He Attends a Church Affair

ONE day Mrs. Morton, wife of the general manager (otherwise known as Simon Leze), came to the office and as a polite highwayman might do his stuff, compelled each man in the room to pay one dollar for a ticket to a charity affair. This entertainment was to be given at a South side church on the following Wednesday evening. Artie hurried to buy a ticket. He always liked to be a Rockefeller while the money held out.

"I don't want you young men to think that I'm robbing you of this money," said Mrs. Morton, "I want you to come to the entertainment. You'll enjoy it, really."

"Blanchard can go all right," suggested Miller, with a wide wink at young Mr. Hall, "he belongs up near your church."

"Then he must come," said Mrs. Morton, decisively. "Won't you, Mr. Blanchard?"

"Sure—yes, ma'am," replied Artie, blushing deeply.

"Listen, Mrs. Morton," said Miller. "He hasn't been in a church for twenty years and he's going on twenty-two."

"I can't believe it," and she turned to Artie, who was wig-wagging the cowboys—floatin' around with shebas. I wish somebody'd tell me how they cop 'em out. Don't it kill you dead to see a swell Dorothy—you know, a regular peach—holdin' on to some guinea pig and thinkin' she's got a he-man? That's right. She thinks he's all right. Anyway, she acts the part.

"And say, you know Percival, that works over in the bank—little Percy, the perfect lady. There's a guy I've known for five years, and so help me, if he gets on a street car where I am I get off and walk. That ain't no lie. I pass him up. I say, 'You're all right, Percy, and you can take the car to yourself,' and then I duck."

"Was he there?"

"He were—and a loud noise. That ain't no kid. He was the real papa—the hit of the piece. One on each arm, see?—and talking a lot of hokey. There they was, holdin' on to this bird. Up goes my hands in the air, and I says to myself: 'Percy, you're all right. I wouldn't live on the same street with you, but you're all right at that. But he couldn't see me.'"

"Couldn't he see you?"

"No, he lost his eyesight. He looked at me, but he was too busy to see me. But you ought to see the two he had. I'd like to know how he does it. I think I'll give the bank the low-down on Percy. Any man with his shaped head and that little moustache, entirely shaded by the nose, hadn't ought to handle money. That's a notion to go up to one of the cuties and say: 'What's the matter? Ain't you ever seen any others?'"

"Did you like the show?" asked Miller.

"It's this way. They liked it, and so—with a wave of the hand 'let 'em have it. But if they put the same turns on at any small town house in trouble-maker. "Now, Mr. Blanchard, I want you to promise me faithfully that you'll come."

"He Was the Real Papa—The Hit of the Piece. One on Each Arm, See?"

"I'll be there," said he, smiling feebly. "I can hardly wait."

"Remember, you're promised," and as she went out she playfully shook her finger at him as a final reminder.

"Well, are you game?" asked Miller.

Artie put on his lofty manner and gazed at his fellow-slaves with seeming coldness.

"What's it to you? Didn't you hear what I said to her? Sure I'm goin'. I've got as much right to go out and do the heavy as any of you kolloes. If I like their show I'll help 'em out next time—get a couple o' hundy boys and put on a six-round go for a finish. Them people never seen anything good."

"I'll bet you don't go!" spoke up young Mr. Hall.

Artie laughed dryly.

"You guys must think I'm a quitter, to be scared out by any little old church show," said he, all the time hoping that she would come to an end before Wednesday evening.

That was the last chirp regarding the aforesaid charity entertainment until Tuesday morning, when Artie, after dusting off his desk, strolled up to Miller and gave him a friendly walloping known to ring-side patrons as a "kidney punch."

"Ouch!" exclaimed Miller.

"Well, I went," said Artie. "I was among those present."

"Where?" asked Miller, who had forgotten.

"Where? Well, that's a hot one. To the church show—the charity circus. I didn't do a thing but push my face in there about eight o'clock last night, and I was 't' from the start. Say, I like that church, and if they'll put in a punchin' bag and a plunge they can have my game. I'll tell the birds and bees."

"Did you see Mrs. Morton?"

"How's that, boy? Did I see her? Say, she treated me like I was the prince of Wales! She meets me at the door, puts out the glad hand and says: 'Hang up your kelly and come into the game.'"

"I never heard her talk like that?" suggested Miller.

"Well, that's what she meant. She's all right, too, and the only wonder to me is how she ever happened to tie herself up to that wopius, meaning friend husband. It's like hittin' up a fourth-time winner 'longside of a plater. He ain't in her class, not for a minute or no part of a minute."

"What slays me is how all these hams make their star winnins. Why, out there last night I see the rummiest lot o' jays—regular drug store the sticks the people'd tear down the building 'ryin' to get the coin bag and Mrs. Morton got me a good seat and then pinned the show a little before it opened up, so I didn't expect to be pulled out of my chair—and I wasn't. If I'd been near the door I'd 'a' snuck early in the game, but, like a farmer, I let her put me way up in front. I saw I was up against it, so I lasted the best way I could.

"Two or three o' the songs was purty fair, but the woman that trifled with the piano for about a half an hour was an awful flop. Then there was a guy called an entertainer that told some o' the gags I used to hear when my brother took me to the old Academy and held me on his lap. But he got 'em goin', just the same. 'Well,' I says to myself, 'what'd a couple o' sharp-shooters do to this crowd?'"

"I don't believe any o' them people out there ever seen a good show. It just goes to prove there's lots o' smart people think they know what's goin' on in town, but they don't. I ain't got no klek comin', only I'm waitin' for eighty-five cents change."

"I should think you would have got the worth of your money simply by seeing so many good-looking girls?" said Miller.

"The girls are all right, only I think they're a little slow on pickin' live ones. If I had time I'd go over to that church and make a lot o' them hicks look like a bad cent waiting for change. Not that my line is strong, but I know I can't keep step with those guys. I think it must be a case of nerve. That's all there is to 'em—nerve. But the girls—Wow!"

"Denuties, eh?"

"Lollypulozers—plus!"

Ancient Fruit Trees

Trees of the original planting of Mission olives brought to this country by the Franciscan fathers a century and a half ago are growing at the San Diego mission. After Cortez conquered Mexico in 1521 the Jesuit padres soon began their missionary work among the Indians. With them they brought the fruits of France and Spain, among these the pomegranate. All the fruits from the older missions in Mexico were carried northward and planted in the new mission gardens in California. In these gardens may still be seen some of the old olive and date trees and pomegranate bushes. In 1702 Vancouver found an orchard at Mission San Buena Ventura in which pomegranates were growing together with apples, pears, plums, figs, oranges, grapes and peaches. Robinson mentions an orchard of pomegranates at the Mission San Gabriel.

THE TRAIL OF '98

A Northland Romance by ROBERT W. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Disappointed with the quiet life in his home surroundings, Athol Meltrum, young Scotsman, tells the story of his mother and brother, Gary, to seek his fortune. At San Francisco, practically penniless, he takes a janitor's job, and meets a fellow adventurer whom he dubs, and who is hereafter known as the Prodigal.

you know me better than that. Oh, you almost make me hate you. Vainly I tried to soothe her, whispering: "Oh, my dear, tell me all about it. I'm sorry, I'm sorry." She went on in her fierce, excited way. "He came to the restaurant in Bennett. He used to watch me a lot. His eyes were always following me. I was afraid. I trembled when I served him. He liked to see me tremble, it gave him a feeling of power. Then he took to giving me presents, costly gifts. I wanted to return them, but she wouldn't let me, took them from me, put them away. Then he said she had long talks. I know it was all about me. "That was why I came to you that night and begged you to marry me—to save me from him."

—the "Slide," and clustered behind it like shells on the seashore, an army of tents. It was a gold-born city. Trembling with eagerness we pulled ashore. Our troubles were over. Here at last we had gained our Eldorado, thank God, thank God! A number of loafers were coming to meet us. They were strangely calm.

CHAPTER VI

I will always remember my first day in the gold camp. All was grotesque, makeshift, haphazard. Back of the main street lay the red-light quarter, and behind it again a swamp of mizergheds, the breeding place of fever and mosquito. Till midnight I wandered up and down the long street, but there was no darkness, no full in its clamorous life.

My companion pointed to an inner room with a closed door. "The Klondike kings are in there, hard at it. There's Black Jack and Sillivater Willie and Claude Terry and Charlie Haw."

"Oh, I Don't Care What the Devil Your Name Is," He Broke in Petulantly.

Then the waiter returned with a tray of drinks and the door was closed. "Well, you've seen him now," said my friend. "Your only plan, if you want to speak to him, is to wait till the break comes up. By-oh."

A heavy hand was laid on my shoulder. "Where away, my young friend? It was Locosto. His face was Mephistophelian, his voice edged with irony. I was startled I admit, but I tried to put a good face on it.

He was a massive man, heavy of limb and brutal in strength. There was a great spread to his shoulders and a conscious power in his every movement. He had a square, heavy chin, a grim, sneering mouth, a falcate nose, black eyes that were as cold as the water in a deserted shaft. His hair was raven dark, and his skin betrayed the Mexican strain in his blood. Above the others he towered, strikingly masterful, and I felt somehow the power that emanated from the man, the brute force, the remorseless purpose. Then the waiter returned with a tray of drinks and the door was closed. "Well, you've seen him now," said my friend. "Your only plan, if you want to speak to him, is to wait till the break comes up. By-oh."

beauty, all truth, all good was but a setting for this girl of mine. "Come on," said Jim; "let's go for a walk in the town."

"You lie!" like explosive steam came the words, and wolf-like his lips parted, showing his powerful teeth. "You lie!" he reiterated. "You followed me. Didn't I see you from the hotel? Didn't I determine to decoy you away? You would try to cross me, wouldn't you? You would champion dancels in distress? You, pretty fool, you simperton, you meddler!"

He was looking for Berna. My heart hungered for her; my eyes ached for her; my mind was so full of her there seemed no room for another single thought. But it was like looking for a needle in a strawstack to find her in that seething multitude. So with spirits steadily sinking zerowards I waited.

The smoldering fire in his eye had brightened into a fierce joy; his twitching mouth was now grim and stern as a prison door. For days he had been fighting a dim intangible foe. Here at last was something human and definite. He advanced to Locosto.

Quick as a flash he dealt the other a blow on the cheek, an open-handed blow that stung a little whiplash. "Now, fight me, you coward!"

I think there must have been five hundred men around that ring. A big Australian pugilist was umpire. Some one suggested gloves, but Locosto would not hear of it. "No," he said, "I want to mark the son of a dog so his mother will never know him again."

Michigan Press Association Rallies at State Metropolis for 1929 Summer Outing Frolic

Publishers Cast Cares Aside and Enjoy Generous Hospitality of Detroit, the World's Most Interesting City

Theatre Parties, Boat Trip, Banquets, Baseball Games, Visit to General Motors Proving Grounds and Variety of Other Educational Features and Diversions Make Outing a Memorable One.

Welcome to Detroit! Welcome to the Hotel Fort Shelby! Welcome to the Campbell-Ewald Advertising Agency! Welcome to the General Motors proving grounds near Milford! Welcome to the Detroit baseball park! Welcome to the Fox theatre! Welcome to the Ashley-Dustin steamboat line. Welcome to Put-in-Bay! Welcome from the federal government to ascend the Perry Victory monument! Welcome to Ohio!

From the moment we landed in Detroit on Sunday and Monday, everywhere a most cordial and enthusiastic welcome was extended to the Michigan Press Association.

No new records were established, for our reception in 1929 was no more cordial than it has been in 1928, in 1927, in 1926, or prior years. Perhaps the main difference was in the fact that Detroit and the metropolitan area has more to offer in great ways than can be found in the same open spaces where for the past few years our annual summer frolics have been held.

The city is the city and the country is the country, but there is a difference between Detroit and the ordinary city. Detroit has the river, the lakes, the islands, and many other attractions that the ordinary city does not have, and which make it an ideal great summer resort where city and country meet, in perhaps the finest setting that nature has provided for any of the great cities of the world. And Detroit has taken nature at her best and has added all civilization has available as an aid to nature.

Detroit, dynamic metropolis of Michigan, outdid herself in hospitality to Michigan newspaper people from out in the state this year on the occasion of the annual summer outing meeting of the Michigan Press Association.

From all sections of the state the knights and ladies of the quill poured into Detroit. From the Thumb, from the foot of the mitten, from the fingers of the hand and from the upper peninsula came the pencil pushers and their families, until all portions of the great commonwealth were fairly represented.

The splendid Hotel Fort Shelby was headquarters and the warmth of the welcome extended by Manager J. E. Frawley and all of his co-workers was but a sample of that later extended by all with whom we came in contact.

As early as Wednesday evening the members of the MPA commenced dropping in and getting "set to go." Thursday forenoon the secretary and his aids were kept busy making registrations, and long before noon the program was well started. Many of the editors refused to wait until afternoon, to start the program but visited shiny eyes and no chill of aloofness. You are made to feel that you are welcome to the Hotel Fort Shelby and there is an air of certainty that you will feel at home, that you are a guest whose desires are to be anticipated in every way. The hotel is easy of access by motor from any entry into the city, without fighting your way through interminable traffic congestion. The Fort Shelby Garage is but a short half block from the hotel, and courteous attendants will take your car and see that it is properly cared for, and bring it to the hotel door at your wish, without extra charge. Very comfortable rooms may be had at $2.00 to $4.00 per day, with bath, and more luxurious quarters, if one so desires, at slightly higher prices. Many Michigan people make the Hotel Fort Shelby their home when in Detroit and it is constantly increasing its number of friends by the warmth and genuineness of its hospitality. Mr. J. E. Frawley is the managing director.

Not only Detroit, but Ohio as well, welcomed the Michigan country newspaper people. When Field Manager H. E. C. Rowe of the Ohio Newspaper Association learned that the Michigan editors were to visit Put-in-Bay, which is in the Buckeye state, he got busy and rounded up a bunch of Ohio editors and their wives to meet us at Put-in-Bay, where they gave us cordial greetings and extended the hospitality of the Buckeyes to the Wolverines.

It would take the art of the painter and the language of the poet to transfer to paper in ink all the alluring attractions which were ours to enjoy, in words fitting to do justice to our hosts and their endeavors in our behalf. Those who were there know—those who were absent can never know, except that they will be told from time to time as the present fades into history, all that was so freely ours.

Our Hospitable Headquarters
The splendid Hotel Fort Shelby, one of the finest and greatest of Detroit caravansaries, was our home while in Detroit. And a real home it was, for Manager Frawley had given instructions that we were to be made doubly welcome. The Hotel Fort Shelby, located on Lafayette boulevard, is close to the heart of the downtown shopping and theatre district, yet away from the noise and confusion of the congestion which surrounds many of the Detroit hotels. It is a mammoth hotel, twenty floors of home-like and beautifully furnished rooms, with a lobby which in its very atmosphere spells "Welcome" to the weary traveler. At the desk there is no glare of

of what it is all about and how it is done. The visit was highly interesting to all of the newspaper men, and gave them a clearer understanding of the various activities of a modern advertising agency.

Mr. Navin Extends Courtesies
Following the visit to the Campbell-Ewald establishment, many of the hotel management was one of the delightful affairs of the week. It was jolly from start to finish and "delightfully informal." The feast was all that the most exacting epicure could desire and the service was most satisfactory. There were no tiresome talks as an adjunct of the banquet, but cabaret entertainment and community singing enlivened the dinner hour and the company dispersed in ample time for those who desired to attend theatre parties or other attractions.

Visit to Modern Advertising Agency
One of the most intensely interesting events of the entire program of entertainment was the first thing on the program following registration. This was a trip to the offices of the Campbell-Ewald Agency, which occupies the entire thirteenth floor of the enormous General Motors Building, and two wings of the fourteenth. The Campbell-Ewald executives made their welcome evident by having Mr. M. B. Tundell of their office force at the Hotel Fort Shelby to greet the incoming publishers and direct them to the offices of the agency, seeing them safely in taxis which were paid by the agency to bring their guests to their headquarters, a courtesy which aroused much favorable comment.

Arrived at the agency offices, each group was escorted by a guide who followed a sample advertisement through all the devious courses of initial order, through the department of art and display work, proofs and corrections, through the order department, the mailing department, orders going out to various publications, tear sheets, invoices, and checking copies coming in, being assorted and checked up, on through the accounting department, until the check in payment of the account is written, cut and sent on its way.

The various departments and their work was explained in detail so that all could have a clear understanding of what it is all about and how it is done. The visit was highly interesting to all of the newspaper men, and gave them a clearer understanding of the various activities of a modern advertising agency.

Michigan Publishers See How Automobiles are Tested

As Guests of General Motors, Members of Association Visit Proving Grounds

One of the features of the 1929 summer outing, and there were many eventful ones, was the trip to the General Motors Proving Grounds, about 45 miles from Detroit, near Milford in Oakland county. It is here that this great corporation, that has set the pace in so many of the developments in the automotive industry, brings its cars to put them through every conceivable test to establish what they will do.

All Cars Tested
Not only General Motors products, Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac, General Motors Trucks and Yellow Cabs and Coaches, but automobiles of every conceivable make, domestic and foreign, are brought here to be tested. Road conditions of all kinds are made as they are encountered every day, everywhere.

The party arrived at the proving grounds club rooms just before noon. H. A. Newman, in charge there, saw to it that every one was comfortably provided for and soon the publishers were seated around the tables for a delightful luncheon as guests of General Motors.

They gathered next in the auditorium where Mr. Newman explained the purposes of the Proving Grounds and the manner in which it had functioned since put in operation in 1927. Then followed a moving picture, "The World Builds a Motor Car," in which was shown the process of manufacture as carried on by General Motors in every nation of importance in the world. Workmen in China, Egypt, Australia, Japan, European nations, everywhere, were shown making their living as employees of the automotive industry. The picture also presented the manner in which the automobile served the nations of the world, bringing them into closer contact and also presenting a picture of how the civilization of the world has followed the trend of transportation.

The trip to the laboratories where scientific devices are employed to test out all the features of all makes of automobiles revealed to Michigan publishers many new things. The exhaustive study given to each detail also explained the reason for the great development of the motor industry. All tests are the same for all makes of cars. As a matter of fact, each car is numbered after it is brought to the proving grounds and the engineers are interested only in learning the maximum service that might be secured from it under all conditions that are encountered in ordinary driving.

Two Years Driving in Month
A car undergoing tests will travel as many as 25,000 miles in one month, as much as it would ordinarily travel in two and a half years in the hands of the average car owner. As many as 1,000,000 miles of travel are covered in one month's driving.

The publishers were given a ride over the speed tracks, over hills and grades, on the straight-away, everywhere where tests were being made. The one exception perhaps was the "bath" where cars are driven through water to test out the ignition system's reaction to water. One car was being tested at 104 miles per hour.

More than one lane of travel is provided to allow all travel uninterrupted.

Just a few years ago the 1268 acres now devoted to this activity were devoted to the peaceful pursuit of agriculture. In 1923 the ground was acquired. It is located about equal distance from Lansing, Flint, Pontiac, and Detroit. In this tract is level and hilly country and all sorts of rough and smooth roads with all sorts of surfaces. The immense speed loop is nearly four miles in length, with high banked turns. Today's cars are measured and studied. The cars of tomorrow will be put through identical tests, over identical roads, under similar weather conditions. Before, when public highways were used, it was impossible to get as accurate information as is now possible.

When a test is made—for instance, hill climbing—the run is made 10, 15, 20 times, until results are proven. Guesswork has been eliminated. Tests are made with groups of cars to establish standard bases of comparison. Every new device, every novelty, every principle of engineering and construction, every kind of material, must prove itself by use.

Learn Something New

Some "family" debates were settled by some of the information gleaned by the publishers at the Proving Grounds. One publisher had told his wife "it was all right to leave the motor idling while at the curb because it wouldn't burn up much gas." He learned that an idling motor will burn as much fuel as it will at a 40 or 50 mile pace. Another was that speed beyond 30 to 40 miles used up more gas.

The laboratories have electric "fifth" wheel speedometers; apparatus for measuring fuel; duplicate wheel measure steering effort; device to measure foot pedal pressure; electrical devices to record acceleration as well as deceleration.

Foreign motor cars were seen in the garages and undergoing various tests. The small motors made by German, English, French and Italian manufacturers came in for a great deal of questioning. They are not as powerful, nor as fast as those of American make, but this, explained the guide, is because the taxes in other nations are usually based on displacement and the license costs of what is here considered a "small car," a Chevrolet for instance, is almost prohibitive, being over $200. The original cost, too, is considerably higher, because of the high taxes.

Pointing to one car of German make, the writer asked the guide whether it could be driven at as high as 45 miles an hour. "Yes, it would go that fast," he replied, adding, "if you drove it far enough to get a good enough start."

There were over 160 association members at the Proving Grounds and all were more than pleased with the knowledge and pleasure derived through their visit. The activity of General Motors there has been little known and less understood, and the information secured by the publishers is of sufficient importance to make its telling through their columns something of benefit to their readers, just as it was to themselves.

The "Put-in-Bay," Plying Between Detroit, Put-in-Bay and Cedar Point

Michigan Press Association Rallies at State Metropolis

guests took taxis for Navin Field, where the Detroit Tigers and the Cleveland Indians were clawing at each other. Here again they felt that they were most cordially welcome, for the management not only recognized the MPA badges at the gate, but the courtesy of the press boxes was also extended to those of the publishers who desired to sit up among the series and the radio announcer. At the Thursday afternoon game, which was won by the Tigers by a score of 6 to 4, they saw one player realize that glowing ambition of every baseball player, to come to bat with the bases loaded and slam out a home run. Outfielder Johnson of the Tigers was the lucky player and his wallop over the scoreboard put the game on the striped cats of the Navin menagerie. A few devoted fans passed up the attractions of the provincial grounds trip Friday to attend the game, but had to mourn with the Tigers, who were taken into the vicinities of the Indians to be properly scalped for their antics of the day before.

Magnificent Fox Theatre Opens Doors

One of the largest and most magnificent of Detroit theatres, the new Fox on Woodward avenue, just above Grand Circus Park, gave hearty welcome to the Michigan Press Association by opening its doors to all members at all performances of Thursday and Friday. The official badge of the MPA was the open sesame at the portals and those who availed themselves of the privilege were most enthusiastic at the splendor of the grand play house and the intrinsic merit of the attractions presented. A trip of inspection to this wonderful temple of amusement is mighty well worth while and one can spend fruitful hours in admiring the sheer beauty of the edifice and its barbaric splendor of furnishings. The attractions are always of the very highest class and it is recognized as one of the most magnificent theatres of the United States.

The Glorious Trip to Put-in-Bay

A most fitting climax to the three-day visit of Michigan newspaper folks to the City of the Straits was Saturday's golden trip to Put-in-Bay. For this trip the Ashley & Dustin Steamer Line had tendered the courtesy of the big, fast steamer "Put-in-Bay," which makes daily trips to this most delightful Ohio resort. Nearly two hundred of the newspaper people availed themselves of the opportunity to make the trip. A more perfect day could not have been desired, not too hot, not too cool, with just a slight breeze rippling the waters of the Detroit river and island-dotted Lake Erie.

Leaving Detroit at 9:20 o'clock the boat had barely left the dock before the orchestra started toes tingling on their way to the spacious dance floor, where 8,000 square feet of polished surface tempted the activities of those who love to dance, while those more sedate wandered about the six spacious decks and enjoyed the magnificent scenery.

We passed under the skeleton of the new Ambassador international bridge, which is to unite Canada and the United States with another steel link. The bridge was to have been ready for traffic by July 4 of this year, but it was discovered in time that the huge steel cables which had been strung were of wire which was faulty in manufacture. Promptly the immense cables were cut down and removed and new cables of tested and approved wire are now being strung, and present plans are to have the stately and graceful structure completed by the first day of 1930.

Glimpse New Tunnel Sections

Further down the river we had glimpses of sections of the new tunnel which is being constructed under the Detroit river at the foot of Randolph street, to make an underwater hook-up with our sister country. These big sections are built at Ojibway and are then towed up the river and sunk into place in a huge underwater trench excavated by dredges.

Swiftly the big "Put-in-Bay" sped past all other water traffic except the flying hydroplanes and soon we were out on the sparkling ripples of Lake Erie, the huge twin screw propellers, driven by the 3,000-horse power engines making play of the swift pace toward our destination.

Shortly before noon we got our first glimpse of the towering Perry monument which dominates the scenery of that section of Lake Erie. It was not until we had landed, however, that the full majesty of this great marble shaft impressed itself upon us. Erected by the United States government, conjointly with the states of Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, New York, Rhode Island, Kentucky and Massachusetts, the imposing shaft commemorates the Battle of Lake Erie, September 10, 1813, and is dedicated to the principle of international peace by arbitration. May it not have been erected in vain. It is constructed of Milford granite, is 352 feet high, 45 feet in diameter at the base and 55½ feet at the top. An open air promenade, protected by a 5-foot parapet, at the top of the monument, is reached by an elevator. The walls are 9 feet and 9 inches thick at the base and 5 feet at the top. For the first time since the monument was erected, the federal government tendered the courtesy of a trip to the top of the monument, the Michigan Press Association receiving that marked honor, and nearly every member of the party made the trip to the top, where a most beautiful view of the lake and its many islands is to be had.

Met by Ohio Newspapermen

Arrived at Put-in-Bay, we were met by a party of Ohio newspapermen, headed by H. E. C. Rowe, field manager of the Ohio Newspaper Association, and were given a hearty welcome to the soil of the Buckeye state. Most of the Ohio publishers had their families with them and the newspaper folks of the two states were soon fraternizing in true newspaper fashion. Promptly all were seated in the dining room of the Crescent hotel, where W. F. "Bill" Panzer, manager of the Detroit office of the Western Newspaper Union, acted for his company as host to the fraternity, at a bounteous luncheon, and the lake ride proved its full efficiency as an appetizer.

The list of Ohio newspaper people who joined us at Put-in-Bay follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Mohler, Berea News and Olmstead Falls Towne Crier. Mr. Mohler is also President of the Buckeye Press Association.

Mr. and Mrs. George Frank and daughter, Grafton Citizen. Mr. Frank is also a former director of the O. N. A. and is now Sec. Treas. of the Lakes district.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kuesthardt and Miss Martha Kuesthardt, Port Clinton Progressive Times. Mr. Kuesthardt is president of Lake district of the O. N. A.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Ramsdell, Sycamore Leader. Mr. Ramsdell was formerly president of the Harding district of the O. N. A.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Warwick, Bowling Green Democrat. Mr. Warwick is Sec. Treas. of the North-West district of the O. N. A.

Roscoe Carle, Pastor of Daily Times. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Keller Dix, Prospect Monitor.

G. H. Speck and grandson, Pemberville Leader.

H. E. C. Rowe, Secretary and Field Manager of The Ohio Newspaper Association.

Visit Points of Interest

Following the luncheon the company scattered for visits to the lower, the caves, the concessions and the other attractions of the famous resort and the time passed all too swiftly until 4:15, when the "Put-in-Bay" returned from Sandusky and Cedar Point on its return trip. Safely stowed away on board, the time passed happily in dancing, cards, visiting, and watching the scenery until six o'clock, when the going announced the dinner hour. Here again we were placed under still further obligations to Mr. H. T. Ewald, head of the Campbell-Ewald company, by being guests at a "steamskip dinner" which was all that heart and stomach could desire. And what we did to that dinner was a plenty, and some more of "nobody's business." Mr. Ewald, our host, was unable to be with us, as he was in New York saying his farewells to his family, leaving for a trip abroad, but he was ably represented by Mr. G. C. Crane and Mr. M. H. Tunnicliffe, who made it their particular business to see that everybody was promptly and efficiently filled with most delicious viands.

The trip up the Detroit river as the sun was sinking to its rest in the crimson west added the last touch of glory to a trip which will linger long in the memory of a most happy party of newspaper folks. The tall towers of the Ambassador bridge seemed to open their arms to bid us welcome home, and the beautiful new skyline of Dynamic Detroit was sprinkled with the early lights of evening as we glided gracefully up to the wharf where the party disembarked, rested and refreshed by a most delightful and enjoyable day.

Theatre parties were the order for the last evening in Detroit, but "the gang" was so loath to quit that the spacious lobby of the Fort Shelby was not through until long past midnight, echoing good-byes and farewells. A few left for home Saturday evening, but the great majority stuck around until well into Sunday before deciding to hit the long trail for home.

And so ended one of the happiest, most interesting, most entertaining and altogether delightful summer outings in the history of the Association, which is saying a whole heap.

There seems to be quite a difference between delivering the goods and being caught with them.

FIRST STEAMBOAT WAS NOT BUILT BY FULTON

RESEARCH reveals strange and unexpected facts. Robert Fulton did not build the first steamboat. Neither did he build the second nor the third. And his famous Clermont, which has come down in popular history as the first steamboat, was not Fulton's first.

When we get to digging into dusty records we discover that one William Henry, of Lancaster, Pa., had a boat which was operated with a steam engine and paddles in 1760. It was a cumbersome affair and early in its career was accidentally sunk. That dampened the hopes of William Henry.

John Fitch a little later built another boat, an improvement over Henry's effort. It was sixty feet long, eight feet wide and its paddles were fitted in the stern. It made a speed of seven miles an hour and records show that George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin were among those who marveled at its mechanical wonders. Fitch's boat, though it worked, was a financial failure. He committed suicide in 1798 when his backers deserted him.

Next to try his hand at steamboat building was John Stevens of New Jersey. After experimenting over a period of ten years he launched his first boat in 1798. Stevens was the first to use a screw propeller. About the same time inventors in England were at work on the same idea.

Robert Fulton was born in a small town in Pennsylvania in 1765, five years after Henry had tried out his boat. Fulton's parents were poor and while he early showed inventive genius, he made his first money painting pictures and drawing plans for houses. Among Fulton's intimates was Franklin and, on a visit to England, he became a friend of Watt, who was the inventor of the steam engine. Fulton started his experiments in steamboat development in 1802 and his first effort was launched in France. This boat was sunk, raised and rebuilt.

He ordered a 24 horse-power engine from England in 1803 to be shipped to New York. The result was the Clermont which was floated in 1806. The Clermont, 150 feet long, made its first trip up the Hudson from New York to Albany, starting on August 17, 1807. The trip was made in about thirty hours.

Fulton achieved the feat of making the first steamboat to be operated with profit, and within eight years ten boats which he designed were in operation. His next step was to build a fleet of ferry boats for operation across the river and the Hudson.

Stevens was in the field almost as soon as Fulton. His steamer, the Phoenix, was in operation on the Delaware in 1807, a year after Fulton launched the Clermont, and by 1810 steamboats were in regular operation on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

The famous Savannah was the first steamer to cross the Atlantic. This was accomplished in 1819, but Fulton did not live to see it, having died in 1815. One of Fulton's gifts was the ability to make money. Before he was twenty-one years old, he had made enough profit from his paint brush and easel so that he presented his mother with a small farm.

He also developed as a gunsmith and computed new proportions for firearms. Gifted in mechanics, he had the vision to make his achievements practical. Fulton did not make the first steamboat, but he made the first profitable one and without profit nothing can succeed. That was the secret of his fame.

STRAY THOUGHTS

Many persons mistake ambition for ability, and thereby hang a "fall." Those who are big enough to profit by wise advice seldom need to seek it.

Truth walks through life naked and unashamed—Falsehood alone resorts to many guises and disguises.

Some people are not big enough to endure success, which perhaps accounts for them not having any.

Even those who want the earth may be weighed and still be found wanting.

A motor knocks going up hill; a man going down hill.

Dust Prevention Methods Win Public Approval

The subject of dust prevention has become proportionately important each year with the constantly increasing number of automobiles on the highways, and with the addition of new miles of improved gravel roads. Each year sees the dust problem become more acute—and each year, until very recently, it has become increasingly costly.

A motor trip through the State shows the remarkable progress made in the prevention of dust by officials and citizens who are awake to the evilness of dust both from the standpoint of road maintenance and damage to crops, homes and estates, and general business.

Our State Highway Department and county and municipal officials have been foremost in a study of dust prevention methods and can, as a result of their efforts, point with pride to considerably over 1,000 miles of moist, dustless, well-maintained gravel roads. Cities, towns, and small communities which a few years ago were seen only through a haze of dust are today clean, refreshing and inviting in appearance.

Pioneers in dust prevention, supported by favorable newspaper editorial comment and enthusiastic public approval, found that Dowflake Calcium Chloride produced by the Dow Chemical Company, Midland, Michigan, opened the way to comparatively inexpensive dust control and better road maintenance methods. It was found that this white, flaky product absorbs moisture from the air as soon as applied to the road surface, and holds the road materials in place, binding them into a moist, firm surface, thereby preventing dust particles from being blown away.

The efforts of officials, supported by public opinion, are responsible for a keener enjoyment of motoring, pleasanter living conditions, better business in communities, and cleaner fruits and crops for the farmer. Dust is a common enemy which every citizen can help to combat by giving his or her support to the officials responsible for its control, and by recommending the clean, odorless, non-tracking, inexpensive method.

Stop those clouds of road dust. Have your officials keep dust bound to the road surface with clean, odorless Dowflake. Make this a dustless summer by joining with your neighbors in a petition to highway officials.

Another Record! over 800,000 New CHEVROLET Sixes on the road since Jan. 1st!

Today's Chevrolet is scoring a huge nationwide success because it represents one of the most sensational achievements in automotive history—a Six in the price range of the four.

The Chevrolet six-cylinder engine delivers its power freely, quietly, and easily throughout the entire speed range—delightfully free from annoying vibration and rumble. Combined with this remarkable six-cylinder smoothness are equally remarkable speed, power, and acceleration—and an economy of better than twenty miles to the gallon.

In addition to such sensational performance the Chevrolet Six offers the outstanding advantages of Bodies by Fisher. And no car ever provided a more impressive array of modern convenience features—adjustable driver's seat and VV one-piece windshield in closed models, easy action clutch and gear-shift, ball bearing steering, and instrument panel complete even to theft-proof Electrolock and electric motor temperature indicator!
