OBSTRUCT EXPENSIVE DRAIN IN ALAIEDON TOWNSHIP.

Anima's Sald To Have Escaped From State Game Farm And Now Enjoy State Protection.

It will be surprising news to many to learn that within three miles from the Ingham county court house there is a colony of beavers at work, each day inspecting a dam which has been constructed across Mud Creek drain and each night foraging for food among the poplars and elms and among the berry bearing shrubs which cover adjacent swamps. Tuesday George Graham inspected the drain and dam and tributary areas, to determine whether probable damage is such that an appeal shall be made to the state department of conservation to trap and remove the beavers to some other locality where agriculture is not the practice.

The dam is located two miles north and about a mile east. It is north of the garden lands of C. C. Griffin & Son and Zack Lewis.

Supervisor Tyler is Answered This newspaper stands charged with insincerity, with plain attempt to subvert its columns for the purpose of misleading its readers, and with misquoting a member of the board of supervisors. It is also charged with having purposely colored its articles for the sake of accomplishing its own purpose and serving interests inimical to the best interests of the people of the county.

These charges are severe and if true would place both the publishers and the NEWS in a very unfavorable light. For this reason the statements made in the letter addressed to the editor and published here last week cannot be ignored nor remain unchallenged.

The charge is made that the statement contained in an earlier issue of this paper to the effect that doing away with the county extension agents would result in doing away with 4-H club work and adult extension work, was misrepresenting the facts. We insist that experience in this and other counties proves the truth of just that statement. Neither club work nor adult extension work was carried on successfully in this county before Ingham had a county extension leader nor has it ever succeeded in any other county following a discontinuance of the county appropriation, statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

This newspaper quoted Mr. Tyler exactly as he was understood. He spoke very hesitatingly, and in a low, broken voice, was very confused and we doubt very much if he knows what he did say or what he left unsaid. There is no doubt as to Sup. Tyler's use of the words "fraud" and "deception" and the phrase "lack of sincerity." If he was misquoted it was unintentional and with no element of malice or ill-will.

As for the use of the phrase, "kitchen economy" the NEWS did use that appellation, not because it is of our own coinage, but because since it was used by the governor at his inaugural it has become almost a by-word in Michigan. The NEWS at no time has referred to "barnyard economy." The adjective "pennywise" may have been misapplied. We will leave that to the good judgment of our readers.

Ingham County Pomona Grange and states that if such petitions were read it was while he was out of the room. Mr. Tyler was not out of the room and sat within three paces of the clerk while they were being read.

Now that Sup. Tyler has seen fit to make a personal attack on the editor of this newspaper and has asked some questions which have been answered, the editor is going to put a few questions to Supervisor Tyler.

Does Mr. Tyler want the readers of the NEWS to believe that he was also out of the room during the June, 1931, session when a bill covering the services of a Swedish masseur, employed by a Lansing luncheon club. was allowed at $1013.30 when the county only owed $189.70? The roll call shows that Mr. Tyler voted to allow the bill as it was presented.

Something has been said about "kitchen economy" in state affairs. Mr. Tyler is challenged to discover a single instance where the state has constructed such ornate affairs as either the Ingham county infirmary or the Ingham county tuberculosis sanitarium. This writer has visited most of the state institutions and outside of the university and some of the colleges we have never found any marble bath rooms or beautiful but expensive corridors such as are found in Ingham county's ventures into

The Ingham county poor house cost $250,000. It will house approximately 125 inmates, or $2000 for each bed. Do Alaiedon farmers with wife and three children all enjoy a $10,000 home with a radio in every room? No record of Mr. Tyler's objections to these astonishing expenditures is found in the annals of the board of super-

And how about that photo posed by Mr. Tyler and his colleagues in February, 1930? The county treasury was "nicked" to the tune of $9.65 to pay for the picture. Mr. Tyler was not "out of the room" then. He was in the picture. A small matter, of course, but Mr. Tyler now states that small matters must be watched.

And that livestock fund, Mr. Tyler? A lot has been said about that but not until the NEWS published the figures after the visit of the state auditors was it disclosed that for every dollar paid out to cover damages done by dogs there had been paid to county officers, supervisors and appointees the sum of $2.75. Were you out of the room then? A lot of farmers have had their claims for damages cut but the pie counter is worked

Speaking of "kitchen economy" how about a bill for $15 also allowed at the June session for flowers sent the bereaved family of a former member of the board. A card of thanks was sent the members of the board but the taxpayers of the county paid the bill and Supervisor Tyler is recorded as voting "aye." Was he misquoted there or was he out of the room? Even state officials buy their own flowers.

But let us not be too penny-wise. Let us be charitable. Mr. Tyler may be right and the NEWS may be all wrong. But just because a newspaper does not agree with all that is done, let it not be charged that it is unfair or that it misquotes or deliberately makes misstatements.

When the appropriation was made to carry on the work of the Swedish masseur the young lady herself came before the board to plead for an appropriation. She was backed by an estimable Rotarian. There was no debate and the request was granted.

But when 300 farmers and their wives and sons and daughters come to ask help, and state that if they cannot have leadership the work must fail, they are told to go back home and carry on the work among themselves. Their spokesmen are charged with insincerity and petitions are spurned with the charge that those who signed them were duped and misled by the very responsible people who circulated the petitions.

The NEWS will commend Supervisor Tyler and all other members of the board of supervisors when it feels they deserve commendation. It will never be browbeaten into shence by any silly demand for an apology.

Editor's Name Among The Intelligenstia

Book agents who are making up their "sucker" lists for the fall campaign will have V. J. Brown's name listed in bold face type. For last week the editor of the NEWS fell and fell agent with a beautifully bound set of and Mrs. F. C. Kendrick. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Foreman and history tomes. They looked pretty to the editor and after the usual line of oratory on the part of the salesman Stid, Sunday. the name of the editor was placed upon the famous dotted line. Walt Ketchum, express agent, staggered into the office a few days later with the heavy set of books. The edi tor left them at the office a day before he dared take them home and con-

He finally summoned up enough courage to take the books home. He at once opened the box and began to tell Mrs. Brown about his great interest in history and about his purchase of the books to fill a long-felt want. He showed her the beautiful bindings and the fine engravings.

Mrs. Brown eyed her husband rather coldly and did not warm up to the expenditure. She lays no claim to Leslie, spent last Tuesday with Fred Mrs. Theo Rardeen was in Lansing being a history student beyond knowing the birthdays of her five offspring and her eight grandchildren and the date when the mortgage upon the family home falls due. But those books looked familiar to her. Without saying anything to her husband she went to the bookcase for a little research work. A moment later she returned with an armful of books. They were exactly the same in contents, illustrations and binding as were the books brought home that day by her husband. The volumes in the bookcase bore no thumb marks and many of the leaves were still untened with a knowing smile. After the editor finished his monologue justifying the purchase of the books the good wife informed him of the identical set he carted home two years

The editor could not believe the duplication at first but finally admitted that his love of history was recently acquired and even confessed to trade the second set for a copy of The President's Daughter and The Strange Death of President Harding. He offers agricultural year books for the years 1919 to 1928 and three copies of the Michigan Manual as boot. Note to compositoy: Keep this off

BUILD A TOOL HOUSE

Farm machinery is too expensive to leave out of doors all winter. The rust eats away the metal parts and the moisture rots the balance of the machine. The cost of building a tool house or almost any kind of a shelter is much less than the damage done to the machinery.

USE A GOOD ROOFING

In building almost any structure one of the most important things to remember is that the roof of any building is the part that is the most exposed to the elements. It pays to use a good grade of roofing on all buildings.

TRUE TALES OF THE TELEPHONE

A Billionth of an Inch

O the layman, a billionth of an I inch seems too small to conceive, much less actually to measure. For the telephone engineer. however, such infinitesimal quantitles often determine success or failure. In order to study the properties of permalloy and other magnetic materials, for example, Bell Laboratories scientists have found it necessary to make minute measurements of the changes in length of specimens when subjected to magnetization. Through the use of specially designed apparatus employing delicately balanced mirrors, glass screens and photoelectric cells, it is possible to determine, in a centimeter of length a change in the order of one-tenth of the diameter of an atom, or something like a billionth of an inch. Such a length is so incredibly small that if. it were possible to manufacture paper equally thin, over a million sheets would have to be piled one on top of the other in order to obtain a thickness equivalent to that of ordinary tissue paper. So delicate is the measuring apparatus that it is specially mounted to guard against building vibrations and is sealed in a vacuum to protect it against changes in external temperature.

Contrary to general opinion Osteopathy never has been a drugless school of practice, because the use of antiseptics and anesthetics is taught, also parasitides, antidotes in poisoning and use of narcotics for relief in pain; and other emergency measures in practice. The chief emphasis was and continues to be the adjustment of structural derangements to make possible normal functional capacity.

Men from three different enemy divisions were captured by the Third; in the fighting of this day. By noon of the sixteenth the attacks against its line came to a halt.

The Germans were stopped to the east of Rheims by Gouraud's Fourth army with but slight gains, while to the southwest they got across the Marne and made some progress toward Epernay. The failure of the attack in Champagne and the relatively slight gains to which the Germans were held to the west of Rheims on the first day materially heartened the

Although there were some ten divisions of the enemy remaining south of the Marne, the very evident conclusion, judging from the results of the following two days and the losses he had suffered, was that he would be unable to continue the offensive.

Now that the allied armies were no tonger in jeopardy it seemed opportune

The spirit of fraternity that prevailed made it easy to respond. In fact, on this, as often on similar occasions, I found myself almost as enthuslastic as the French speaker, though perhaps less content with my effort. The allies elsewhere did not forget that it was our Independence day, and messages came from Clemenceau, Foch and Haig and many others from all

Regardless of the distinct understanding that our troops behind the British front were there for training and were not to be used except in an emergency, the British made continuous effort to get them into their lines. They planned an attack by the Australians for the Fourth of July and requested Maj. Gen. George Rend, commander of the Second corps then still in training, to permit some of the troops of the Thirty-third division to take part.

At first the British suggested four companies, but later they wanted the number increased to ten. As the use of Americans at this time was directly contrary to the arrangement, naturally it did not meet with my approval.

Having learned that such a combined attack was planned, I spoke to Marshal Haig about it when I saw him in Paris July 3, and he entirely agreed with my point of view. It seems that General Read, afterward, in accordance with my instructions, told General Rawlinson that I did not want partly trained troops to participate. However, our troops had by this time become fully committed to it. Although the British chief of staff had consented to leave our troops out, when he tearned from Rawlinson that it would compel them to defer the operation, he informed Read that no change could be made without order? from Field Marshal Haig, who, he said, could not be reached, and so the attack was carried out, as I learned the next day. The fact that General Read and his officers and men were keen to get into the battle went far to excuse him. It seems needless to add also that the splendld behavior of the troops in the operation was a decided argument in favor of lenlency. This division also afterward displayed the same enger. Germans Attack Again.

> Referring again to my diary: Channont, Wednesday, July 17, 1918.-Another German attack broke Monday. Our Forty-second, part of the Twenty-eighth and the Third, became engaged. The latter counterattacked and captured 600 prisoners. Advised Foch that the Thirty-second and Twentyninth divisions are available at

Our Third division, still in line south tween Jaulgonne and Chateau Thierry, and the Twenty-sixth, which, as we have seen, had relieved the Second, held a sector between Torcy and Vaux. Infantry elements of the Twentyeighth were south of the Marne, serving with the two French divisions on lat. either side of the Third; the entire Forty-second occupied a support position behind Gournud's front; the First division was north of Meaux, and the Second and Fourth were in reserve #### near Chateau Thierry, Surprise for the Enemy.

The German offensive was launched on the early morning of July 15, as expected, but it was met with a surprise barrage put down by General Gourand's artillery half an hour before the start. The Germans' attack formations were thrown into confusion and their force seriously weakened to begin with. By evening, thanks to the strong resistance they encountered. the situation in that immediate sector was not unfavorable. Our Forty-second division became engaged and sustained relatively heavy losses. Its conduct on the first and succeeding days brought high praise from the French army commander. Farther west the enemy crossed the Marne, penetrating in one place as far as five miles. He struck our Third division, which was posted along the river, in a determined attempt to force a crossing between Mezy and Varennes, and the fighting became intense, some units of the Thirtieth and Thirtyeighth regiments holding this front being forced back. The stubbornness of their resistance, however, broke up the attack as a whole, and the Germans retired to the north bank. Thirty-eighth Distinguishes Itself. On this occasion a single regiment of the Third division (Col. U. G. Mc-Alexander's Thirty-eighth) wrote one of the most brilliant pages in our milltary annals. It prevented the crossing army near Chateau Thierry for use against the Marne salient in the connteroffensive I had frequently urged. The cutlook for the allies had changed materially since the crisis of early Jine. The enemy had been held in his most recent attacks and his losses were presumably very great. He was losing the advantage of numbers and his superiority was pass-

CHAPTER L

The Germans had a preponderance of 323,000 rifles March 21, 1918, and although this number had decreased they still had a superiority of about 200,000 May 27. July 15 this was changed and the allies then had the superiority by the same number. In other words, the Germans were relatively worse off by 523,000 rifles in July than in March. This was accounted for almost entirely by the great increase in the numbers of Americans. The French and British had not been able to add to their strength but, on the contrary, they were being reduced faster than

On the evering of July 14 a fortunate for the ailies, as it favored the counterattack already planned.

We shall now see the reason for the concentration of several American divisions southwest of Solssons. Some of them were available for use in the main counterstroke, to be delivered by they said was to take place the fol- the French Tenth army under Mangin. The American First and Second divisions were hastily assembled to form of the Marne, faced the enemy be- the American Third corps under General Bullard. But his corps staff had not yet been fully organized and these divisions, by his direction, under discretionary authority given by me, became a part of the French Twentieth corps, commanded by General Berdou-

Form Spearhead of Attack.

This corps then was composed of these two divisions and the French First Moroccan division, which had a fine reputation, and was assigned to the most important position in the attack on the left center of the Tenth army. The three divisions mentioned had the honor of being the spearhead of the thrust against the vulnerable flank of the salient. The line of advance ran eastward over the commanding plateau just south of Soissons, and across the main road leading from that place to Chateau

Thierry. The First had recently been relieved from the Cantigny sector and was en route to a rest area. It was scattered throughout the Dammartin area, just north of Meaux, when it received orders July 13 to move by truck to the front. After a hurried departure the advance troops arrived at dawn the 16th at the forest of Retz (or forest of Villers-Cotterets) and during the night the division moved to the front of the forest. The night of July 17 it went forward over muddy and congested roads, the columns of infantry working their way to the front, where they arrived in the nick of time. The Second division was at Montreuil-aux-Lions in reserve of the First corps, recuperating, when the order came on the 14th to move by truck toward the front. Dawn July 17 found the infantry and machine-gun elements arriving at the forest of Villers-Cotterets. The night of the 17th the movement toward the front, through the forest, was made with extreme difficulty. The narrow roads became picture were the other features of the lammed, troops lost their direction meeting, and there was serious doubt whether they would be at their line of departure at the appointed hour of 4:35

a. m., the 18th.

Proceed Against Odds. With most commendable energy and Initiative the officers led their commands forward during the night, winding in and out through the almost inextricable snarts of wheeled vehicles. One of the battalions assigned to lead in the attack, though on the march most of the night, was forced to move on the run for the last few hundred yards, and just reached its place as the barrage started.

The Second division headquarters found-itself July 16 with no knowledge of the terrain and little obtainable from any source. Harbord and his chief of staff, Col. Preston Brown, started for the front and accidentally ran into the headquarters of the Twentieth corps. They there found the directive for the attack, from which they issued the division's orders.

The country over which the Twentieth corps attacked consisted of a succession of wooded ravines that lay across the line of advance, with scarcely any roads leading toward the front. The enemy's main defenses along the ridges of the Solssons plateau were naturally strong, and with the added intrenchments the enemy evidently felt himself reasonably secure. It was harvest time and the ripening wheat that covered the rolling landscape gave excellent cover for the enemy's infantry and machine F. W. Launstein & Sons guns, but it also helped to hide our Enemy Caught by Surprise. Without the usual preliminary artillery preparation, the assaulting battalions, accompanied by light tanks, plunged forward behind the barrage.

The enemy was caught by surprise and the First and Second divisions, gallantly supported by the Moroccan division in the center, soon overran his forward positions and broke Though constantly confronted by fresh enemy troops, this corps took the lead in the advance and its progress was most satisfactory. By noon it had captured half of the great plateau in little later forward elements reached the day's objective. strong opposition at Vierzy. In a determined effort launched after 6 p. m. the town was captured and a line overlooking the valley of the Crise was occupied. The First division had carried everything before it, capturing defended farm houses and other points where it met stiff resistance, finally taking Missy-aux-Bois and holding a front line slightly beyond that town. The line ran diagonally across the Paris-Soissons road.

The attack of the corps was resumed the morning of July 19, but during the night the German lines directly | day. in front of Solssons had been heavily One Hundred Fifty-third division and the First division met with much resistance, the Second brigade of the First encountering fire of the enemy both from the front and the left flank. Tanks were sent to its assistance and with close artillery support the division was enabled slowly to gain ground, but at considerable cost.

The Second division, with the reserves of the first day in the lead, forged ahead to the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road but was compelled to withdraw to the vicinity of La Raperie. It finally established a line just west of Tigny, with the road under its guns. The division was relieved by the French Fifty-eighth division the night of the 19th, having advanced six and one-half miles, captured 3,000 prisoners and seventy-five guns, and sustained about 5,000 casualties. First Division Makes Advance. July 20 the First division continued its advance doggedly against a desperate stand by the Germans on the knoll in front of Berzay-le-Sec. The French had been ordered to take Berzy-le-Sec, but failed. In the afternoon Summerall directed that it be as saulted by his Second brigade, but the attempt did not succeed that day. Assisted by the skillful use of artillery and with consummate dash, under Brig. Gen. B. B. Buck, in the face of intense artillery and machine-gun fire, the Second brigade captured the town on the 21st. Meanwhile, the First brigade and the French Eighty-seventh division, which had relieved the Moroccans, had crossed the Soissons-Chateau Thierry highway and reached the Chateau of Buzancy. The line now ran parallel to the Crise, with Soissons commanded by our artillery. The First division, throughout four days of constant fighting, had advanced nearly seven miles, taken 3,500 prisoners and sixty-eight guns from seven different German divisions employed against it, and had about 7,200 casualties. The thrust of the Twentieth corps was conducted with such magnificent dash and power that the enemy's position within the salient was rendered untenable. The dangerous character of the threat caused the crown prince to begin a general withdrawal from the Marne. This operation snatched the initiative from the enemy almost in an instant and from that moment he was on the defensive. Our First and Second divisions, with the Moroccan division between them, had struck the decisive blow that turned the tide of the war. Petain said it could not have been done without our divisions.

On the other side the German chancellor, Von Hertling, said later: "We expected grave events in Paris for the end of July. That was on the 15th. On the 18th even the most optimistic among us understood that all was lost. The history of the world was played out in three days."

the task of choosing the nominee from the county seat and has selected Miss Helen Lamont as its choice. Miss Lamont is a graduate of Mason high school and of Lansing business university and at present is employed in a secretarial position at Michigan State college. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lamont who reside on the state game farm, Mr. Lamont for several years having been superintendent of the farm, . During her high school days Helen was active in scholastic and athletic events and during her senior year was elected mayor of the student council. She has the distinct honor of being the only girl ever to be chosen by her fellow students for the honor of presiding over the school's self governing council. She was also captain of the girls' basketball team.
