attack. Running back Greg Hill finished the 10-play, 79-yard drive with an eight-yard burst over the right side to tie the score at 7-7. Pullig soon had the Aggies back into scoring position. The sophomore quarterback completed five passes in a 14-play drive that ended with a 15-yard strike to fullback Detron Smith midway through the second quarter. By halftime, the Aggies were leading 14-7 and an upset seemed to be brewing.

Notre Dame stormed back on its first possession of the second half with Becton pounding away at the Aggie defense to set up fullback Ray Zellars' two-yard scoring run. The Aggies responded with another long drive. This time A&M marched 72 yards for Thomas' touchdown run to regain the lead, 21-14. Notre Dame answered quickly. Becton broke loose for 15 yards on first down and McDougal scrambled for 10. McDougal then hit Zellars with a pass for 18 yards and a first down at the A&M 13. Three plays later, freshman fullback Marc Edwards barreled over from the two for the tying touchdown.

The tug-of-war continued into the fourth quarter. A Notre Dame punt pinned the Aggies on their 10-yard line after linebacker Pete Bercich intercepted Pullig near midfield. The Irish defense limited A&M to three plays and a loss of two yards. The Aggies were forced to punt and Notre Dame's Michael Miller was poised to make the biggest play of the day. The clock was down to 3:55 when Miller fielded the kick for the Irish. Moving to his left, Miller raced down the A&M sideline for 38 yards before linebacker Junior White forced him out of bounds at the Texas A&M 22-yard line. Becton ripped for eight yards on first down to the A&M 14, but watched as the Aggie "Wrecking Crew" snuffed the next two plays for no gain. The most important factor of all at this point in the game was the clock, and it was ticking. The Irish were facing fourth down and Holtz turned to Kevin Pendergast, his senior placekicker, for the game-winner. Pendergast calmly trotted onto the field, measured the needed distance, and boomed a 31-yard field goal just inside the uprights. With just 2:22 to play, Notre Dame was back in front, 24-21. Texas A&M still had life, yet launched its final bid for victory with precious little time. The clock was down to 1:10 when Pullig hit tight end Greg Schorp with a pass over the middle for 32 yards at the Notre Dame 48. For a fleeting moment, the Aggies seemed to have regained momentum. But, the determination of the Irish defense finally took over. Defensive tackle Jim Flannigan broke through to sack Pullig for an 11-yard loss on second down. Then came an incomplete pass, and coach R. C. Slocum was forced to reach into his bag of tricks for one last play of desperation.

Pullig's fourth down pass was right on target at the Irish 45. Receiver Tony Harrison made the catch, wheeled to his right and lateraled to Leeland McElroy, A&M's heralded freshman running back who was running at full throttle with an open field in front of him. But, Harrison's toss was high. The football sailed over McElroy's head and bounced aimlessly on the ground. Notre Dame's Renaldo Wynn quickly jumped on the loose ball and suddenly the Aggies' scoring threat was over. Just 24 seconds remained and the Irish had survived.

TEXAS TECH 14

ATTENDANCE: 70,218

Historical artifacts just aren't safe with Southern California in town. In the 59th Mobil Cotton Bowl Classic, the Trojans literally rewrote history with their 55-14 sacking of Texas Tech.

In slightly more than three and a half hours, the Trojans established Cotton Bowl Classic records for points (55), total offense (578), passing yards (435), points in a quarter (28) and points in a half (34). It was a classic display of textbook football. Southern California couldn't have asked for a better way to celebrate its first New Year's Day bowl appearance in five seasons. The Trojans combined an explosive offense with a dominating defense and solid special teams play to record one of the most awesome performances ever.

A capacity crowd dressed predominately in red and black filed into Cotton Bowl Stadium to see the Raiders play in the Classic for the first time since 1939. Fifty-six years had passed since Tech's last appearance in the Classic. In those days, the Red Raiders carried the banner of the Border Conference. But, times had changed. Now, as Southwest Conference champions, Texas Tech was representing the 80-year old league in it's final Classic appearance.

An air of excitement engulfed the stadium as game-time neared. But, the festive mood ended abruptly for Texas Tech. It didn't take long for Southern California to launch a suffocating attack that left the Red Raiders gasping for air. The Trojans scored 21 of their 34 first half points in a span of 1:16. The flood gates opened when tailback Shawn Walters rumbled 11 yards around right end for the first Southern California touchdown. The scoring drive covered 67 yards and it took the Trojans only four plays to reach the Red Raider end zone. Things got worse for Tech on the ensuing kickoff. Trojan linebacker Brian Hass slammed kick returner Stacy Mitchell to the ground with a bonejarring hit. The ball popped loose and Gerald Caruthers recovered for Southern California at the Texas Tech 19-yard line. Quarterback Rob Johnson and the Trojans struck swiftly. On the first play from scrimmage, fullback Terry Barnum circled out of the backfield and Johnson's pass was on target. Barnum bolted into the end zone and Southern California's lead shot to 14-0.

Then came the knockout punch. Desperate to make something good happen for the Raiders, quarterback Zebbie Lethridge looked to throw on second down. Lethridge found his receiver but the pass bounced off the hands of Matt DuBuc and into the waiting arms of Southern California cornerback John Herpin. The speedy Texas native gathered in the errant pass, cut toward the Southern California sideline and raced 26 yards for the Trojans' third touchdown. In a matter of seconds, the Trojans had gained total control of the game. Leading 21-0 and the clock down to 5:35, Southern California was rocking and Texas Tech was reeling. The Raiders had run only nine offensive plays and had come up empty every time. But, Southern California was just getting started, and so was Keyshawn Johnson. The elusive, game-breaking receiver added the Trojans' final touchdown of the quarter with a spectacular, leaping catch in the corner of the end zone. The 12-yard scoring play pushed the Southern California lead to 28-0.

Statistically, the Trojans' first quarter performance was even more imposing than the score. Southern California outgained the Raiders 235 yards to 17 in total offense. Obviously, Southern California had the game well in hand and the only doubt that remained was the final margin of victory.

For the day, Keyshawn Johnson set Cotton Bowl Classic records with three touchdown receptions and 222 yards on eight catches. He scored twice in the third quarter. The first was a 22-yard strike from Rob Johnson, and the second was an 86-yard bomb from backup quarterback Brad Otton, the second longest touchdown pass in Classic history.

With 9:23 remaining in the third quarter, Rob Johnson retired to the Southern California sideline. His college career had come to a storybook ending. Johnson threw for 289 yards and three touchdowns, connecting on 16-of-21 attempts with no interceptions. His 13.8 yards per attempt was the second best passing performance ever in the Classic, and his .762 completion percentage was the fourth-highest total. Texas Tech managed to end the Southern California shutout late in the third quarter when Lethridge scrambled five yards for a touchdown. Then, as the final gun sounded to end the game, backup quarterback Sone Cavazos tossed a 45-yard scoring pass to Mitchell. After a bittersweet afternoon of football, Red Raider fans finally had something to cheer about.

The Cotton Bowl Classic unveiled a whole new look for its 60th anniversary celebration. For the first time since 1940, the game featured two teams from outside the SWC.

A changing environment in college sports brought about the formation of the new Big 12 Conference, a league comprised of institutions from the powerful Big Eight Conference and four long-time members of the soon-to-be dismantled SWC. With the Big 12 serving as its anchor conference of the future, the Classic looked toward the West Coast to establish partnerships with the storied Pacific-10 Conference and the explosive Western Athletic Conference.

Kicking off this new era at the Cotton Bowl was national power Colorado. The seventh-ranked Buffaloes earned their way to Dallas with a thrilling come-from-behind victory over Kansas State in the regular-season finale. It marked Colorado's fifth New Year's Day bowl appearance in seven seasons, and the Buffs headed for Texas in search of a third consecutive post-season victory. From the Pac-10 came Oregon, a rising program that was beginning to reap the benefits of back-to-back New Year's Day bowl appearances. A trip to the Cotton Bowl Classic in their 100th season of college football was perceived to be the consummate ending to a two-year run that produced a Rose Bowl berth the previous season and the Ducks' first conference title in 37 years.

Both teams finished the 1996 campaign with identical 9-2-0 records. In the Big Eight's final season, Colorado forced the conference's first-ever three-way tie for second place. Oregon, ranked 12th, came within a half-game of winning the Pac-10 championship for the second year in a row. But, as game time neared, the favorite's role belonged to Colorado. Coach Rick Neuheisel's Buffaloes possessed big play potential on offense, complemented by a youthful, but talented defense. Yet, early in the first quarter, it was Oregon...not Colorado, that took control of the game. Speedy tailback Ricky Whittle got things rolling for the Ducks, returning the opening kickoff 63 yards to the Colorado 26-yard line. Within minutes, Oregon quarterback Tony Graziani had moved the Ducks to inside the 10. But, Oregon's drive stalled on the eight and first-year head coach Mike Bellotti turned to freshman place kicker Joshua Smith to post the game's first score. Smith's 25-yard field goal was good and the Ducks owned an early 3-0 lead.

Colorado no sooner had the ball back when inside linebacker Rich Ruhl intercepted a John Hessler pass at the Buffaloes' 46. The Ducks charged back onto the field, determined to convert this turnover into a touchdown. But, after reaching the 16, Oregon's offense again failed to cash in, and was forced to settle for another field goal from Smith. These two series set the offensive tone the rest of the day for the Ducks. In the first half, Oregon's average starting point was its own 49. Still, the Ducks couldn't take advantage of the many opportunities handed to them by their defense. To go with Whittle's kickoff return, Oregon intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble and stopped Colorado on downs at midfield, all in the first quarter. However, the end result was a tenuous 6-0 edge.

Finally, the struggling Buff offense came alive, and Hessler, Colorado's sophomore quarterback, produced the spark that ultimately ignited Neuheisel's high octane assault. On third and 19, Hessler hooked up with receiver James Kidd for a 62-yard pass play that reached the Oregon one. Seconds later, on the first play of the second quarter, Hessler ended the 80-yard drive himself, carrying around right end for the touchdown that pushed the Buffs in front, 7-6. Oregon fired back after a short punt gave the Ducks excellent field position at the Colorado 49. Poised to take the lead, Graziani again maneuvered his team back into scoring position, driving to the nine-yard line. On second down, Graziani looked for his tight end, Josh Wilcox. Colorado blitzed linebacker Matt Russell up the middle and Wilcox headed for the spot vacated by Russell. Realizing that Wilcox was covered, Graziani turned back to Whittle. The pass was off target and Colorado's Marcus Washington, a freshman free safety who was making only his second start of the season, was in perfect position. Washington picked off Graziani's pass, quickly cut to the left sideline and sailed 95 yards for a Colorado touchdown. In a matter of seconds, the momentum had turned and the Ducks were left staring at a 13-6 deficit.

The second half opened with tailback Herchell Troutman's 55-yard romp over right tackle. Troutman's run moved Colorado to the Oregon nine and set up Hessler's two-yard scoring pass to tight end Matt Lepsis in the back of the end zone. The margin ballooned to 20-6. Oregon then fumbled away three consecutive possessions, handing the Buffs the football on the Ducks' 29-, 23- and 17- yard lines. Colorado turned two of the three turnovers into 12 points, and by the start of the final period, the Buffaloes had stormed to a commanding 32-6 lead.

So much for Colorado's "rebuilding year." After sending 10 seniors into the NFL the previous season, 1995 turned out to be one of the Buffs' most successful football campaigns ever: 10 wins, a Top 5 national ranking, and a third consecutive bowl victory. Even if he tried, head coach Rick Neuheisel couldn't have dreamed of a better ending for his rookie season.

The Southwestern Bell era at the Cotton Bowl couldn't have asked for a better start. An absolutely dazzling, sunny day with temperatures in the 70s greeted a sellout crowd of 71,928 for one of the most exciting games in the Classic's 61-year history. For Brigham Young and Kansas State, it was a day to celebrate. After years of waiting, these two programs finally landed a New Year's Day bowl invitation. The weather and an enthusiastic crowd created a festive atmosphere, but the drama was provided exclusively by two excellent teams that battled all the way to the game's final play before BYU pulled out a 19-15 thriller.

Under coach Bill Snyder, No. 14 Kansas State was an emerging power from the Big 12 Conference. K-State brought a 9-2 record to Dallas and it marked the fourth consecutive year the Wildcats had won nine or more games. Along with them came a purple wave of more than 40,000 diehard fans, a figure that shattered the Classic's old ticket sales record for one team.

BYU, on the other hand, was a recognized offensive power from the Western Athletic Conference. With the Cougars, coach LaVell Edwards had established a program known for a flashy, quick striking offense. At 13-1, pass-happy BYU was headed for the NCAA record book for games played. The Classic would be the Cougars' 15th game of the year, and if it could get by the Wildcats, BYU would set another record for most victories in a single season with 14.

The stage was set for an outstanding matchup. K-State owned the nation's fourth best pass defense. BYU would counter with quarterback Steve Sarkisian, the nation's leading passer and the leader of the NCAA's sixth most productive offense. It was obvious, a big-game atmosphere was brewing at the Southwestern Bell Cotton Bowl.

At kickoff, it was the BYU defense, not the offense, that roared onto the field. Cornerback Tim McTyer picked off a K-State pass midway through the first quarter and returned the interception 19 yards to the Wildcat 36. BYU was unable to capitalize, but the turnover allowed the Cougars to establish field position with a punt that pinned Kansas State on its two-yard line. This, in turn, set up one of the biggest plays of the day. On second down at the three, BYU linebacker Shay Muirbrook crashed through to sack quarterback Brian Kavanagh in the end zone for a safety. It was the first of a record six sacks on the day for Muirbrook, and the play pushed the Cougars to an early 2-0 lead. Following the free kick, BYU got back onto the scoreboard when Ethan Pochman banged through a 39-yard field goal.

At the end of the first quarter both teams found themselves locked in a defensive struggle, and it appeared that BYU's 5-0 lead might hold up through halftime. But, with just five seconds to play in the half, Kavanagh unleashed a 41-yard Hail Mary pass with hopes of finding Kevin Lockett, the Cats' All-America receiver, waiting for it to come down in the end zone. Lockett was swarmed by BYU defenders trying to bat the ball away. But standing in the right spot at the right time was Andre Anderson who alertly dove for the deflected pass just before it fell to the ground. Time had expired, yet the Wildcats had scored the game's first touchdown. Mike Lawrence added a two-point conversion run and Kansas State headed to the locker room in front for the first time, 8-5. The Hail Mary seemed to invigorate the Wildcats. They began the second half with Kavanagh guiding K-State to another score. Again, the target was Lockett who raced down the sideline with a 72-yard touchdown pass that increased the Wildcat lead to 15-5.

BYU's high-powered offense continued to struggle as the game moved to the fourth quarter. Sarkisian was desperate to turn the momentum back toward BYU. With 10:55 on the clock, he succeeded, finding James Dye streaking into the end zone for a 32-yard touchdown. The score closed the gap to 15-12. Two possessions later, Sarkisian was on the move again, and drove the Cougars 60 yards in five plays, ending with a 28-yard touchdown strike to K.O. Kealaluhi that proved to be the game-winner. BYU climbed back on top, 19-15, and the clock was down to 3:39. Now, the pressure reverted back to Kansas State. Starting from the 28, Kavanagh and Lockett went to work on a 13-play drive that would carry them to the BYU 12. A second down play at the Cougars' 17 almost resulted in a touchdown when Lockett grabbed a pass in the back of the end zone, but BYU's McTyre made sure the catch wouldn't count by knocking the K-State receiver out of the field of play.

Fate was beginning to shine on the Cougars. Four plays later, with the ball at the 12, Kavanagh looked for Jimmy Dean over the middle. BYU cornerback Omarr Morgan read the play perfectly and stepped inside to intercept Kavanagh at the three. Only 55 seconds were left to play and all the Cougars had to do to gain their biggest victory of the season was for Sarkisian to simply fall on the ball and kill the clock.

The 62nd Southwestern Bell Cotton Bowl had so many twists and turns, the script played like a Hollywood movie. At the center of the plot were two coaches who once walked the same sideline together, but now found themselves on opposite sides of the field.

Next came a variety of scoring plays, ranging from an 83-yard pass interception return that involved two players, a quarterback sack that resulted in a safety, an end-around reverse that fooled everyone in the stadium, and an assortment of long passes and electrifying runs. Name it and this game had it.

The pre-game hoopla centered upon UCLA's Bob Toledo and Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum. For five seasons, Toledo served as Slocum's offensive coordinator at A&M, helping the Aggies earn three consecutive trips to the Cotton Bowl. However, each visit ended with a loss, and after the 1994 Classic the two coaches parted company. The following season, Toledo resurfaced as a UCLA assistant, and within two years he was elevated to the top job as head coach. Toledo's Bruins ended the 1997 campaign as the hottest team in college football. After opening with an 0-2 mark, the Bruins reeled off nine consecutive victories to climb steadily up the polls to a No. 5 national ranking. Texas A&M carried the title as the youngest team in the Big 12 Conference, but despite its youth, was ranked 20th by the Associated Press. The Aggies finished the year 9-3 to earn the championship of the Big 12's Southern Division. After a decisive defeat to Nebraska in the conference championship game at the close of the season, redemption seemed to rank foremost on the Aggies' minds against UCLA. Bruin quarterback Cade McNown hadn't suffered a sack all season long. But, in the first half of play, the Aggies' Wrecking Crew defense had thrown McNown for a loss five times and clearly had the Bruin offense totally confused.

The first of the game's memorable plays came at the end of UCLA's second possession. McNown, the nation's leader in passing efficiency, methodically drove the Bruins through the Aggie defense and inside the 10-yard line. But, just when it seemed that UCLA would score first, in stepped A&M linebacker Dat Nguyen to steal the momentum for A&M. Throwing off balance, McNown floated a screen pass directly into Nguyen's hands at the A&M 17. Nguyen hauled in the interception and started to run. After 19 yards, he turned to his left and lateraled to Brandon Jennings, the Aggies' speedy free safety. Jennings took the pitch and flew down the sideline for the final 64 yards and the A&M touchdown.

The 83-yard play, the second longest interception return in Classic history, was the start of a remarkable day for Nguyen. The junior linebacker recorded 15 solo tackles to establish a Classic defensive record. Overall, he contributed 20 stops, seven of them resulting in 20 yards in losses, and was named the game's outstanding defensive player.

Fueled by Nguyen, the Aggie defense soon added a safety to jump the lead to 9-0. Pinned at the three-yard line after an A&M punt, McNown was chased down in the end zone by defensive end Zerek Rollins. Everything was going A&M's way and UCLA's string of bad luck was far from over. McNown, bottled up and unable to move the ball on his next possession, called for a quick kick on third down. His surprise punt covered 76 yards, but the trick didn't work. Two plays later, A&M halfback Dante Hall broke loose up the middle and dashed 74 yards for yet another score to stretch the lead to 16-0.

Desperate to get something going, UCLA's break finally came with 42 seconds on the clock before halftime. A long, 33-yard punt return gave the Bruins field position at the A&M 47. With no time to waste, McNown connected with split end Danny Farmer on a crossing pattern over the middle for a 20-yard gain. Two plays later, McNown found flanker Jim McElroy streaking down the sideline for a 22-yard scoring strike. The touchdown came with just two seconds to play in the half, and at last, UCLA was on the board, cutting the deficit to nine, 16-7. The tide finally began to turn toward UCLA at the start of the third quarter, and it was McNown, the game's offensive MVP, who served as the undisputed leader of the Bruin comeback. Three plays into the second half, he connected with tailback Skip Hicks on a 41-yard scoring pass to trim the A&M lead to two, 16-14. The Aggies answered on their next possession when receiver Chris Cole took a reverse pitch 44-yards for a touchdown to push A&M's lead back to nine, 23-14. But, it was only a momentary setback for the Bruins.

McNown got the Bruins back on the scoreboard less than six minutes later by running 20 yards for the touchdown that pulled UCLA within two. Then, Hicks took over. The native Texan rushed for 50 of his team's 71 yards on the game-winning drive to set up Ryan Neufeld's five-yard touchdown run with 7:05 left to play. It was a long climb back, 16 points to be exact, but UCLA had grabbed the lead, and for Toledo, a gratifying 29-23 victory.

It was apparent from the start that a "Big Game" was brewing in "Big D." With the Heisman Trophy winner, a new conference affiliation that reunited the Classic with the Southeastern Conference, and the game's debut on the FOX Television Network, the 63rd Southwestern Bell Cotton Bowl generated a buzz that could be heard all around the country. It was just like old times. Cotton Bowl fever began early. In fact, the game was declared a sellout less than 48 hours after the teams were announced in early December.

Mississippi State had put together an 8-4 season and was heading to its first major New Year's Day bowl in 58 years. All this came on the heels of the Bulldogs' inaugural appearance in the SEC Championship Game. Another intriguing sidebar to the game was the return of MSU head coach Jackie Sherrill to Texas. In the 1980s, Sherrill coached Texas A&M to three consecutive Cotton Bowl appearances, and for the 1999 Classic he was coming to town armed with a seven-game winning streak over the Longhorns.

Texas also was experiencing a rebirth within its football program. In just his first season as head coach, Mack Brown had restored the Longhorns' confidence and winning spirit. Texas compiled an 8-3 regular season and rolled into Dallas winning seven of its last eight games. Brown's arrival produced a remarkable turnaround from the previous year's 4-7 finish. But, there was little doubt as to who would command the game's spotlight in his final collegiate performance. Heisman winner Ricky Williams set 21 NCAA records and 46 school marks during his Texas career and became the NCAA's all-time leading rusher. His presence alone gave the New Year's Day Classic its seventh Heisman winner and the game's first since 1988.

Anticipating that Mississippi State would blitz heavily and jam the line of scrimmage in an attempt to stop Williams, Texas quarterback Major Applewhite discovered quickly that the key to beating the Bulldogs was to put the football in the hands of receiver Wane McGarity. In the first half, those two hooked for two long scoring plays. The first covered 59 yards when McGarity slipped behind cornerback Kendall Roberson on a post pattern. Applewhite's pass was perfect, hitting McGarity in full stride, and with just minutes to play in the opening quarter the Horns jumped in front, 7-0.

Late in the second period, the redshirt freshman quarterback looked for his favorite receiver again. This time, McGarity hauled in a short toss from Applewhite, broke a tackle and zigzagged his way to the end zone to complete a 52-yard touchdown play that pushed the Texas lead to 14-0.

Mississippi State countered just before the half with Brian Hazelwood's 39-yard field goal to trim the score back to 14-3, but it did little to curb the Longhorns' momentum. Defensively, the Bulldogs were successful in the first half in corralling Williams and keeping him out of the end zone. But, Williams literally exploded in the second half, rolling up 128 yards in 15 attempts and running for two touchdowns. His most memorable play of the day came minutes into the third quarter. Breaking loose up the middle, Williams sailed through MSU defenders for 37 yards and the Longhorns' third score of the game. As he crossed the goal line, Williams pulled up and struck the classic "Heisman pose" and celebrated the touchdown with his teammates.

The touchdown opened the floodgates for Texas. The Horns soon tacked on a 47-yard field goal and Williams collected his second touchdown of the game with a two-yard burst over left tackle. Applewhite then connected with sophomore flanker Kwame Cavil for an 18-yard scoring play to put the finishing touches on a 24-point third quarter. The end result was a huge 38-3 Texas advantage with the fourth quarter still to play.

While Williams, Applewhite and McGarity were racking up impressive numbers on offense, the Texas defense was just as dominating. Junior linebacker Aaron Babino registered a team high-nine tackles for the Horns, three of them behind the line of scrimmage for 13 yards in losses, and was named the game's outstanding defensive player.

Mississippi State did manage to crack the scoreboard one last time when backup quarterback Matt Wyatt hit receiver Lahitia Grant on a five-yard pass play. James Johnson, the SEC's leading rusher, finished with 112 yards on 22 carries and added a successful two-point conversion to make the final score 38-11. Williams' statistical totals were staggering. He rushed for 203 yards on 30 attempts — the third best day on record at the time — scored two touchdowns and caught five passes for 45 yards. Texas couldn't have asked for a better ending to a storybook season...the end result being the Horns' first New Year's Day bowl victory in 17 years.

Thirty years after "The Game of the Century," the asic "Shootout" when long-time foes Arkansas and Texas renewed their rivalry in the 64th Southwestern Bell Cotton Bowl Classic. The last time these two rivals met was in 1991 when the Razorbacks carted home a 14-13 victory prior to their departure to the Southeastern Conference from their long-time home in the Southwest Conference. However, the most famous meeting of all took place on December 6, 1969, in the final game of college football's 100th season. Texas was ranked No. 1 and Arkansas was No. 2. President Richard Nixon flew into Fayetteville to proclaim the winning team as national champions.

That dreary winter day proved to be an afternoon the Hogs could never forget and one the Longhorns would point to with pride. Texas rallied from a fourth quarter 14-0 deficit in the "Big Shootout" to pull off a stunning 15-14 victory and propelled the Horns to a memorable battle with Notre Dame in the 1970 Cotton Bowl Classic. No doubt, this wouldn't be just any match-up on just any New Year's Day. It was Texas vs. Arkansas, and the stage would be the Cotton Bowl at the "Turn of the Century." And for Arkansas, it was a chance to bury some painful memories from the past.

The first half turned into a textbook defensive struggle with field goals coming from Arkansas' Tony Dodson and Texas' Kris Stockton to produce a 3-3 stalemate that stretched well into the third quarter.

At last, the fireworks ignited five minutes into the second half when Texas pinned the Razorbacks just outside the goal line after Ryan Long's 44-yard punt was downed on the three. On two successive plays, Arkansas narrowly avoided being trapped for a safety. First, quarterback Clint Stoerner escaped the fierce Texas rush by diving out of the end zone to the one for a loss of two. Next, tailback Chrys Chukwuma was swarmed by three Longhorn defenders, yet somehow fought his way out of the end zone and back to the one for no gain.

Then came the game's most decisive play. On third-and 12, Stoerner launched a 47-yard bomb to split end Anthony Lucas. It was the spark the Razorbacks needed to bring their offense to life. Quickly, Stoerner moved Arkansas from midfield to the Texas 30, and while scrambling to avoid another fierce pass run, he lobbed a wobbly pass to Cedric Cobbs. The Hogs' freshman tailback turned and sprinted down the sideline and into the end zone to give Arkansas a 10-3 lead and finish a remarkable 97-yard touchdown drive. Texas came right back. Led by sophomore quarterback Major Applewhite who connected on six-of-seven passes during the drive, the Longhorns marched 73 yards to the Arkansas one. But, that's where the threat ended. The Arkansas defense rose up to stop Texas on three consecutive plays and forced the Longhorns to settle again for a field goal by Stockton.

Riding the momentum from its goal line stand, Arkansas pounded Texas with a 17-point barrage in the fourth quarter. The Hogs drove 86 yards in just seven plays to increase the lead to 17-6 when backup tailback Michael Jenkins broke loose up the middle for a 42-yard scoring run.

Things got progressively worse for Texas. Applewhite, the Big 12's Offensive Player of the Year, was sacked on consecutive plays and suffered a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee when flushed from the pocket by the Arkansas pass rush. In came freshman quarterback Chris Simms who was promptly sacked for a six-yard loss and Texas had to punt. The short kick gave Arkansas the football at the Texas 37 and put Cobbs in position to wrap up the game's offensive MVP award. On the first play from scrimmage, the elusive freshman running back took the handoff from Stoerner, bounced outside and raced through and over Longhorn defenders for his second touchdown of the day. After Cobbs' run pushed the lead to 24-6, Arkansas coach Houston Nutt called on Dodson to add an insurance field goal, and with just 2:46 left to play the final score was in place for the Hogs, 27-6.

The smothering Arkansas defense produced eight sacks for the day and held Texas to minus-27 yards rushing, a Cotton Bowl and Texas school record. The ringleader was tackle D.J. Cooper who collected two sacks and five unassisted tackles while en route to defensive MVP honors.

The final gun produced sheer pandemonium on the Arkansas sideline. It was the Razorbacks' first bowl victory since 1985 and it came at the expense of archrival Texas. Finally, after 30 years, Arkansas had put to rest the ghost of the "Big Shootout."

The 65th Southwestern Bell Cotton Bowl Classic proved to be a battle of experience against youth. The wily veterans of Kansas State had one last bit of unfinished business. Tennessee was all that stood between the Wildcats and their fourth-consecutive 11-win season. Entering the Classic, Tennessee was on a tear. The Volunteers, 8-3, led by freshmen quarterback Casey Clausen, rolled off six straight wins and had outscored their opponents 206-107 in that stretch, despite having only two senior starters on offense. Tennessee's defense was anchored by John Henderson, the fifth Outland Trophy winner to play in the Classic. Kansas State, 10-3, was fresh from a narrow loss to Oklahoma, the eventual national champion, in the Big 12 Championship. The Wildcats, with 11 senior starters on offense and defense, were hungry to finish the year on a positive note.

An overnight winter storm blanketed the Cotton Bowl's playing surface in white but did nothing to dampen Kansas State's offensive attack as the Wildcats stormed to a 35-21 victory. K-State senior quarterback Jonathan Beasley ushered in the New Year by throwing for two touchdowns and rushing for another while en route to earning Outstanding Offensive Player honors.

After halftime, most of the snow had evaporated along with Tennessee's chances of winning. The No. 21 Volunteers saw a 21-14 halftime deficit expand to 35-14 just five minutes into the third quarter.

K-State junior running back Josh Scobey scored twice in the third quarter on runs of 12 and six yards. However, it was Beasley's steady control of the offense that made the difference. His 308 yards in total offense were the second-most in Cotton Bowl history. Entering the Classic, Beasley had compiled only 500 rushing yards all season, but he saved his best rushing performance for last. He ran for 98 yards on 17 carries, including a 14-yard touchdown run to open the scoring at 5:46 in the first quarter.

The Vols responded to Beasley's challenge when Clausen connected with wide receiver David Martin on a 17-yard touchdown pass to tie the score at 7-7 in the opening minutes of the second quarter. He became only the second true freshman to start at quarterback in a bowl for Tennessee behind Peyton Manning. Clausen was also the third true-freshman quarterback to ever start in a Cotton Bowl Classic.

The Wildcats regained the lead a minute later when Beasley threw a 56-yard touchdown strike to Quincy Morgan. Morgan, a senior from Garland, Texas, put on a show for the hometown crowd and added another touchdown reception on the Wildcats' next possession, hooking up with Beasley one more time on a 10-yard pass play. He finished the day with 145 yards on seven receptions. In front 21-7, Kansas State was hoping to put the game out of reach on its ensuing drive, but Tennessee's Jabari Greer picked off Beasley and returned the interception 78 yards for a touchdown. Greer's defensive heroics trimmed the lead to 21-14 at halftime and brought a wild first half to a close. The combined total points in the first 30 minutes was the second highest total in Cotton Bowl history.

By the start of the third quarter, Tennessee's struggle was not with the elements, but rather, finding a way to stop Kansas State's unrelenting ground attack. The Wildcats rolled up 179 yards rushing in the second half on a Tennessee defense that had allowed just 74.3 rushing yards a game during the season. Scobey finished with 147 yards on 28 carries, including his two third-quarter touchdown runs. With a 35-14 score at the end of the third quarter, the outcome of the Classic seemed inevitable.

Kansas State's defense kept Tennessee at bay by holding Clausen to 7-of-25 passing for 120 yards and three interceptions. Senior defensive end Chris Johnson, the Outstanding Defensive Player of the game, accounted for both of K-State's sacks.

Tennessee's bright spot offensively came from senior tailback Travis Henry who managed 180 rushing yards on 17 carries, including an 81-yard touchdown scamper with 2:44 remaining, the second longest scoring run in the game's 65-year history. Henry's 10.6 average yards per carry also was a notable achievement as the second best rushing effort at the Cotton Bowl.

Yet it wasn't enough. The sea of purple-clad Kansas State fans numbering nearly 35,000 were witness to a dominant performance on both sides of the ball by a veteran Wildcat team. K-State's offense totaled 507 yards, the sixth-most in Cotton Bowl history, while the defense held a potent Tennessee offense to 298 total yards. In the end, experience won out, 35-21.

The walk down the end zone tunnel was no different. The Sooner nation made the accustomed trek down Interstate-35. Even the title sponsor was unchanged. Another border war was to erupt, but this battle was of a different sort compared to the traditional SBC Red River Shootout.

The opposing chant of "Hook'em Horns" gave way to "Woooo Pig Sooooooie!" as 72,955 red-clad Oklahoma and Arkansas fans converged on Dallas for the 66th SBC Cotton Bowl Classic.

The clash between the crimson of Oklahoma and the cardinal of Arkansas renewed a rivalry that dates as far back as 1899.

The Razorbacks finished the regular season as one of the hottest teams in college football, having won six of their final seven games to finish 7-4 and 4-4 in the Southeastern Conference.

Oklahoma, ranked 10th nationally, brought a defensive unit into the New Year's Day Classic that had sparked a successful run at a national title the year before and led the team to a 10-2 record and a 6-2 mark in the Big 12.

The Sooners were accustomed to playing under pressure, and pressure is exactly what OU applied to Arkansas for the greater part of four quarters.

With a defensive roster loaded with weapons, it was only fitting that Butkus Award winner Rocky Calmus would thwart Arkansas' comeback attempt by pouncing on a loose ball coughed up by Razorback quarterback Matt Jones with 1:42 remaining.

Despite Oklahoma's defensive effort that limited Arkansas to 50 yards on 55 plays of total offense, the Razorbacks went into their final drive with a chance to tie the game. A similarly impressive defensive effort by Arkansas held the Sooner offense in check and limited OU to 231 total yards.

Arkansas opened the fourth quarter with a 12-play, 52-yard drive that culminated in a 32-yard field goal by Brennan O'Donohoe with 9:46 remaining. The Razorbacks best shot to tie the score came with less than three minutes to play. Arkansas drove to near midfield before linebacker Teddy Lehman sacked Jones and knocked the ball loose. Calmus recovered the fumble and ended any hope of a Hog comeback.

The Sooners created numerous openings in the Arkansas offensive line and rang up nine quarterback sacks, tying the SBC Cotton Bowl record set by Miami against Texas in 1991. The 50 yards of total offense by Arkansas was the third-fewest in Classic history.

The game's only touchdown came in the first quarter when Oklahoma put together a 13-play, 63-yard drive, including a fourth-and-one conversion at the Arkansas 16. Quarterback Nate Hybl scored on a sneak from the 1-yard line for the only points Oklahoma would need.

Oklahoma added a field goal early in the second half when Tim Duncan connected on a 32-yard field goal with 8:45 remaining in the third quarter.

Hybl eventually found a way to maneuver through the Arkansas defense to complete 24 passes, surpassing the previous SBC Cotton Bowl record of 21 held by Navy's Roger Staubach (1964) and BYU's Steve Sarkisian (1997). Hybl finished with 175 yards on 24-32 passing.

The offensive MVP award went to OU running back Quentin Griffin. The junior rushed for 56 yards and caught nine passes for 32 yards, extending to 30 his school record for consecutive games with a reception. His nine catches, at the time, ranked second in Cotton Bowl history behind Arkansas' Bobby Crockett who had 10 against LSU in 1966.

Oklahoma safety Roy Williams took the defensive MVP honor. The Bronko Nagurski and Jim Thorpe award winner was in on six tackles, including three tackles-for-loss for minus-17 yards.

In the end, the Sooner defense with its star power outlasted the Razorbacks, 10-3, and left Arkansas seeing red.

ATTENDANCE: 70,817

Forty years to the day after Texas and LSU's last meeting, the Longhorns and Tigers picked up where they left off – at the SBC Cotton Bowl Classic. Their last encounter came in the 1963 Cotton Bowl as LSU knocked off an undefeated Longhorn squad, 13-0. This time around, Texas came away from New Year's Day as victors after an opportunistic Longhorn defense forced three turnovers en route to a memorable 35-20 win in the 68th Classic.

The No. 9 Longhorns (11-2) grabbed their 11th Field Scovell Trophy as champions of the Cotton Bowl and posted consecutive 11-win seasons for the first time in school history.

In the opening period, LSU (8-5) seemed on the verge of running away to another Classic upset, holding Texas to only three offensive plays and no first downs. It was the Texas defense that opened up the scoring for the Longhorns. Senior linebacker Cory Redding blew by his blocker and knocked the ball loose from LSU quarterback Marcus Randall. Linebacker Lee Jackson snatched the ball off the ground and raced 46 yards for a touchdown to make it 7-3. It was the first touchdown off a fumble return in Cotton Bowl history.

The quick score forced the Longhorn defense to stay on the field, and LSU took advantage. Randall marched the Tiger offense down the field and connected with running back LaBrandon Toefield on a 20-yard pass to give LSU a 10-7 lead after the first quarter. Randall looked like an instant SBC Cotton Bowl Hall of Famer as he led the Tigers to scores on three of their first four possessions. LSU extended its lead to 17-7 early in the second. On a designed QB draw play, Randall picked up 76 yards before UT's Nathan Vasher finally pulled him down. Domanick Davis finished the drive with a 10-yard run up the middle.

LSU had 287 yards on those first four possessions and was averaging 8.2 yards per play. The Longhorn defense was forced to make adjustments, and Texas finally turned on the light switch in the second quarter. The combination of Texas quarterback Chris Simms and split end Roy Williams got the offense moving and LSU couldn't find a way to stop the duo. Williams cut into LSU's 17-7 lead three minutes into the second quarter when Simms connected with the junior on a quick post route for a 51-yard touchdown.

Texas caught LSU in single coverage on Williams again later in the second period. Williams turned a short post pass into a long gain, going 75 yards before stepping out of bounds at the 5. Cedric Benson finished off the drive with a 1-yard dive into the end zone to give the Longhorns a 21-17 lead heading into the locker rooms at the half. Williams put the game solidly in Texas' favor in the third quarter when he cut back twice inside LSU defenders on a reverse and scored a 39-yard touchdown. The touchdown play was set up by another fumble recovery by linebacker Lee Jackson.

In all, Williams produced 181 yards on five touches en route to being voted Outstanding Offensive Player. Outstanding Defensive Player honors went to senior defensive end Cory Redding, who in the second half forced LSU's offense out of rhythm.

Texas went to increased zone blitzes, and the changes allowed Redding to harrass Randall and Toefield. Redding finished with eight tackles, including four tackles for a loss of 23 yards. After gaining 310 yards in the first half, LSU's offense was limited to 131 the rest of the game.

The Longhorns pulled away at the beginning of the fourth quarter when Simms connected with Ivan Williams on an 8-yard pass to extend the lead to 35-17. LSU added a John Corbello 39-yard field goal with 7:41 remaining in the game.

After his final game as a Longhorn, Redding let his emotions come rushing out after walking off the Cotton Bowl field a winner and accepting the Outstanding Defensive Player trophy.

"This is something that will stay with me the rest of my life," said Redding. "I've never won anything like this before. I feel overwhelmed."

OLE MISS OKLAHOMA STATE

2004 JANUARY 2

ATTENDANCE: 73,928

Ole Miss All-America quarterback Eli Manning came to Dallas well aware of the legacy of high-profile senior signal callers at the SBC Cotton Bowl. Such greats as Theismann, Montana and Aikman finished their memorable college careers by leading their teams to victories in the Cotton Bowl. Now, add one more name to the distinguished list.

Manning guided the 16th-ranked Rebels to a 31-28 win over No. 21 Oklahoma State, while throwing for two touchdowns and running for another in front of a sellout crowd of 73,928 at the 69th Classic.

It was Ole Miss' first major bowl victory since Eli's father, Archie, accomplished the feat 34 years earlier in the Sugar Bowl. The Rebels finished the season 10-3, marking their first 10-win season since 1971. Manning, winner of the Maxwell and Unitas Awards, was chosen as the Classic's Outstanding Offensive Player after completing 22 (second highest in Cotton Bowl history) of 31 passes for 259 yards with one interception.

Not to be outdone, OSU junior quarterback Josh Fields put on a show of his own, completing 21 of 33 passes for a Cotton Bowl record 307 yards and one touchdown.

Fifty-nine years had passed since Oklahoma State's last trip to the Cotton Bowl, and the Cowboys were returning to the sight of the first-ever bowl appearance with a trio of offensive stars, including Fields, wide receiver Rashaun Woods and running back Tatum Bell.

OSU jumped out to a 14-7 lead in the second quarter after Bell took a Fields handoff in for a three-yard touchdown. The Rebels took the ensuing kickoff and drove deep inside OSU territory. On the seventh play of the drive, Manning found flanker Mike Espy for a 25-yard touchdown pass to tie the score at 14-14. Despite the offensive output, the biggest play of the contest may have come on the defensive side of the ball. OSU drove to the Ole Miss 30 with 4:03 remaining in the half. On fourth down, the Cowboys passed on the 47-yard field goal attempt. Instead, OSU went for the first down, but Ole Miss defensive end Josh Cooper put an end to the Cowboys' scoring threat by sacking Fields for an 8-yard loss.

Cooper was chosen the Classic's Outstanding Defensive Player after being credited with two key tackles resulting in 11 yards in losses, including his fourth-down sack on Fields. That stop helped the Rebels gain a 17-14 halftime edge when Jonathan Nichols, the Lou Groza award winner, kicked a 33-yard field goal with :15 seconds remaining in the second quarter. After Nichols' kick, the Rebels never looked back.

Ole Miss, making its first SBC Cotton Bowl Classic appearance since 1962, held a 31-14 lead after Manning's one-yard touchdown sneak with 12:32 to play in the game. The Rebels burned slightly over five minutes in clock time to drive 97 yards in 13 plays for what seemed to be a comfortable lead.

The Cowboys were not about to give the game to Ole Miss without a fight. OSU turned to it's most potent weapon that had carried the Cowboys all the way to the SBC Cotton Bowl – the combination of Fields to Woods. OSU pulled within a touchdown with 4:38 to play after Fields floated the ball just over the reach of an Ole Miss defender and into the hands of Woods for a 17-yard score.

Woods' presence was felt in the Ole Miss defensive backfield all day. The senior wide out collected 11 catches for a Cotton Bowl record 223 yards.

Oklahoma State's defense had to come up with a stop to give the offense one last shot to tie up the game. Ole Miss had other thoughts. Ole Miss's offense converted on three separate third-down conversions on a drive that lasted 10 plays and covered 65 yards. More importantly, OSU could not stop the clock and time ran out on the Cowboys' comeback attempt. The Rebels had won their second Cotton Bowl trophy and the school's first since 1956.

The first-ever meeting between OSU and Ole Miss will forever be remembered not only as the warmest Cotton Bowl in history with a 74-degree temperature at kickoff, but also for the scorching play by two high-octane offenses.

The Tennessee quarterback position was a revolving door during the 2004 campaign. Two signal callers had gone down to injury during the season, and the Volunteers were down to their third QB against a resurgent Texas A&M squad in the 69th SBC Cotton Bowl.

Rick Clausen easily erased any doubts the Vols had at quarterback. The junior looked like an all-conference performer from the opening drive, and when the 2005 Classic was over, Clausen walked away with the J. Curtis Sanford Offensive MVP Trophy after leading Tennessee to a surprising 38-7 win over the Aggies.

The No. 15 Vols (10-3) raced to a 28-0 lead midway through the second quarter behind Clausen's passing, then rode their bruising running game to finish off No. 22 Texas A&M (7-5).

Clausen was 18 of 27 passing for 222 yards and a career-high three touchdown passes. The Tennessee defense gave Clausen and the Vols ample opportunities by forcing A&M into a season-high five turnovers. The Aggies had only turned the ball over eight times in the first 11 games.

The crowd of 75,704 was the fourth largest in Cotton Bowl history and the biggest since the 1978 Notre Dame-Texas game. The largely maroon-clad crowd had turned out in droves to support their Aggies, who were making their first bowl appearance since December 2001.

Tennessee wasted little time in gaining momentum by taking the opening drive 80 yards, capped off by a 57-yard pass from Clausen to C.J. Fayton for the Vols' first score. Tennessee had squelched any home-field advantage the Aggies might have enjoyed.

Ultimately penalties and missed tackles also doomed A&M. An off-side penalty kept alive Tennessee's first drive. Two plays later, the Aggies missed a tackle on Fayton after his catch that he turned into the Vols' first touchdown.

A&M responded by driving to the Tennessee 23, but running back Courtney Lewis couldn't hold on to the errant pitch from quarterback Reggie McNeal, and the Vols' Turk McBride recovered the fumble.

On the first snap of the Aggies' next drive, McNeal had the ball pop loose at his 28-yard line as his helmet came flying off after a jarring hit by Tennessee's Justin Harrell. The sophomore defensive tackle went on to earn the Felix McKnight Defensive MVP Trophy.

Tennessee's Corey Campbell recovered the loose ball for the Vols. Four plays later, Tennessee scored on a 12-yard pass from Clausen to Cory Anderson for a 14-0 lead.

Then, just when A&M appeared to be gaining some momentum early in the second quarter, Erik Mayes muffed a punt. The Vols' Corey Larkins recovered at A&M's 8-yard line, and Tennessee's offense needed one play to go up 21-0 on a Cedric Houston run.

The Volunteer ground assault grinded out the clock in the second half behind the running of Houston, Gerald Riggs and David Yancey. The three backs combined for 223 yards on 44 carries. Riggs led all rushers with 102 yards on 18 carries. The junior tailback scored the Vols final touchdown on a 9-yard run in the third quarter. Tennessee added a 37-yard field goal from James Wilhoit to take a commanding 38-0 lead.

A&M's highly touted offense led by McNeal was held in check until the junior quarterback connected with Earvin Taylor on a 5-yard pass for the Aggies' only touchdown with just over five minutes left in the fourth quarter. McNeal, still was able to establish a new school single-season passing record of 2,791 yards on a pass to Taylor to start the game.

McNeal's mark stood as one of the few highlights for the Aggies. Rather, the Vols set new highs, and in the process, the 2005 SBC Cotton Bowl Champions gave Tennessee fans great optimism heading into the year ahead.

The 70th AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic had it all: warm weather, bright sunshine, a sellout crowd and a Classic finish to remember. Alabama's Jamie Christensen kicked a career-best 45-yard field goal on the final play as time ran out, lifting the Crimson Tide to a 13-10 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders. A sellout crowd of 74,222, plus a national FOX TV audience, watched in 70-degree temperatures as the two teams worked their way toward only the second Cotton Bowl decided on the last play.

"Jamie had three game-winning kicks – what a way to finish this game and this season," said Alabama coach Mike Shula, whose team finished 10-2.

Christensen also made a 31-yarder in the third quarter, giving Alabama a 10-3, advantage. But in the second quarter, he had missed from 39 yards and later had a 38-yarder blocked. His opportunity to kick the game-winner, after Texas Tech tied it, 10-10, with 2:56 left, appeared unlikely considering Alabama's regular-season offensive output in 2005.

"I didn't want to go into overtime. I wanted to win it on offense," Shula said. "Our offensive line did a great job with the game on the line, and (quarterback) Brodie (Croyle) made some big plays."

Alabama, starting at its 14, covered 58 yards in 10 plays. Croyle made it happen, first with a 17-yard pass on third down to Matt Miller, giving the Tide a first down at its 35. He then delivered with an 11-yarder to Brandon Brooks and followed with a 23-yarder to Keith Brown, putting Alabama at the Tech 31 with 49 seconds left.

"Our plan going in was to stay out of third and long situations, but that's exactly where we were on that last drive," said Croyle, who completed 19 of 31 passes for 275 yards and one touchdown. "It was a good day. Our offensive line did a great job, and our running backs and receivers did a tremendous job fighting for extra yards."

Christensen's kick appeared to barely clear the crossbar, squeezing just inside the left upright.

"It didn't look very good when it left his foot," Texas Tech coach Mike Leach said. "I had high hopes at that point ... Did he make it?"

Christensen, when asked whether someone might have gotten a hand on the kick, said: "Actually, I didn't know whether it was going to be good until I saw the referee's hands go up. I knew I had hit it solidly, but I also kicked a little bit of ground and just didn't get the height on it that I wanted."

Croyle received the Sanford Trophy, which recognizes the game's outstanding offensive player and commemorates Cotton Bowl founder J. Curtis Sanford. Alabama linebacker DeMeco Ryans, who had seven tackles, five solo, and 1½ sacks, received the McKnight Trophy, which recognizes the game's outstanding defensive player and commemorates Felix McKnight, a celebrated Dallas newspaperman and long-time chairman of the Cotton Bowl team selection committee.

"It was a tightly contested game by two really good teams," said Leach, whose team finished 9-3. "I felt like they outplayed us on all three sides of the ball by a narrow margin."

Alabama grabbed a quick lead on Croyle's 76-yard pass to Brown with 11:37 left in the first quarter. The Tide continued to dominate until the closing three minutes when Tech took advantage of a short field and got the tying score on a 12-yard pass from Cody Hodges to Jarrett Hicks.

"That's a tough, tough Texas Tech team," Croyle said. "They fought and fought and fought. That might have been the most fun game I ever played in."

Alabama's offense controlled the ball for nearly 39 minutes, keeping Texas Tech, No.1 nationally in passing offense and No.2 in total offense, off the field. In the end, Tech could only watch as Christensen ended the Red Raiders' attempt to go to overtime and any dream of Tech taking home the Field Scovell Trophy.

Nearly two decades had passed since Auburn ran its way into the AT&T Cotton Bowl behind the power running of Bo Jackson. This time around, the Tigers relied less on their offense and more on a bruising defense that continually shut down their opponents. The same was said after the 71st AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic.

Nebraska brought in a pro-style offense that was capable of rolling up large chunks of yards quickly, but Auburn's defense held to form and kept the Cornhuskers in check.

Auburn capitalized on two early Husker turnovers, and its defense made a critical fourth-down stop in the closing minutes to help the Tigers secure a 17-14 victory on New Year's Day.

"We were lucky to be in the game after the first half. And that's typical of Auburn – win and win ugly," said the Tigers' Tommy Tuberville, who coached his 100th game at Auburn. "That's what we did today. We found a way."

Under bright, sunshiny skies, a crowd of 66,777 watched as Auburn's John Vaughn provided the margin of victory with a 42-yard field goal with 6:20 left in the third quarter – marking the second straight year for the Field Scovell Trophy winner to be determined by a three-pointer.

Auburn, representing the SEC, finished 11-2 and was 33-5-0 – the school's best three-year record in terms of victories. The Tigers victory marked the fourth-straight SEC victory in the AT&T Cotton Bowl. Nebraska, representing the Big 12 Conference as North Division Champions, finished 9-5.

Auburn's Courtney Taylor, who caught six passes for 70 yards, received the Sanford Trophy, which honors the game's outstanding offensive player and commemorates Cotton Bowl Classic founder J. Curtis Sanford. Taylor finished his career as Auburn's record holder for 153 career pass receptions.

Auburn linebacker Will Herring, who was credited with seven solo tackles, received the McKnight Trophy, which recognizes the classic's outstanding defensive player and commemorates Felix McKnight, a celebrated newspaperman and long-time chairman of the Cotton Bowl Team Selection Committee.

When Nebraska's Stewart Bradley covered Cox's fumble at the Auburn 42 with 5:24 remaining, the Cornhuskers seemed in position to overtake the Tigers. But the Auburn defense stiffened at its 27, stopping a shovel pass for a two-yard loss on third down and forcing an incompleteness on fourth down.

Nebraska's 15-play, 80-yard scoring drive on the Classic's opening possession was a timely blend of Marlon Lucky's running and Zac Taylor's third-down passing. Taylor's 13-yard throw to Nate Swift helped Nebraska to a 7-0 lead with 7:37 remaining in the first quarter.

Momentum swung suddenly in Auburn's direction late in the first quarter on Tiger linebacker Karibe Dede's 52-yard pass interception and return to the Nebraska nine. On second down, Brandon Cox threw a nine-yard touchdown pass to Carl Stewart, enabling the Tigers to even the score with 56 seconds remaining in the period.

On the fourth play of the second quarter, Nebraska's fake punt trickery from its 29 backfired, with Auburn's Tristan Davis covering the ensuing fumble at Nebraska's 14. Cox's 12-yard pass to Taylor gave Auburn a first down at the Nebraska one. Stewart scored from there on second down, putting Auburn in front, 14-7.

Nebraska evened the score on its next possession, moving 72 yards in seven plays. Brandon Jackson got the touchdown, sprinting 20 yards on a misdirection play over left tackle with nine minutes remaining in the half. The score stayed that way until Vaughn's kick. On fourth down from the Auburn 30 with just under four minutes to play, Nebraska chose not to attempt a possible game-tying field goal. Callahan explained later that the distance was beyond the comfort range set by the coaches before kickoff.

Auburn's defense ended up pitching a shutout in the second half, and despite Nebraska's big-play potential, the Tigers clamped down and walked away with a 17-14 victory and the Field Scovell Trophy.

The 72nd AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic was hyped as a battle of two Heisman Trophy finalists... Missouri quarterback Chase Daniel against Arkansas running back Darren McFadden. In the end, one of the Classic's longest-standing records had fallen, but it wasn't Daniel or McFadden entering the record books.

Tiger tailback Tony Temple stole the show with an epic day as he raced through the Arkansas defense to amass the second biggest rushing performance in bowl history while leading Missouri to a 38-7 win over the Razorbacks. When the dust settled, Temple finished with the most single game rushing yards in Cotton Bowl history. Temple rushed for 281 yards on 24 carries and four touchdowns breaking Rice halfback Dickey Maegle's record of 265 yards from the 1954 Classic against Alabama. Temple set the rushing record on his final carry, breaking a tackle and spinning away from another for a 40-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter. He was so spent after his prolific day that his teammates had to carry him from the end zone to the sideline after his record-setting trot.

The senior from Kansas City also equaled Texas quarterback Bobby Layne's record of four touchdowns in a game set in 1946 against Missouri, the last time the Tigers were in the Classic.

A capacity crowd of 73,114 fans came out expecting to see fireworks from Daniel, a Dallas-area product, but he wasn't forced to put up big numbers through the air as he had done all year. Rather, all he to do was hand the ball to Temple and watch him work. Daniel finished the day 12 of 29 for 136 yards.

McFadden, the two-time Doak Walker Award winner, rushed for a quiet 108 yards on 21 carries, scoring the lone Arkansas touchdown of the day, late in the third quarter. By that time, however, the outcome was nowhere near in doubt.

Missouri, the Big 12 North Division Champion, played in its first New Year's Day game since the 1970 Orange Bowl. The Tigers finished a school record 12-2. Entering the Big 12 Championship against Oklahoma, the Tigers were ranked No. 1 in the country.

Arkansas, representing the Southeastern Conference, finished the season 8-5. The Razorbacks had endured many highs and lows entering the Classic. In their final regular-season game, the Hogs upset then-No. 1 LSU. Shortly after the big victory, Arkansas head coach Houston Nutt left to fill the head coaching vacancy at Ole Miss. The Razorbacks turned to their defensive coordinator, Reggie Herring, to lead Arkansas against Missouri. It was the first time in Classic history that a team was led by an interim coach. Despite Herring's defensive prowess, the Hogs couldn't find a way to stop Missouri.

Temple's 22-yard touchdown run with 2:29 left in the first quarter gave Missouri a 7-0 lead. He added four-yard touchdown runs in the second and third quarters before his record breaking effort in the fourth. Jeff Wolfert's 32-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter accounted for Missouri's other points. For his efforts, Temple was awarded the Sanford Trophy, given to the Outstanding Offensive Player. The trophy commemorates the Cotton Bowl Classic's founder J. Curtis Sanford. Temple also broke his own Missouri bowl game record of 194 yards that he set in the 2006 Sun Bowl against Oregon.

Midway through the third quarter, Missouri safety William Moore intercepted a Casey Dick pass and returned it 26 yards to give the Tigers an insurmountable 28-0 lead. Moore was recognized as the Outstanding Defensive Player, winning the McKnight Trophy, presented in honor of the late Dallas newspaperman and former Team Selection Chairman Felix McKnight. Moore was credited with eight solo tackles and five assists.

The 2009 Classic marked the end of an era at Arkansas. The game was Cotton Bowl Hall of Famer Frank Broyles' last as Athletic Director. Broyles coached or administered over nine of Arkansas' 11 Cotton Bowl appearances. He was also Missouri's head coach for one season in 1957. The Razorbacks sported all-red jerseys and pants to honor him.

Despite all the great story lines entering the game, Temple took the headlines with his record-breaking performance. The Tigers marched off the field victorious celebrating one of the most successful seasons in school history and they took home the Field Scovell Trophy to prove it.

Ole Miss and Texas Tech ensured the 73rd and final AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic played at historic Fair Park would be one for the record books.

Ole Miss prevailed, 47-34, to win its sixth-straight game and finish the season 9-4. Even though the two schools amassed 81 points, first-year Rebels Coach Houston Nutt was quick to praise his defense, which held the Red Raiders scoreless in a third quarter for the first time that season.

“Our defense stopped them, stopped them, time and time again,” Nutt said. “I couldn’t be more proud of them. They never got discouraged, even after we got down 14-0. Once we started taking care of the ball, it was a total team effort – offense, defense, special teams. I just couldn’t be prouder of how our seniors took ownership of this team and led us to this victory. I only wish we had them coming back next year.”

“This goes to show the caliber of the two teams competing in this game,” said Texas Tech Coach Mike Leach, whose team finished 11-2. “I know going in we had a lot of respect for Ole Miss. They are an incredibly good football team. They beat Florida at Florida and played extremely well at Alabama. Today, they played in a fashion we take pride in – executing. They did a great job of doing their jobs.”

“The Cotton Bowl is special to me,” Nutt said. “I had some concern about how our players would handle all this – being in their first bowl and playing the last game in this stadium. Our preparation was excellent. Our players had the time of their lives. Our seniors will never forget this. I couldn’t be happier.”

Ole Miss H-Back Dexter McCluster received the Sanford Trophy given to the outstanding offensive player. The trophy commemorates the AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic’s founder, J. Curtis Sanford. Ms. Betty Sanford has followed in her late husband’s footsteps, participating with AT&T executive Mark Keiffer and other dignitaries in the coin-toss ceremony.

“This is a great honor, but this was a total team effort,” said McCluster, who rushed for 97 yards and one touchdown on 14 carries and caught six passes for 83 yards. “We played as a team and never gave up.”

Ole Miss’ Marshay Green received the McKnight Trophy given to the outstanding defensive player. The trophy honors the late Dallas newspaperman and former Team Selection Committee Chairman, Felix McKnight. Green had three tackles and returned an intercepted pass 65 yards for an early third-quarter touchdown.

“It was a big-time challenge, covering (Michael) Crabtree,” Green said.

Despite controlling the ball for all but three minutes, 20 seconds, the Rebels trailed 14-7, after the first quarter. Ole Miss used relentless defense, hard running and timely passing by Jevan Snead to widen its lead to 38-21 after three quarters. With Tech’s quick-strike offense, a comeback still seemed possible after the Raiders recovered a fumble at their two early in the fourth quarter. But the ferocious Rebel defense trapped Tech quarterback Graham Harrell for a safety on the very next play.

“It was a strange game on both teams’ part – a series of over-corrections,” Leach said. “They did a better job than we did staying composed on the momentum shifts. They executed well on both sides of the ball. They kept doing their job, play after play after play.”

2010

ATTENDANCE: 77,928

The first AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic at Cowboys Stadium promised a “new beginning” for the 74-year-old Classic, but it was déjà vu for Ole Miss and Dexter McCluster.

The Rebels defeated Oklahoma State, 21-7, to win the AT&T Cotton Bowl for the second straight year — third time since 2004 — and McCluster repeated as the Sanford Trophy winner, which recognizes the outstanding offensive player and commemorates AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic founder J. Curtis Sanford.

Playing in the largest domed structure in the world, the event drew 77,928 spectators — second largest in Cotton Bowl Classic history — plus a national FOX TV audience.

“I’m extremely proud of our team. It’s hard to win back-to-back bowls,” said Ole Miss Coach Houston Nutt. “To win the final Cotton Bowl Classic at the old stadium and come in here and win again in this magnificent place is just awesome.”

By unanimous vote in 2010, McCluster became of first player since University of Houston linebacker David Hodge in 1979 and 1980 to win consecutive outstanding player honors and the first offensive player since SMU’s Doak Walker in 1948 and 1949 to earn offensive recognition in the AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic.

As Nutt pointed out, McCluster is the first player in Southeastern Conference (SEC) history to account for more than 1,000 rushing yards and 500 receiving yards in a single season. McCluster finished this year with 1,167 rushing yards and 565 receiving yards, including his 182 rushing and 45 receiving yards and two touchdowns in his final game.

“To be the only SEC player to accomplish this — nobody, nobody else — (Auburn’s) Bo Jackson and the other great players in this league — Dexter is the only one,” Nutt said. “This is why this is so special, because this guy has done something. His heart is bigger than this stadium, I promise.”

McCluster said that “it’s a blessing to be part of the SEC and a part of Ole Miss.” Of a possible record-setting afternoon, which included a career high 32 carries, he said he really wasn’t worried.

“I just wanted to win and do whatever I could to help the team win,” he said. “I knew if I did that, it would fall in place, which it did.”

Following a scoreless first quarter, McCluster gave the Rebels a 7-0 lead on an electrifying 86-yard touchdown run with 11:19 remaining in the first half. The run was the second longest in Classic history behind Rice’s Dicky Maegle gallop of 95 yards against Alabama in 1954.

“I don’t have any problems with getting the ball this many times,” McCluster said. “I know I can make plays happen. I come in with the mindset of worrying about me — not the defense. Coach Nutt has the faith in me to go out there, take care of the ball and get the job done and I want to thank him for that.”

Following an Oklahoma State turnover with 6:15 to play in the fourth quarter, McCluster scored his second touchdown on a two-yard leap with 4:03 to play, giving Ole Miss a 14-7 advantage.

“Thinking back to last year’s game, we ran the same play to the left side, and I scored. It was the same touchdown, just a different dial, different swag on it,” McCluster said. “I just wanted to get the ball and run as fast as I can and get there — just not be stopped. I felt like I wanted to take it in, no matter what.”

Ole Miss’ got its final touchdown with 3:12 to play on a 34-yard fumble return by Patrick Trahan. “Our defense was just outstanding,” Nutt said. (Defensive coordinator) Tyrone (Nix) had a tremendous game plan and our guys were relentless in chasing the ball and putting themselves in the right position to make plays.”

Andre Sexton’s interception of an Ole Miss pass led to Oklahoma State’s only touchdown — a 1-yard jump pass from Keith Toston to Wilson Youngman with 7:13 remaining in the third quarter. Sexton received the McKnight Trophy, which recognizes the outstanding defensive player and commemorates long-time Dallas newspaperman and Cotton Bowl Team Selection Chairman Felix McKnight.

Oklahoma State Coach Mike Gundy congratulated Ole Miss, commiserated about his team’s turnovers and praised the AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic for its legendary hospitality.

“Give credit to the Ole Miss defense, but we didn’t execute well. We just needed to make a few more plays,” Gundy said. “Ole Miss was able to control the tempo and we never got our offense going. It wasn’t any one thing, but just a combination of errors. We turned the ball over just about every time we had it late in the game. I just don’t know what happened, but give credit to Ole Miss again for swarming all over the place.”

In the first primetime game in Classic history, it was LSU who stole the show in a 41-24 win over the Texas A&M Aggies. LSU (11-2) won its third AT&T Cotton Bowl in the last four tries, while Texas A&M (9-4) snapped a six-game winning streak and saw its overall record in the Classic drop to 4-8.

On the night of the Classic's 75th anniversary, where former Syracuse great Jim Brown and 20 other Hall of Fame players and coaches were honored, it was the Tigers' quarterback, Jordan Jefferson who joined the likes of other memorable performances in the tradition rich bowl. Jefferson's receiver, Terrance Tolliver, tied a Cotton Bowl record with three touchdown receptions and earned the Sanford Trophy presented to the game's most outstanding offensive player.

The Tigers featured two 100-yard rushers with Stevan Ridley and Spencer Ware. LSU became the second team in Cotton Bowl history to boast two 100-yard rushers and a 100-yard receiver in the same game joining Arkansas in the 1990 Classic. While the LSU offense was busy setting records, the Tigers' defense rebounded from a slow start to stymie the Texas A&M offensive attack as the game progressed. The LSU defense forced four A&M turnovers including three interceptions and one fumble.

Freshman cornerback Tyrann Mathieu led the Tigers' defensive charge earning eight tackles, a sack, an interception, two forced fumble and a fumble return. He stripped Texas A&M wide receiver Hutson Prioleau and appeared to return the loose ball 37 yards for a touchdown, before a penalty brought the play back. LSU maintained possession, however, and the Tigers ran out the clock to clinch the win. For his defensive efforts, Mathieu earned the McKnight Trophy as the outstanding defensive player of the game.

Although the Tigers came out victorious, it was not without a hard fought effort put up by Texas A&M. Texas A&M quarterback Ryan Tannehill completed 22-of-35 passes for 204 yards and two touchdowns, but also was intercepted three times and sacked twice. Aggies' running back Cyrus Gray earned 100 yards on 20 carries, while wide receiver Jeff Fuller had seven receptions netting 83 yards. Thanks to a stunning kickoff return by Coryell Judie, the Aggies took the first quarter by storm an amassed 10-0 lead, but with the power offense displayed by the Tigers, the Aggies didn't stand a chance.

LSU quarterback Jordan Jefferson assisted in leading the Tiger charge, connecting with receiver Terrance Toliver three times for three scores throughout the rest of the game. By the end of the first quarter, the Tigers led 28-17 from scores by Ridley and Toliver. The 45 combined points scored by both teams in the first half tied the Classic record matching the 2009 Ole Miss-Texas Tech and the 1985 Houston-Boston College games.

LSU wasted little time revving back up the offense after the halftime break. In the third quarter, after another touchdown reception, Toliver tied Southern California's Keyshawn Johnson for the Cotton Bowl record of three touchdown receptions in a game. LSU kept a 35-17 lead heading into the final quarter of play.

The Aggies' offense was on the march to begin the fourth quarter going 73 yards on 13 plays to the end zone. On third and goal at the four yard-line, Tannehill spotted Kenric McNeal for a four-yard touchdown pass and Randy Bullock converted on the extra point; A&M cut into the LSU lead at 35-24 with 10:04 to play. But, on the following LSU drive of 19 yards in seven plays, Jasper tied a Cotton Bowl record by nailing a 50-yard field goal. He joined Alabama's Greg Gantt (1973) and Miami's Carlos Huerta (1991) on the record-breaking field goal list.

Jasper was called on again on the Tigers' next offensive possession, hitting a 26-yard field goal with 3:04 remaining. A fumble recovery by LSU's Mathieu on the next play from scrimmage ended Texas A&M's drive and clinched the victory for the Tigers, 41-24.

"I have to thank the Cotton Bowl Committee and certainly the opportunity to play in such an historic game," LSU head coach Les Miles said. "This game was made more important to us by the (Big Play) luncheon we had where it depicted the great players, the great teams and the great circumstances of a Cotton Bowl championship. We're very honored to play in it."

It wasn't pretty, but a potent offense and tenacious defensive play gave Arkansas a 29-16 victory over Kansas State in the 76th AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic.

"I'm very proud of our football team. It was a hard-fought contest. Kansas State did a great job. They're a good football team. They played tough on defense," said Arkansas head coach Bobby Petrino. "I think the difference in the game was how well we played on defense and the field position we were able to give our offense. We didn't take advantage of it all the time, but it was a big part of the game."

Despite the lack of offensive fireworks early on, All-SEC quarterback Tyler Wilson was efficient in the pocket, passing for 216 yards and two touchdowns. The second was a 9-yarder to Cobi Hamilton with four minutes in the third quarter after Kansas State (10-3) scored 16 straight points.

However, it was the defense – led by senior defensive end Jake Baquette- that ultimately propelled the Razorbacks (11-2) to a school record tying 11th victory. The unit harassed Kansas State quarterback Collin Klein all night and sacked the Big-12 All Purpose Player of the Year six times.

"We had a good plan. Coach (Paul) Haynes and our defensive staff did a really nice job on the plan," Petrino said. "Our players came out and executed it well. I thought we played very, very fast. Our defensive front controlled the line of scrimmage."

Joe Adams gave Arkansas a commanding 10-0 lead early in the second quarter with his fourth punt return for a touchdown this season. The Razorbacks scored a non-offensive touchdown in six out of their last seven games this year.

"It was another one of those where you just go, Wow! It was a great punt. He hit the ball really hard," Petrino said. "You could see when he made the catch he had in mind what he was going to do. We got some blocks. I thought our guys did a nice job on blocks. Joe showed great acceleration and made another spectacular play for us."

The Cotton Bowl was the only non-BCS game with both teams in the top 15 of the Bowl Championship Series standings. It was also the only bowl featuring the SEC vs. the Big 12, but it was apparent which conference flexed their muscles. Kansas State failed to match its school record 11th win and has now lost its last four bowl games.

"We got off to an awfully bad start and really couldn't overcome the damage that we did, and most of it was pretty obvious," said Kansas State head coach Bill Snyder. "We had four dropped balls, we had two turnovers, we had four penalties all in the first half that dramatically hurt us. We weren't ready to play."

After a 45-yard touchdown strike from Wilson to Jarius Wright that put Arkansas up 19-0, Raphael Guidry blocked the extra point and Nigel Malone returned it 98 yards for two points. It was the first blocked extra point in Cotton Bowl history.

Klein continued the momentum with a 3-yard touchdown pass to tight end Andre McDonald just before halftime. But the offensive sputtered in the second half, and the Wildcats failed to score in the fourth quarter.

"We didn't do the things, as coach said earlier. We had our chances and weren't able to, you know, finish the job and execute on the field," Klein said. "Again, we just came up short and didn't get it done as a unit."

Klein only mustered 41 yards on the ground but scored on a 6-yard touchdown run that got the Wildcats to 19-16. That tied the single-season FBS record for most rushing touchdowns by a quarterback.

Jerico Nelson helped Arkansas cap off a dominant defensive performance by picking off Klein in the game's final minute.

The Razorbacks are now 4-0 in AT&T Stadium. Arkansas also improved their overall Cotton Bowl record to 4-7-1 after losing in its last two appearances.

Another chapter can be added to the legend of Johnny Football after the talented freshman quarterback dazzled over 87,000 fans at AT&T Stadium and helped guide Texas A&M to a dominating 41-13 win over Oklahoma in the 77th AT&T Cotton Bowl Classic.

On the game's opening drive, Texas A&M fans let out a thunderous roar when Manziel avoided numerous Oklahoma defenders and set the tempo with an explosive 24-yard run. Just two plays later, Manziel called his own number again and scampered for 23 more yards, but this time, he tiptoed down the sideline and leaped into the end zone to give the Aggies an early 7-0 lead. It was a play that can be described as simply amazing - something Manziel has been all season.

Manziel accounted for four total touchdowns and finished the game with 229 yards on the ground and 287 yards passing en route to being named Offensive MVP. His 516 yards of total offense broke former Texas Tech quarterback Graham Harrell's Cotton Bowl record. The 2012 Heisman Trophy winner continued to rewrite the record book as he also set the all-time FBS bowl mark for most rushing yards by a quarterback.

But it was freshman running back Trey Williams who broke the game open with 6:30 remaining in the third quarter. The true freshman found a hole and dashed 30 yards to give the Aggies a commanding 27-13 lead. On the ensuing Texas A&M possession, Manziel continued to work his magic and found Ryan Swope for a 33-yard touchdown on a key fourth down. Swope led Texas A&M with eight receptions for 104 yards and became the school's all-time leading receiver in terms of yards.

"The coaches did a great job of putting a great game plan together," Manziel said. "Everybody has this time to scheme up and they put a good game plan together and really the offensive line, the receivers, everybody went out and executed tonight. It was a great night for the offense."

Midway through the fourth quarter, Manziel hammered the final nail in the coffin and put the Aggies up 41-13 with his second touchdown pass of the night, a 34-yard strike to Uzoma Nwachukwu.

"We knew what we had to accomplish tonight. The coaches put us in a good situation. We had trust in them," Swope said. "Offensively, we went in at halftime, made some adjustments and knew that guys had to step up and make plays. Everyone just bought in. It was real fun."

Oklahoma quarterback Landry Jones set his own Cotton Bowl record with 23 completions in the first half. His biggest completion of the night came just before halftime when he cut the Texas A&M lead to one on a 6-yard touchdown pass to Justin Brown. But Jones and the entire Oklahoma offense struggled to get anything going in the second half, failing to pick up a first down on their first three possessions in the third quarter.

"In the second half it totally broke down offensively and defensively," said Oklahoma head coach Bob Stoops. "Defense couldn't get off the field. We had guys plenty of times in position to make a play. Couldn't make a play. That's just where we are. They totally outplayed us in every way."

The Sooners showed signs of life early in the game when Harris picked off a Manziel pass in the end zone. But Jones followed that up with a costly interception and gave the ball right back to the Aggies. Manziel avenged his only mistake of the game with a 5-yard touchdown run on a three-play drive off the interception.

"Johnny Manziel is everything he was billed to be, expected him to be," Stoops said. "But, again, Coach (Kevin) Sumlin and his staff totally outplayed us, out coached us the whole second half. It's a team effort. When you lose like that in the second half, the offense goes."

Before the season began many experts projected Texas A&M to struggle in its first year in the SEC. But the Aggies proved their doubters wrong and finished with 11 wins for the first time since 1998 including a signature victory over Alabama, which is competing for the BCS national championship.

Texas A&M set an SEC record with more than 7,000 yards of total offense including 633 on Friday night. With the win over its former Big 12 foe, Texas A&M moved past Arkansas for most Cotton Bowl Classic victories by an SEC team with five.

It took a little while, but Missouri showed why it was the SEC East champion and a national title contender.

Mizzou struggled offensively during the first three quarters and were plagued by three turnovers. But, the Tigers exploded for an AT&T Stadium record 24 fourth-quarter points, and defensive end Shane Ray returned a fumble 73 yards for a touchdown with 2:13 remaining as Missouri topped Oklahoma State 41-31 in the 78th annual AT&T Cotton Bowl.

"All the drama you don't want in the fourth quarter we had," said Missouri head coach Gary Pinkel said. "We had a lot of adversity. I thought our team handled the adversity very well. Fortunately we made the plays we needed to make to win at the end."

With the victory, Missouri finished the season 12-2 and tied the school record for most victories in a season. Pinkel also became Missouri's all-time winningest coach, earning his 102nd victory to surpass Don Faurot.

The former Big 12 and Big 8 conference foes set a Classic record for most points scored in the fourth quarter with 41. The two teams exchanged scores on six consecutive possessions. The streak was broken when defensive end

Michael Sam sacked Oklahoma State quarterback Clint Chelf and forced the fumble that Ray scooped up for the game-clinching score.

Missouri made the move from the Big 12 to the SEC in 2012 and gave the conference its 10th win in the last 11 Classics - all coming against the Big 12.

"That's something really big, I mean, representing the SEC. The SEC is such a powerful conference," said Missouri running back Henry Josey. "That's the conference everybody looks to. That's where all the attention is."

Trailing 31-27 with 3:08 left, Josey broke loose for his third score of the game, a 16-yard scamper into the end zone that gave the Tigers the lead back for good. Josey finished the game with 92 yards rushing and three touchdowns and was named the game's Outstanding Offensive Player.

"Josey is a remarkable kid. He's special," Pinkel said. "That's what you see on the field. The reason he's special is great athleticism, he's tough, he's strong, all those other things."

Both offenses came into the game averaging close to 40 points per contest but were limited by a multitude of penalties and turnovers before finally catching fire late.

James Franklin set up Josey's go-ahead touchdown on a key 27-yard strike to Dorial Green-Beckham. Clint Chelf threw for 377 yards, two touchdowns and two interceptions for Oklahoma State. He also rushed for 52 yards and another touchdown.

The situation looked bleak for the Cowboys late in the third quarter. Trailing 17-7, Chelf was intercepted by Braylon Webb. However, on the very next play, Missouri had trouble with the snap and Oklahoma State recovered the fumble at the Tigers 33-yard line. Less than a minute later, Chelf responded with a 21-yard touchdown pass to Jhajuan Seals and the Cowboys were within three.

Momentum was starting to shift. OSU tied the game at 17-17 on Ben Grogan's 25-yard field goal to start the fourth quarter and open the floodgates for both teams. Josey answered with a 25-yard scoring run for a 24-17 Missouri lead, only to see Chelf respond with a 23-yard touchdown run of his own to tie things back up. Mizzou's Andrew Baggett tacked on a 46-yard field goal to put the Tigers back in front, 27-24, but the Cowboys countered with a 75-yard drive that was capped by Desmond Roland's 2-yard scoring plunge to give OSU its only lead of the game at 31-27.

That's where the Cowboys' comeback hopes finally came to an end. Josey's 16-yard dash into the end zone with 3:08 on the clock pushed Mizzou back in front, followed by Ray's defensive heroics that secured the win, 41-31. It was Missouri's second victory in the AT&T Cotton Bowl in a span of six seasons.

Baylor was out to make a statement to the College Football Playoff committee.

The only problem: Michigan State came to play.

Connor Cook passed for 314 yards and two touchdowns and Jeremy Langford rushed for 162 yards and three touchdowns as Michigan State rallied from a 20-point deficit in the fourth quarter to top Baylor, 42-41, in the 79th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

Trailing the Bears 41-21 to begin the final period, Connor Cook connected with Josiah Price for an 8-yard touchdown pass with 12:09 to play to ignite the Michigan State comeback. The Spartans recovered the ensuing onside kick and MSU's hopes were running high. However, on the third play of the drive, Baylor linebacker Taylor Young intercepted a Cook pass at the Bears' 16 and rambled 37 yards with the return. Momentum appeared to have shifted back to Baylor, but the Michigan State defense held strong and soon gave its offense the ball back.

The clock was down to 9:15 when the Spartans began the drive that would cut the the Baylor lead to six. Starting from its 40-yard line, MSU drove 60 yards in nine plays for the score. Langford crashed over from the one for the touchdown with 4:55 remaining. Baylor's once commanding 20-point lead had been trimmed to a touchdown, 41-35.

The Bears responded and drove deep into Michigan State territory. Then came the game-changing play. When the Baylor drive stalled at the 27-yard line, Chris Callahan came on for a 43-yard field goal attempt. Defensive end Marcus Rush stepped up to block the kick and safety RJ Williamson grabbed the loose ball and set sail up the sideline for a 36-yard return to the Baylor 45.

The Spartans were back in business, although they were out of timeouts and just 1:05 was left to play in the game. But, Cook delivered under pressure. The first play went to receiver Keith Mumphrey for 18 yards to the Baylor 27. Then came three straight incompletions before Cook found Tony Lippett for a 17-yard gain on 4th-and 10. Lippett moved the football to the 10. Two more incompletions added to the drama. On third down, Cook connected with Mumphrey over the middle to tie the score on a 10-yard touchdown strike with just 17 seconds to go. Michael Geiger's PAT pushed the Spartans back in front for the first time since late in the first quarter, 42-41.

It was an amazing finish. Football fans around the country voted the 2015 Goodyear Cotton Bowl as the No. 1 game of the 2014 season.

Michigan State came into the contest allowing just 19.9 points per game. But, early on, the Spartans had no answer for Baylor's arsenal of weapons and fast-paced offense. The Bears ranked first in the country in total offense (581.3 ypg) and scoring offense (48.8 ppg).

Bryce Petty set a Cotton Bowl Classic record with 550 yards passing and three touchdowns while wide receivers KD Cannon and Casey Coleman combined for 347 yards receiving and three scores. Petty became the first Baylor quarterback to win a bowl MVP since Cody Carlson in 1985.

However, Michigan State's defense came up big when it mattered most, holding Baylor to minus-20 rushing yards for the game and zero points in the fourth quarter. After the Spartans regained the lead, Thomas Lawrence and Rush sacked Petty twice on Baylor's final possession and Riley Bullough came away with the game-sealing interception for the Spartans at the Baylor 20.

Michigan State finished the year 11-2, which tied for the second-most victories in school history. More importantly, the Spartans had put together back-to-back major bowl victories, defeating Stanford in the 100th Rose Bowl the previous season. Baylor ended the 2014 campaign at 11-2. The Spartans pushed their all-time mark against Baylor to 2-0 with their last victory over the Bears coming in 1968.

The road to Alabama's 16th national title went through Arlington and the 80th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

In the second year of the College Football Playoff, the Classic hosted a Playoff Semifinal and the matchup featured No. 3 Michigan State vs. No. 2 Alabama. Both teams were 12-1 and 7-1 in conference play. Prior to kickoff, many publications deemed this to be the top matchup of the entire bowl season.

The Spartans were back in familiar territory. Just one year before, Michigan State roared from behind in the fourth quarter to erase a 20-point deficit to knock off Baylor with just 17 seconds to play, 42-41.

However, in the Playoff Semifinal, there would be no such comeback.

Neither team could muster much offense in the opening quarter. The Spartans crossed mid-field once, reaching the Alabama 38, but a sack of quarterback Connor Cook ended the MSU drive at the Bama 48. The Tide never advanced past their own 39 yard line, and that was on Alabama's opening possession of the game.

The Crimson Tide began to flex their muscles midway through the second quarter, rolling 80 yards in just six plays for the first score of the game. Heisman Trophy winner Derrick Henry, the ninth Heisman winner to play in the Classic, barreled over from the one to push the Tide in front, 7-0.

Alabama scored again on its next possession, driving 43 yards for a 47-yard field goal by Adam Griffith. That score came with 1:25 to go in the first half. With little time on the clock, Michigan State quickly marched down field with hopes of cutting into the Alabama 10-0 lead. Moving from its 25-yard line, Cook guided the Spartans 63 yards before Alabama cornerback Cyrus Jones came up with the defensive play of the game, pulling down an interception at the one and then racing 21 yards back up field to end the Spartans' touchdown hopes.

Jones' oskie set the wheels in motion for the Crimson Tide. Alabama opened the second half by marching 75 yards in nine plays for a touchdown to push the lead to 17-0. The drive was capped by a six-yard scoring toss from quarterback Jake Coker to freshman receiver Calvin Ridley.

Alabama scored twice more in the third quarter. Jones returned a Michigan State punt 57 yards for a touchdown, and Coker and Ridley hooked up again with a 50-yard touchdown pass to totally blow the game open at 31-0. The vaunted Alabama defense held MSU to just 29 yards on the ground and 210 yards in the air.

The Tide's 21-point third quarter was the second highest on record in the Classic. Henry closed out the night's scoring midway through the fourth quarter with an 11-yard run on a quick three-play, 69-yard drive. Senior running back Kenyan Drake did most of the heavy lifting, breaking a 58-yard run to the MSU 11 to set up Henry's second score.

With the 38-0 victory, Alabama evened its all-time Cotton Bowl record to 4-4 and recorded the Classic's first shutout since 1963.

The Spartans never found an answer for Coker who went 25-30-0 through the air for 286 yards and two touchdowns. Coker's completion percentage of .833 was second only to the record of .917 set by Bobby Layne of Texas in 1946. Those numbers earned Coker the game's Outstanding Offensive Player honors, while Jones parlayed his first half pass interception and second half punt return into the Outstanding Defensive Player award.

From Arlington, Alabama rolled on to Glendale, Ariz., for the College Football Playoff Championship Game to defeat Clemson 45-40 to earn the Crimson Tide's 16th national title and their fourth in a span of seven seasons, all under Coach Nick Saban.

ATTENDANCE: 59,615

Arlington was new territory for both Western Michigan and Wisconsin. For the first time, the Broncos and Badgers traveled to North Texas to settle midwest bragging rights in the 81st Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic. Western Michigan brought a perfect 13-0 mark to AT&T Stadium and became the Classic's first undefeated team in 24 seasons. Wisconsin was 10-3 after advancing to the Big Ten Championship Game for the fourth time in six seasons. The Badgers checked in at No. 8 in the final College Football Playoff rankings. The Broncos were ranked 15th.

With head coach P.J. Fleck's leadership, the turnaround of the Western Michigan football program had been remarkable. The Broncos went 1-11 in Fleck's first year in 2013, and in four seasons he transformed Western Michigan into a Mid-American Conference powerhouse. His celebrated "Row The Boat" mantra motivated the Broncos to pull together and row in the same direction to make sure the boat does not veer off course.

Wisconsin was a solid program in the Big Ten. In two seasons under head coach Paul Chryst, the Badgers compiled an impressive 20-6 overall record. This was Wisconsin's sixth 10-win season in eight years and a victory over the Broncos would push the Badgers to the 11-victory mark for the second time in three seasons and the sixth time in school history. Chryst earned Big Ten Coach of the Year honors and became just the fourth coach ever in the conference to begin his career with consecutive 10-win seasons.

The Badgers opened the game in dominating fashion, taking the opening kickoff and marching 75 yards in 11 plays to jump to a 7-0 lead with Corey Clement's two-yard scoring run. The key play in the drive was a stunning one-handed circus catch by 6-6 tight end Troy Fumagalli, who had a way of making the difficult look easy. His 20-yard reception came on a third-and-13-play and moved Wisconsin to the Western Michigan 12 to set up the Badgers first touchdown. Wisconsin came right back on its next possession with an even longer drive of 88 yards to go up 14-0. This time it was Dare Ogunbowale punching it in from the one. Wisconsin controlled the clock and established the run game in the first quarter to eat up 11:16 on its two scoring possessions. Senior quarterback Bart Houston was equally as hard to stop through the air going 4-for-4 passing for 62 yards.

Western Michigan got on the board in the second quarter on its third possession of the game. Quarterback Zach Terrell, named in early December as college football's top scholar-athlete by the National Football Foundation, scored on a two-yard bootleg on third and goal at the 5:27 mark. The 16-play drive chewed up 8:45 off the clock and cut the lead to 14-7.

The potent Wisconsin offense scored again on its third consecutive possession of the afternoon. Following Houston's only incompleteness of the day, a dropped pass in the end zone, the Badgers turned to Andrew Endicott to kick a 30-yard field goal with 18 seconds to play in the half to push their advantage to 17-7.

Western Michigan became more assertive offensively in the third quarter. On the Broncos' opening possession, Terrell connected with All-America receiver Corey Davis for 17 yards to the Wisconsin 42, and two plays later Jarvion Franklin dashed 23 yards to the 13. Unable to advance past the Wisconsin 10, the Broncos called on Butch Hampton to boot a 27-yard field goal and trim the deficit to just seven points, 17-10.

This set the stage for an exciting fourth quarter. A Wisconsin punt pinned the Broncos on their three-yard line, and on the first play Terrell was picked off by linebacker T.J. Edwards at the Western Michigan 12. The Badgers quickly took advantage of the turnover as co-starting quarterback Alex Hornibrook connected with Fumagalli on an eight-yard touchdown pass on third down to boost the Badgers lead to 24-10.

Trailing by two touchdowns and time becoming a factor, Terrell and the Broncos responded with a 75-yard, 16-play march that resulted in an amazing 11-yard touchdown catch by Davis between two defenders. However, the downside of the drive was that it consumed nearly nine minutes and left Western Michigan trailing 24-16 with just 3:27 to play in the game. Wisconsin recovered the Broncos' subsequent onside kick and was able to wind down the clock thanks to Fumagalli's 26-yard catch on third and eight at the Western Michigan 20. The Badgers then used three rush plays to run out the clock and secure Wisconsin's third consecutive bowl victory.

Fumagalli and Edwards were named the game's outstanding players, and Houston tied the Classic's 71-year old record for the highest pass completion percentage of .917 set in 1946, connecting on 11-of-12 attempts.

Whenever conference champions tangle in postseason play it tends to grab attention. And, when the teams involved are Ohio State and Southern California, it makes for a matchup of mega proportions. These two college football bluebloods made the 83rd Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic a highly anticipated attraction. Both teams sported identical 11-2 records with lofty national rankings. The Buckeyes checked in at No. 5 in the final College Football Playoff rankings while the Trojans finished up the regular season at No. 8.

For the first time, Ohio State and Southern California clashed in a bowl game outside of their celebrated Rose Bowl skirmishes. The Classic would be their eighth bowl matchup against one another and their 24th meeting overall with the Trojans holding a 13-10-1 advantage in the series. USC had recorded seven consecutive victories over the Buckeyes, a streak that spanned 44 years.

While Southern California held the historical edge, Ohio State came to North Texas with something to prove. The Buckeyes had barely missed landing a berth in the national semifinals. And, it was J.T. Barrett, OSU's brilliant senior quarterback, who seized the moment offensively. Playing in his final collegiate game and just two hours away from his hometown of Wichita Falls, Barrett rushed for two touchdowns and threw for 114 yards to lead the Buckeyes to a compelling victory.

The Buckeye defense took control less than two minutes into the game. Southern California quarterback Sam Darnold had just connected with standout receiver Deontay Burnett for 16 yards and an apparent first down. That's when cornerback Kendall Sheffield unloaded on Burnett to force a fumble. Safety Damon Webb scooped up the loose football and rambled 20 yards to the USC 19.

It was the first of four costly turnovers for the Trojans and the Buckeyes were quick to capitalize. A nine-yard pass to Marcus Baugh moved OSU to the USC six, and freshman running back J.K. Dobbins carried for five more yards to the one. Barrett then cashed in for the touchdown to give Ohio State an early 7-0 lead with 12:25 on the clock.

Soon, the Buckeyes were on the move again. A Southern California punt pinned the Buckeyes on their eight-yard line. But, a key third-down pass from Barrett to receiver Austin Mack covered 33 yards and gave Ohio State room to breathe at the Buckeye 43. Barrett and Mack hooked up again two plays later for a 15-yard gain to the USC 40. The drive eventually stalled just inside the Trojan 10 as the opening period came to an end. On the first play of the second quarter, in came junior placekicker Sean Nuernberger to boot a 26-yard field goal and push the Buckeyes to a 10-0 advantage.

More fireworks erupted seconds later when Webb picked off Darnold on a first down pass and sprinted 23 yards to the end zone to pad the Ohio State lead at 17-0.

The Buckeyes' final score came on the heels of yet another fumble when Darnold was sacked by defensive end Tyquan Lewis after the Trojans marched 65 yards from their own 12 to the Ohio State 23. Linebacker Jerome Baker grabbed the loose ball and ran 13 yards before being hauled down at the Buckeyes' 41.

Barrett passed for 16 yards to Mike Weber out of the backfield to move inside Southern California territory and a facemask penalty tacked 15 more yards onto the play. The Buckeyes were back in scoring position at the 28. After calling timeout with 5:36 left to play in the half, Barrett raced 28 yards for his second touchdown of the game and Ohio State was well in command, 24-0.

USC finally got untracked with the recovery of a fumbled punt return at the Buckeye 15. Darnold, the first Trojan quarterback in history to pass for more than 4,000 yards in a single season, jumped on the turnover and fired a pass to tight end Daniel Imatorbhebhe at the one. Two plays later, tailback Ronald Jones scored to trim the Buckeye lead to 24-7.

Southern California fought back and played well in the second half, but by that point the damage had been done. Ohio State's suffocating defense continued to harass Darnold. The Trojans mounted one last drive in the game's final seven minutes only to see it stall at the Ohio State 18 with just 31 seconds to play.

Three years earlier, Ohio State had defeated Oregon 42-20 at AT&T Stadium to claim the first national title of the College Football Playoff era. Now, the Buckeyes added the Field Scovell Trophy to their collection and left Arlington with a resounding 24-7 victory over a longtime rival.

It took 84 years for the Goodyear Cotton Bowl to arrive at a matchup like this one. Two unbeaten teams with perfect regular-season records, no losses, no ties...No. 2 Clemson (13-0) vs. No. 3 Notre Dame (12-0).

The spotlight of the national semifinal was shining brightly on Arlington for the second time in three seasons. The winner would punch its ticket to Santa Clara, Calif., for a chance to play for college football's national championship the following week. The Tigers were making their fourth consecutive trip to the Playoff and had their sights squarely on collecting a second national championship in three seasons and their third in school history. A Notre Dame victory would put the Irish in position to win a 12th national title and their first since 1988.

Clemson was the clear favorite. The Tigers ranked in the top five nationally in scoring offense with 45.4 points per game, and in scoring defense allowing just 14.7 points. For the Irish to pull off an upset they had to play a near perfect game and not give up the big play defensively.

Clemson scored first midway through the opening quarter on a 40-yard field goal by Greg Huegel to capitalize on Clelin Ferrell's fumble recovery near midfield. Notre Dame answered quickly four minutes later, driving 66 yards for a 28-yard field goal from Justin Yoon.

The game was tied 3-3 after one quarter. The Tigers had gained only 45 yards in offense and the Irish seemed to be holding their own. But, containing Clemson's explosive nature could last for only so long. What had been a close game was about to be turned upside down. And, it didn't help that Notre Dame's All-America cornerback Julian Love was forced to the sideline with concussion symptoms in the first quarter.

Two freshmen, quarterback Trevor Lawrence and receiver Justyn Ross stepped up and immediately seized control of the game for Clemson, combining for two long touchdown plays. The first came on a 52-yard pass when Ross beat man-to-man coverage and broke a tackle down the sideline two minutes into the second quarter. Lawrence and Ross struck again just before halftime on a 42-yard pass play that pushed the Tigers to a 16-3 advantage with 1:44 to play. At that point, the Tigers could have been content to run out the clock, but two Irish penalties, one for offsides and the other for roughing the passer, helped speed things up for Clemson on its next possession.

Starting at its 20 and with 0:48 to go in the half, the big play of the drive was a 32-yard pass from Lawrence to veteran receiver Hunter Renfrow to the Notre Dame 34. Another 15 yards were tacked onto the play for the roughing call and suddenly the Tigers were presented with a golden opportunity for one last score. The ball was at the Notre Dame 19 and the clock was down to nine seconds. Clemson called timeout.

When play resumed, Lawrence dropped back and lofted a pass to sophomore Tee Higgins who was streaking along the boundary toward the goal line. Higgins made a one-handed, juggling catch as he fell into the corner of the end zone to expand the Clemson lead to 23-3. In the second quarter alone, Lawrence was 13-for-15 through the air for 229 yards and three touchdowns. Ross had five receptions in the quarter for 137 yards.

Clemson's final score of the game came late in the third quarter. Sophomore running back Travis Etienne broke loose up the middle and raced 62 yards down the sideline for the touchdown that pushed the Clemson lead to 30-3.

Defensively, Clemson dominated the line of scrimmage despite the loss of 350-pound nose tackle Dexter Lawrence who was one of three players suspended by the NCAA at the start of bowl week after testing positive for the banned substance Ostarine. End Austin Bryant earned Outstanding Defensive Player of the game honors with six tackles that included four solo stops, two sacks and three tackles for loss. Fellow defensive end Clelin Ferrell, tackle Christian Wilkins, the Campbell Trophy winner, and Albert Higgins, Lawrence's replacement, bottled up the Irish at every turn.

Trevor Lawrence was the overwhelming choice as the Outstanding Offensive Player. In just his 10th start for the Tigers, he amassed 327 yards passing and completed 27-of-39 attempts with no interceptions. Clemson chewed up 538 yards in total offense to more than double Notre Dame's 248.

It was a dominating performance by the Tigers. A week later, Clemson steamrolled Alabama 44-16 to win its second national title in three seasons and assert itself as college football's preeminent program, the first team in modern history to finish a season at 15-0.

At first glance, the 84th Goodyear Cotton Bowl seemed long on offense and a bit skimpy on defense. But, in the end, it was defense that ultimately won the game for Penn State.

The matchup featured the No. 10 Nittany Lions (10-2, 7-2 Big Ten) vs. No. 17 Memphis (12-1, 7-1 AAC). Penn State brought the nation's seventh best scoring defense to North Texas, limiting opponents to 14.1 points a game while the offense scored at a 34.3 clip.

Paying its first visit to the Cotton Bowl, Memphis made a living on big play offense. The American Athletic Conference champs were reeling off 40.4 points per game while averaging 480.7 yards in total offense to rank eighth and tenth nationally.

However, the Tigers came to North Texas with a new look. Ryan Silverfield was now in charge after stepping into the head coaching position in mid-December when previous coach Mike Norvell moved on to Florida State following the AAC Championship Game.

In contrast, Penn State's James Franklin was a coaching veteran. Since taking over in Happy Valley, Franklin guided the Nittany Lions to six consecutive bowl games and the Classic was Penn State's third New Year's Six bowl appearance in four seasons.

No one could have predicted these teams would erupt for a record 92 points or log the Classic's second-best total offense day with 1,071 yards. The Nittany Lions rode the wave of seven touchdowns to tie yet another record in posting a 53-39 victory.

Memphis got things rolling when placekicker Riley Patterson booted a 48-yard field goal on the Tigers' first possession. It was the first of six field goals for Patterson who set the NCAA's all-time bowl record. Patterson shook off a sprained ankle to account for 21 of the Tigers' 39 points to claim another Classic kicking record.

Penn State answered quickly when sophomore Journey Brown broke loose on a 32-yard touchdown run to put the Nittany Lions on the scoreboard for the first time at 7-3. Memphis held a 13-7 lead at the end of the first quarter. Then, the floodgates opened. In the second period, Penn State tallied 28 of its 35 first half points to erase two more longstanding Classic records.

Freshman running backs Noah Cain and Devyn Ford sent Penn State in front 21-13 with a pair of short-yardage runs. Brown then ripped off a 56-yard touchdown romp to expand the lead to 28-13.

Kenneth Gainwell, named college football's Freshman of the Year by the Football Writers, led the charge for Memphis on a one-yard TD run to trim the score back to eight. Penn State countered with its only scoring pass of the day, a four-yard completion from Sean Clifford to Jahan Dotson in the final minute. Memphis responded when Patterson added his third field goal on the final play of the half. Penn State headed to the locker room with what seemed to be a comfortable 35-23 lead.

The scoring rampage continued in the third quarter. The Tigers posted back-to-back scores, a one-yard run by quarterback Brady White and a Classic record 51-yard field goal by Patterson to chop the lead to two, 35-33.

The two teams then traded field goals to bring the score to 38-36. At last, it was time for defense to rise to the occasion in the final minute of the quarter. The big play was delivered by the Nittany Lions' All-America sophomore linebacker Micah Parsons. His target was White, who to this point was enjoying a stellar game that ended with 454 passing yards, the second-best aerial performance ever in the Classic.

Attacking from the edge, Parsons jumped on White and wouldn't let go. In desperation, the Memphis quarterback flipped the ball away and into the hands of safety Garrett Taylor who dashed into the end zone with a 15-yard interception return. In a flash, the tenuous two-point Penn State lead jumped to nine, 45-36.

Memphis continued to fight. Patterson booted his record-setting sixth field goal, a 42-yard kick early in the fourth quarter. The Nittany Lions then sealed the game on Cain's one-yard burst into the end zone to push the score to 53-39 with 6:31 to play.

In a game fueled by high-octane offenses, it was the aggressive play of Parsons that made the difference. He won Outstanding Defensive Player honors after collecting 14 tackles, three stops for minus-27 yards, two sacks, two forced fumbles, broke up two pass attempts, and had one quarterback hurry...the play which resulted in the interception that turned the tide toward Penn State. Brown earned the game's Outstanding Offensive Player award with 202 rushing yards and two scores. Cain was next in line for the Lions with 92 yards and two touchdowns.

Penn State certainly made the most of its first visit to the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic in 45 years.

The 85th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic truly was like no other. This primetime matchup was staged amid strict health protocols during the COVID-19 pandemic and in front of a reduced crowd of 17,323 fans at AT&T Stadium. Traditional bowl week activities were suspended as teams spent less than 48 hours in North Texas leading up to kickoff.

But once No. 6 Oklahoma and No. 7 Florida hit the field, things quickly fell back into place. As expected, offense ruled the day. The Sooners and Gators rang up 75 points and erased a College Football Playoff record for total offense with 1,205 yards. Most of those imposing statistics belonged to the Sooners in a resounding 55-20 victory.

Entering the 85th Classic, both teams were fresh from conference championship game appearances. Oklahoma knocked off Iowa State 27-21 in the Big 12 title game just 11 days earlier at AT&T Stadium. Florida, the SEC's Eastern Division champs, lost to No. 1 Alabama in a 52-46 slugfest in Atlanta.

However, the Gators were now a different team from the one that battled the Crimson Tide. Twenty-five players, including Florida's top four receivers, had opted out of competition or tested positive to the coronavirus and would not play in the game.

Oklahoma struck quickly, taking the opening kickoff and marching 79 yards for the first score of the night. Heralded redshirt-freshman Spencer Rattler connected with fellow freshman receiver Marvin Mims on a 27-yard touchdown pass to take a 7-0 lead.

The Gators' first possession ended with an interception. OU nickelback Tre Norwood picked off Florida quarterback Kyle Trask's second pass of the night and then strolled down the sideline untouched on a 45-yard return for the Sooners' second score. Norwood, who also recorded two tackles to go along with his pick-six, earned Felix McKnight Outstanding Defensive Player honors.

Trask, the nation's top passer and a leading Heisman Trophy contender, tried to rally the Gators from a 14-0 deficit but a tipped pass resulted in another turnover, his second of three interceptions in the opening period. Linebacker Brian Asamoah returned the errant pass 29 yards to the Sooners' 45. Gabe Brkic booted a 43-yard field goal to make it 17-0 before the game had reached the halfway point of the opening quarter.

Florida then launched into a quarterback rotation between Trask and sophomore Emory Jones. By the end of the quarter the Gators had driven to the OU three-yard line. That's where the drive stalled, and Evan McPherson was called on to post the Gators' first points of the game with a 21-yard field goal.

In the second quarter, Trask and Jones continued to alternate and the duo guided Florida to its first touchdown when Jones punched it in from the one to chop the OU lead to 17-10. A fumble recovery at the Oklahoma 29 put the Gators in position to tie the game. However, Sooner linebacker Nik Bonitto came up with key, back-to-back defensive plays. He sacked Trask for a loss of three yards to the OU 17 and followed by forcing an incompleteness. The Gators had to settle for another McPherson field goal, this one from 35 yards out with 6:05 to play in the half.

It was now a 17-13 game, but from that point forward the night belonged to Oklahoma as the Sooners reeled off five TDs and a field goal. Rattler came out swinging. He threw a 36-yard touchdown strike to Theo Wease and then capped a 60-yard drive on OU's next possession with a one-yard run to push the Sooners into a commanding position at halftime, 31-13.

Oklahoma tacked on 10 points in the third quarter when Brkic added a 20-yard field goal and Rhamondre Stevenson, the Classic's J. Curtis Sanford Outstanding Offensive Player, broke loose on a 15-yard touchdown run. Stevenson launched the 87-yard drive with a 50-yard gallop that moved the Sooners from their own 13 to the Florida 37.

OU held a 41-13 lead at the start of the fourth quarter. Yet, there was more to come. Rattler hit Charleston Rambo on a 20-yard touchdown pass and running back Marcus Major ran 46 yards for the Sooners' final TD that pushed the score to 55-13. Anthony Richardson, the third Florida quarterback to see action in the game, connected with Pouncey Jordan on a 27-yard pass that brought the night's scoring rampage to an end, 55-20.

OU's Stevenson finished with 186 yards on 18 carries and one touchdown while Rattler accounted for four touchdowns, three of them through the air. OU scored seven touchdowns, rolled up 435 yards rushing and 684 yards in total offense, averaged 10.9 yards per rush and 10.5 yards per play. Each mark was a Cotton Bowl Classic record.

Eight consecutive victories for OU and a 55-point effort to wrap up the season, the most points ever scored by the Sooners in postseason play, put a positive punctuation mark on a challenging 2020 college football season.

The 86th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic was long on firsts.

For starters, fourth-ranked Cincinnati (13-0, 8-0 AAC) became the first member of a Group of Five conference to earn its way into the four-team College Football Playoff. The Bearcats, the American Athletic Conference champions, were college football's last remaining undefeated squad.

No. 1 Alabams (12-1, 7-1 SEC) was the first top-ranked team to play in the Classic in 44 years dating back to 1978. The Southeastern Conference champion earned the right to compete in a College Football Playoff Semifinal for the sixth time in eight seasons. And college football's premier head coach Nick Saban was back in the Classic for the third time. His last appearance in December 2015 led to a national championship. He was in familiar territory.

Alabama sophomore Bryce Young added to the Classic's legacy of decorated quarterbacks. Young became the tenth Heisman Trophy winner to play in the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic in the same season of earning the prestigious honor. Spearheading the Crimson Tide defense was sophomore linebacker Will Anderson Jr. who won the Football Writers Association of America (FWAA) Bronko Nagurski Award as college football's Outstanding Defensive Player.

The list of award winners didn't stop there. Walking the opposite sideline was Cincinnati head coach Luke Fickell, the Eddie Robinson Coach of the Year. Fickell became the first recipient of the FWAA honor since 1974 to coach in the Classic during the same season he won the award.

Twice named AAC Player of the Year, Desmond Ridder was the Bearcats' driving force offensively. A four-year starter at quarterback, Ridder had delivered 30 touchdown passes during the 2021 season, one shy of the school record. Cincinnati also featured the nation's top cornerback tandem in senior Coby Bryant and junior Ahmad "Sauce" Gardner. Bryant won the Jim Thorpe Award as the nation's best defensive back. Gardner would become the third selection in the NFL Draft.

Expectations were riding high for both teams entering the game. The question was could Cincinnati make a statement in the CFP Semifinals by knocking off the defending national champions to reach the CFP Championship Game?

For all intents and purposes, Alabama answered that question on its first possession, setting the tone by running the football on the first 10 plays of the game. Bama finally went to the air on the 11th play of the 75-yard drive when Young tossed an eight-yard touchdown pass to Slade Bolden for a 7-0 lead.

Fifth-year senior Brian Robinson Jr. shouldered the load offensively for the Crimson Tide. Robinson accounted for 37 of the Tide's 75 yards on the opening march. By the end of the day, Robinson would rush for a career-high 204 yards, averaged 7.8 yards per carry on 26 attempts, and was the clear choice for the J. Curtis Sanford Outstanding Player Award in the 27-6 Crimson Tide victory.

The Bearcats responded to the Alabama touchdown with a long drive of their own to the Crimson Tide's nine-yard line. Ridder directed Cincinnati's 13-play march with five pass completions. However, a loss of six yards on third down forced the Bearcats to settle for a 33-yard field goal by Cole Smith.

After Cincinnati gained 60 yards on its first drive, the Bearcats gained just 16 yards the rest of the half.

Alabama began the second quarter with a 26-yard field goal by Will Reichard for a 10-3 lead. Then, Young connected with wideout Ja'Corey Brooks for a 44-yard touchdown strike late in the half for a 17-3 lead at intermission.

Alabama outgained Cincinnati in the first half - 302 yards to 76 - and held a 15-5 edge in first downs. The Crimson Tide rushed for 172 yards in the first two quarters while averaging 6.9 yards per carry.

Cincinnati opened the second half determined to change the script, but the Bearcats' drive stalled at the Alabama 19. The resulting field goal momentarily trimmed Alabama's advantage to 17-6. The Bearcats next two possession went nowhere, and Alabama took a three-score lead, 24-6, with 13:52 to play in the final quarter when Young found tight end Cameron Latu on a nine-yard touchdown pass to cap another long scoring drive, this one covering 70 yards.

Cincinnati drove to the Alabama 22 only to have their hopes dashed when Anderson sacked Ridder on fourth down. The Crimson Tide then drove for their final score of the game on Reichard's 43-yard field goal with 6:20 left to play.

Alabama's offense totaled 482 yards, including 301 on the ground. Defensively, the Crimson Tide did not allow a touchdown in holding Cincinnati to 218 yards. Robinson owned the AT&T Stadium dance floor with his 204-yard effort, the fifth highest in Classic history, while Anderson was just as dominating with two sacks and six total tackles to earn Felix McKnight Outstanding Defensive Player honors.

The win marked the Crimson Tide's fifth victory in the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic and kept Saban's squad perfect (6-0) in games played at AT&T Stadium.

Football fans will be talking about the 87th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic for years to come.

The reasons are many. First is the manner in which No. 16 Tulane overcame a 15-point deficit with less than five minutes to play to pull off a stunning 46-45 upset of 10th-ranked Southern California. Michael Pratt, the Green Wave's unflappable junior quarterback, connected with freshman tight end Alex Bauman on a six-yard touchdown pass with just nine seconds on the clock for the game-winning score.

With its victory, Tulane established a major college milestone for the biggest single-season turnaround in NCAA Football Bowl Subdivision history. It came a year after the Green Wave finished 2-10. Head coach Willie Fritz' 2022 squad then roared to a 12-2 season for an eye-popping 10-game improvement.

The upset of the Trojans proved to be the perfect ending for a team that captured the American Athletic Conference championship (7-1 in league play) and earned the university's first appearance in a New Year's Six bowl since the 1940 Sugar Bowl. When all was said and done, the Green Wave climbed to ninth in the final Associated Press poll.

And, then there was the spectacular play of Southern California sophomore quarterback Caleb Williams, the 11th Heisman Trophy winner to play in the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic and the second in consecutive years.

After transferring from Oklahoma, Williams guided USC to an 11-3 season (8-1 in the Pac-12) and narrowly missed landing a berth in the College Football Playoff. The arrival of Williams along with former OU head coach Lincoln Riley quickly restored the Trojans' standing among the nation's elite programs.

Williams tossed five touchdown passes against Tulane to establish a Cotton Bowl Classic scoring record while throwing for 462 yards. He went 37-52-1 for the day to register the Classic's most completions and the second-highest number of passing yards on record.

The dizzying rally by Tulane at the conclusion of the game was a far cry from the way the day started when Southern California scored on its first two possessions. Williams guided the Trojans on a 17-play drive that produced three third-down conversions and one on fourth down. The 75-yard march ended when the Heisman winner tossed his first touchdown on a quick screen to sophomore wide receiver Michael Jackson III.

Williams followed with a 95-yard drive that culminated on a three-yard sprint-out pass to receiver Terrell Bynum to increase the USC lead to 14-0 with 12:33 to go in the half.

At that point, Tulane had possessed the ball just once. But it wouldn't be long before the Green Wave came alive. Junior running back Tyjae Spears served as Tulane's workhorse rushing for 205 yards and four touchdowns during the afternoon to tie a Classic scoring record. However, Spears' fumble at the 10:46 mark of the fourth quarter led to a USC field goal that seemingly put the game out of reach for the Trojans at 45-30.

Yet, Tulane refused to go away, and the Green Wave unleashed their awe-inspiring comeback with 4:23 to play in the game. Pratt engineered two long touchdown drives and was aided by a safety that put Tulane in position to win the game.

The first drive took just two plays to cover 63 yards. A brilliant 59-yard catch and run to the USC four by senior receiver Duece Watts set up Spears' fourth touchdown run that trimmed the margin to eight, 45-37.

Then came a crucial mistake in the kicking game that spelled doom for the Trojans. Jackson fumbled the ensuing kickoff out of bounds to pin Southern California on its one-yard line. Two plays after the muffed kickoff return, Tulane junior defensive tackle Patrick Jenkins crashed through the line to smother Trojan senior running back Austin Jones for a safety.

It was now a six-point game, 45-39. Pratt took the free kick at his 34-yard line and launched the winning drive. The clock read 3:13.

Pratt converted a dramatic fourth-and-10 play with a 24-yard completion to Bauman at the Trojans' 30. He then hit Watts with a 24-yard strike to the six. The clock stopped on the first-down play at 18 seconds. Pratt again looked for Bauman on the right boundary but the pass fell incomplete.

Pratt went right back to his tight end, this time throwing into the end zone. Linebacker Eric Gentry was in perfect position for the Trojans. Bauman made the catch but bobbled the football as he and Gentry fell to the ground. Officials ruled the pass incomplete, but replay reviews confirmed that Bauman had maintained possession and the football never touched the ground.

Just nine seconds remained on the clock as redshirt senior placekicker Valentino Ambrosio booted home the all-important PAT to put the Green Wave in front for the first time and ultimately clinch the 46-45 victory. Pandemonium erupted along the Tulane sideline as USC looked on in disbelief.

Tulane's Spears earned the J. Curtis Sanford Outstanding Offensive Player Award after putting together a solid rushing day to become just the eighth player in Classic history to top the 200-yard mark. Green Wave junior linebacker Dorian Williams collected the Felix R. McKnight Outstanding Defensive Player Award with an impressive 17-tackle performance, nine of them unassisted stops.

IT HAPPENED LAST YEAR...

Two years after leading Oklahoma to victory over Florida, Lincoln Riley made his return to the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic as the head coach of Southern California. In one season, Riley reversed the Trojans' fortunes from 4-8 to 11-2 and narrowly missed a berth into the College Football Playoff.

Tulane head coach Willie Fritz engineered the biggest turnaround in major college football history by springing a 46-45 upset of the Trojans. A year after going 2-10, Fritz and his coaching staff transformed the Green Wave program with a 12-2 finish for a 10-game improvement.

Caleb Williams put on an aerial show for Southern California throwing five touchdown passes to shatter the Classic's longstanding scoring record. With Williams at the helm, the Trojans rang up touchdown drives of 97, 95 and 75 yards.

Tulane senior linebacker Dorian Williams saved his best performance for last. Williams made 17 tackles, nine of them unassisted, for the third highest number of stops ever recorded in a College Football Playoff New Year's Six game.

Quarterback Michael Pratt was the catalyst to the Green Wave's success in 2022 by throwing 25 touchdowns and 2,775 yards. Against Southern California, the gritty competitor went 8-17-0 through the air for 234 yards and two touchdowns.

Michael Jackson III put Southern California on the scoreboard first with a nine-yard touchdown pass from Caleb Williams. Jackson's scoring play ended a 17-play, 75-yard drive to open the game and put USC in the lead, 7-0. The sophomore receiver made four receptions during the afternoon for 31 yards. He was one of 10 different receivers to catch a pass for the Trojans.

Tulane tied the score at 14-14 in the second quarter with an 87-yard touchdown pass to Jha'Quan Jackson from Michael Pratt. Southern California had jumped out to a two touchdown lead before the Green Wave closed the gap with back-to-back scoring drives. Jackson's catch tied Syracuse's Ernie Davis for the longest pass reception in Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic history.

IT HAPPENED LAST YEAR...

Raleek Brown ran 39 yards for a touchdown late in the second quarter to give the Trojans a 21-14 lead. The freshman running back rushed for 61 yards on six attempts, caught two passes for 24 yards and returned four kickoffs for 67 yards.

Tulane junior running back Tjuae Spears dashed four yards for a touchdown with 4:07 to play to cut the Trojan lead to eight, 45-37. It was his fourth score of the day. Spears rushed for 205 yards on 17 carries and averaged 12.5 yards per play.

Brenden Rice recorded career highs with six receptions for 174 yards and two touchdowns. His longest catch covered 74 yards and put the Trojans in scoring position late in the third quarter. Three plays later his 19-yard touchdown play stretched the lead to 35-24.

Senior Duce Watts put the wheels in motion for the Green Wave to win the game with two crucial receptions. His 59-yard catch and run to the USC four led to a touchdown that cut the lead to eight. On Tulane's next possession, Watts' 24-yard catch at the Trojan six led to the game-winning play.

A muffed kickoff return following Tjuae Spears' touchdown run pinned Southern California on its one-yard line. Two plays later, Tulane defensive tackle Patrick Jenkins crashed through the line to tackle Trojan running back Austin Jones for a safety. The Green Wave was ready to strike, trailing by just six points.

Michael Pratt led Tulane on a 12-play, 66-yard scoring march to win the game. His six-yard touchdown pass to tight end Alex Bauman with nine seconds on the clock was bobbled at first and ruled an incomplection. On further review the call was overturned and the catch stood. Valentino Ambrosio then booted the PAT to give the Green Wave a stunning 46-45 victory.

Pandemonium erupted around AT&T Stadium when officials reversed their on-field ruling and signaled touchdown for the Green Wave. Players and fans alike were overcome with joy as the final seconds ticked off the clock. Tulane's amazing finish ranked among the most memorable moments ever recorded in the 87-year history of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

GOODYEAR COTTON BOWL HISTORY

WALLY TRIPLETT & DENNIE HOGGARD

Seventy-five years ago, Penn State's Wally Triplett and Dennie Hoggard changed college football forever in the state of Texas. As African American student-athletes playing for the Nittany Lions, these two men knocked down the color barrier in Texas by integrating the 1948 Cotton Bowl Classic. Penn State was asked to consider leaving the two Black players at home, but their teammates rallied behind them and said, 'We are Penn State, there will be no meetings.' Not only did Triplett and Hoggard play against SMU, but they made history. The game ended in a 13-13 tie, yet the score was of little importance. Triplett, Hoggard and Penn State had taken a stand that New Year's Day for a more just society. On Nov. 18, 2023, the Cotton Bowl Foundation and Cotton Bowl Athletic Association donated $75,000 to Penn State Athletics to help create the Wally Triplett-Cotton Bowl Football Player Development Program Endowment to enrich the experience of Nittany Lion football student-athletes for years to come.

CLASSIC LEGENDS

FOUNDER
J. Curtis Sanford

Not too many folks have first-hand memories of the first Cotton Bowl Classic, partly because it's been 87 years since January 1, 1937, and partly because only 17,000 attended the matchup between TCU and Marquette in Fair Park Stadium. But, it was a perfect beginning for what has become an age-old classic. The first Cotton Bowl Classic featured the nation's top two passers, Sammy Baugh of TCU and Buzz Buiuid of Marquette. The Frogs won that one, 16-6.

The idea for a post-season football classic belonged to J. Curtis Sanford, a Dallas oilman and entrepreneur who promoted that first game as a private enterprise and covered expenses with $6,000 out of his own pocket. With an economic depression still gripping the country, and tremors of global unrest becoming more apparent, Mr. Sanford's dream of a Texas sports spectacle was deemed unrealistic by many observers.

Time has vindicated Mr. Sanford's vision. It took a few years to gain momentum, and it took a tie-in with the Southwest Conference to assure future success. The 1941 game, an outstanding contest between Texas A&M and Fordham, was the first Classic sponsored by the SWC, and the first in a long line of sellouts. A then capacity crowd of 45,507 watched the Aggies squeeze out a 13-12 victory.

When the Classic's 55-year partnership with the SWC dissolved in 1995, a new arrangement was established for three seasons with the Big 12 Conference, the Pacific-10 Conference and Western Athletic Conference. From 1999 to 2014, the game's conference alignment featured a Big 12 vs. Southeastern Conference matchup.

With the 2015 game, the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic joined the College Football Playoff as one of six bowl games that rotate the national semifinals over a 12-year period. ESPN became the new television home of the Classic and provides an increased global presence across its extensive family of networks and digital platforms.

The 88th Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic marks the 15th consecutive year the game has been played at AT&T Stadium in Arlington.

The honor role of gridiron greats who have appeared in the Classic includes such standouts as: Joe Montana, Troy Aikman, Bo Jackson, Doug Flutie, Earl Campbell, Bart Starr, Joe Theismann, Eric Dickerson, Roger Staubach, Doak Walker, Jim Brown, Kenny Stabler, Tim Brown, Mike Singletary, Lydell Mitchell, Dan Marino, Dicky Maegle, Sammy Baugh, Byron "Whizzer" White, James Street, Keyshawn Johnson, Jim Swink, Lance Alworth, Davey O'Brien, Jerry Sisemore, Bob Lilly, Norm Van Brocklin, Bobby Layne, John Kimbrough, Tommy Nobis, Duke Carlisle, Ernie Davis, Hank Lauricella, Ricky Williams, Eli Manning, Johnny Manziel, Derrick Henry, Nick Bosa, Trevor Lawrence, Micah Parsons and Bryce Young.

It's a list that reads like a Who's Who of college football, and those are just a few of the many outstanding players who have etched their names into the history and tradition of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

CLASSIC LEGENDS

MR. COTTON BOWL Field Scovell

For the better part of four decades, the name Field Scovell was tossed around press boxes and athletic offices as reverently and with as much frequency as any of the great football legends of the 20th Century. Everyone knew and loved Field Scovell. After all, he was the consummate public relations man and the patriarch of the Dallas sporting community. His famous "Howdy, Podner" greeting, his spontaneous one-liners and the crunch of his handshake opened countless doors for the City of Dallas. Mr. Scovell combined an athletic background with his magnetic personality and a keen sense of humor that many said would make Bob Hope envious. And, he blended it all together in his job as "Mr. Cotton Bowl."

Born in Wichita Falls on March 1, 1907, and raised in Dallas from the age of 10, the name Field Scovell first found its way into print in the "Roaring 20s" as an All-City and All-State end with the North Dallas High School Bulldogs. Upon graduation, Mr. Scovell attended Texas A&M and played football for three seasons under legendary coach D.X. Bible before the stock market crash of 1929 sent him into the job market during the Great Depression.

His relationship with the Cotton Bowl Classic began in the mid-1950s when he was appointed to serve on the game's entertainment committee. In 1963, he was invited to join Felix McKnight as the Classic's Co-Chairman of Team Selection.

Ten years later, he was elected CBAA Chairman and when his two-year term expired, Mr. Scovell assumed the role of Team Selection Chairman, a post he held from 1975 to 1992. Mr. Cotton Bowl never missed a trick in wooing prospective coaches, athletic directors, presidents and influential alumni to Dallas. From memory he could recite birthdays, favorite foods and any other tidbit of information that might prove beneficial to the Cotton Bowl Classic.

His endless hours of travel, letter writing, telephone conversations and entertaining were a labor of love for Mr. Scovell and his family. Nothing was too much effort if it helped his hometown and the Cotton Bowl Classic gain a competitive advantage. It was another great example of the patented "Scovell Touch."

"I'm in debt to this city, and I have this great fear that I won't live long enough to pay it back," he often said. "I owe a lot of folks. When I came to this town, people gave me opportunities. I feel so indebted to this town. I think it's the greatest city in the world. I'm very biased. I know that. But, I don't plan to change."

Fortunately, he never changed. Mr. Scovell left his mark on everything he touched. Today, the Field Scovell Foundation awards scholarships in his name to deserving high school students throughout the North Texas region. And, every year his enduring legacy is honored by the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic when the championship team is awarded the Field Scovell Trophy.

COTTON BOWL PIONEER Felix McKnight

In the beginning there were two individuals whose combined efforts created one of college football's greatest traditions... the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic. These two men who plotted strategy way back in 1936 and put the wheels in motion for the bowl game's grand debut on January 1, 1937 were J. Curtis Sanford and Felix R. McKnight.

At the tender age of 25, Mr. McKnight was the sports editor of the Dallas bureau of the Associated Press when he had an assignment to go over to the Adolphus Hotel and interview a brazen promoter named Sanford.

Back in the newsroom, McKnight found a hundred dollar bill in his coat pocket, about three weeks wire service pay. He gave the money back, but Sanford was able to get McKnight to buy into his dream of bringing a "football extravaganza" to Big D.

The rest is history. Mr. McKnight was one of the guiding forces behind the Classic's rise to prominence. No other individual has served the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association in as many key roles as this highly respected newspaperman.

He was there from the start and through the years his duties ranged from organizing entertainment and special events, team and player awards, radio and television negotiations, and media and community relations.

Mr. McKnight's best-known work came in team selection, a committee he chaired for 31 years. No job was too big or too small for Felix McKnight. His goal was always the same – to promote the City of Dallas and the Classic.

One of Mr. McKnight's biggest contributions may have been his most simple task - convincing a childhood friend to assist him with the bowl's entertainment. That was Field Scovell, who later became known as Mr. Cotton Bowl. McKnight and Scovell went on to become a powerful tandem in the college football world as the CBAA's Co-Chairmen of Team Selection.

Scovell and McKnight were responsible for courting the nation's top teams, including a heralded Navy squad in 1958 and again in 1964 when the Midshipmen were led by Hesiman Trophy winner Roger Staubach. However, their biggest success may have come when Notre Dame agreed to play unbeaten and top-ranked Texas in the 1970 Classic after a 45-year post-season bowl hiatus.

Considered by many as the dean of Dallas newspaper journalists, Mr. McKnight's enormous contributions to the city encompassed much more than reporting or editing big stories. He was intimately involved in making the Goodyear Cotton Bowl what it is today – a Classic.

MAN OF INTEGRITY Dan Petty

Dan Petty grew up during the 1950s in the East Texas town of Texarkana, in a state where the game of football was a way of life. Like most every other schoolboy, he had a strong desire to play and excel in the sport that he quickly grew to love. Mr. Petty carried that same enthusiasm into adulthood.

By day, he served as President of the North Texas Commission, a non-profit organization that promoted business opportunities for the region throughout the world. But, when the workday was done, his thoughts quickly returned to his long-time passion of college football.

Mr. Petty enjoyed a unique relationship with the Cotton Bowl Classic, one that spanned for more than five decades. His first brush with the game took place at the 1960 Classic as a member of the Texas Longhorns team that battled Syracuse.

After graduating from the University of Texas with a degree in civil engineering, he went on to earn three master's degrees during his lifetime...one in public affairs, the second in governmental administration, and the third in electronic commerce management.

In 1980, Mr. Petty was invited to serve on the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association's management committee as an institutional director for his alma mater. From there, his responsibilities with the bowl expanded as he worked his way through the chain of command to become Chairman in 1987-88.

When his two-year chairmanship came to an end, Mr. Petty directed his energies toward the team selection committee, a group charged with the responsibility of selecting Cotton Bowl Classic participants. In 1997, he was elevated to the role of Chairman of Team Selection, a position he held for 10 years.

Cut from the same cloth of Cotton Bowl legends J. Curtis Sanford, Field Scovell and Felix McKnight, Mr. Petty was a man of integrity whose heart always led him to do the right thing. He opened every meeting by offering a bit of sage advice to his fellow committee members. "It's time to take off your school hat and time to put on your Cotton Bowl hat."

No matter how difficult a certain decision might have been in the team selection process, he always held firm and was fair to all. Coaches and athletic directors from across the country knew that the word and handshake of Dan Petty was golden.

Mr. Petty passed away in 2011, but his legacy lives on through higher education. Each year a deserving student-athlete is selected from the two universities competing in the Classic. Both are presented the Dan S. Petty Scholar-Athlete Award in recognition of excellence in academics, athletics and character. This prestigious and coveted honor is the crowning achievement for student-athletes participating in the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic.

Dan Petty was quite a guy and a mentor to everyone lucky enough to make his acquaintance. Thanks to him, we all have a special hat to wear.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS / PRESIDENTS

1940-1952: Under the administrative leadership of Dan D. Rogers, the Cotton Bowl Classic rose to national prominence. Rogers developed a relationship with the Southwest Conference and starting in 1941 its champion served as the bowl's host team. The Classic flourished and became one of college football's most celebrated postseason events.

1970-1978: Wilbur Evans became the first full-time executive director of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association prior to the 1970 Classic. It didn't take him long to command a presence in college football that opened many doors for the CBAA. During his watch, the Cotton Bowl Classic staged three games that impacted the national championship.

1979-1992: Jim "Hoss" Brock ruled the roost of college football for 14 Cotton Bowl Classics. The bowl industry's premier public relations man, Hoss was literally on a first-name basis with the rest of the world. The master of working his way through a press box, Texas hospitality was his chief commodity and nobody did a better job of selling it than the Hoss.

1993-Present: Rick Baker is the dean of college football bowl executives. The CBAA's longest tenured leader, he worked tirelessly with his staff and executive committee to regain the Cotton Bowl Classic's footing among the elite of postseason bowls. The move to AT&T Stadium in 2010 ultimately led to a berth in the College Football Playoff on August 24, 2013.

KILGORE COLLEGE RANGERETTES

There's no shortage of history and tradition whenever the Kilgore College Rangerettes and the the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic get together. For over a half-century, these two American icons have shared a remarkable and colorful relationship.

Gussie Nell Davis founded her legendary group of performers in 1940, three years after the inaugural Cotton Bowl Classic. Dr. B.E. Masters, the first dean of Kilgore College, asked Miss Davis to create a group of entertainers to keep fans glued to their seats during halftime of the school's football games. Obviously, she succeeded in grand style.

This unique and special partnership between the Rangerettes and the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic began on New Year's Day, 1949. Two years later at the 1951 game, the Rangerettes launched their streak of consecutive performances that will reach 74 on Dec. 29, 2023.

Christened as "The Sweethearts of the Gridiron" by football legend Red Grange following their performance at the 1954 College Football All-Star Game in Chicago, the girls with the distinctive style and highly synchronized choreography were the first to bring "show business" to the game of football. Dancing ability, projection, precision and the patented high kick are hallmarks of the Kilgore Rangerettes.

In recognition of the Rangerettes' immense contributions to the pageantry of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic, Miss Davis was honored on May 25, 1999, with her induction into the Cotton Bowl Classic Hall of Fame.

Only three women have served as directors of the organization. Miss Davis' tenure continued until her retirement in 1979. She was followed by Deana Bolton Covin, who held the director's post until 1993 when Dana Brown Blair, a former Rangerette Lieutenant, was promoted to the leadership position.

Through the years, the Rangerettes have truly become "world famous," performing at many high-profile events such as presidential inaugurations and traveling to such faraway places as Italy, Japan, France, the United Kingdom, China, Venezuela and the Soviet Union. In December, 2021, the Rangerettes helped America commemorate the 80th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor in Honolulu.

In the fall of 2002, the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association established a scholarship at Kilgore College for a deserving Rangerette each year. The Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic is proud of its longtime association with the Rangerettes and Kilgore College. After all, the Classic wouldn't be the same without them...they're a Texas tradition!

- 1971 • One year later, it was Notre Dame's turn to play the spoiler's role, ruining the Longhorn's national championship dreams with a 24-11 surprise. The Irish victory snapped Texas' 30-game winning streak. Ironically, 14 years earlier the Irish also were the ones responsible for breaking Oklahoma's record 47-game victory streak. 1948: Cotton Bowl Stadium - known far and wide as "The House That Doak Built" - received a facelift in the late 1940s with the addition of upper decks on both sides of the stadium. To satisfy the growing demand to watch Doak Walker, SMU's great All-America halfback and Heisman Trophy winner, a total of 21,231 seats and a new press box for the nation's media were added in 1948. When work was completed a year later in 1949, capacity rose to 75,504.

- 1979 • Notre Dame quarterback Joe Montana rallied his team from a 22-point fourth quarter deficit to tie the game at 34-34 on the final play of the contest. The Irish then called on Dallas native Joe Unis to add the extra point to down the Houston Cougars, 35-34.
- 1982 • Paul "Bear" Bryant made his last Cotton Bowl Classic appearance with the Alabama Crimson Tide and came to Dallas as college football's winningest coach. But, it was an unhappy visit, as Texas quarterback Robert Brewer rallied the Longhorns to a 14-12 victory.

- 1984 • Again, a possible national championship lay in the balance for Texas in the Classic. The Longhorns were ranked No. 2 behind top-ranked Nebraska which would fall later that evening in Miami. Texas seemed to have the game well in hand in the closing minutes leading 9-3, but a fumbled punt paved the way to Georgia's comeback for a 10-9 upset.
- 1985 • Doug Flutie became the fourth Heisman winner to play in the Cotton Bowl Classic. The game also marked the fourth appearance in nine years for Houston. The Cougars' Earl Allen raced 98 yards for the longest kickoff return in the game's history. Flutie passed for a record-tying three touchdowns to lead his Boston College Eagles to a 45-28 victory.

Auburn's Bo Jackson received most of the media attention prior to the game, but once the 50th annual Classic was underway, Texas A&M quarterback Kevin Murray stole the show. Murray passed for a record 292 yards and led the Aggies to a 36-16 triumph. The 1986 Cotton Bowl marked A&M's first appearance in the New Year's Day Classic in 18 years dating back to 1968.
- 1987 • Ohio State, co-champions of the Big Ten Conference, helped open a new era for the Cotton Bowl Classic. The Buckeyes became the first team ever from the Big Ten to play in the Classic. Ohio State turned five interceptions into a convincing 28-12 victory over Texas A&M.

2021: A total team effort was required to stage the College Football Playoff Semifinal at the 107th Rose Bowl Game presented by Capital One. When the COVID-19 pandemic intervened and forced the Tournament of Roses to make a difficult decision to move "The Granddaddy of Them All" from Pasadena to Arlington's AT&T Stadium, it took the work of hundreds of people to ensure a smooth transition within a two-week period. Following Alabama's 31-14 victory over Notre Dame, New Year's Day was celebrated when the staff of the Rose Bowl Game and the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic assembled at midfield for a family gathering and a toast to the evening's success.

2009: Moving vans arrived at AT&T Stadium on Thursday, July 9 to complete the CBAA's 18-mile journey from Dallas to Arlington. The Cotton Bowl Classic's new state-of-the-art home placed the game on solid footing and in position for future success.

2021: Bryce Young, the Classic's 10th Heisman Trophy winner, more than delivered in Alabama's 27-6 victory over Cincinnati in the College Football Playoff Semifinal. His three touchdown passes helped the Crimson Tide reach the national title game for the sixth time in eight seasons.

2023: For the first time since 1986, the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic showcased the Heisman Trophy winner in consecutive seasons. Southern California quarterback Caleb Williams set a Classic scoring record with five touchdown passes but lost in a shootout with Tulane, 46-45.

CLASSIC ALL-DECADE TEAMS

Since the inception of the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic, each game has produced some amazing performances. The most outstanding players, selected by a poll of the working press covering the game, make up the Classic's Honor Roll.

From this group, the Classic Committee has chosen All-Star teams representing each decade of Classic heroes. The eight teams chosen represent the periods ending in 1949, 1959, 1969, 1979, 1989, 1999, 2009 and 2019. A new team will be selected at the close of each 10-year period.

The lineman returned two years later in 1944 with Randolph Field, a San Antonio military installation, to earn MVP honors again.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1969-71: Fullback Steve Worster was the cornerstone of the Texas Wishbone. A tremendous short yardage rusher and a devastating blocker, Big Woo helped the Longhorns chew up 30 straight opponents and log three consecutive Cotton Bowl Classic appearances in the Longhorns' most celebrated era. In 1970, Worster ran for 155 yards on Notre Dame in a 21-17 victory that brought the national championship home to Texas.

1957: In what may have been his greatest college game, Jim Brown ran through, over and around TCU defenders in the 1957 Classic. Brown help rally Syracuse from an early 14-0 deficit and then paced a fourth-quarter comeback that fell just short in a 28-27 loss. He scored three TDs, rushed for 132 yards, recorded five tackles and booted two PATs. The measuring stick for all running backs begins and ends with the great Jim Brown.

1966/31st: Jerry LeVias, SMU's great wide receiver, blazed trails in the Southwest Conference during the 1960s. LeVias became the first Black scholarship football player in the SWC and paved the way for others to follow in his footsteps. LeVias was a three-time All-SWC receiver, a three-time Academic All-American, and earned consensus All-America honors as a senior. He guided SMU to the Classic after an 18-year absence dating back to 1949.

1977, 1979: QB Danny Davis was the master of the Houston Veer. As a sophomore, he guided the Cougars to a 10-2 season and claimed a share of the SWC title in Houston's first year in the conference. Davis led Houston to a 30-21 victory over Maryland in the 1977 Classic. Two years later he did it again, this time against Notre Dame in brutal weather conditions only to lose a heartbreaker on the game's final play, 35-34.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1937: TCU's Slingin' Sammy Baugh (left) and Marquette's Ray "Buzz" Buivid (right) pose with the Sanford Trophy before the Cotton Bowl Classic's inaugural game. The matchup featured two of the nation's premier passers. Buivid finished third in the race for the Heisman Trophy while Baugh was fourth. The two QBs provided the Classic the kind of drawing card it desperately needed to get off the ground. The Frogs dominated the trenches while Baugh shined on offense to down the Golden Avalanche, 16-6.

1970-71: Tom Gatewood was Notre Dame's go-to receiver. In 1970, he made six catches for 112 yards and hauled in a 54-yard TD pass to push the Irish to a 10-0 lead over Texas. A year later, Gatewood launched an Irish scoring barrage with a 26-yard TD catch in a 24-11 victory that snapped UT's 30-game winning streak.

1986: Led by All-America linebacker Johnny Holland, Texas A&M's Wrecking Crew stopped Auburn running back and Heisman winner Bo Jackson in his tracks twice on fourth-down plays in the fourth quarter. The Aggies quickly turned a tenuous 21-16 lead into a decisive 36-16 victory in the Classic's 50th anniversary game.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

2004: Eli Manning of Ole Miss and Josh Fields of Oklahoma State waged a duel of hot-handed quarterbacks before the Rebels pulled out a 31-28 victory. Manning racked up three touchdowns and ran out the clock on a 10-play, 65-yard drive to ice the game.

2018: Freshman quarterback Trevor Lawrence propelled Clemson to a 23-3 lead with three TD passes of 52, 42 and 19 yards in the second quarter. The Tigers never looked back as they cruised to a 30-3 College Football Playoff Semifinal victory over Notre Dame.

1964, 1970: Darrell Royal won more Cotton Bowl Classics than any other coach. He guided Texas to Big D 10 times, winning five Classics and two national titles. The Longhorns dealt Navy a 28-6 defeat in 1964 to claim his first championship. The second came six years later in a dramatic 21-17 come-from-behind victory over Notre Dame in 1970.

1978: Notre Dame's Dan Devine was ecstatic upon receiving the news that the Fighting Irish had vaulted from No. 5 to No. 1 to secure college football's national championship following a 38-10 upset of top-ranked Texas. It marked the seventh time that college football's national title had been won or lost in the Cotton Bowl Classic.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1987: Ohio State coach Earle Bruce surprised everyone by sporting a fancy black suit and matching fedora. It was all the motivation his Buckeyes needed to knock off Texas A&M, 28-12.

1979: Facing a 22-point deficit with just under eight minutes to play, Joe Montana worked his magic to lead Notre Dame to an amazing 35-34 victory over Houston.

1989: UCLA's Terry Donahue, the winningest head coach in Pac-12 Conference history, guided his Bruins to a 17-3 victory over Arkansas while holding the Hogs to a mere 42 yards in total offense.

1965: Frank Broyles led Arkansas to the national title when the Razorbacks rallied in the fourth quarter and drove 80 yards for the winning score to top Nebraska, 10-7.

1951: Hank Lauricella, Tennessee's great single-wing tailback, placed his name among the legends of the Cotton Bowl Classic without scoring a touchdown on an electrifying 75-yard gallop to the five-yard line. Following the bruising 20-14 victory over No. 3 Texas, Lauricella celebrated a special moment with his dad and teammates in the Tennessee lockerroom.

2015/79th: LB Marcus Rush stepped up to block a Baylor field goal attempt with 1:05 to play to fuel Michigan State's amazing comeback. Trailing by three touchdowns at the start of the fourth quarter, the Spartans scored 21 unanswered points to win, 42-41. QB Connor Cook turned the blocked kick into a game-winning 10-yard TD pass with just 17 seconds on the clock to complete the stunning come-from-behind victory.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1964: Phil Harris played football like a math major...he knew how to compile big numbers. Harris caught three passes to average 52.3 yards per play and had touchdown receptions of 58 and 63 yards to help No. 1 Texas sink No. 2 Navy, 28-6.

1993: Notre Dame running back Reggie Brooks rushed for 115 yards on 22 attempts as one of the Irish ringleaders in a 28-3 defeat of unbeaten Texas A&M. Teammate Jerome Bettis delivered three touchdown plays...a 26-yard pass reception and scoring runs of one and four yards.

1986: Texas A&M's sophomore QB Kevin Murray reveled in the spotlight of the Classic's 50th anniversary game. Murray passed for a record 292 yards and marched the Aggies 72 yards for the TD that clinched a 36-16 victory over Auburn.

2018: Justyn Ross of Clemson was too slippery for Notre Dame defenders to keep up with in the CFP Semifinal. The freshman receiver reeled in touchdown catches of 52 and 42 yards and had five receptions for 137 yards before halftime to set a Classic record in the Tigers' 30-3 victory.

1973: Texas linebacker Randy Braband slammed the door shut on Alabama. With 1:52 to play on 4th and inches at the UT 43, Braband nailed the Tide RB for a yard loss - his 19th tackle - to solidify a 17-13 victory.

1985: Boston College linebacker Bill Romanowski became the Cotton Bowl Classic's first true freshman to earn MVP honors. He stalked Houston running backs from sideline to sideline to make 13 tackles, 11 of them unassisted, in a 45-28 victory.

1995: Southern California tackle Tony Boselli provided the muscle for one of the Classic's most dominating performances. Boselli and the Trojans logged 578 yards in total offense and dealt Texas Tech a 55-14 defeat.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1973: Alabama couldn't find a way to slow down Texas fullback Roosevelt Leaks who was instrumental in the Longhorns second half rally to claim a 17-13 victory.

Lindsey Nelson broadcast his first Classic in 1951 and his last in 1986. In between he called the action for 26 games. He will be forever known as the "Voice of the Cotton Bowl Classic."

1948: Penn State's Wallace Triplett made history by knocking down the color barrier in Texas. His six-yard TD catch in the third quarter forced a 13-13 tie with SMU.

2017/82nd: Ohio State quarterback J.T. Barrett rushed for two TDs and passed for 114 yards against Southern California. His 28-yard scoring run iced the game for the Buckeyes, 24-7.

1977: Houston's Alois Blackwell ran for 149 yards and two TDs against unbeaten Maryland. Blackwell scored twice as the Cougars downed the Terps, 30-21.

1997: Eluding the grasp of BYU linebacker Shay Muirbrook was next to impossible. Kansas State learned that the hard way. Muirbrook had six sacks for minus-38 yards as the Cougars clinched their 14th victory, 19-15.

1984: Georgia quarterback John Lastinger led the Bulldogs to a 10-9 victory over undefeated Texas. He cashed in on a fumbled Texas punt return late in the fourth quarter. With 3:30 to play, Lastinger broke free, turned up field and ran 17 yards for the winning TD to dash the Horns' national championship hopes.

GREAT MOMENTS IN CLASSIC HISTORY

1968: Alabama head coach Paul "Bear" Bryant went straight to a "bear hug" to congratulate Texas A&M's Gene Stallings after his former pupil pulled off a 20-16 upset of the Crimson Tide.

1960: Future Heisman Trophy winner Ernie Davis gave America a glimpse of great things to come when the sophomore halfback reeled in an 87-yard touchdown pass and sparked No. 1 Syracuse to a 23-14 victory over Texas.

1995: Keyshawn Johnson was unstoppable in Southern California's 55-14 victory over Texas Tech. He snared three touchdown passes and made eight receptions for 222 yards.

1956: Eagle Day could dissect any defense that stood in his way. In the game's waning minutes, the elusive Ole Miss quarterback scrambled 25 yards to the TCU five-yard line to set up the winning touchdown and record a memorable 14-13 victory.

2023: A six-yard pass from Michael Pratt to freshman tight end Alex Bauman was ruled an incompleion but replays showed it to be a catch and a touchdown. The score came with nine seconds on the clock as Tulane tallied 16 points in the final 4:07 to post an electrifying 46-45 upset of Southern California.

1970: Quarterback James Street led top-ranked Texas on a dramatic march to the Notre Dame 10 with time running out. Facing fourth down, Street and head coach Darrell Royal devised the perfect play, an eight-yard pass to split end Cotton Speyner at the two-yard line to keep the drive alive. The Longhorns scored two plays later to win the national title, 21-17.

REMEMBERING JIM BROWN

When Jim Brown put his mind to something, he did it better than anyone could ever imagine. He had a gift. Name the sport and he excelled. But his primary job was running with the football, and no one has ever done it better. He was perfection in motion. Brown placed an exclamation point on an All-America college career in the 21st Cotton Bowl Classic when he and the Syracuse Orange battled TCU in 1957. He rushed for 132 yards and three touchdowns, booted three extra points, and played solid defense with five tackles. He ran through, over and around TCU defenders and left a trail of frustrated tacklers in his wake. The Horned Frogs may have won the game, 28-27, but the spotlight clearly belonged to Brown. Yet, he was more than a one-of-a-kind football player. Jim Brown was a special friend to the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic, an inaugural member of its Hall of Fame, and one of the bowl's most devoted advocates.
