The general basis of the above antonyms is unclear and does not particularly indicate how the "opposite meaning" should be interpreted. Thus, the classification of antonyms is related to their rational properties. Exact antonyms: Antonyms are usually measured by terms (e.g. tall-weak, taller-shorter, thick-thinner, good-bad, better-worse). Therefore, the corresponding antonyms do not refer to unfavorable and independent properties, but they represent the real syntactic mechanism of the manifest scale. These are scalar parametric images that define the properties of the gauge over a range of different values when certain polar points are defined with a hierarchy of special meaning. Advertising, conversions involve the logical concept of evolution, in other words, opposite relationships.

An example of treatment would be marriage, husband and woman, repair and confusion. Transformation is an opposite, double factor and temporary agreement. It should be noted that all words in philology are not called "addresses"; they are also conversations. My husband, my wife or parents and my children - talking and addressing. Words containing the concept of conversion would be, for example, beginning and end, marriage and divorce, reform and anti-reform, but these would not be conversations, but only conversion.

Antonyms that complement important additional words (also known as: additional antonyms) are expressions that at the same time deny, which confirms something else. For example, logic can be deduced from the sentence: "It's not married" - it's a bachelor's degree." This result does not occur if it is an antonym. CowardlyBut not in the interaction of individuals.
