

EPITOME

OF

ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY,  SACRED AND PROFANE;

BEING

An Abridgment of DיAnville and Wells, WITH

'ADDITIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS',

FROM VARIOUS OTHER AUTHORS:
Accompanied with an Account of the Origin and Migration of Ancient AJations,

For the use of Seminari

BY ROBERT MAYO, M. D.

Ruthor of "A Rhyming Spelling Book," and " A New System of Nytholagy for the use of Seminaries."

THIRD EDITION IMPROVED.

PHĪLADELPHİA: PUBLIAHED BY A. FINLEY, N. E. corner of Cnesnut and Fourth Streets.

DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA, TO WIT:
E* of February, in the forty-second year of the ingeseal. pendence of the United States of America, A. D. 1818, GrO. MAYO, and Co. of the said District,紗 right whereof they claim as proprietors, in the words following, to wit.
"An Epitome of Ancient Geography, Sacred and Profane: being an Abridgment of D'Anville and Wells, with sidditions and Improvements, from various other authors, "accompanied with an account of the Origin and Migraion of Ancient Nations, for the use of Seminaries."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, incituled "An act for the encouragement of Learning, by securing the copies of Mars, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of stol copies, duri g the times therein mentioned." And also to the Act entitle a, "An Act supplementary to an Act, entitled "An Act for the Elioouragement of Learning, by securing the copies of Maps, Charts, and Books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentoned; and extending the benefits thereof to the arts of designs. ing, engraving, and etching historical and other prints."

> D. CALDWELL,

Clerk of the District of Pennsylvania.

THE PROFESSORS

or   THE SEMINARIES OF LEARNING.

   THE SEMINARIES OF LEARNING.}

THROUGHOUT

THE UNITED STATES.

GENTLEMEN,
YOU who preside over the education of our youth, are the best judges of the efforts of authrirs. and compileps whose object is to facilitate the scientific progress of the rising generation; therefore I dedicate this Epitome if Ancient Geography to you, though not without. a mixed concern of hope and fear for its fate. In the mean time permit me to make my particular acknowledgments to those of you who have already expressed your approba-. tion of the work, in person, and by letter; whilst I subscribe myself with due consideration,

Yours,

> R. MAYO.

Philadclithia, Jenuary 25; 1814.

PREFACE.

GEOGRAPHY and Chronology, "called by an analogous metaphor, the Exes of History," point out the sites and determine the dates of events. "Without their illustration, the historic muse, that mistress of life and messenger of antiquity, would be degraded into a meve gossip; for the theme she might thus ab. stractedily report would be but as "A woman's story at a wimer's fire, Authorised by her Grandame."-

I will save myself the awkward attempt to prove that Ancient Geography is essential to give light and interest to every species of antiquisty. It would be equally superfluous to descant upor the advantages of a knowledge of the latter. Yet, however uom deniable is the affirmative of these propositions; we daily witness with deep commisseration, the superfluous and comparatively ungainful labour of our youth in conning over the classics and other detached parts of ancient science, without the least conception of ancient geography; and consequencly from this default of geographical knowledge, they too frequently abandon to despair or disgust, their historical studies, ere they have' made any proficiency in the all-important lessons transmitted to us from the experience of the ages that are past.

Every one who possesses the least reflection, must be sensible that in offering this work to the public, we cannot pretend to give any thing original in regard to the subject-matter. Therefore, the only grounds upon which it hopes for the suffrage of public approbation, are, the authenticity and comprehensiveness' of its materials, together with the perspicuity of its arrangement and expression. The reader may judge of the authenticity of our materials from the names of Pinkerton, D'Anville, Wells, Rennel, the English universal history, whence we have deriveat them. Their comprehensiveness will also lay some claim to the reader's confidence, when we assure bim that we have extracted from these authorities every thing that we judged to be important for the completion of our design; sometimes abridging, and frequently copying verbatim the original, (particularly D'Anville, as well as occasionally transposing and amalganating certain articles, according to the dictates of a zealous devotion to our object, of alleviating the labours of juvenile studies. In regard to perspicuity, we have adopted that arrangement which seemed most consonant with the natural order and successinn of the subjects; while we have madr but slight changes in the ex. pression of our authors, except when a diffise atyle required abridgment. The pupil will doubtless be more thankful to, us for presenting to him, under one view, the respective results of learned lucubrations upon the subjects of this work, in such manner as comports most with despatch, without militating against perspicuity, than if we had milled the whole over into our own peculiar dialect, with the probable hazard of perspicuity, and the inevitable cost of delay.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

PARTI.\section*{PROFANE GEOGRAPHY.}

INTRODUCTION.

Pages.
Sect. I-Progress and extent of Ancient Geography, 5Sect. II-Errors relative to the Ancient Geographyof the North of Europe and Asia, Sect. III-Origin and Migration of Parental Nations, viz. ..... 12
1at, The Chinese, ..... 15
2d, The East Indians, ..... 16
3d, The Scytha, Geta' or Goths, . . ibid
4th, The Assyrians, ..... 24
5th, The Sarmatians, ..... 29
6th, The Celts, ..... 30
7th, The Fins or Lalilurders, ..... 32
Seot. IV-The Feudal System, ..... 33
Sedt V-Epochs of the First Gothic Progress over Europe, ..... 37
Sect. VI-Epochs of the. Second Gothic Progress over Europe, ..... 38 CHAPTER I.
EUROPE.
Sect. I-Hibernia vel Ierne, ..... 48
Sect II_ Albion vel Britannia, ..... 49
Britannia Romana, ..... 50
Brıtannia Barbara vel Caledonia, ..... 51
Serct. III—Orcades vel Ebudes Insulæ, ..... 53
Seet. IV-Scandinavia, Scanza, vel Baltia, ..... 53
Sect V—Garmátia,; Európæa et Asiatica, ..... 55
Sect. V]-Cermania, ..... 60
Seot. VII-Gania, ..... 67
Narbonensis Gallia-Narbonois, ..... 70
Lusdunensis Gallia-Leonois; ..... 71
Aquitania Gallia-Aquitaine, ..... 72
F Brlgica Galia-Belgium, ..... 73
Sect. VIII-Hi pania, Iberia, vel Hesperia, ..... 75
Tarraconensis, ..... 76
Batica, ..... 78
Lusitania, ..... 79
Baliares Insula, ..... 81
Sect IX-Italia vel Hesperia, ..... ibid
Gallia Cisalhina, vel Togata-Cistadane and Transhadane, ..... 82
Ltalia Prohria, ..... 86
Magna Gracia, ..... 91
Sect. X-Sicilia, Sardinia, Corsica, et Kolæ In- sulz, ..... 95
Sect. XI-Rhætia, Noricum, Pannonia, Illyricum, Dacia, Mæsia, et Thracia; ..... 98
Rhatia et Vindelicia, ..... 99
Noricum, ..... 100
Paņnonia, ..... 101
Illyrıcum, ..... 102
Dacia, (Trajana,) ..... 104
Masia, ..... 107.
Thracia, ..... 110
Sect. XII-Græcia, ..... 114
Macedania, ..... 115
Gracia Prohria, ..... 118
Pelohonnisus, ..... 127d
Creta et Cyclade Insula, ..... 133
OHAPTER II.
ASIA.
Seot. I-Asiá Propria, ..... 137
Mysia, Bithynia, Paphlagonia; Pontus, ..... 138
Lydza, Phrygia, Galatia, Cu\{piadocia, ..... 149
Caria, Lycia, Pamphylia; Cilicia, ..... 163
Sect. II-Colchis, Iberıa, Albania, et Armenia, ..... 173
Sect. III-Syria, ..... 185
Seot. IV-Mesopotamia, ..... 196
Srict. V-Arabia, ..... 203
Sect. VI-Assyria, ..... 215
Sect. VII-Babylonia, ..... 220
Sect. Vill-Persid, ..... 227
Secr. IX-Calmania, et Gedrosia, ..... 233
Sect. X-Mula, ..... 236
Sect XI二Aıa, Bactriana, et Sosdiana, ..... 241
Sect. XII-Sicythid Aslalica, et Serica, ..... 252
Sect. Xlll-India, et bluæ, ..... 258
Chapter ili.
AFRICA.
Sect. I-风gyptus, . . . . . 283
Sect. II-Æihiopia, ..... 302
Sect. III-Libya, ..... 312
Sect. IV-Africa.Propria, Numidia, et Mauretania, ..... 315
Sect. V-Labya, vel Africa Interior, ..... 336 PART İ.
SACRED GEOGRAPHY.
Sect. I-The first age of the Woild, ..... 349
Secr. II-The second age of the World, ..... 352
Sect. III-The third age of the World, ..... 356
Sect. IV-A scheme of the Jewish camp in the Wilderness, ..... 363
Sect. V-Antediluvian. Countries, ..... 366
Sert. VI-From the Deli.ge to the Confusion of Tongues, ..... 368
Sect. VII-Of the Plantation of the Earth, ..... 372
Sect. VIII-The East Counnies, from the time of Nimrod till the call of Abraham, ..... 392
Sect. IX-Canaan and the neighbouring Country till the call of Abraham, . . . 403
Sect. X-The sojournings of Abraham, Isaac, and Juccob, . . . . . . . 408
Sect. XI-The Land of Egypt till the Exodus, . 420 Sect. XII-The Exsdus, . . . . 426 Sect. XIII—Palestine, from the conquest of Jushua, 431

INTRODUCTION.

section first.
Progress and extent of Ancient Geograhhy.
ON casting an eye over the Terra Veteribus Nota, as delineated on a single map, we perceive that the ancient geographers had some acquaintance with a considerable part of the three continents of Asia, Africa and Eưrope.

It will also be observable that their acquaintance was much more extensive coastwise, than inland; their navigators having carried their commerce to Thyna, the capital of Sina, on the river Senus now Camboja, in the ulterior peninsula of India, where, their Eoan Ocean respects the east; circumnavigated Africa; and penetrated to the Thule, now Shetland isles: here they acguired some idea of the Mare Pigrum or Northern Ocean, which they would fain connect with the Eoan or Eastern Ocean by an extension of the Baltic under the name of Scythic, Amalchium, or Frozen Ocean, over a great part of the north of Europe* and Asia.

[^0]But this error apart; their minute acqualntance was * rather confined to a somewhat central position between the three continents; which, by its seas communicating with the ocean to the east and the west; and by its navigable rivers flowing on every hand from the interior of either continent to these seas, $\dagger$ is peculiarly appointed by nature for the nursery of civilization.

The reason that they knew more of this region, is not that it was more populous, but that it was, from advan-. tages of situation, the theatre of sociability-mother of science and refinement: the reason that they knew less of the more interior regions, is not that they were less populous, but.that their inhabitants, from want of more abundant channels of communication, were immersed in solitude-asylum of ignorance and barbarism. For, though the civilized world of the ancients was populous almost to a miracle, yet the remoter regions of either continent were in no very inferior degree supplied with their-barbarous inhabitants; who, comparatively speaking, confined themselves for the most part within the precincts of their own villages, &c. till the wanton encroachments of the Roman empire roused their implacable ferocity to destroy it. But to be a little more particular on the progress and extent of our proper subject.

By ancient geography, (Scripture apart) we understand, whatever the Greer, and Roman writers have left us on that subject. And it is observable of it, that time has prescribed to its progress, distinct and successive heriods or ages.

ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY.

1st, The information contained in the poems of Homer makes the first age (if we may so speak) of ancient geography. Greece, the neighbouring shores of Italy, part of Asia, and a small portion of Africi towards Egypt, composed the whole of its object.

2d, Those contracted limits of geography received no considerable aggrandizement till the conquests of Alexander the Great; which may form its second age or heriod; for the Greeks, before that period, had no knowledge of India but its name, and that of the Indus.

Sd, They would have remained equally ignorant of the West, if some of their historians had not mentioned the navigation of the Phœnicians, about the southern shores of Iberia or Spain; which constitutes an epoch in our subject that may be entitled its third age.

4th, The Roman domination, when it extended itself in the West, and towards the north of Europe, made us acquainted with the different countries of that quarter. The parts of Asin and Africa subjected to the same power, became also much better known than they had been hitherto. Thus what, according to some ancient writers, we may call the Roman World, makes the fourth and frinciftal age of ancient geography; which, being detailed with most minuteness and precision; of course predominates in these pages.

Nothing more contributed to retard the improvement of the ancients in geography, than the opinion, That the rearth was habitable only-in temferate regions; for, accoiding to this system, the torrid zone was a barrier that permitted no communication between the northern temperate zone which they inhabited, and the southern. Their intelligence being thus confined to'a band or zone, they might with propriety call extension from west to east, length or longitude; and the more contracted space from north to south, width or latitude. Strabo, the most illustrious geographer of antiquity, was not undeceived in this opinion, which circumscribed the object of his science; he, nevertheless, extended it to some regions beyond the Tropic. Ptolemy extended its" limits, and éven advanced it beyond the Equinoctial line. And the Ganges, which bounded the investigations of Strabo, on the east, was not the line that.terminated the geography of Ptolemy. Navigation had opened the way through the ulterior countries as far as that of Sin $x$; which we shall make known in the sequel of this volume.

ERRORS RELATIVE TO THE

Thus much we conceived it indispensable to say on the progress and extent of ancient geography. But as our plan will be to commence with the higher northern latitudes where geographical errors peculiarly abound, therefore, we will also premise this First Part with Mr. Pinkerton's remarks on Pliny's geography of the north' of Europe and Asia; hoping that these, as well as many eirors of the histoxic kind, to be noticed in like manner in this Introduction, will stand hereafter, in consequence of his researches, singularly corrected.

SECTION SECOND.

Errors relative to the ancient gleograthy of the north of Eürohè and Asia.

We have extracted from Pinkerton's. Dissertation on the Goths, the following information upon this subject; his words are-" Pliny's geography of the north is here given, as the most full and curious of all antiquity. The bounds of ancient knowledge on the west and south are fixed and clear. On the east, D'Anville has fully settled them. But the northern, the most important of all, to the history of Europe, D'Anville leaves as Cluverius ignorantly put them.

ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY OE THE NORTH.

" The Rithaan mountains of Pliny, as of Ptolemy, palpably run from east to west; as he passes them to go to Whe Scythic Ocean. It is clear from Ptolemy, that they ran along the head of the Tanais and are often named with the Tanais by the ancients; for by all ancient accounts the Tanais rose in them. But this is nothing to the matter. The question is what the ancients thought. And it is clear that they often confounded a forest with a chain of mountains, as Pliny here does the Hercynian forest. No wonder then that in civilized times no such mountains otherwise forests, are to be found. The Rithaan fores's, I am convinced; was that now called-Volkonski, still 150 miles long from the west, to Moscow on the east. It is also a range of small hills.
"Timœus, as we learn from other pássages of Pliny, called the isle opposite Raunonia by the name of Baltia. It is therefore a slip of Pliny when he puts this among the nameléss isles. What river the ancients called Parohamisus, is doubtful. There was a mountain and region Parohamisus at the head of the Indus. The Amalchian was evidently the eastern part of the Scythic Ocèan. Present Sarasui or some other river running north on the east of the Caspian, may be Parofainisus.
" The Promontory Rubeas seems to me that on the west of the mouth of the river Rubo or ${ }^{-}$Dwina, being the north point of the present Courland. Cluverius, who puts it in the north of Lapland shews strange ignorance. The ancients knew no more of Lapland than of America: and were never further north than Shetland,* and, the south part of Scandinavia. The Cronian seems here the north-east part of the Baltic sea. As Pliny tells us repeatedly, in other places, that Baltia.or Basilia, was the isle -where, only, amber was found, it is clearly Glessiaria of Prussia, not Scandinavia. The isles Oomes $$ c \mathrm{c}$, all grant to be those of Oesel, &c., at the mouth of the Finnish Gulf.

ERRORS RELATIVE TO THE

"Cluverius is so utterly foolish $\dagger$ as to put the Seve Mone of Pliny in Norway; in which childish blunder he is blindly followed, as usual, by Cellarius and D'Anville, which last has not examined one tittle of the ancient geography of Germany, though the most important of all, to the history of Europe. $:$ Pliny's Sevo Mons, is actually that chain between Prussia and Silesia, called $\boldsymbol{A} s$ siburḡius Mons, by Ptolemy, and now Zottenburg. In the map of modern Germiany by Cluverius, this chain is fully marked, from the east of Bohemia and Silesia up to the Resehout. Tacitus mentions this' Sevo Mone (though he gives not the name) as dividing the Suevi from the north to south. Most ancients, regarded the

* The real Thule or Thyle of the ancients, as D'Anville shews.
$\dagger$ Though we quote it, we do not sanction the abrupt phrase of our profound antiquary; who seems, from the tenour of his book, to pique himself upon that very exceptionable and uncourteous quality of morosèness.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

```
ORIGIN AND MIGRATIONS
```

Moscow. The opinion of Scythic Ocean seems to have prevailed in the eleventh, century; for Adam of Bremen says people could sail from the Baltic down to Greece. It seems also the Ocean of Darkness in Eastern writings. 1 know not-if its existence was not believed in Europe till the sixteenth century."

We will be excusable for älleging, in favour of so profound an interpreter of ancient authorities, a presumptive evidence of ancient ignorance respecting the northern regions; such as the well known opinion among the ancients; That the earth was habitable only in temperate regions: this alone, might have sufficiently restrained their zeal for discovery, to have precluded them from an accurate acquaintance higher noith than the judgment of our author is inclined to admit they possessed."

SECTION THIRD.

Origin and Migrations of Parent Nations.

Previously to entering on the detail of our proper subject, it is conceived that infinite advantagé will result to the student, from a concise view of the distinct races of mankind known to the ancients, with their migrations, so far as Mr. Pinkerton's "Dissertation on the Goths"

- *Perhaps this was only an error loci of the Frózen Ocean that occupies àhigher northern latitude, of which some imperfect account in all probability had been given by Finnish and Sarmatic emigrants from that quarter. It was very easy at least.to confound it with the Baltic sea.

OF PARENT NATIONS.

enables us to speak on so extensive and difficult a subject. ' For without some idea of these dawnings of civil history, oùt of which the first denominations of civil geography originate; this would necessarily be obscure from beginning to end, as that would equally be, under a like circumstance. Such is the reciprocity of light and illustration between the different branches of science in general, and bétween history and geography in particular.

As Mr. Pinkerton but slightly hints at the scriptural account of the origin of nations; and, speaking of the accounts of the Scytha given by some of the fathers of the church, says, "Perhaps it may be thought that these ecclesiastical authorities prove too much, as they mark the whole immediate descendants of Noah as Scythians; and of course might prove all the nations of the earth to be Scythians, as by Scripture account they all sprung from Noah," therefore the student must regard the following sketch as derived by Mr. P. from the most approved writers of profane history-sacred history being consigned afart as inadequate here. But as this summary of ancient geography is intended to be a key to general history, both the sacred account of the plantation of the earth, and sacred geography, &c. form, Part the Second of this work; where it will appear that the sa-' cred and profane accounts corroborate each other, much more then seems to justify our author's neglect of the former:

In the course of the following sketch, the reader will "observe that the Scythians, Gete, or Goths occupy by much the greater portion of our attention; but not unjustly; as they were not only the progenitors of almostall modern Europe, but of ancient Greeece and Rome, as well as the greater part of Asia Minor; thereby render:ing themselves almost as highly distinguished above the rest of mankind in ancient, as in modern history. But to the point-
Not to mention the host of authorities and numberless quotations given by Mr. P. which he' has most laboriously, and no doubt judiciously examined, in order to restore these "hisistoric truths" to light, we shall content ourrselves' with giving a plain narrative of what we find to our purpose; as it would militate exceedingly against the, continuity as-well as brevity wished to be maintained here. Therefore, drawing tó a focus the brilliant lights irradiating from every page of his invaluable، work, we gather an idea of seven distinct aboriginal races of men, viz. 1st, The Chinese, 2d, The East Índians, 3d, The . Scythians, 4th, The Assyrians; 5th, The Sarmatians; 6th, The Celts, 7th, The Fins or Laflanders; of which the five first were Asiatic, and the latter two Eurofiean.

1st, The Chinese.

Our author informs us that the Chinese and Japa-NESE- are infallibly, "as their lănguage and history declare, a grand aboriginal nation. He also says that the-

Tartiars or Moguls* were a colony from them, and that their wars with the Chinese can be traced back to 200 years before Christ; in which, about 87 years before Christ, the Chinese obtained a prodigious victory over

[^1]OF PARENT NATIONS.
them. After this, their vast nations fell into civil wars." In process of time, the numerous hordes that were vanquished, moved west in two divisions. One division settled in the confines of present.Persia; while the other, under the name of-

Huns, passed north west over the vast river Walga, ànd poured into Europe about 375 years after Christ, in such amazing numbers as no valour could withstand. They first encountered the Alani a Gothic people, whom they overpowẹred, but ädmitted as allies. The Alani and the other Gothic nations-who, even to the Caledonian woods. of the Picts, were of large limbs, elegant and blooming features, and light hair-were astonished at the very forms of these new invaders, distinguished by squat limbs, flat noses, broad faces, small black eyes, dark hair, with little or no beard; as indeed are the present Tartars. The Ostrogoths also yielded to the Hunnic swarnis, and were admitted as allies, on condition of fighting in their armiés. The Huns now commanded by Balamir, as they were afterwards by three others before the famous Attila, entered the ${ }^{2}$ Vesigothic territory, and expelled the inhabifants, who found it in vain to resist such myriads of warlike invaders. But as the Huss came not in upon the - Scythic settlements. till the fourth century of our æra, there is every reason to conclude that the inhabitants; then far advanced in civilization, remained in their possessions; for though the Goths who came into the Roman Empire are counted only by thousands, those whom the Huns found, may be reckoned by millions; añd Busbéquius, with others, shews that the peasants of Crim Tartary still speak the Gothic. In the year 453, Ardaric, , King of the Ostrogoths, assisted by the Gefide, defeated

ORIGIN AND MIGRATIOXS

'the Huns,' &c. The remainder of the European Huns' much reduced, were afterwards nearly extinguished by the Igours of Siberia; so that in Hungary, whose name arose from that people, there is not one Hun.

2d, The East Indians.

The East Indians áre not Tartars, but a race and language of men to themselves. M. D'Anville says that "sciences and polity were found among the l ndians from, the earliest times in which their country was known. The enterprises of Cyrus, and of Darius son of Hystaspes, on India, preceded by an expedition of Semiramis, and by that attributed to Dionysius or Bacchus, have āfforded to the west no particular knowledge of this country. Nor did Europe acquire any geographical acquaintance with India till the invasion of it by. Alexander:"-As the ancient East Indians are noted for migrations to, and colonising other countries, they claim no further notice here.

$$
3 d \text {, The Scytha, Geta, or Goths. }
$$

The ancient Scìthians were aborigines of present Persia. 'Under their king 'Tanaus, they attacked and sub-' dued Vexores king of Egypt on the one hand, and conquered India on the other, about 1500 years before Ninus, or 3660 before Christ; extending their empire east and west from Egypt to the Ganges, and north and south from the Indian-ocean to the Caspian sea. About 1500 years after, or 2160 years before Christ, Ninus, subverted the Scythian errapire and established the Assyrian on its ruins; when, by consequence, the Scythe Nomades, a pastoral people of the north of Persia, crossed the Araxes and Causasuis to settle around the Euxine or'Black sea; leaving behind them the southern Scythe or Persians, who are the progenitors of the Persians of the present day. This asylum of the Scythinns north of the Euxine, corresponding with Little Tartary, Mr. P. in compliance with custom, calls ancient Scythia, as being the Parent country of the European or questern, as well as of the eastern Scyphins, who gradually extended from this nursery of valorous men, in either direction. We shall speak of these two principal divisions of the Scythians or Goths, and their colonies, in succession.

OF PARENT NATIONS.

1, Eaśterñ' Scythians. Butin regard to the eastern migration and somewhat retrogade motion of these Scytha, in what proportion those to the east of the Caspian sea, known as Scytha intra Imaum et Scytha extra Imaum, were derived from the Euxine, or directly from the ancient Scythic empire, seems to rest in a degree of uncertainty. In his statement of these eastern settle. ments, Mr. P. explicitly says that the Massageia and Sacia, who were the Scytha intra Imaum, and the Chate or Getes and fabulous Arimasti, who were the Scyth? extra Imaum, on the authority of Diodorus Siculus, came respectively from the Palus Meotis. He also as expressly states that the Bactriani were Sace or old Scytha, who extended thus.far during the Sythic empire in Persia; for Ninus made war on them. But he speaks doubtfully of the Sogdiani and Margiani, rather inclining to derive the former from the sourc̣e of the Bactritiani, and the latter from that of the Massageta.
: Our author also informs us, on the authority of Dionysius the Geographer, that the positions between the Euxine and the Caspian seas, as Albania, Iberia, Colchis, and south of these, Armenia," were s'ícythic settlements:

ORIGIN•AND MIGRATIONS.

but that those of Colchis were dispersed by a cotviny of Egyptians about 1480 years before ${ }^{\circ}$ Christ; ( ${ }^{\text {(afteritwards }}$ the famous Colchians) attracted thither, as were the Argonauts, by the gold mines of the country.? Here also a small doubt abides. In Mr. P.'s laudable zeallo prove that the Gete, Goths, and Scyth fo were one people, 'he omits' to inform us whether these settlements were made as the Scrthinins passed over this tract to the neighbourhood of the Palus Maotis, or afterwards, by, retrogression. The judgment of every one, however, will most probably affirm the first alternative; as migrations 'generally leave' their traces, though seldom retrograde.

Let us consider this account of the eastern setilements of the Scythians sufficient for the relative weight of the subject, and return to Parent Scythia, formerly called Ancient or Littlé Scythia, now Little Tartary, ánd trace their westery progress.
*2, Western Scythians. The Scythar Nomades of the north of Persia, who'retired from the power of Ninus, having attained this fruitful situation about 2000 years before Chirist, had here their first encounter with the native Celts known by the appellative of Cimmerii, whom they did not finally expel from their fastness in the Tauric Chersonese, till 640 years before Christ; andjafter making' early settlements in the east, as' just seen;' they tarried here till about 1800 years befóre Christ, when they began to colonize-a: Thrace; and thence, Asia Minor, Illyricum, and Greece; which they completed in 300 years. In the neighbourhood of Thrace, respecting the north; we must not confound the nations of Iazyges and Roxolani with

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

ORIGIN AND'MIGRATIONS.

c. IllyRicum*. The hịstory of those Scyphinans who from Thrace sètlled the country betwêen the Danube and ${ }^{\text {ºn }}$ the Adriatic sea, is not a little obscure. Some centuries after coming hither, they successively submited to thein more thrifty brethrèn of Macédon and Romé. Excepting some Illyrian settlements on the neighbouring shores of:. Italy; the Sćythic migration on this route extended no further west; in which' direction the 'Celts still retained their Gallic possessions till about 500 years béfore Cheist, when the Germans, or northern Scythe, poured in upon them̂; having passed into Germany by a north-west direc; tion from Parent Scythia, as is hereinafter explained.
d. Greece. Those Scythians who went into Greece as above mentioned, 'were called Pelasgi; and äfterwards Hellenes; as was all Greece known prineipally by the. names first of Pelasgia and afterwards of Hellas among its own.inhabitants. The Pelaggi were the first possessor's of Greece of whom we have any histortc aceount: for the aborigines of Emrope penetrated into neither ex-p tremity of Italy nor Greece. To what .eminence the Greeks arose in arts and science, only rivalled. by their Scythian brethren in other ages and countries, is various. ly descanted on by Greek antiquaries: and to what ex1.ent two small' Egyntian colonies of Athens, and. Argos led by Cecrops ànd Daṇaus, and ore' Pherician colonys. of T̀hebés led by Cadmus, contributed to this eminence, . will probably ever rest undecided even by the most indefátigable of these enquirers. 'We have ialready seen that this Scythic branch' colonized Lycia; Pamphilia, and other paits of Asia Minor. Nor should we omit to mention the Greek colony of Massilia, now Marseilles, in France, who came from Phocia. a city of Ionia, 600 years before Christ; not to confound the same with the. Phanician colony of Marseilles, of 60 years posterior date, as is yet to be noticed. Besides passing eastwardly to Asia Minor, and thence to Marseilles, the Greeks or Pelasgi colonized-.

[^2]
OR PARENT NATIONS.

e. Italy. Mr. Pinkerton derives the Scythic settlers of Italy from four sources, and makes as many partitions of the country, corresponding with the settlements thus made; which, in regard to the three first, were about 1000 years before Christ; and 500 years before Christ; in regard to the last. Excepting the aboriginal Ceits, whom they found in the Gallic part, the Scythians were the first possessors of Italy.-We shall speak of these four partitions in succession; and then proceed to notice the Gothic settlements in Germany and the rest of Europe:

1st, The first of the divisions just alluded to, comprehends Grre ia-Magnu..Campania, and Latium; which was settled by Pelasgi from Arcadia. Some time after, a few other Pelasgi from Enhirus coming hither, were repulsed by these first colopists, who were erroneously thought to be aborigines. With many other proofs of the Greek origin of this portion of Italy, Mr. P. says, is. The Latin language is a clear proof of the origin of the people, being merely the $\boldsymbol{A}$ ©olic didect of the Greek, as Quintilian remarks, and as the learned well know."

2d, That part of Itcly_which lies opposite to Illyricum on the Adriatic sta, a part of which was called Peuketia, was settled by the Peuketi from Illyricum, a branch of. the great Basternic nation of Parent Scythia; who, by the by, forming themselyes into several other divisions, and proceeding in different directions, overran the rest of Europe; of which presently.

3d, The Etrurian $\bar{s}$, as we learn from Herodotus. whom Pliny, Paterculus, and others of the best ancient writers follow, were a Lydian colony; and we have just been told that the Lydians were Scythians from Thrace direct. The Lydians were early polished by their neighbourhood with the Assyrians of Cahthadocia; hence the t6 Etrurians seem to have been skilled in the fine arts long before the Latins, as the many ancient-pieces preserved, shew."

4th, Tḥat part of Italy called Cisalnina Gallia, was settled by the German Gauls of the Basternic or Scythic rac̣e, about 500 years before Christ: They expelled the aboriginal Celts, who occupied no other part of Italy. But this is, in some measure, anticipating the movements of the Basternic nation, whom we must now attend to, in pursuing of the order of the first Scythic progress over Europe, by returning once more to the grand store-house of European nations; whence we shall proceed with our last, añ probably largest colonies, tó supply-$f$. Germany, Scandinavia, and the rest of Eurohe: Mr. Pinkerton enters on this article in the following emphatic; and, 'we may say, very exulting manner. "We are now arrived at the last and most important part of this dissertation: and a subject. upon which the whole modern history of Europe depends. If ẃe cannot shew the Germans to have been originally Scithe, this dissertation is inept. If we can, a field of wide curiosity and enquiry opens to the learned of Europe. For, the origin of government, manners, laws, in short, all of the antiquities of Europe, will assume a new appearance; and instead of being only traced to the woods of Germany, as Montesquieu and the greatest writers have done, may be followed through the long descriptions of the manners, &c:, of the Scythians and Thracians given by Herodotus; nay, even up to the aboriginal Scythian emfire of Persia. And beyond this there is no memorial of human affairs, save in Egypt alone, the history of which begins with Menes, the first king, about 4000 years before our æra; while the earliest appearance of the Scythinns in history is about 400 years after, when Vexores was king of Egypt, and Tanaus of the Scythe一not to mention the collateral light derived from the whole history of the Greeks and Romans, who were Scythe, as just shewn:"

OP PARENT NATIONS.

On this route we shall find the Scrthians, Geties, or Gotes not only peopling all Scandinavia and Germany, but extending ${ }^{\text {h }}$ hence and actually pòssessing Gaul and Shain. 500 years before. Christ, ás well as Britain and Ireland 300 years before Christ, dispossessing the aboriginal Celts almost at pleasure.

Setting out then from the shores' of the Euxine with the Scythic migration towards Germany and Scandina: via, the Great Basternic nation engrosses attention. This nation sprung from Peuké, an island in the mouth of the Danube, and lièàrt of Parental Scythịa. In their gradual migration towards the Baltic, after sending a branch to Illyricum and Italy, afore-mentioned, the Bas terne beeame so numerous as to extend over one-fifih of ancient Germany; in length $500^{\prime}$ miles from the Euxjne to the Baltic, and in breadth 150 miles between the Vistula on the west; and the Niemen and Dneither on the east. It was this Scythian nation with whom the Sarmate, their Asiatic neighbours, were so much confounded by superficial writers; the latter having come by detachments into Europe'at a posterior date.tó, and' settled in amity among, the former, under the names of Venédi, Fenni, Roxolani, Lazyges, E'c;, of whom hereafter.

Progressing from this extensive tract to the west, and the north, the name of Basterná seems to be merged in those of-Atmoni, Sitones, and, Peukini. " Of these three divisions of Basterne,", says Mr. P. "The Atmoni, if I mistake not, spreading west along the Danube, became the Southern Basterna, or those properly and absolutely so called by the ancients; while the Sitones and Peukini proceeded northward till they arrived at the Baltic sea and Scandinavia." In this manner did the Scytric population diffuse itself over Scandinavia' and Germany, and penetrate into Gaul, the Galliç part of Italy, and Spain, as early as 500 years before Christ: Having now pervaded the whole of the European continent-besides making the famous expedition into Asia minor, under Lommorius and Lotarius, to found the kingdom Galatia, which consisted of a detachment of those, Gauls who had invaded ltaly under Brennus-they yet find the isolated spots of Britain and Ireland to the west, where they make settlements ' 300 years before" Christ: Of these settlers, the Piks and Belga are particularly distinguished. The Piks passed from Scandinavia to the north of Britain; and if they were not the immediate descendants of the Peukini, whom we have traced from the island of Peuke in the mouth of the Danube, it is very evident 'that with so' plausible a pretext, "etymological mania" would find very little difficulty in deriving Piks. from : Peuké. .'The Belga went from Gaul to the south of Britain, driving before them the scanty remains of the Celts, and in like'manner settled in Ireland about the period above noted. The Scythic or Gothic language and manners have also been much preserved in the wilds of Iceland; which was colonized from-Norway in the ninth century, and might also be called Scyinic, if this settlement be not of too modern a date.

OF PARENT UATIONS.

This account of the settlements of the Gete, Scyтнe, or Goths in Europe, forms Mr. Pínkerton's "Eloochs of the first-Gothic progress over Europe." His "Ehochs of the second Gothic hrogress from Getia and from Germany over Euron'" relate to the inundation of these nations, who had remained in a semibarbarous state, upon their more refined brethren of the south; involving the Roman empire in ruin. The substance of these epochas shall be joined hereto; and for a clear elucidation of them; nothing can be more appropriate than the two maps dedicated to these subjects, which we have designed and engraved for our $\dot{A} n c i e n t ~ G e o g r a f i h i c a l ~ a n d ~$ Historical Atlas.

4th, The Assyrians.

All that we see relating to this head in the dissertation of our author, is the following; which.I presume is sufficient at least for the object of this abstract.
Belus, the Nimrod of scripture, is reputed the founder of the Tower of Babel at Babylon, which was followed by the dispersion of mankind: his šon Ninús was certainly the founder of the Assyrian empire, whose capital was

```
ORIGIN AND MIGRATIONS',
```

Babylon, and the-dispersion of the Scythians followed. But. Nimirod was of the race of Hame by Scripture account. To this race also, belonged the fathers of the nar tions along the east end of the Mediterranean, the Arabic gulf or Red sea, and through all Arabia. And certain it is that the Arabic is a dialect of the Grand, Assyrian language, as are the Syrian, Phœnician,' Hebrew, Chaldee, Contic, Abyssinian, &c., all sister dialects: and the Assy.rians. who overturned the Scythian empire, formed one great language or race of men, extending along the east end of the Mediterranean and Arabian seas, to the Erythræan sea, gulf of Persia, and river-Euphrates. . From them the Egyftians and White Ethiofians must also have sprung, 'as their language and situation declare. From this we are authorised to consider as, branches of,the Assyrian race, the Egyptian colonies of Colchis, of Athens; and of Argus: also the Phœnician colonies of Thebes, in . Greece; of 'Hinho, Utica, and Carthage, in Africa; of Massilia, in Gaul; and of Gades, in Spain (who extended their commerce into Britain and Gaul long e're Scandinavia and Germany were at all known to the Greeks or Romans): and the Aquitani, in Gaul, who are traced back as far as Arabia, whence they passed through Africa: under the name of Mauri, through Spain under the name of Iberi, into Gaul under that of Aquitani; where they.were found by Julius Cæsar, making counter strokes with the Belga, upon the ill fated Celts: and that the great progenitor of this extensive family of mankind, according to scripture, was Ham.* But to be more particular of the Egyttian and Phanician colonies-

[^3]
THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

ORIGIN AND MIGRATIONS

from Tyre, about 800 years before Christ. They settled the island of Gades, in Spain, 1200 years before Christ; and Massila, in Gaul, 539 before Christ.

The reader now perceives how extensively tḥe Scythian and Assyrian races intermixed in "Asia Minor, and in Greece in particular. And-observing that the latter had the advantage of the former in civilization and arts, wherever they united, he will be inclined to demur on the title of preference given the Scythic, by Mr. P., over all other races of mankind. But granting the higher distinction of the Phœnicians and Egyptians about the " Ehochs of the first Scythic progress over Europie,", and passing by the renown that the Scythic race attained in Greece and Rome, which is plausibly attributed to their neighbors of the Assyifin face, the present refinement of Europe and America, which Mr. P., calls "a Scythic empire of the present day though not under one sovereign," far surpasses the social effort of any previous empirewaving the mortifying anticipation of the savage fate that seems once more universally in pending, With their unjust aversion to Assyrian rivalship, how much more then should the feelings of our Scythian monopolisers of human excellence revolt at the opinion of Major Renneill, that the ancient Egyptians had black skin and crisjo-. ed hair as the degraded scrives' of America; of which he cites the far-famed Sèsostrís âs a special instance.* Such a position scarcely deserves the epithet of hyhothetical, much less to gain credeñe in defiance of the Egyptian Mummies as proofs of the contrary. .

[^4]OF PARENT NATIONS.

Sth, The Sarmatre.
"The Sarmate were in all appearance, originally, possessors of south-west Tartary, but expelled by the Tartars. For their speech, the Sarmatic or Sclavonic, is remote from the Tartaric; and their persons, full of grace and majesty, are different from those of the 'Tartars: so that they are not of Tartaric' origin. Besides provingthat they are not of Tartaric origin, many reasons are adduced by Mr. P. to shew that they are an original-race.

They entered Europe about 1000 yèars before Christ; for they were far behind the Scytho in their progress, and it is clear that upon their entry, they found the greater part of Europe occupied by the Scytha, who bounded them on the south-west and north-west. Hence, in process of time, several of the Sarmatic and Scythic tribes of their frontier, settled among each other, and generally waged war in alliance. 'Those of the Sarmata who are found entirely within the Scythic territory, are three nations of Iazyges, viz. the Iazyges Eneocadla, on the east of the mouth of the Tyrar; the Iazyges Mrota, on the north of the Mrotis; and chiefly, the Iazyges Me: tanasta, between the Danube and Teiss, above I'annonia. Besides these; we find several other Sarmatic nations within the territory above assigned to the Basternic na: tion of Scythe as we proceed northward upon the Baltic, such as the Venedi, the Hirri, and the Fenni. This country, commonly known as Germano-Sarmatia, was the. ultimate tract of Europe on the north-east in those remote periods, though in more modern times, that boundary runs much further to the north-east.

A great Sarmatic nation, the Roxolani, gave name to Russia: and that part of Poland, far from Russia, call. ed Red or Black Russia, took its name from a part of the Roxolani who had penetrated to that corner and settled. Their posterity, as may be said of the Sarmate in general, still subsist in the inhabitants of Russia and $\mathrm{P}_{0}$ land.

6th, The C'elts.

We are informed that the Celts were the most ancient inhabitants of Europe that can be traced; and wete, to the after settlers, what the aboriginal savages of America are to the European settlers there. . These people form themselves, under two grand divisions. 1st, The Celts properly and peculiarly so called; and 2 d, 'The Cimbri, Cimmerii, or Cumri.

1. The Celits profer, occupied that part of Europe which lies west and south of the Rhine, even beyond the Pyrenees; but extended not beyond the Gallic part of Italy. They were finally pent up in the extremity of Gaul, by the Scythians, under the name Betga, on the north; and the Aquitani, a Mauric people, on the south; whence a portion of them were pursued by a portion of the Belga into the south of Britain, about 300 years before Christ; and again driven thence about the same• time to Ireland, by their brethren the Cimbri or Cumri, who were the first inhabitants, and presumed by Mr. P. to have come to the north of Britain from the opposite shores of Germany, at a very remote period. -
2. The Cimmerii, Cimbri, or Cumri, are by much the larger division of the original Celtic inhabitants of Europe, and are supposed to spring from a northern progress of the proper Celts. They possessed all ancient Germany, according to the enlarged boundary of Mr. P., when they were disturbed in their peaceful pos.

OF PARENT NATIONS.
sessions by the obtruding Scythians, at intervals, from 2000 to 500 years before Christ.

At the first Scythic pressure from the east, if not at an earlier period, a part of the Cimbri or Cumri, of the north-west corner of Germany, are supposed by our author to have passed into the north of Britain; being the oldest inhabitants that can be tràced, and leaving Cumraic names to rivers and mountains even in the furthest Ebuides, (Hebrides or Western Isles). Of these we are told that the present Celto-Welch and Highlanders of Scotland are remains; as are the Celt-Itish the remains of the Gael or proper Celts, who passed from Gaul to Britain, and were promoted thence to Ireland, by the Cumri, about 300 years before Christ, as just mentioned. These Celt-Irish, Celto-Welch, and the Highlanders of Scotland are the only Celtic remains that Mr. P. will allow of in all Europe.

The few remaining Cimbri of this corner of Germany were every where surrounded by the Scytha about $100^{\circ}$ years before Christ, whèn the Scandinavian Scythæ̈ poured down upon them, and drove them and the Teuitones (of Scythic origin) before them. The southern Germans permitted them to pass through their territories in search of new hábitations. - They ruled Gaul and ravaged Spain awhile, till turning upon Italy, they were almost extinguished by the sword of Marius 102 years before Christ.

We' have already seen, incidentally, (as indeed have we *scen nearly the whole of this article on the Celts'),that a part of the Cimbri or Cimmerii for a long. while defended. themselves against the Scythe in the Tauric Chersonese, or were neglected by them till 646 years before, Christ; when passing the Cimmerian Bosphorus, they made their way into Asia Minor over the mountains of Caucasus. The Scythians pursued them, vanquishèd, and perhaps extinguished them.

7 th, The Fins or Láhlanders.
Mr. P. endeavours to distinguish between the Fins and the Fenni;' as he would shew that the former were aboriginals of Finland, Lapland, \&c.;'and the latter a nation of Sarmatic origin. But with due deference, I think his words' are inconclusive, or rather inclining to, a contrary opinion', that they are one and' the same heothle, of the Sarmatic race. For, notwithstanding he says, severally, that " the northern Fins including Laplanders, seem to have been infallibly aborigines of their country; for they are so weak, so peaceable, and their soil so wretched, that they could have vanquished no nation, and no nation could envy them their "possessions in climes "beyond the solar road;", and speaking of the western progress of the Scytha, that "here every European is personally interested, save the Sarmatians of Russia and Poland; sáve the Celto-Welch of England, the CeltIrish of Ireland, and the Highlanders of Scotland; and save the Fins of Hungary, Finland, and Lafland;'' 'yet he also states elsewhere; speaking of the Huris, \&c., that "the remainder of the European Huns was but vẹry small; and afterwards nearly extinguished by the Igours of Siberic-and the Hungarians proper, are Igours, a Finnish people, who settled there in the ninth century.". It needs only to be demanded, if these Finnish Igours ${ }^{\circ}$ from Siberia, the quarter "whence the Sarmatians were expelled by the Tartars;"" were the "Fin's of 'Hungary, Lafland, and Finland," why should Mr. P. consider'

THE FEUDAL SYSTEM.

these as aboriginals of Finland and Laplańd, whilst he distinguishes the Finnish I'ours, or Fenni as of Sarmatic origin? Perhàps our author did not consider this póint to be of much moment in a dissertation on the Goths, or he had been less ambiguous.

THE FEUDAL SYSTEM.
We cannot fórbear subjoining here, what Mr. Pinkerton says on the origin and corruption of the Feudal System; though, without disparagement to its military convenience and utility in the periods of simplicity out of which it arose, we should unanimously accord its éxtinguished state, as at least affording an opportunity of a more popular policy (howèver partial to the United States in its adoption as yet), notwithstanding Mr. P.'s specious regret of its fate.

He says-" The Feudal System has been treated of by many writers, but so uncommon a quality is penetration, that all of them to this day have confounded two grand divisions in its history which are totally dissimilar. These divisions are, 1st, The Feudal System; 2d, The corriufted Feudal System. The former extends from the earliest account of time, through the early history of Greece and Rome till the progress of society changed the manners of these nations; and through the early history of the Goths and Germans who overturned the Roman empire, down to the eleventh century. At this periodcommenced the corrunted feudal system, which lasted till the fifteenth century, when the feidal system, began, after its corruption, to dissolve quite away. The corruption of the feudal system took place soon after the petty kingdoms of the former ages were united into great monarchies, as the heptarchies in England became subject to our monarch; and so in other countries. This corruption is no more the feudal system than any other corruption is the substance preceding corruption, that is quite the reverse: and yet, such is modern superficiality, that it has been termed the feudal system; and all writers estimate the feudal system by its corruption only, juṣt as if we should judge of a republic by its condition when changed into an aristocracy. . About the eleventh century, by the change of small kingdoms into one great monarchy, and by a concatenation of other causes, which it would require a volume to detail, the feudal system corrufted (and corruftio, oftimi hessima) into a state of aristocratic tyranny and oppression. Before that period no such matter can be found. The greatest cause was, that nobility and estates annexed, were not hereditary till that time, so that the great werc kept in perpetual awe; and that check was removed, before the cities had attained such privileges and powers as to balance the no. bility. In ancient Greece and Italy, confined spots, cities were from the first the grand receptacles of society. To the want of cities, the subjection of the people to their lords and all the corrufted feudal system. is owing. To cities the ruin of that corrupted feudal system (generally called the feudal system) is solely to be ascrib. ed. Of the corrutited feudal system nothing shall be ad. ded here, as it commenced at a late period, and is foreign to my work; save one or two remarks on chivalry, an in. stitutión quite misunderstood. It was so heterogeneous" to the fiudal system, that, had the latter lasted pure, the former would never have appeared. But as it is often'

THE, FEUDAL SYSTEM .

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

lord and superior with gold, silver, and other precious gifts. Indeed the feudal system, about which so much noise is made, is the natural fruit of conquest, and is as old in the world as conquest. A territory is acquired, and the state or the general bestows it on the leaders and soldiers, on condition of military service, and of tokens acknowledging gratitude to donors. It was known to Lycurgus; for all the lands of Sparta were held in military tenure. It was known to Romulus, when he regulated Rome. It was known to Augustus, when he gave lands to his veterans, on condition that their sons should, at fifteen years of age, do military service. The reason it did not preponderate and corrupt in Greece and Rome was, that it was stifled by the necessary effects of cities as abovementioned. In Persia, where there were no cities of any powèr or privilege, it prepońderated and corrupted at an early period.
"The feudal system, whether in its original democra$c y$, or corrufted into aristocracy, must limit the power of kings; for men who hold their possessions on military service must, of course, have arms in their hands: and even in absolute governments the soldiers are free; witness the pretorian bands of imperial Rome, and the - Turkish janisaries. By the feudal system every man held arms and freedom in his hands. Montesquieu has begun his account of the feudal system with that of the ancient Germans, given by Tacitus; and prides himself with leaving off where others began. A writer more profound would leave off where Montesquieu begins, &c." ${ }^{*}$ So much for our author's remarks on a system whose prin. ciples have, communicated a tincture to almost every constitution of modern Europe. I shall now transcribe, ${ }^{4}$

EPOOHS.
first, The Epochs at which those Scythic hordes, who brought this system from Persia, made their first inroads upon Europe; and secondly, The Epochs at which their posterity, with whom it corrupted, effected, during a period of about, two hundred years, such wonderful changes in the civilized world, as involve the Roman empire in ruin, together with most of the stupendous monuments of arts and sciences, among which letters were the greatest sufferers-thereby causing the business of civilization, in a measure, to be commenced anew.

I. EPOCHS OF THE FIRST GOTHIC PROGRESS OVER EUROPE.*

The Scythians, whom the dawn of history dis- b.c. covers in present Persia under their king Tanaus,' attack Vexores king of Egypt, conquer Asia, and establish the Scythian empire 1500 years before Ninus, or - - - - . - 3660

Ninus, first monarch of the Assyrian empire, established the same by subverting the Scythian; when by consequence, the Scythæ Nomades of the north of Persia cross the river Araxes and Mount Caucasus ànd settle around the Euxine sea, - 2160

[^5]The Scythians begin settlements in Thrace, Illy- B.c. rium, Greece, and Asia Minor, . . . - 1800

The Scythians have completely peoplèd Thrace, Illyrium, Greece, and Asia Minor, . - . 1500

The Scythians have peopled Italy, . . - 1000
The Scythians have peopled Germany and Scan: dinavia, as well as a great part of Gaúl and Spain, 500

The Belgæ, of Scythic origin, pass into the south of Britain and Ireland, . . . . . . . 300

The Piks, likewise of Scythic origin, pass intó the north of Britain, - - - - - 300
II. EPOCHS OF THE SECOND GOTHIC PROGRESS OVEAR EUROPE.
A.D. The Vesigoths* or Western-Getæ were the 250, Goths who, poured into Dacia, ravaged it, and marched on, south, over the Danube into Thrace.
251; Decius is defeated and slain in Mæsia by the Vesigoths or Western-Getæ.
252, Gallus purchases peace of the Goths by an annual tribute. They return to their own country.
260, The Franci, or free-men, a confederation of the Chauci Cherusci, Catti (who were great nations of Germany), Bructeri, Usipii, Tencteri, Salii, Ansivarri, &c. (who were smaller nations) burst through

* The Getæ or Parental Goths were the very people whom Darius found $50^{\circ} 0$ years before Christ, as Herodotus shews, in the identical country whence they now issue. Soon after this expédition of Darius, we find the Gethr or Goths divided into Vesigoths or western Goths, on the west of the Boristhenes; and Ostro. goths or Alani (a Scythic nation), on the east of the Boristhenes.
A.D. Gaul, and-ravage Spain: a part passing over into Africa.
The Alamanni, (all-men, men of all tribes, or 260, whole-men, &c.) a confederation of several tribes, of the vast German nations of the Suevi, invade Italy, and return laden with spoil.
260, The Ostrogoths seize on the small kingdom of the Bosporius Cimmerus which had long subsisted under Roman protection: afterwards in one naval expedition they take Trebisond, and ravage the Euxine shores; in a second, moving westward, they plunder Bithynia; and in a third they ravage Greece.
269, With another naval armament the Ostrogoths land in Macedonia. Claudius the emperor advancing against them, fought a great battle at Naissus in Dardania, and conquering them, obtained the, surnamé of Gothicus.
272, The Vesigoths, who extended over the north and west of Dacia, forced Aurelian to surrender that province.
272, The Almanni again invade Italy, but are repulsed by Aurelian.
276, The Alani invading Pontus, are defeated by Tacitus.
278, Probus builds a wall from the Rhine to the Danube about 200 miles long, to protect the empire from the German nations.
322; The Vesigoths no longer content with Dacia, pour into Illyricum, but are expelled by Constatítine $I$.
381, The Vandals, also an association of Suevian
A.D. tribes, having found Germany open by the frequent transitions of the Franks and Alamanni south-west, had gradually spread south-east, till they bordered on the. Vesigoths, and had many conflicts with them.
331, Constantine I. again repels the Goths and conquers 'a few Sarmatians.
S55, The Franks and Alamanni pass the Rhine and ravage Gaul; but are conquered and repelled by Julian.
366, The Alamanni again invade Gaul, and are again defeated.
367, Ulphilas, bishop of those Goths who had been allowed by Constantine II. to settle in Mæsia, translates the Scriptures into Gothic; a part of which translation now remains, and before the year 400 most of the Gothic nations in the Roman empire and on its frontiers, became Christians.
370, The Burgundians, a Vandalic race, who appeared under this name on the south-west of Germany, about present Alsace, invade Gaul.
370, The Saxones, a Vandalic race also, and whom Ptolemy first mentions at the month of the Elbe, ravage the coasts of Gaul and Britain.
370, The Piks, a German Gothic people from Scandinavia, ravage the north of Britain, and with their - confederates the Scots, advance even to London where they are sepelled by Theodosius, general of Valentinian, to their ancient possessions beyond the Clyde and Forth:
370, Hermanric, king of the Ostrogoths or eastern Getæ, conquering the Vesigoths, the Heruli and

PROGRESS OVER EUROPE.

A,D. Venedi of Poland, and the Æstii of Prussia, with many other nations, is compared to Alexander the Great.
375, The Huns burst at once from Tartary upon the dominions of the Alani and Ostrogoths, whom they conquer, and âdmit as allies to fight in their armies.
376, : The Huns enter the Vesigothic territory; on which the inhabitants, conscious of inferiority, seek the protection of the emperor Valens, and gain admittance into the Roman territory of Mæsia, when, being refused provisions, they revolt.
377, The Goths penetrate into Thrace.
378, On the 9th of August was fought the famous battle of Adrianople, in which Valens was de. feated and slain by the Goths. But the Goths fallIng into intestine divisions, were in the course of a dozen years repelled into Pannonia; an army of 40,000 Goths being retained for the defence of the empire.
395, The Goths unanimously rise under the command of the great Alaric.
396, Alaric ravàges Greece.
400-403, Alaric invades Italy-is defeated by Stilicho, who was himself a Vandalic Goth.

* 406, Radagaisus, at the head of a large army of German nations, viz, Vandals, Suevi,' Burgundians, &c, invades Italy. He is likewise defeated by Stilicho, but the remains of his army ravage Gaul.
408, Alaric again invades Italy;-besieges' Rome thrice, and at length takes it in 410 , in which year he died. The moderation of the Goths is highly.

RPOCHS OF GOTHIC

A.D. plaised by several cotemporary writers: 'The mo-numents-of art suffered not so much from them, as from time and barbarous pontiffs.
412, Ataulphus, brother-in-law to Alaric, and his elected successor, makes peace with the Romans, and marches the Vesigoths into the south of Gaul, which they possess for a long time.
415, The Suevi, Vandals, and Alani, having in 409. penetrated from the south-west of Germany into Gaul, which they ravaged, were afterwards forced by Constantine, brother-in-law of Honorius, to : abandon Gaul, and pass into Spain. Ataulphus, king of the Vesigoths, now leads his forces against them; conquers them, and restores Spain to the Romans, with the exception of Gallicia, which the Suevi and Vandals still retained.
420, The Franks, Burgundians, and Vesigoths obtain a permanent seat and dominion in Gaut. The first in Belgic Gaul, on the north, the second in Lugdunensis and present Burgundy, in the middle; the last in Narbonensis and Aquitain, on the south.
429, The Vandals of Spain pass into Africa :under Genseric, their king, and establish the Vandalic kingdom there, which endured 96 years, when it was' terminated by the conquest of the celebrated Roman general Belisarius.
430, The great $\dot{A}_{t t} \dot{i}^{a}$, king of the Huns, begins to reign about this time. His fame chiefly sprung from the terror he spread into the Roman empire; ${ }^{}$ his conquests have been ridiculously magnified. On ${ }^{}$ the east the. Ostrogoths, the Gepidæ, and Herul, obeyed him; as did the Rugii, and Thuringi on the

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

EPOCHS OF GOTHIC

A.D. the polygamy &c., of the Huns, inimical to the Christian faith, it is likely, (Divine causes apart) we had all been Mahometans-so much may depend on one hour.
452, Attila again comes upon Italy, but spares Rome. He is again defeated by Torismond, king of the Vesigoths; and dies the next year. 'His vast empire, being now divided among his discordant sons, falls at once like a meteor that passes over one half the globe and then in an instant vanishes forever.
453, Ardaric, king of the Ostrogoths, assisted by the Gepidæ, defeats the Huns, whom he had abandoned in 'Pannonia; seizes the palace of Attila, with all Dacia and Illyricum. The remainder of the European Huns was but small, and afterwards nearly ex́tinguished by the Igours of Siberia. In Hungary there is not one Hun, though the name arose from the Huns. The Hungarians proper are Igours, a Finnish people, who settled there in the ninth century.
4.55, Genseric, king of the African Vandals, takes Rome.
456, - Theodoric, king of the Vesigoths, defeats 'the Suevi in Spain.
462-472, Euric, successor of Theodoric, makes conquests in the north-west of Gaul. Save only Gallicia, which the Suevi held, and which was af. terwards united to the Gothic empire about 550, by Leovigild-Euric subdues all Spain, and thus begins the Gothic empire there; which lasted till 713, when the Moors conquered the Goths and maintained part of their Spanish domains till the

PROGRESS OVER EUROPE.
A.D. end of the fifteenth century. The present Spaniards are descendants of the Vesigoths, Romans, and Iberians.
475, Odoacer at the head of the Turcilingi, Scyrri, Heruli, and other mixed Sarmatic and Gothic tribes, terminates the Roman empire in the west; and reigns at Rome fourteen years.
490, Theodoric the Great, king of the Ostrogoths in Pannonia, vanquishes Odoacer, and rules Italy, 'which is' now overwhelmed with Ostrogoths.
490-508, The Franks, under Clovis, subdued the Vesigoths in Gaul, and the Burgundians; an event with which properly commences the French kingdom.
400-453, "The Lombards came from the centre of Germany, thence moving south-east till they settle in Pannonia about 400 years after Christ, or perhaps after Attila's death, or about 453, when the Gepidæ of whom ancient authors call the Lombáids or Langobardi a part, seized Dacia: .In Pannonia the Lombards remained till about s70, When under Alboin they seized on the north of Italy; afterwards holding almost the whole, save Rome and Ravenna, till 773, When Desiderius the last king was vanquished by Charlemagne. The present race of Italy spring bards.

EPITOME

of

ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY.

PART I. PROFANE GEOGRÁṔHY.

CHAPTER I.

E UROPE.

TO avoid repetition at the commencement of each of the Chapters which compose this Part of our subject, we must here refer to an account of the "progress and - extent of Ancient' Geogranhy," given in the foregoing, Introduction; from which, the pupil will derive as clear a conception as we can impart, relative to the bounds' of ancient knowledge in regard to either of these grand divisions of the Earth: Any farther particulars that can be given in regard to these limits, will occur in the details of the series of Sections proper to these Chapters.

We would recommend also, to the pupil, to keep up a continual comparison between the accounts given, in ; the Chapters and Sections, of the inhabitants of countries of which they treat, and that given of the origin and migration of ancient nations in the Introduction; for in order to avoid repetition; when that abstract from Pinkerton's dissertation is sufficiently full, we shall rely upon its being attended to without further notice. In making this comparison, if the student should occasionally observe, not only a want of correspondence, but also a material contrariety between the Introduction and the sequel; the explanation is this,- That on many of these topics, particularly in regard to the inhabitants of remote. regions, and those of high antiquity who occupied any country, the ancient authors differed exceedingly from each other; wherefore we should not expect their interpreters either to reconçile them or consent with each other. Hence it will be admitted that consistency is $n$ so desirable here, as it is that we give the opinion of the best authors; so that the tyro, when he becomes profound, may see that we have not deluded him with ideas of certainty, on subjects which he must ultimately regard as measurably hypothetical. But withal, we should do justice to the early writers who differ in their notices, at least of the original settlements of any country;-by remarking; that at some period there may have existed equally solid data for the allusions, of each, as it is a palpable impossibility precisely to designate, for a succession of periods; the locality of an ever wandering people; such. as the original settlers or Nomadés of every country.

SECTION FIRST.

HIBERNIA VEL IERNE,

IRELAND:
The name of this great island is variously read. That of Ierne', in some authors of antiquity, has a great affinity to the name of Erin, which'it bears among the people who inhabit it, compounded of $I a r$, west, and $I n$, an island, and from which is formed its present denomination of Ireland. Cæsar is the first author who mentions Ireland under the name of Hibernia: and therein he might.either have latinized the $H^{\prime}$ Yverdhon of the southern Britons; or, what is more probable, given it a name that suited his own ideas of its air and climate.' In times just preceding the fall of the western empire, we find this island mentioned under the name of Scotia; whence its inhabitants, under the name of Scoti, issued to invade the noith of Britain.

The Romans never having carried their arms into Ireland, had no other knowledge of it, than what commerce furnished between two lands in sight of each other. It would be difficult, not to say inept, to recount the detail which the geography of Ptolemy furnishes of Hibernia. To what we have said of the origin of the Irish people, in the Introduction, we will only add here that some writers imputed much of her early population to Iberia or Spain.
section seciond.
albion vel britannia,
GREAT BRITALN.
. The Phœenician colony of Gades, now Cadiz, had a very early commercial acquaintance with Britain, as well as with Gaul, which their policy kept secret. It was unknown to the Romans. till it was invaded by Julius Cæsar during his Gallic wars before Christ 55. It was ascertained to be an island by Agricola, who sailed around it.

BRITGNNIA ROMANA. $\cdot$

> England, Wales, and hart of Scotland.

When Cæsar passed into Britain, hé ädvanced only to the banks of the Thames, which merely served, as it were, to show him the country. Augustus, little attached to extending the limits of the empire, neglected the conquest of it : and it was not seriously invaded till the, reign of Claudius, when the part-nearest to Gaul; between the east and south; was subjected. Under the reign of Domitian, the Roman' arms commanded by - Agricola penetrated even to Cáledonia; that is to say, into the centre of Scotland. The difficulty of maintaining this distant frontier against the assaults of the unconquered people, determined Adrian to contract the - limits of the Roman province in Britain, and separate it from the barbarous country by a rampart of eighty miles in length, from the bottom of the gulf now called Solway Frith, to Tinmouth, which is the entrance of a river on the east side of the island. Severus.carried these limits farther, in constructing another rampart, of thir-ty-t wo miles, in the narrowest part of the island between Glota, or the river Clyde, and the bottom of Bobotria, or the gulf near which the city of Edinburgh stands.

The multiplication of provinces, which prevailed throughout the Roman empire, furnished in this island, a Britannia Prima, and Secunda; a Flavia Casariensis, a Maxima Casuriensis, and a Válentia. After hulding this part of the British isle for more than 400 years, being no longer able to defend so distant a province, the Romans relinquished it to the old inhabitants; who, calling

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

is indisputable that numerous tribes, crossing over from Gaul, established themselves in the southern parts of it. A great analogy in the language, identity of religion, and a conformity of manners, though less civilized in Britain than in Gaul; are an unequivocal testimony of affinity between the people. But the reddish hair and stature of the Caledonians persuaded Tacitus that these were originally from Germany; while the swarthy tint and curled locks of the Silures, caused them to be deemed of Iberian origin.--We have already been somewhat minute upon the ancient inhabitants of Britain in the preceding pages:

SECTION THIRD.

ORCADES VEL EBUDES INSÜL宅,

 THE ORENEYS OR WESTERN ISLES.At the extremity of Caledonia are the Orcades. As there is mention of these islands before a Roman fleet circumnavigated Britain, when Agricola commanded there, what Tacitus reports, of their being then disco:vered and conquered, must only be understood with respect to the last of these terms. The ancients were not entirely ignorant of the islands of the western shores of Scotland, which they called Ebudes, and which are now named, by reason of their situation, the Western Isles. But they are mentioned in a manner too desultory and indistinct to authorise a particular detail of them here.

SCANDINAVIA, SCANZA, VEL BALTIA,

 PARTS OF, NORWAY, SWEDEN, DENMARK, &C.Scandinavia is also named by abbreviation Scandia, and in the writers of a succeeding age we read Scan2IA. Antiquity had yet another name for it, which is Balita, remarkable for its affinity with the Baltic Sea, which borders Scandinavia.

The ancients had a very imperfect knowledge of Scinninavia; believing it to be totally encompassed by the sea, and even composed of many islands. The manner in which these islands of the name of Scandy are represented in the chart prepared by Ptolemy has no relation to any real state of the country. The south. ern extremity however, and of which the Danish isles of Zealand, Funen, &c. make the appendages, recall in the name of Skany, or Scane, the memory of its ancient denomination. Tacitus, without naming Scandinavia, speaking of this country as being environed by the ocean, which forms spacious gulfs, embracing islands of great extent, ascribes it to Suevia, and places two nations therein. What he reports of the Suiones, in having a marine, appears remarkable, when we recollect that the ancient laws concerning navigation had their, origin in Wisby in the isle of Gothland. The country to which Tacitus conducts us retains the name of Sueonia, in the writers of the middle age, speaking precisely of Sweden. The other nation, the Sitones, whose sovereignty was' in the hands̀ of a woman, may have been Norway.

According to Pliny, the only part of Scandinavia which was known, was occupied by the Hilleviones, a numerous nation. Among the divers names of countries and people reported by Jornandes we find Hallin; and that which is contiguous to the particular province of Skane is still called Halland. Although the proper name of a principal country of ancient Scandinavia be Gothland, and, according to the historians of the Goths, Scanzia insula was the cradle of that illustrious nation, we must say that the account is not justified by the authority of any of the Roman writers. But we may conjecture that a people named Guta by Ptolemy, have some relation to them; remarking withal in Jornandes, that a nation distinguished as very brave and addicted to war were called Gauti-Goth.

According to the ancient error which divided the continent of Scandinavia into many islands, there are found in Pliny the names of Bergos and Nerigos, as proper to two of these islands; the former being the place of embarcation for Thule, the present Shetland Isles. It is evident, that the first under consideration is Bergen, one of the principal towns in Norway, having a port much frequented, and the name which succeeded being attributed to the largest island, is applicable to the country itself, of which the proper and local denomination is Norge instead of Norway.

But there is recognised, in this country, another Thule described by Procopius, the name of which is preserved in the canton Telemark; for it is certain that this author leads usto Scandinavia when he comprises the people called Scrito-Finni in Thule. These Fins were so called according to Paulus Diaconus, from the lightness and vivacity of their course over the snows and ice, which they pursued on wooden skates. The promontory between the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland, offering the appearance of a great island, was called- Finningia. Tacitus describes the Finni or Fenni, as very miserable; and that of the Finns of Thule is little better in Proco-pius.-We have already enlarged upon many errors respecting the knowledge the ancients possessed of these northern regions, in the introduction, which need not be repeated here.

SECTION FIFTH.

SARMATIA EUROPÆA ET ASIATICA,*

 european and asiatic russia, &c.The Vistula is regarded as the separation between Sarmatia and ancient Germany; and the Tanais makes the division between the European and Asiatic Sarmatia, towards the lower part, of its course, tending to the Palus Mrotis. Thence, and from the Cimmerian Bosphorus, the Asiatic: part, bounded on the south by the Euxine and mount Caucasus, extends as far as the C"ashian sea, the northern shores of which it covers; to say nothing of the unknown extent of it, to the north-east. - At anearlier period, than that of the ábove division, when this track was first settled by the Scythians and Sarmatians, that part of it here called Asiatic Sarmatia would

-     * ${ }_{\mathrm{e}}$ To preserve Sarmatià entire we have tiespassed upon the boundaries of Asia.
attach itself to Eastern Scythia, according to Mr. Pinkerton; as was that part of Euronean Sarmatia now called Little Tartary, the true Parential or Ancient Scythia. About the same time also, that part here distinguishedas Germáno-Sarmatia would fall in the limits of Germania; circumscribing, the real Sarmatia within a much smaller north-eastern limit, till ber numerous tribes penetrated farther into Europe, and, intermixing with the Scythians who had preceded-them, with what degree of justice we say not, changed the name of the country. *

To give a general idea of this great nation, and to distinguish what is Germanic on one side, from what is Sarmatic on the other, it müst be observed, that wherever a.Sclavonian dialect is spoken, the natives are Sarmatians. And if we find a language fundamentally the same established in countries distant from ancient SARmatia, the reason is, that swarms from the same hive settled in divers parts of Germany, as far as the Elbe; and south of the Danube, as far as the Adriatic sea.

We' now proceed to an indication of some of the principal among the numerous nations which were found scattered over the immense expanse of Sarmatia. The Venedi extended along the shores of the Baltic, to a considerable distance in the interior country; and if their name be remarked as subsisting in that of Wenden, in a district of Livonia, it is only in a partial manner, and holding out but a small proportion to the extent which the Venedi occupied. Passing the Vistula, the Venedi took possession of the lands between that river and the Elbe; that had been evacuated about the close of the fourth century by the Vanduli, whose nàme is seen sometimes erroncously confounded with that of the Venedi. The country that the Venedi occupied in the tenth century was that of the Pruzzi, whose name present use has changed into Borussi.-It is on this shore that the sea casts up amber, called by the natives of the country Glass or Gles, by the Romans Succinum, by the Greeks Electron: and the islands called Electricles can only be the long and narrow sands that separate the sea from the gulfs named Frisch-haf and Curischhaf. According to Tacitus, amber was gathered by the 'Astiai; and notwithstanding that Ptolemy takes no notice of them, the name is preserved beyond the limits of Prussia, in Estonia, which makes a part of Livonia; and there is no doubt that the name of East-land, in the. writers of the middle ages, comes from its position res: pecting the Baltic sea.-According to Ptolemy, the great nations of Sarmatra besides the Venedi, with whom he begins his description, are the Peucini and Bastarna, who inhabited above Dacia, and the Iazyges and Roxolani, established on the Palus Mæotis. He adds, in the interior country, the Hamaxo-bii, or dweilers in wagons; and 「acitus distinguishes the Venedi, Peucini, and Bastarnae, from those, as having fixed abodes. He also speaks of the Peucini and Bastarnce as the same nation; so that the name of Peucini could only distinguish the part of this nation which was settled in the vicinity of the isle of Peuce, between the arms which form the mouths of the Danube, and whose modern name Piczina preserves an evident analogy to thatiof the Peucini:The Iazyges appear to have been a nation widely ex. tended; a part of them being named with the Tyri-geta, established on the Tyras or Dniester. Their position on the Palus is given to the Scythians by Herodotus; and the Roxolani are thought to have existed a little beyond these, as we see their name associated with those of the Bastarna and Daci in the treaty which the emperor Hadrian made with the king of the latter. There is moreover reason to believe that the name Roxolani is that of the Russians; who having occupied, in the middle of Poland, the lands which appear to have been the residence of the Bastarna, have left their name to one of the principal' provinces of this kingdom.-There must be added to these people the Budini and Geloni, whom Herodotus mentions in reciting the expedition of Darius son of Hystaspes against the Scythians. These two nations appear to have maintained a firm alliance, though of different races: the former being purely Sarmatic, and addicted to a pastoral life; while the latter were sprung from establishments which the Greeks had formed on the Euxine, and who had communicated to their neighbours the theology, and part of the language, of Greece. A city of the Budini, built of wood, and named Geloñus, which Darius destroyed by fire, must have been a work of the Geloni. By a detail which Herodotus furnishes of the canton of the Budini, but which the nature of our plan does not permit us to enter upon, we think we distinguish this canton on the right of the Borysthenes, below Kiow. But it appears, by other districts of this country, that this people had ascended higher; and that the Geloni, having been scattered from their primitive_dwellings, had become more Sarmaticthan they were in the tume that Herodotus speaks of: for they are represented as having colours stained upon

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SECTION SIXTH.

GERMANIA,

PARTS OF-DENMARK, UNITED PROVINCES, POLAND, PRUŚSIA, AND GERMANY.

We shall merely mention here four of the five grand divisions of Germània, according to Pliny, such as Ingavones, Vindili, Hermiones, and Istavones; the fifth, which he terms Peukini-Bastarna, forming the Gcrma-no-Sarmatia of later geographers, has been seen in the last section to which it properly belongs.

Separated from Gaul by the Rhine, Germaniáextended eastward to the Vistula, which may serve it for a limit on the side of Sarmatia; while the shore of the sea towards the north, and the course of the Danube, on the south, are elsewhere its boundaries." That which we now see comprised in Germany between the Danube and the Alps, did not belong to it.-The name of Germani did not belong to this nation from immenorial antiquity. There was a time when the Celts prevailed beyond the Rhine, as establishments formed in Germany by Celtic nations sufficiently evince. But when detachments of Germanic people invaded this country, 'Tacitus informs us that these strangers', superior in arms, were called Germani; and we find that, in the Tuetonic, or Gèmanic language, Ger-man signifies a warrior. The name of Alemagne, which the French extended to Germany, comes from a particular people, of whom the first mention is made at the beginning of the third century, under the reign of Caracalla.-This name óf Ale-man, or All-man, signifies properly a multitude of men; and the Alemanni appear to have been established in the country now called Swabia, in descending the Rhine to the confluence of the Maine. This nation, having detached itself from the Francic league, formed in the same age by the nations of the Lower Rhine, had arrived to the highest degree of power.

SECT.VI.
GERMANIA.

Koman ships had navigated the Baltic sea, and her arms had penetrated to the nearest circuit of the Elbe, near Magdeburg, in which quarter the trophies of Drusus were erécted; all of which served to restrain the savage inhabitants, but she never conquered them. The interior of this country remained unexplored till the age of Charlemagne; and the northern parts, for. some centuries after that period.

In-describing the different people, it will be found, agreeably to geographic order, to begin in the vicinity of the Rhine, and, ascending that river to the Danube, to penetrate thence through the bosom of the continent to the shores of the Balsic sea. Hence the Frisiz, or Frisons, separated from Gaul and the territory of the Batavi by that arm of the Rhine which preserves its name; appear the first.-The next were the Chauci, divided, as we may say of the Frisons, into Mujores and Minores; these inhabiting the hither side of the Weser, those occupsing the country between that river and the Elbé. This was one of the most illustrious nations of Germany, according to Tacitus, and distinguished by the love of justice. But Pliny represents as very miserable the life of those who mhabited a shore exposed to inunda. tions of the sea.-Between the Rhine and the Ems, above the Frisons, were the -Bructeri; and although Tacitus speaks of them as a nation destroyed by the ha. tred of their neighbours, we find them distinguishing themselves àmong the first of the Francic league. We read that a part of the country of the Bructeri was occupied by the Chamavi and the Angrivarii. The first, having previously inhabited the banks of the Rhine, had been successively replaced by the Tubantes and the Usizií; and it is believed that the second, established on the Weser in the vicinity of the Cherusci, have given the name to Angaria or Angria, to the dominion of the famous Saxon Witikind, who cost Charlemagne so múch trouble to reduce to obedience. And by the mention made of the Marsi, it is known that they also belonged to this canton.-The Cherusci were extended on both sides of the Weser above the Cauci; where, under the conduct of Arminius, they acquired an immortal name by the utter annihilation of three Roman legions, commanded by Varus. The Cherusci are afterwards describéd as a degenerate people, appearing subjected to a neighbouring power, who it is thought were the Cauci, as the dependencies of these, in the time of Tacitus, extended to the territory of the Catti. The victories of Germanicus had caused the ruin of the Cherusci, and involved a contiguous nation, named the Fosi, in their ca-lamity.-The.Chasuarii merit notice, if they.be the same people with the Attuarii, in the league of the Francs.We must again approach the Rhine, and remark the Sicambri; who inhabit the south side of the course of the Lippe. Pressed by the Catti, powerful neighbours, whom Cæsar calls Suevi, they were, together with the Ubii, received into Gaul, on the left bank of the Rhine, under Augustus; and there is reason to believe that the people who occupied this position under the name of Gugerni, were part of the Sicambri. It was in favour of the Ubii that Cæsar crossed the Rhine, at the extremity of the territory of Treves, ravaged that of the Sicambri, and caused the Catti to decamp.-The Tencteri inhabited the country contiguous to that which the Sicambri had possessed, and also above it.-A nation superior in power to any of these were the Catti, whom Cæsar, as just observed, calls Suevi. They occupied Hesse to the Sala in Thuringia; and Weteravia to the Maine. Among other circumstances which enhanced the merit of this, people, was that of their skill in the military-art; which, according to Tacitus, the Catti superadded to the quality of bravery common to the Germanic nations. The Mattiaci made part of the great Cattian nation, from whom were detached the Batavi, established in the extremity of Gaul. A firm alliance united the Mattiaci to c the Roman empire. It is remarked even, that a part of their territory contiguous to the Rhine and the Maine, was covered and separated from the exterior couatry by a vallum, or retrenchment, whereof evident vestiges are still subsisting: and the mount named Taunus, whose ridge prevails from the bank of the Rhine to above Frankfort, had a post fortified by Drusus.-Many have thought that the Alemanni issued from the Decumatic people. But.if we admit that the Alemanni were composed of divers people, as may be fairly inferred from the name that distinguishes them, yet it is extremely probable that they wøle more Germans and Suevians than Gauls. For whence should come' the present name of Suabia peculiar to this circle of Germany, although far distant from the ancient and primitive Suevi; whose name, in its severer and more appiopriate sense, was applicable to the Cattian nations beyond the Maine? However this be, we must remark, that the Roman dominion extended over the country which has taken the name of Suabia; which extent was even defined in its limits, and defended by a retrenchment, under the reign of Probus, embracing about sixty leagues of the course of the Danube from its sources. And this line is thought to have been garrisoned till about the reigns of Diocle. sian' and Máximian.-The Hermunduri, a potent nation, and attached to the Roman name, stretched from the shore of the same river far into the interior country, disputing with the Catti the possession of the Sala, and the salt which the waters of this river furnish to the town of Halle. They were only separated by the Elbé from another great nation, of whom we shall speak - hereafter. - Lower down on the same bank of the Danube the $\mathcal{N a r i s c i}$ succeed to the Hermunduri, and seem to have beén covered by Boiohemum or Bohemia.-In the name of this country, that of the more ancient people who occupied it is followed by a term in the German language, which signifies habitation or dwelling; and this name has continued to the same country in that of Bohemia, although the Boii had given place to the Marcomani, and these to a Sclavonic or Sarmatian people, who have long possessed it. It appears by Casar, that the Boii were associated.with the Helvetic nation; and the Helvetians, according to Tacitus, had advanced as far as the Mainé. The Marcomani, or Marcomanni, and their king Maroboduus, desirous of escaping from the Roman yoke, withdrew from the Rhine and Maine under Augustus, and wrested from the Boii the country which had borne their name; which name the same people, abandoning these their native seats, have carried with them into that now called Boiaria, Bayaria, or .Bavaria. -The Quadi, the most remote of the Germanic nations on the Danube, between the Marcomani and the Sarmatian people called Jazyges, and who make a figure in many passages of history, but' particularly under the reign of Marcus Aurelius, occupied what is now called Moravia. Under Tiberius, bands of Germans, who had followed princes driven from their states, were se $\mathrm{se}_{\mathrm{tt}}$ ed on the Danube, between the rivers Marus and Causus, or the Morava and the Vag; of which the former is the boundary between the modern kingdom of Hungary and the marquisate of Moravia. The establishmenti then made by a king of the Quadi, named Vannius, extended the limits of this nation to the river Granua, or Gran.

The internal part of this continent may be considered under the general name of Sueviz; whencè many Germanic nations, have borrowed the denomination under which they appear. Suevia was divided among a number of distinct people. -The Semnones, who were-reputed the noblest and most ancient of the Suevian nations, extended from the Elbe beyond the Oder. -Be hind the Marcomani and Quadi, as Tacitus expresses thimself; were the Marsigni, Gothoni, Osi, and Burï̈; an. arrangement which places these people towards the Oder, above the Semnones.-The Lygii are mentioned asta powerful nation, uniting under this name several people, whose dwellings, bordering on the Sarmatians, appear to have been on the Warta and the Vistula.-Tiacitus, naming the Langobardi after the Semnones, authorizes the opinion that they were established on the ;

Sprhé, which communicates with the Elbe. It is glorious to this people, says that historian, to maintain their independence amidst more powerful and hostile neighbours. Seeing the Langobardi or Lombards comprised in Suevia, can it be supposed that they who entered Italy under that name before the end of the sixth century were originally from a country separated from Germany by the Baltic Sea, according to the report of Paulus Diaconus, who nevertheless was a Lombard by nation? Their name (which, according to this historian, signifies longbeard) might have been employed in different regions.-Beyond the Lygii were the Gothones, whose residence is thought to have been near thè sea.-The name of the Rugii subsists in that of Rugenwald, which belongs to a maritime city of the farther Pomerania, as an island adjacent to the hither part of the same coun. try is called Rugen.-The Varini are supposed to have been in Mecklenburg; and all those approaching that shore appear to be comprised under the name of Vindili, the same that the Vandals have made famous.-To these may be added the Burgundiones, whose name is retained in that of Bourgogne, a province of France which fell to their share.-The entrance of the Cimbrian Chersonese, or that which corresponds with modern Holstein' 'contained two nations highly illustrious in their progress; on one side the $\operatorname{Angli}$, on the other the Saxones. These last were bounded in their primitive state by the issue of the Elbe; ${ }^{\text {a }}$ Itho ${ }^{u} \mathrm{~g}_{\mathrm{h}}$ now the name of Saxony, under which Westphalia is comprised, oxtends from the Rhine to the Oder. The great emigration of the Cimbri had reduced the remains of this nation, who continued in their ancient seats many agés

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

to Gaul in general, being that given by the natives to themselves. It is from the Romans that we learn'to call them Gulli, and their country Gallia.

The Roman policy of hoving allies beyond the limits of their provinces, and the pretext of succouring the city of Marseilles, and the Aduan people, caused the Roman armies ioenter $\mathbf{G}_{\text {aul }}$ an hundred and twenty years before thè Christian æra. .This first attemp̆t put Rome in possession of a province, which bordering the left bank of the Rhone to the sea, extended itself on the other side of the mountain of Cevennes, and thence along the sea to the $P$ yrenees. It was at first distinguished by the generic name of Provincia, being only surnamed Braccata, from a garment worn by the natives, which covered their thighs: at the same time the name of Comata was given to Celtic Gaul; because the people inhabiting it wore long hair. What remained of Gaul, and which was by much the greatest part, was a conquest reserved for Cæsar, more than sixty years after the precedent. The limits of the three nations werc then such as we have reported.-It would be as useless as tiresome to the reader to recount all the tribes and clans, into which these semi-barbarous nations distributed themselves. Many of them were the same that we have mentioned in the last section.

Augustus holding Gaul in the 27 th year before the Christian æra, made a new division of it, in which he showed more attention to equality in the extent of provinces, than to any distinction of the several people that inhabited them. Thus the nation of Aquitani, who were before limited to the Garonne, were made to communicate their name to a province which encroached upon the Celta, as far as the mouth of the Loire; and that which the Celta had, contiguoús to the Rhine, was taken into the limits of a province called Belgica. Lugdunum, a colony founded after the death of Julius, and before the Triumvirate, gave the name of Lugdunensis, or the Lionois, to what remained of Celtic Gaul; whilst the Roman province took that of Narbonensis, or Narbonois. But each of these provinces in the succession of time formed many others, insomuch that in about 400 years their number augmented to seventeen.

GAULLIA.

The government of the church in Gaul having conformed itself to that of the state, the ecclesiastical provinces, if we except those formed by the elevation of a few cities to the dignity of metropolitan sees, correspond with this division of civil provinces under the Lower Empire. This conformity extends even to the particular cantons of which each province was composed, the an. cient civitates, or communities, corresponding for the most part with the present dioceses. Places which are given undè the name of Fines, terminations, contribute to show a correspondence of limits. - The reader must. moreover be apprised, that the term communities, civitates, as used here, does not include the idea originally signified by that of civitas; but is specially employed to denote the districts or territories of the several distinct people, who were vefy numerous in the extent of Gaul. -From this connexion between its ancient and modern state, we may ínfer that this great province has suffered less alteration in its constitution by the revolutions which have followed the fall of the Roman empire, than other parts of the same.

Provence, and Savoy.

It seems reasonable to begin with that province which was first formed in Gaul, and which being fashioned more particularly to the manners of the reigning people, still preserves, in the vulgar dialect, a greater resemblance to the Roman language than the provinces detached towards the north, where this language might have been less familiar, or less pure in its use. In the multiplication of the number of provinces, we distinguish five under this article, entitled Narbonensis.-We see, at the commencement of the fourth century, the province, under the name of Viennensis, separated from-the Narbonois, 'and this again divided into two provinces, distinguished into first and second, by the name of the primitive.-The people cantoned in the Alps, the greatest part of -whom were not subjected to the yoke till after the first establishment of the Roman dominion in Gaul, composed ${ }_{t}{ }^{w_{o}}$ provinces; one under the name of Alhes Maritima; because they touched the sea; the other more remote upon the declivity of the Greek and Pennine Alps, and hence it was called Alhes Graia et Pen-nina.- The province distinguished by the name of Nar bonensis Prima, and of which the extent accords, generally speaking, with that now named Languedoc, was for the most part occupied by two considerable people; the Volce Arecomaci, towards the Rhone; and the Volca Tectosages, towards the Garonne. Northward of the Arecomaci were the Helvii, covered by the mountainous bank of the Rhone, in the territory which now composes the diocese of Viviers.-There is no mention of the Narbonensis before the fourth century was considerably advanced. Aqur Sextia or Aix, its metropolis, owed its foundation to Sextius Calvinus; who, in, the first expeditions of the Romans in Gaul, reduced the Salyes, or Saluvii, a powerful nation, who extended from the Rhone along the southern bank of the Durance, almost to the Alps; and with whom the Massilians had long to contend.-The province of Alhes Maritima, inclosed between the precedent and a chain of the Alps, reached to the sea, at the entrance of the ${ }^{-V a r,}$, and at the foot of the Alps called Maritima; which beyond this river bore a trophy erected to Augustus, for having subjected the people of the Alps between the two seas which embrace. Italy: for, although the Var may be cited as separating Gaul from Italy, the summit of the mountains whence the waters flow on each side properly constitutes their natural limits.

LU̇GDUNENSIS GALLIA-LEONOIS,

Normandy, Part of the Isle of France, with Orleannois, - Lyonnois, hart of Burgundy, Nivernois, hart of Cham. hagné, Bretagne, Touraine, Anjou, and Maine.
The name of .Lugáunénsis, was applied to a long' band of country making the middle of Gaul, from Lugdunum, or Lions, ش̈pon the Rhône, to the Western -Ocean, and limited on one side: by Aquitaine, and on the other by Belgica. In the division ${ }^{w}{ }_{h}{ }^{i}$ ch the four primitive provinces experienced, the Lionois was at first parted into two, first and second, or Lugdunensis Prima and Lugdunensis Secunda; and this division did not suffer another until the fourth century had elapsed; when, in place of two Lionoises, we find four, by a sub. sequen't dismemberment of each of the former two.

It must be observed, that a people called Lingones, now Langres, occupied Belgica before it made a part of the first Lionois, or Lugdunensis Prima; which without this áccession would have been too much diminished by the dismemberment of a new province, which the name, of fourth Lionois, or Lugdunensis Quarta, indicates to have been last formed. And because it was immediately contiguous to that from which it had been detached, to separate entirely the first Lionois from the second and third, we have mentioned it in connexion with the first.'The second Lionois, or Lugdunensis Secunda, after the third had been detached from it, was nearly comprised in the present limits of Normandy. - The third Lionois, or Lugdunensis Tertia, corresponded with Bretagne, Touraine, 'Anjou, and Maine.
AQUITANIA GALLIA-AQUITAINE,

Berry, Auvergne, Limousin, Poitou, Saintongre, Guienne, Gasconé, Nāarre, and Bearn.
$\hat{A q u i t a n i a, ~ w h i c h ~ i n ~ t h e ~ d i v i s i o n ~ o f ~ G a u l ~ b y ~ A u g u s-~}$ tus was but one region, afterwards formed three provinces; the two Aquitaines, and Novempopulane.-Thé capital of the Bituriges, which, after having borne the name Avaricum, took that of the people, from which the present name of Bourges is derived, was the metropolis of the first Aquitaine, or Aquitania Prima. This nation was the most considerable of Gaul, and appears to have been governed by a king when the mulitude of Gauls passed the Rhine and the Alps, to establish themselves in Gernany and Italy, about six hundred years befone the Christian æra. We have two Biturigian people; the principal, which was that of Berry, distinguished by the surname of Cubi; the other surnamed Vibisci, in the second Aquitaine.-Aquirania Secunda had for its metropolis Burdigala or Bördeaux, among the Biturgies Vibisci, who were not of Aquitanian origin.-What remains to us of Aquitaine between the Garonne and the Pyrenees, corresponds in a general manner to the country occupied by the Aquitani, in the first national division of Gaul, called Aquitaine Proher. The- name of Nozempołulana, which this province of Aquitaine assumed, when it was elevated to the rank of a distinct province, seems to indicate that it was composed of nine people. It was this Aquitaine Proper, in the national division, that the $V$ ascons from beyond the mountains over-ran, communicating to it the name of Gascogne; while that of Aquitaine is perpetuated, with some alteration, in Guienne.

GALLIA.

$$
\text { BELGICA GALLIA-BELC} I U M .
$$

Limb́urg, Liege, Brabant, Utrecht,'Holland, Zealand, Alsace, and hart of Uhher Rhine, Franche-Compté, Switzerland, Lorraine, Luxemburg, Namur, hart of Champagnê, nart of the Isle of France, Picardy, Artois, Hainault, and Flanders.
From the southern extremity of Aquitaine, we must return northward to terminate our account of Gaul in the most distant part of it. In the multiplication of provinces wé distinguish two Belgic provinces; two Germanic provinces, and a $f f t h$ province called the Great Sequanois.-The capital of the Trevéri, after having borne the name of Augusta, took that of the people, and became the metropolis of Belgica Prima. It also became a Roman colony, and served as the residence of several emperors, whom the care of superintending the defence of this frontier retained in Gaul. It was an object of vanity with this people to be esteemed of Germanic origin. The second province under this name, that is ${ }_{3}$ Belgica Secunda, furnishes a great number of communities. Among others, the Remi, were distinguished by their inclination to the Romans, under the government of Cæsar; and Durocortorum, their capital; which taking the name of the people, subsisting in that of Rheims, was elevated to the rank of metropolis in Belgica Se-cunda.-The two Germanic provinces, in the distribution of Belgic Gaul, are of móre ancient date than any subdivision that Gaul experienced after the capital division of it into four provinces under Augustus. We may even, without hesitation, refer them to the reign of Tiberius. This frontier, exposed to the enterprises of warlike nations beyond the Rhine, demanded for its protection particular precautions on the part of the Roman government; and under the command of Drusus, more than fifty fortresses were constructed along the river. For the reason of relative situation, the Germanie provinces were distinguished into higher and lower, and also into first and second, thạt is, Germania Sunerior, and Germania Inferiox, of which the latter was' also Germania Prima and the former Germania Secunda. In Low'er Germany, the bank of the Rhine was occupied by the Ubii and the Gugerni, two Germanic people, who had transported themselves, under the reign of Augus tus, to the hither, or Belgic side of the river. Coloniq Agritnina, Cologne, founded among the Ubii in the reign of Claudius, was the metropolis of this provincel The second Germany did not confine itself to the country between the rivers. The community of the Tungri gave it a considerable extension on this side of the

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Carthaginians the dominion of-Spain, and reduced by long wars the Spanish nations who refuséd obedience, divided the whole country into two provinces, distinguished by the appellations of Citerior and Ulterior. Under Augustus, the Ulterior province was again parted into two, Batica and Lusitania; at the same time that the Citerion assumed the name of Tarraconensis, from Tarraco, its metropolis. This division of Spain must be regarded as properly belonging to the principal and dominant state of ancient geography.

Independently of these distinctions of provinces, Spain under the Roman government was divided into jurisdictions, calléd Conventus, of which there are counted, fourteen; each one formed of the union of several cities, and held their assizes in the princinal city of the district.

TARRACONENSIS,

Catalonia, Arrağon, Navarre, Newi Castile, Valentia, Mercia; Biscay, Old Castile, Asturia, hart of Leon, Gallacia; Eminho:Duro and Tralos-montes in Portugal.
The Tarraconots occupied all the northern part of Spain, from the foot of the Pyrenees to the mouth of the Durius where it confined on Lusitania, and the eastern, almost entire to the confines of Betica, (which derived this name from the river Batis that traversed it during its whole course, extending from the north to the west along the bank of the river Anas, by which it was separated from Lusitania; whilst this last-mentioned province was continued to the ocean, between the mouths of the Anas and Durizis.

It was not till about the age of Dioclesian and Constantine when the number of provinces was multiplied by subdivision, that the Tarraconors was dismembered into Two new provinces; one towards the limits of Bætica, and adjacent to the Mediterranean, to which the city of Carthago Nova, communicated the name of Carthaginensis; the other on the ocean to the north of Lusitania, and to which the nation of Callaici or Calleci, in the angle of Spain, which advances towards the northeast, has given the name of Callacia, still subsisting in that of Gallicia, whilst the tract towards the Pyrenees retained that of Tarraconensis Praher.

Towards the sources of the Ebro, and reaching to the ocean, dwelt the Cantabri, a warlike people; who long defended their liberties. Divided into many cantons, they extended over Biscay and part of Asturias. ' We may judge of their ancient ferocity, by what is reported of a people who made part of this nation under the name of Concani, that they esteemed the blood of horses a most delicious beverage.-To the Cantabri, towards the west, were contiguous the Astures, who had also signalized themselves by a glorious resistance to the Roman yoke. Descending from the mountains to the plain country, we find their city under the name of $\mathcal{A s}^{-}$turica Augusta, which is still preserved in that of Astor-ga.-One of the most powerful nations of 'Spain, and who sustained-long wars against the Romans, were the Celtiberis who joining the generic name of their race to the specific one of the nation where they settled, extended themselves from the right or southern shore of the Ebro, far into the Tarraconois. We may here speak of Numantia which distinguished itself in renown above all other cities, for a resistance for fourteen years to the numerous armies of Rome, as a historian, à Spaniard by nation, and who is called Hishania decus, the orna-. ment of Spain, attributes the defence of it to the Celli-. beri. It is upon the river Darius, not far from its ori-. gin, and above the city of Soria, that we find the site that Numantia occupied. We must believe that it was replaced by another city of the same name; since there is mention made of its existence many ages after it was destroyed to its foundations by Scipio Emilianus.-The Contestani occupied the country which now forms the kingdom of Mercia and the southern part of Valencia. By far tho most considerable city in this canton was Carthago ova, or Carthagena, which for the advantage, of having always an open entrance into Spain, was constructed by the Carthaginians, and from them taken by the most illustrious of the Scipios.

> BAETICA,

Andalusia and Granada.

This province, which, as we have already said, was traversed by the river Batis, to which it owed its name, was distinguished from the other provinces, of Spain by its richness and fertility. The number of cities which it contained in limits comparatively contracted, and four districts of jurisdictions or conventus, are sufficient tes. timonies of its abundance and population. It was also the first known by the advantages that the Phenicians there found for their commerce. Its extent corresponds precisely with that part of Spain which, advanced to. wards the south, has taken the name of Andalusia, derived from Vandalltia, which the Vandals, before they, were constrained by the Goths to pass into Africa, left to this country. Among the people which it comprehended, the Turdetani occupied the greatest space in ascending the banks of the Bætis from the sea.-On the right bank of the Bxtis, Corduba, the head of Conventus, owed its foundation to the Romans, and did not yield in grandeur to any ather in Batiç. We know that Cordova since served as a residence for the great Emirs of the Maures, who conquered'Spain from the Goths: 'and this city was otherwise famous for producing the two Senecas and Lucian.-We must not onit to mention, however, 'Sisaho, noted for its mines of miniü, 'or vermilion: The position of this place is sufficiently obvious in the modern name of Almaden, which it receiv"ed from the Maures; Maaden in the Arabic language being the appellative term for miñes.-Cadir, or Gades, owed its foundation to the Tyrians, on an island of small extent, but attached to another of greater size by a causey; while this is separated from the continent by' a channel like that of a river, at the opening of which towards the sea, a holme or insulated hill, bore a temple dedicated to Hercules, the tutelar divinity of the founders of Cadiz. Its position, beyond the strait, and the circumstance of its having one of the finest ports in the known world, were advantages which rendered it a city of high estimation.' Reecerving new augmentation under the Roman power, it beecame the capital of a Conventus.

HISPANİ.

$$
L U S I T A N I A
$$

.Beira, hart of Leon, the Esiremaduras, Alëntajo, Entre. tajo, and Algava.
We have seen that this province'which remains to be 'spoken of, extenided itself from the river Ana's to the Durius, in passing along the shores of the Ucean. .We know that it is a common practice to confound the limits of lusitania with those of modern Portugal; and, in truth, the greatest part of this kingdom coincides with thèm. But it may be remarked, that Portugal, passing on one side beyond the confines of Lusitania, by the two provinces which are north of the Douro, does not comprehend on the other, the extension of Lusitania among the Vettones; inasmuch as Merida, which was heretofore the capital of the Roman province, is not now a Portuguese city. The Tagus or Tajo, bisecting this extent of country in its course, separated two great nations, the Lusitani and Callaici. The Lusitani whose name makes that of the entire province, occupied the division north of the river; but in their primitive state being only bounded by the Durius, they encroached on the territory which, in the extent given to the Tarraconois, had belonged to the Callaici. The Roman yoke was an advantage to this Lusitanian nation, who are reported to have lived by depredation on their neighbours before they were obliged to apply themselves to the culture of their lands. Olisito is well known to have been the position of Lisbon; but we may banish to regions of fable the application of this name to that of Ulysses.-The southern part of Lusitania, bordering on the Ocean between the Tagus and the Anas, was occupied by the Cellici, who appear to have had some possessions even beyond the Anas. We may add, that a détached part of this nation was cantoned far distant in the neighbourhood of Finisterre, which, besides the name of Artabrum, wàs also called Celticum. The principal city in this region of Lusitania, to judge by the dignity or head of a Conventus, was Pax Julia; the name of which having been altered in the time of the Maures into that of Bakilia, is now hardly to be recognized in Beja.

SECT. IX.
ITALIA.

BALEARES INSULAE,

> Majorca, and Minorca, छc:

The isles adjacent to the Tarraconois called Baleares, &c, now Majorca and Minorca, & $c$, in the aug. mentation of the number of provinces, assumed the rank of a particular one.-The principal city in the first, preserves its ancient name of Palma; the name of Portus Magonis given to that of Minorca by a Carthaginian commander, is Port Mahone.-These islands were occupied by the Phœnicians before the Romans seized them; and their inhabitants, it is well known, ;were eminently distinguished for their desterity at the sling.

SECTION NINTH.

italia, vel hesperia,

ITALY.

There is no idea of Italy more familiar than that of the ${ }^{\times}$renown which it acquired from having ruled over a great part of the ancient world, after the very inconsiderable beginning of her imperial city by Romulus, its founder on the Palatine Mount; whose policy was to increase its inhabitants,-as well by affording an asylum, in the çon-* struction of a sacred Grove, for the outcasts and male's factors of other communities; who fled thither to avoid punishment and shame,-as by a fraudulent seduction of the neighbouring women: We find it called HespeRya by the Greeks, as being westward in regard to them. The other names of CEenotria, and Ausónia; are borrowed from nations whose remote antíquity deprives us of all particular knowledge of them; and the name of ITALiA comes according to some authors, from a chief named Italus, of whom we have no other account. This name appertained properly to the part the most contracted between the two seas, and is known by Italia Fro. pria, in distinction from the country under the Alps which is comprised in a more general manner in the name of Italia.

H 2

> GALLIA CISALPINA, VEL TOGATA-CISPADANE AND TRANSPADANE.

Part of Savoy; Piedmont, Montserat, Allessandrine, - Milan, Venice, hart of Mantua; Ferrarese, Bolognese, Parma, and Genoa.

Gálifa Cisalpina extends from the declivity of the Alps, which looks towards the east, to the strand of the-Adriatic, or Suherior sea. The Rhatian nations, established in the Alps, confined the Cisalfine nations on the north, and the Sinus Ligusticus, called the gulf of Genoa, bounded them on the south. A current cele. brated under the name of Rubico, which formed of three brooks, is called at its mouth Fieumesino, separated this country from Italia Propria, on the side of the sus ferior sea; and a little river named Macra, on the Infes rior sea. `Cisalfine Gaul was also called Gallia Togata, because the people inhabiting it were gratified with the

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

no, beneath the Apennine. What remains of the Cisalpine was Gallic, and not Ligurian. The Boii and Lingones, on their arrival in this, country, finding other Gauls already established in the region called Transhadane, passed the river, and conquered from the Tuscans the lands situated between that and the Aliennine. These nations were both Celtic: the latter coming directly from the territory of Langres; while we find the former diffusing their name in Germany, Noricum, Pannonia, and Illyricum. The Boii settled themselves in the mountains; and the Ligones down the river, in the vicinity of the sea.-We also find mention of another people under the name of Ananes, or Anamani. - The Senones, or those of Sens, arriving last, and entering upon Umria, passed the boundaries that distinguished the Cisalpine Gaul from Italy Proper. In after-times these countries were called Flaminia and Bmilia, from the military roads iso denominated, which intersected each other in their territories.

The most celebrated city in this part of Cisalpine Gaul, is Ravenna, 'at the bottom of the Adriatic Gulf; for after having been the residence of the emperors of the west, while Rome was possessed by the barbarians, it became that of a governor established under the title of Exarch; by the edstern emperors; who, at the time of the Lombards in Italy, were'in possession of what is now called Romagna. Augustus had caused a port-to be excavated at Kavenna, for the purpose of a rendezvous and arsenal for a fleet in the Superior Sea; as that of Misena, in the neighbourhood of Naples, was in the Inferior.' The sea, retiring from its shores, has left the place where this port existed at a considerable distance in the land, but which nevertheless preserves the name of Classé- There was a Canton of the Cisalpine country, under the name of $\dot{F}$ enetia Common fame would bring the Veneti from Asia, under the conduct of Antenor, after the destruction of Troy. Be this as it may, they were in possession of the country which envelopes in part the head of the Adriatic Gulf, in a time anterior to the foundation of Rome, and while the Tuscans`were extended in the Transtiadane. There is no mention of Venice, as a city in antiquity, but only as a port called Venetus. It is well known that the entrance of Attild into Italy, and the ruin of cities spreading terror through the country, caused a multitude of people to seek refuge among the lakes or lagunes which the sea forms upon that fenny shore. This was the beginning of a city which has since been so much distinguished by successful commerce, and consequent aggrandisement of pow-er.-iVe must also speak of the Euganei, who are said to have inhabited the maritime country before the arrival of the Veneti; who drove them, as it would appear, into the mountains which make part of Rhætia, where we find them afterwards established.-Another people; named Karni, occupied the northern side of Venetid, to the foot of those mountains which from them were named the Carnian-Alps; and the same name subsists in that which is now called Carniola, though more contracted in limits than the territories of the Carni:-The city Aquileia was a colony founded to serve as a barrier to Cisalpine Gaiul, while the more remote provinces were not yet subjected; but it has never recovered from the devastation that it suffered from Aitila.

ITALIA.

ITALIA PROPRIA,
Lucca, Tuscany, Patrimony of St.. Peter, Orvieto, Umbria, Perugia, , Romáana, Ancona, Fermo; Abruzzo Ultra, Camípania di, Roma, Sábinna, Abruzzo Citra, - Molise Cafitanata, Ultra princifality, and Terra di 'Lavoro.
Italia Propria comprehended in its'extent' the cantons of Etruria, Umbria, Picenum, Sabiña, Latium, Camtania, and Samnium.

1 st, Etruria. The country which the Tusci retained after having lost what they occupied beyond the li-" mits of Italy Proper, is' the first that presents itself 'ing these limits. And this nation, which was there known under the name of Etrusci, gave the name of Etruria to all that which borders the western bank of the Tiber from its source in the Apennine to the sea. . According to the prevalent opinion, the Etrus'cans named Tyrrkeni by the Greeks, were originally Mronians of Lydia, in : what is commonly called Asia Minor. They distinguished themselves in the arts, at a time when they were little known to their neighbours. The frivolous science of augury also was, esteemed peculiar to them.-This country extending along the sea, from Macra to themouth of the Tiber, is bounded on the north by the 'Apennine, as by the Tiber towards the east.- The nation or body politic of the Etruscans comprised twelve peo- : ple, to which as many cities gave the name; and it is remarked that these cities were scattered at a distance from the Arno; if we except dretium, Arezzo, which approaches it. Aretium, Arezzo; Cortona, which retains its name; Perusia, Perugia; and Clusium, Chiusi, towards the east, as well as Volaterra, Volterra, more interior ãnd inclining towards Sienna, were among these. Etrusćan cities. Again approaching the sea, a city which had enjoyed a distinguished raik among those of Etruria, from which, Rome, in the dawn of the republic; borrowed the exterior ornaments of the magistrature, was Vetulonii, whose site cannot be ascertained by any vestiges. We recognise more precisely, those of $P$ of ulonium, ón a point projected towards an island, whose name of Ilva is pronounced Elba, celebrated heretofore for its mines of iron, but more celebrated lately for a momentary retirement of Bonaparte. Rüselle, another of the Etruscan cities, is found in the name of Rosella, which its ruins_bear. Volsinium, another chief place of an Etruscan people, is Bolsena. The extremity of amcient ${ }^{\prime}$ Etruria, towards the lower part of the Tiber, comprised three more cities. The place which Falerii; the cityof the Falisci, occupied, is named Palari, although abandoned. Veii, capital of the Veientes, distinguished by so obstinate à resistance to the Romans, existed on aneminence adjacent to a place named Isola. And Care is now called Cer-Veteri.. On the sea, the port which was a work of Trajan, under the name of Centum Celle, is Civita-Vecchia: and the Portus 'Augustí, exçavated by Clauḍius, and to which Trajan added an interior basin, still preserves the name of Porto, although entirely. côvered with earth and sand accumulăted by the Tiber.

2d, Umbria. The Tiber directing its course from, north to south, borders successively Umbria, Sabina, and Latium. The Umbri are spoken of as a nation the most ancient in Italy: Not being at first bounded by the $R u=r$, bicon, they extended'to the $P o$, in the vicinity of $R a_{0}$ venna, to which country the name of Umbria was appropriated.

3d, Picenum. This division was an appendage to ancient Umbria, by continuity on the Superior sea. Its limits are sometimes extended to the river Aternus.
'4th, Sabina. The Sabini, of which Sabinna now preserves the name, succeeded the Umbrians on the same bank of the Tiber, as far as the river Anio, which is Teverone. It may be said in general of this people that it was reputed one of the most ancient in Italy, without entering into a discussion of the diversity of traditions on the subject. They are said to have migrated from a place near the city of Amiternum, to settle at Reate, which is Rieti, extending themselves to the Tiber. They founded a city named Cures, from which was derived ${ }^{\prime}$ the name of Quirites, given by the orators to the Roman people in public addresses. This city was neverthe. $\frac{7}{7}$ less, reduced to an inconsiderable place in the time of the Roman greatness; and the site of it is thought to be found under the name of Correse. Among the many cities which made some figure in history during the first ages of Rome, but now for the most part obliterated, must be distinguished Tibur, on the Teverone, the al. lurements of whose situation have caused it to be celebrated; and its name has been corrupted to Tivoli.

5th, Latium. We have now arrived at Latium, from which issued that power which extended itself in the three parts of the ancient world.-The Latini, the principal people of this territory, occupied the space between the 'Tiber, the Teverone, and the Sea; a space that mado but a emall part of Latium; whose limits by the acces.
sion of many other people, correspond with the modern Campagna di Roma. Of these people the most powerful and most difficult to reduce were the Volsci.-Ancient Rome, for whose site at first Mount Palatine was sufficient, covered, at the time of the abolition of the regal government, seven hills; from which circumstance it acquired the name of Urbs Sefiticollis. These eminences, besides the Palatinus, were the Cafitolinus, Quirinalis, Viminalis, Esquilinus, Calius, and Aventinus. The Janiculum, beyond the Tiber, was not numbered among. hills. The wall that enclosed them, and extended to the Jániculum, was finished by Servius Tullius towards the end of the second age of Rome; and a rampart called Agger, covering the Quirinal, the Viminal, and the Esquiline was a work of his successor Tarquin, the Proud. Tho Camfus Martius, now the most populous part of the city, was then beyond the wall, and without habitations. This enclosure, religiously respected as the cradle of the infant empire, subsisted not only to the last times of the republic, but for many ages under the emperors; and of the fourteen regions or wards into which Augustus divided this city, many were without this line. But by a new division, made under Aurelian, elevated to the empire in the two-bundred and seventieth year of the christian æra, its walls were advanced far beyond the Capitoline Mount, towards the north; and there is reason to believe that the present barrier of Rome, if we except the part of Tras-Tevere, which surrounds the Vatican, represents, that of Aurelian. Not to transgress the narrow limits of a abridgement, 'we shall only add, that at the foot of the Capitol, on one side of the 'Forum 'Romanum', now the Campo Vaccino, was erected the Milliarium Aureum, or gilded milliary column, whence issued, as from a common centre, the great roads which conducted to different parts of Italy.-It is thought' Lavinium, a city whose fờundation tradition ascribes to 灰neas; to whom the Romans affected to owe their establishment in Italy, existed in á place now called Pratica, at some-distance from the sea. Another place, in a similar situation, bore the name of $\mathcal{A r d e a}$, and was the capital of the Rutuli, who fought with the Trojans, companions to Æneas.-It is thought that Alba-longa, the rival of Rome, and of more ancient foundation, cxisted in a place whose name is now Palazzo. The position of Suesta Pometia, which held the first rank among the cities of the Volsci, cannot be ascertained. That of Corioli, from which an illustrious Roman acquired the title of Coriolannus, is equally unknown.

- 6th, Campania succeeds to Latium. This is the country of Italy which nature appears to have most favoured; the beauty and fertility of which being much celebrated in antiquity. It made the principal of what is now named Terra di Lavoro. Its extent along the sea is carried to ${ }_{\mathrm{H}}^{\hat{*}}$ the limits of Lucania; and it is bounded on its interior side by Samnium.-Cahua, the magnificent and delightful city, has not preserved its position; but has taken another on the Volturno, about three miles distant, opposite 'to that which a city named Casilinum occupied, bút where its pristine splendour and greatness have not followed it. - Neaholis, Naples, a Greek city, as were many others on the same shore, bore primitively the name of 'Parthenohe, said to be that of a Syren, and has profited by the decline of Capua.-Puteoli, Puozzola, Baia, or Baya,

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
under the form of Puglia. The side of Apulia, making, the spur of the boot to which the figure of Italy is compared, peculiarly bore the name of Daunia, as having been the domain of Daunus, father-in-law of Diomede, who, on his return from the war of Troy, establishing himself in this country, founded the city of Arpi, whose site, preserves its name.-This canton is at the same time the country of the ancient Calabri, distant from that which in a posterior age took the name of Calabria. The Salentini appear likewise to have been a people of ancient Calabria. Tarentum, or Taras according to the Greeks, is Tarento, which the Lacedæmonians occupied, and which was the occasion of the coming of Pyrrhus into Italy. This city has communicated its name to the gulf that advances into this extremity of the continent. Brundusiuin, Brindisi, on the Adriatic Sea, was the port most frequented for passing between Italy and Greece.

2d, Lucania. The country which bore the name of Lucania brings us back to the bottom of the Gulf of Tarentum, and extends thence across the instep to the Inferior Sea.-We must here mention Helea, or Velea, a Phocæan colony, which derives celebrity fromt the stoic school of Zeno, and is now replaced hy the city of Cas-tello-a-mare della Brucca.-On the shore of this gulf, Metanontum, where Pythagoras taught lis doctrine, and Sybaris have left few or no traces: the Sybarites were a people much condemned for the licentiousness of their manners:' and their city having been destroyed by the Crotonians, other Greeks (among whom was Herodotus the historian) re-established it under, the name of Thurii, which it maintained till it ceased to exist.

HT. IX.
ITALIA.
id, Brutium. The country which is now called Caaria, south of ancient Lucania, was occupied by the Gutii.-The city Peetilia, built by Philoctetes after his farn from the Trojan war, has taken the name of \}ongoli. Croton which was a great city, is pow called fitona. The neighbouring promontory, where the If of Tarento terminates, and named Lacinium, is ted Cabo della Colonna, from the remains of a temIf to Juno.-We shall mention some rocks that lie off io cape, because among other names under which they tear in antiquity, we find that of the Isle of Calyhso.

Ve will now mention, in a few words, the divisions .Italy in general, by Augustus, into eleveñ reeins; though more curious than useful to be known. If First consisted of Latium and Campania, to the ler Silarus. The second encroaches on that which we de seen belonging to Samnium, including the Hernini; fending thence into Atrulia, and the more ancient coundof the Calabrians to the Ianygian promontory. Luhia, and the country of the Brutians, composed the rd. The fourth, reputed to include the most marpeople of Italy, comprised Sabina, and the rest of inium. Picenum, one of the most poputous countries taly appears to have constituted the fiftheregion; bria made the sixth; and Etruria; to the river $M a$ , the seventh: which completed ancient Italy prebly so called: Theeightheregion of Italy then exded, between the Apennine, ana thẻ river Pò, to Pla tia inclusively. Liguria, in as ending the same bank. he river to the summit of the Alps, made the ninth.

In the tenth, Venetia and the country of the Carni, were comprehended. The eleventh comprised the spaceé betwen the limits of Venetia, and the Pennine, or higher Alps., So that besides the seven that fall in Italy Proper, the remaining four were in Cisalitine Gaul, i. e. two in Cishadane, and two in Transhadane.

Before concluding this section, we shall take a transient survey of the great Roman ways, which occur not less frequently in history than in geographical treatises. They are distinguished for the most part by the names of their constructors. It is well known that they wete measured from mile to milè; and that columns called milliary; at each mile were inscribed with an indication of the distance; and this was practised in every province subject to the empire.
Via Appia. The VialAhtia, or Appian Way, approach.ing the sea at Terracina, conducts to Cafua, then to Be. nevento; whence it leads to Brindisi by two routes. the right by Venosa, the left by Tarento, passin:s along the. coast of the Adriatic from Bari. From Caliza there issued another road, which traversing Lucania and Bruti. um, extended to Regio on the Sicilian Strall.

Via Flaminia. The Via Flaminia, or Flaminian Way, directed its course northwand, towards the slane of the Adriatic or Superior Sea, to Rimini, where it termi. nated.

Vin Emilia. The Emilia Via, or Emilian Way, succeeding the latter, penetrated into Cisalfine Gaul: not to mention a branch of this way, which passing along the margin of the Adriatic Gulf at its bottom, conduct. ed to Aquileia.

Valeria and Salaria Via. In the interval of the

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

which determine the figure of 'Sicily caused it to be called Trinacria:' Having received Greek colonies before the Carthaginians became powerful there, it afforded three different languages; the Roman, the Greek, and the Punic--Messaná, Messina, very near to Peloruin, had the name of Zancle, before the Messenians, driven from the. Peloponnesús by the Lacedæmonians, established themselves there. -The most famous of volcanoes is Atna, whose modern name of Gibello is formed from the appellative term for a mountain in the language of the Arabs, to whose domination Sicily was subjected by conquest from the Greek emperors of Constantinople.-In the planes which succeeded were the dwellings of the Lastrigones, ancient and savage inhabitants of the country, as well as the Cyclo-pees.-Syracusa, the most considerable of the cities of Si: cily, and much celebrated in Greek and Roman history, retains -indeed the name of Syragusa, but only on a little insulated point heretofore named Ortysia, which made one of the regions of a vast city.-Ennä, reputed the centre of the island, and famous for having been the supposed dỳe elling of Ceres-and Proserpine, is named Castio Joanini or Giovanni.-The honey of Hybla was prover. bially celebrated: and we find several cities of this name in Sicily. But that under present consideration is distinguished by the surn:me of Major, in the dependence of Catania, and which has ceased' to exist.

Sardinia vel ịćrnusia. The Greeks assimilating the island of Sardinia to the print of a foot, called it Ichnusia; and they speak as well of the fertility of the soil, as of 'the insalubrity of the-atmosphere. A part of the country is covered with mountains; and those of the northern end are so rugged and inacces-* sible, that they were called Insani Mcntes. According to tradition a colony of Africans first established themselves in Sardinia, under a chief whose name, Sardus, they communicated to the island. There were also known colonies of Iberians, or Spaniards; from whom were long distinguished the Trojans, under the name of Ilians, from Ilium, their ancient country. The - Carthaginians, too, had founded the cities of Calaris and 'Sulci;-the former of which, preserving its name in that of Cagliari; has become the capital of the island.The position of Turris Libisonis is indicated by Porto-di-Torro, on the northern shore. This city was Roman; and its environs retained the name of Romangia, till the -time when the Arabs of Barbary invaded the island. They superseded it with the name of Barbaria; which was afterwards. given to all this canton of Sardinia.Olbia, a Greek city, and one of the most ancient, having a port which looks towards Italy, and the nearest to it of any other, ought to be about the place where now exists Terra-Nova.

Corsica vel Cyrnos. Corsica is nearer, to the continent of Italy than Sardinia. The Greeks named it Cyknos; and ihey pretended that the Phocaans were the first ( $\mathbf{w h o}$ made any settlement on it. But the insular nation was of Ligurian race; and they were described of a savage character ${ }_{6}$ such as is natural to the inhabitants of a country rugged and difficult of access. The Corsicans ${ }^{\text {h }}$ had experienced the tyranny of the Carthaginians before the Romans undertook to subject them. This isle received twọ Roman colonies; Mariana, from Marius, and Aleria, from Sylla.

Alolif, Melite, et Gaulos. The little isles not far distant north of Sicily, called Eolia, may properly be included in this article. They were so named from being the supposed residence of Eolus; who according to the fable, there retained, the wing ${ }^{\prime}$ s imprisoned in their caverns, and released them at his plegasure.: They were also called Vulcania, because they had volcanos; and ,are now named Lipàri, from Lipara, the principal of them.-This is also the place tó mention Melite, or Malta; and Gaulos, or Gozo, which accompanies it. The towns placed now so advantageonsly on the ports of Malta, are neither of them the ancient city of the island; whose position was in in a place interior, and named Rebatto, from a term which the domination of the Arabs of Barbary brought into use, in this island.

SECTION ELEVENTH.

RHIETIA, NORICUM, PANNONIA, ILLIRICUM, DACIA, MESIA, ET THRACIA, PARTS OF SWITZERLAND.AND GRRMANY: HUNGARY AND PART OE EUROPEAN TURKEY.

$\therefore$ In assembling these several countries in the same. section, we fill the space between the unsubdued bar. barians on, the north; and the states of Greece, and part of Italy, ${ }^{\prime} n_{r}$ the south; which extends from the Alps to the Black Sea, on the southern bank of the Danube in the commencement, and on either bank of the same, in the latter part of its course. But as the distinction to be made between these provinces of imperial Rome will.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
of the first and second; a circumstance that caused $\mathrm{R}_{\mathrm{H}} \boldsymbol{z}$ tia proper (as to the first) and Vindiletia (as to the second) to resume their primitive distinctions.

Vindelicia. We must now speak more particularly of *the country of the Vindelici, which from the city of Brigantia, or Bregentz, on a lake which took the name of Brigantinus; before it was called the lake of Constance, extended to the Danube; while the lower - part of the QEnus, or Inn, separated it from Noricum.

- A powerful colony was established in the angle formed by the two rivers, Vindo and Licus; whence it would seem that the nation derived its name; and that of $\mathcal{A} u$ güta; given to this colony, is preserved, as it is well known, in Augsburg, between the rivers Lech and Wertach; the former of which separates Suabia from Bavaria.

> NORICUM,

Parts of-Bavaria and Austrig.
Noricum extends along the southern shore of the Danube, from the mouth of the Inn to Móunt Cetius,. which causes the river to form a flexure a little above the position of Vienna. Embracing the beginning of the course of the Dravus, or Drave, and comprehending that which composes the duchies of Carinthia and Stijia, $\mathrm{it}^{\prime}$ is bounded by the summit of the Alps on the south.

This country, which is first spoken of as having a king; followed the fate of Pannonia; for, when that was reduced, Noricum also became a province, under the reign of Augustus. Afterwards, and by the multiplication of provinces, there is distinguished a Noricum Ri. nense, adjacent to the Danube, from a Noricum Miediter. , raneum, distant from that river in the bosom of the Alps.

SECT. XI. RHETIA, NORICUM, & & C

Lauriacum appears with ṣuperiority among the places of Noricum; and a Roman fleet had there a rendezvous, or station, upon the Danube.-The position of Noreia is remarkable, inasmuch as it is said to have been occupied by a body of Bcians, who are to be distinguished from those established in Bohemia, and from a time anterior to the invasion of the Marcomans, who drove this nation into Noricum.

$$
-P A N N O N I A,
$$

Parts of-Austria, Hungary, Croatia, and Sclavonia.
Pannonia stretched along the right bank of the Danube, from the frontier of Noricum to the mouth of the Save: the country beyond the river being occupied, from the limits of the Germanic nation of the Quadians, by Sarmatians, called Jazyges Metanasta. On the southern side, Pannonia was bounded by Dalmatia comprised in Illyricum. It received the Drave from its issue out of Noricum, and enclosed the greatest part of the course of the Save.

In the wâr which Augustus, bearing yet but the name of Octavius, waged with the Jafydes and the Dalmatians of Illyricum, the Roman arms had penetrated to the Pannonians: But it was reserved for Tiberius, who commanded in these countries, to re. duce Pannonia into a province. It was divided in the time of the Antonines into Suherior and Inferior, and the mouth of the river Arrabo, or Raab, in the Danube, ma $_{\mathrm{d}} \mathrm{e}$ the scharation of it, according to Ptolemy. Afterwards we find employed the terms first and second, as in the other provinces of the empire: and in a later age we see a third, under the name of, Valeria, between the former two. The second, occupying the banks of the Drave and Save, obtained also the name of Savia, which now gives to a canton of this country the name of Pọ-Savia; expressing in the Sclavonic language a situation adjacent to the Save.

Among the several people which are named in the extent of Pannoniá, the Scordisci and the Taurisci sare particularly noted. Gauls by origin, and far removed from their ancient dwelling as the Boii, they were separated by Mons Claudius, which appears to extend between the Drave and the Save. We know, moreover, that the Scorclisci had penetrated far into Masia, which succeeds to Pannonia, on the same shore of the Danube.-The first among the cities of the upper Pannonia, in following the course of the Danube a little below Mount Cetius, called now Kalenberg, is Vindibona, well known to be Vienna.-The union of a lit, Ile river named Bacuntius, now Bözzeut, with the Save, determines the spot occupied by the city of Sirmium, which, under the reigns posterior to the Augustan'age, Shone among the most illustrious of the eimpire: and this district of Pannonia included between the Danube and the Save is still called Sirmia.

$$
I \grave{L} L Y R I C U M,
$$

Morlachia, Dalmatia, with parts of Croatia, Bosnia, and Sclavonia.
The name of Illyricum varies in its final syllable, being sometimes employed under the form of Illyris. The nationd name is Illyrii. And it is common in Freñch to say l'lllyrie, though the name of Illyria is scarcely if at all used in the Latin. The extent of this country.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

med Metuc Vetus, in the country of Licka, among the mountains which the Iafydes inhabited.-Under the Greek emperors a particular province called Pravalita$n a$, was comprised in the extent of a department formed under the title of Illyricum Orientis, that was only limited by the Euxine Sea, and has thus no relation to the primitive and national state which contributes to form the object of ancient geography.

> dacIa (Trajana*)

Transylvania, Walachia, Moldavia, Bessarabia, and hart of Hüngary.
Two nations associated, and to whom the same latiguage was common, the Daci and the Geta, occupied a great space of country, which; from the shore of the Danube towards the north, extended to the frontiers of EHvopean Sarmatia. The Jazyges Metanasta above mentioned, a Sarmatic nation, established between Pannonia' and Datia, are comprised by their situation in the object under consideration.-Transylvania is commonly considered as denotèd by Dacia. But numerous remains . of Roman retrenchments, constructed to cover the conquered country, manifest that part of Hungary was comprised in it; and, by the positions 'which' appertain to Dacia, the modern provinces of Walachia and Moldavia were also comprehended in this vast province, which the arms of,'Trajan annexed to the empire.

There is every reason to believe that the Geta were of Scythian origin; and when we pass overinto Asia, and treat of Scythia, the hive of this nation will be shown under the name of Gete, which it still preserves. There were Gete or Getes established in Thrace, on the route which Darius, son of Hystaspes, took towards the Ister. But in the expedition of Alexander against the Triball, near two ages posterior to that of Darius, there is mention of the Getes only in their position beyond the river, Impatient, hówever, of their limits, Masia and Illyricum suffered from their incursions; and the Celtic nations there established were destroyed by them. Augustus, for whom the Danube, as the Rhine, was a boundary which nature seemed to give to the empire, contented himself with repelling the Dacians, and fortifying the bank of the river. But Trajan had conceived an appetite for conquest, and annsxed it to the empire under one vast trovince.

* The surname of Trajana was added to distinguish this Dacia from Dacia Aureliana, a province of Masia.

Although the Dacians and Getes appear to have formed a combined politic body, and the whole country was equally reduced by Trajan, yet we observe a local distinction between them; inasmuch as the Box cians inhabited the upper, and the Getes the lower papt of the course of the river, and along the Euxine. The name of Getes was more familiar to the Greeks, and that of the Dacians to the Romans; hence this name constituted that of the country. The Goths, a Teutonic or German, nation of the same Scythian race with the Duci or Geta, who migrated from Asia in an anterior - age, invaded Dacia in the middle of the third centuryA Roman way entering into Transylvania, conducts at its issue, to the capital city of all the country, which, under the name of Surmizegethusa having served for the residence of Decebalus, yanquished by Trajan; received from this prince that of $\boldsymbol{U L} / \mathrm{hia}$ Trajana; with which its primitive name was also associáted. Ruins preserve 'the memory of its' ancient magnificence to the place, which is inhabited only by a few herdsmen, and called Warhel; which signifies the site or position of a city; or otherwise Gradisca, denoting the same thing.-A way which issues from it, leading into the north of Transylvania, passes through a noted city named Afuulum, which has declined into a small place called Albe-Julie, or more properly Albe-Gyula.-The Cokajon mons is singularly remarkable for having been the residence of a pontiff in whose person the Getes believed the Deity was incarnate; with a similar faith to that of eastern Tartars, who maintain the transfusion of the same soulin their Lamas, from him who is celebrated under the name of Zamolxis. A river of the same name with the mountain flows at its foot; and is recognised under that of Kason, on the confines of Moldavia and Transylvania. There is still known in this country a people of Roman, origin; speaking a language manifestly derived from the Latin; and who, under the name of Vlak or Valak, having occupied a canton of Tartary beyond the Caspian Sea, where they had been transported, returned with the Patzinaces and Bulgarians to their primitive dwellings.

To include all that this article embraces, it remains that we speak of the space between the limits of Roman Dacia and the province of Pannonia. In this country there inhabited, as has been already premised, the $I a$. zyges, à Sarmatic nation, who were surnamed Metanas: ${ }^{1}$ $t a$, which denotes them to have been removed or driven from their native seats: and we find indeed other Isazy. ges established on the Palus Mæ̈otis.-The country is encountered the Celts, or Gauls, these are the people alincled to. And although the Scordisci were almost annihilated at the time when the Roman power extended in this country, it is remarked that many names of pla. ces on the Ister are purely Celtic. Darius, son of Hys taspes, marching against the Scythians, encountered the Getes, who'were reputed Thracians, on his passage, before arriving at the Ister; and we have seen that this extremity of the country on the Euxine bore the name of Scythia.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Masia appears to have been subjected to the empire under Augustus and Tiberius. Its extent along the river, which separated it from Dacia on the north,' was divided into Súperior and Inferior; and a little river named Cia'brus, or Cebrus, now Zibriz, between the Timacus and the OEscuis, makes, according to Ptolemy, the separation of these two Masias. But Masia suffered encroachment upon its centre in the admission of a new province, under the name of Dacia. Aurelian, fearing that he could not maintain the conquest of Trajan beyond the Ister, called Dacia, abandoned it, and retired with the troops and people, which he placed on the hither side of the rid ver, affecting to call his new province the Dacia of Au: relian. That which Masia preserved of the superion division, was called the First Masia; and there is reason to believe that the name of Masua, which remains to canton south of the Save, near its confluencelivith the Ister, comes from this Masia. The inferior wâs the Second Masia. There was afterwards distinguished in Dacia the part bordering on the river 'under the name of Rinensis; and that which was sequestered in the in-, terior country under the name of Mediterranea, occupied probably a country contiguous to Macedonia, and known more anciently hy the name of Dardania.-The dand, insulated by the division of the Ister into many arms at its entrance into the Euxine, was called Peuce, a name preserved in that of Piczina, and from which was derived that of the Peucini, whom it is remarkable to find re-appear in the Lower Empire under the names of Picziniges and Patzinacites.-Sardica, which was the metropolis of Mediterranean' Dacia, acquired from the Bulgarians the name of Triaditza. The vestiges of it are contiguous to Sophia, which now holds an eminent rank, being the residence of a Begler-beg, to whom the government of all the country comprehended under the name of Roumelia is confided.-Tauresium, where the emperor Justinian was born, was an obscure place bea fore his reign; but becoming then the predominant city in this country, was called Justiniaña Prima;' and is still *a place of consideration, under the name of Giustendil, which is an evident depravation of its primitive. Ther. prerogatives of a great metropolis, invested in Juśtinia. $n a$ by its founder, having been translated by the Bulgarian kings to Achrida, which they had chosen for their residence in the New Enirus, 'has induced the error of confounding this with the other. There was moreover a second Justiniana; for the city of Ulnianum, the native place of Justinian, received this name on its embellishment; and that of Giustendil is also its modern de-nomination:-All this interior of Masia was more anciently called Dardania, from the name of a people known to be savage in an early age. 'And although the Mediterranean Dacia extended over Dardania, we distinguish a particular province of Dardania under the lower em. pire, and'whose metropolis was Scufii, which preseryes this name, or otherwise Uskup, towards the souices of the Axrus, beneath Mount Scardus, which is now called Monte Agentaro.

RHETIA, NORICUM, &C.

There remains a division of Mesia adjacent to the Euxine; in which the palt nearest to the mouths of the - Ister was formed, under Constantine, into a particular province named Scythia.-The city of Tomi, which the banishment of Oid has illustrated, assumed in this pro-. vince the rank of metropolis; and is still known in the name of Tomeswar, although otherwise'called Baba.

$$
T H R A C I A
$$

Romania, or part of Roumelia.
Thracia extends from the frontiers of Macedonia, along the Egean Sea, and the Pronontis, to the Euxine; while Mount Hamus separates it from Masia. Mount, Rhodope envelops it on the western side, as does Hamus -on the northern. It is improperly that the name of Romania. appears exclusively appropriated to 1 hracia in modern maps; and Roumelia or Roum-Vilaiet, in the modeın state of things, is not a peculiar denomination for the country called heretofore Thraci; for it is equally applicable to Greece.

Thrace is desclibed in antiquity as a wild country; only fertule in places near the sea; inhabited by nations addicted to rapine, and of a character corresponding with the local circumstances. We find Thrace divided among many kings before it fell under the Roman domination, which did not happen till the reign of Claudius.

In the subdivisions which the age of Dioclesian and Constantine produced in the empire, Thrace was formed into many provinces. That part which borders the Pro-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

the other，subsists in that of Erekli，applied to the posin tion of this city now in ruins．Byzantium；become Con－ stantinople，caused the decay of Heraclea，whose sec， notwithstanding，enjoyed the pre－eminence of metropo－ litan in the province distinguished in Thrace by the title of Euroha．Byzantium occupied a point of land con－ tracted between the Propontis and a long côve，which forms one of the best ports in the world，and was here－ ？，tofore named Chryso－ceras or the Horn of Gold．At this point begins a channel called Bos－norus，which sig－ nifies properly the passage of the ox；opening a com． munication between the Propontis and the Euxine：and this Bosphorus was surnamed ．Thracicus，to distinguish it from another Bosphorus called the Cimmerian．The choice made by Constantine of a situation so advantage＊ ous as that of Byzantium；to construct in the empire a－ new Rome，which took the name of Constantinonotis，＂． every tyro in literature knows．It was in occupying the ground along the Propontis and the port，affecting，in imitation of Rome，to cover seven hills，that Constanti－ nople extended far beyond the arrcient Byzantium．The ： enclosure of this was nevertheless preserved，and it still separates the seraglio of the Sultan from the city．The shore of the Bosphorus，orchannel of Constantinople，on＇． the side of Europe；terminates near some insulated rocks，which are called the isles，with the name of Cya－ nea in antiquity．．This extremity of Thrace and of Eu－ rope，contracted between two seas，was enclosed by a long wall called Macron－tichos，commencing a little be－ yond Heraclea，and terminating on the shore of the Euxine，near a place named Dercon，or Derkous．This barrier，of which there are only some vestiges remain． ing, was constructed by the emperor Anástasius, at the beginning of the sixth century, to resist the incursions of many foreign nations who had penetrated even to the environs of the city.-In the place where the Hebrus first changes its course, from the eastward to descend south, Hadrianopolis; had primitively borne the name of Orestias, which the Byzantine authors frequèntly ema ploy in speaking of this city. The three rivers in which it is pretended that Orestes, polluted by the murder of his mothei, purified himself, had their confluence here: This city, which enjoyed the dignity of a metropolis in: the province of Hamimontus, served as a residencè for the Ottoman sultans before the taking of Constantino ple, and is known to the Turks. by the name of Hedrine. The nation of Ödryssa, one of the most considerable of 'Thrace, occupied its environs. - Ascending towards the fountains of the Hebrus, not far from the foot of mount Hzmus, we find that Philinhotiolis, so named from Philip, father of Alexander, acquired also, from its situation 'among hillș, the denomination of Trimontium, but still preserves its name of Philippopoli, or Philiba, as 'the Turks abbreviate it. This was the metropolis of the province especially distinguished by the name of Thracia: it was in the canton of the Bessit, whose ferocity was said to surpass the rigour of their climate.

SEC̄T. XI.
RHETIA, NORICUM, &C.

SECTION TWELFTH.

GR历CIA.

GREECE or Roumelia.
To judge of the extent of Greece by the power which enabled its states, individually, $\cdot$ to arm against each other, or unitedly, to sustain the attackis of formidable foreign enemies, would be to form an idea of a great country. A more intimate acquaintance with it, howevèr, will undeceive us in this point. :For wé shall see that Greece, properly so called, scarcely contains more space than the kingdom of Naples occúpies in the continent of Italy. And the island of Sicily alone is deemed equal to the Pelohonnesus, considered exclusively of Greege Proher; although in it there are enumerated six distinct provinces.-The circumstance that contributes among others to the glory of Gérece, is well known to be, that, though reduced by the Roman arms, she triumphed in Rome, by establishing the arts which in this mistress of the: world were unknown.- But having remarked a relative distinction in the extent of the name of Greece, it becomes us to signify here, that it is in its most comprehensive space that we propose to treat it. Returning to the frontier of Illyricum, thence to take our departure, we shall include Macedonia in its extension over Efirus Nova on the one side, to the confines of Thrace on the other, as it respects the north, with the projection of land to the south, which is embraced by the Ionian Sea on the west, and the 'Egean Sea on the east.

The Greexs gave themselves the name of Hellenes;

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

The principal city on the coast, and'a place of the greatest resort, was a colony from the neighbouring island of Corcyra, under the name of Enti-damnus; but which, having changed its name to Dyrrachium, for the evil omen that its signification indicated, is now called Durazzo. - A principal city of the interior country, and attributed to the Dassaretii was Lychnidus, near a lake from which the Drino derives its course. The Bulgarians, who composed a great state, more than an age after the reign of Justinian, or in the eighth of the Christià॥ æra, took Lychnidus for their capital, changing its nane to Achrida, which still subsists:

Macedon. In its more ancient state, Macedon was bounded on the west' by the country whereof we have just spoken, and confined on the side of the east by Thruce; by which it was more contracted, before the borders of the river Strymon were comprised in it. - It had Dardania on the north, and was bounded on the south by Thessaly. 'But in the interior of a country so renowned, there is still wanting much of the actual intelligence from which ancient' geography derives its ' most important illustration.

The northern part of Macedon bore the name of Pa . onia; and divers nations comprised under this name extended to the frontiers of Thrace. The name of Pelagonia sometimes supplied the plac: of it, and penetra'ting into the interior of Macedon, had Stobi for the principal city. And when Macedon was formed into two provinces, this was the metropolis of one of thern; while the capital of the other division was called Salularis:The situation of a particular canton towards the begin. ning of the Erigon, named Deurionue, is more certainly determined than many others by this circumstañce.The position of a city of the name of Heraclea is given its situation on a Roman way leading from Lychnidus to Thessatonica; and this city indicates the canton of Lyncestis, since 'we know it to have been included therein.-That of Eorda appears to have been contiguous, towards the Illyrian country:-The most distinguished country of Macedon, and most adorned with cities, was Emathia., $E d e s s a$, otherwise called $\notin g_{\ell} e$, or the city of the Goat, was the royal city before Pella; and it still re, tains the first of these names, as well as that of Moglena, the name of the country in its environs. Pella, which had taken rank of Edessa, was advantageously situated ; on a lake, which communicated with the sea by a river called Ludids, holding a parallel course with the Vardari. On the western side of the Thermaic Gulf is a district called Pieria, wherein the Romans finished the conquest of the kingdom of Macedon.-East of the Ax. jus lies My'gdoni, one of the most extensive countries of Macedon, and which was conquered, with a great part of-Thrace, by the predecessors of Alexander. Thessalonica, which under the Romans became the capital of Macedon, was called Therma before Cassander gave it the name of his wife, the sister of Alexander; and it still flourishes under the name Saloniki. A gulf which. was called Singiticus Sinus, washes one of the flanks of the famous Mount Athos, and the Strymonicus Sinus the other. This mountain which, from its monasteries, is now called Agios-Oros, or Monte-Santo, is only connect-ed-with the continent by a low and narrow tongue of land, which was easily opened to Xerxes, to afford a passage to his fleet, as reported in history. Advancing towards Thirace, and a little above the sea, we find the ruins of Philinfi, which owed its name to Philip,' the father of Alexander; and whose plains were the scene of a battle fatal to Brutus and Cassius.

GRAECIA,

Chimera, Thessaly or Janná, Livadia or Acaìa.
Under this title we comprehend all that which, south of the former part, is included between the Ionian Sea and the Gulf of Corinth on the one side, and the Agean. Sea on the other. Etirus and Thessalia fill the northern part of this space; and, looking from west to east, Epirus "precedes .「hressaly.

Epirús.•The shore of Efiirus commences at a point inamed Acro-ceraunia, directly opposite to the heel of litaly, and terminated by mountains which, by reason of their precipitate elevation, are obnoxious to thunder--bolts, and thence called Acro-ceraunii Montes.-The canton situated in these mountains, and along the sea, was named_Ciaonia; and the name Chimera, which was that of a maritime place of Chaonia, is now applied to the whole country.-Thesprotia follows, and is one of the principal parts of Efirus, extending to the entrance of the gulf of Ambracia: Corcyra is separated by a very - narrow channel from the continent of Epitus, opposite to Theshrotia. This is the isle of the Pheacians in Ho. mer. The city of the same name with the isle; and which. received a colony of Corinthians, who became powerful, did not occupy precisely the site which is gi. ven to the modern city, but was confined to a peninsulă, which they call Chersopoli; and the present name Cor-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

siderable of the Thessalian cities, and it still subsists in the same position, without any alteration in its name. It is after having left this city on its right, that the Peneus, enclosed between Olymfus and Ossa, in a narrow and rapid course, is discharged into the sea by a mouth called Lycastomo, or the Wolf's mouth; and the whole length of this passage, through wild and picturesque scenes, is the famous valley of Temfle.- Azorus was the principal city of Pelagonia, surnamed Tritiolitis, or the Three Cities, towards the frontier of Macedon, as the expedition of a Roman commander has shown.-Passing south of the $\boldsymbol{P}^{\prime}$ eneus, we find Pbarsulu's on the river Enifeus, which the Ahidanus receives. This place, which a signal and decisive battle between Julius Cæsar and Pompey, in which the former was victorious, has rendered ever memorable, preserves in the maps, the name of -Farsa.-Beyond Phere, and at the bottom of the gulf named Pelargicus, and now Volo, was the city of Demetrias, which owed its foundation and name to Demetrius Poliorcetes: and this was deemed by Philip one of the proper posts to impose chains on Greece.The entrance of this gulf had a port from which it is pretended that the ship Argo took her departure, and its name of $A f l h e t a$ preserves some traces in that of Fetio. -Magnesia, without the gulf, near the promontory of Sepiias, where the fleet of Xerxes suffered from tem. pests, has communicated its name to a canton of this country. Opposite are ranged many isles south of the Thermaic Gulf: the principal of these are Sciathus, Sconelus, Halonnesus, and Peftarethus; of which the two first. preserve their names.-But returning to the interior country, we shall mention a city seated on an elevation that immediately commands the plains of Thessaly. It was called Thaumacia, from the sentiment of admira: tion where with the spectator was impressed, on contem-. plating from it a delightful and luxuriant prospect, atter having been among gorges and precipices, which nust be passed to enter Thessaly on the side of Phocis.-Lamia is remarkable for having given the title to a war which the Greeks maintained with, Macedon after the death of Alexander.-Upon the southern side of the Sinus Maliacus begin the famous defiles of Thermonyle; which took its name from the warm baths in its neighbourhood. This pass is celebrated for a battle fought before Clırist 480, between Xerxes and the Greeks, in which 300 Spartans desperately resisted, for tirree days, five millions of Persians, when'they were crowued with the laurels of victory in the monierts of a glorious death, earned in checking the merciless, proud, and sanguinary enemy of their country.-In a little plain among the mountains was placed a city named Tachys, or the Rugged. It is also called. Heraclea Trachinia, from Hercules, who is said to have been thrown upon his funeral pile upon the summit of Mount $\boldsymbol{O}$ ta, wnich is not far distant.

SECT: XII.
GRECIA.

Acarnania. Having thus terminated Thessaly, we must return towards the, Ionian Sea. That which was called Acarnania, and whose name is not entirely loṣt in that of Carnia, was separated from Efirus by the Sinus, Ambracius. This country extended along the stiand' of the sea to the mouth of the river Acheloiis; the course of which formed the separation of Acarnania duld Ato-lia.-Anactorium was the "first place in entering the mabovementioned Sinus; preceding even the position of Actium, whose ruins are distinguished by the name of Azio. It was in a basin, contracted by two corresponding points, and interior to the more capacious bays, that the famous naval combat was exhibited which decided the empire of the: world, between Augustus and Anto-ny.-To desci ibe the rest of Acarnania, we must depart from the continent. The island of Leucadia, which preserves the same ndme, bearing also that of Neritus, was previously a peninsula, but has been insulated by art, in dividing a low and narrow beach, by which this poition of land was prolonged from the main. The city of Leitucas, which gires it the name, is not in the same position with that of a Venetian place called Santa-Maura.-The island of Cehhallenia, or, according to the modern orthography, Cefalonia, being a situation near to "Leucadia, should find a place here. In the interior of the country, a city of the same name with the isle has changed this name for Borgo; and near the eastern shore we find a position called Same, which alsó appears to have been a" narie for the entire island.-A channel of the sea sepàrates this. from another isle called the Little Cefalonia; but which, in its proper name of Theaki, appears to represent that of Ithaca: it would appear absurd to confine the name of lthaca to a holm that lies before Theaki, -ṣince that bears the name of lotaco. And we sée in Homer that Ulysses commanded the Cephallenians, without whom his domain would have been,extremely contracted.

Altolis.' Atolia succeeds to Acarnania, and from the margin of the sea penetrates to the mountains on the confines of Thessaly, where the Valaques; who weere transported thither by the Greek emperors, still inhabit,

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Phocis offers nothing more celebrated than the oracle of Delhhos, and Parnassus Mons, which covers this city towards the north. Delinhos is now a small place named Castri; and the most elevated point of Mount Parnassus is called Heliocoro.-Crissa, to the south of Delphos, gave the name of Crissaus Sinus to the part of the Corinthiac gulf which is now called the Gulf of Sa lona. Anticyra, on the isthmus of a peninsula, has taken the name of Aspro-Spitia.

The little mountainous country of Doris gives birth to the river Cethissus; and near to its course Elatia, the greatest city in Phocis, exists only in a very small place called Turco-chorio. The Locri, whom the city of Opus had surnamed Ohuntii, and those who from Mount Cnemis were called Eni-Cnemidii, bordered on the sea which separated this part of the continent from Eubœa.

Boeotia. Brotia succeeding Phocis, extends along the sea opposite the island of Eubra; and, touching on ill the other side of the Corinthiac, is bounded by Attica on the south, from which it is separated by the river $\mathcal{A}_{s o-}$ tus.-The land here being rich and fertile, and the air more thick than in Attica, of which the soil is dry and sterile, is thought to have made the fancied difference a in the minds and genius of the natives of these two countries.-In the interior country Theba, which owed its foundation to Cadmus the Phenician, and from whom the citadel of this city was called Cadmea, retains some vestiges under the name of Thiva. Destroyed by Alexander, who spared only the house of Pindar, it rose again from its ruins.-Lebadea, distinguished by the oracle of Trophonius in a cavern where he was precipitated, appears to be the capital city; whence it comes that the country bears, improperly, the name of Livadia in the maps.-Cheronaa is found, as well as the preceding city, in the most northern part of $B$ Beotia, towards Phocis. Cheronea is rendered famous by a victory of Philip, fa. ther of Alexander, over the Greeks, and for one of Sylla over the generals of Mithridates, and still more for having giveñ birth to Plutarch.-Orchomenus was reputed so ${ }^{+}$ opulent in the earliest times, that ịts riches became pro-verbial:-Haliartus, on the side of the lake Cofias, was destroyed by the Romans in the first Macedonian war. At."the bottom of the Corinthiac gulf we may cite Leuctra, not far distant, as a place which the victory of Epaminondas: over the Lacedemonians has illustrated.Plata, whose name recalls to the memory the defeat of the Persians commanded by Mardonius, is separated from Eleuthere by Mount Cytheron.

Attica and Megaris. The name of Attica is de: rlved from the Greek term Actè, denoting a shore or beàch; and Attica justifies this etymology of its name, in having, tivo sides embraced by the sea. We shall extend it to the isthmus, comprising therein Migaris, which nevertheless pretended to the separate dignity of an independent state.-The city Athena, whose glory is. well known on the subject of the fine arts, which from her bosom were diffused through all the nations where they are best cultivated, preserves its name under the. form of Atheni; and it is by depravation, and by prefix'ing the preposition of place, that Athens is "called Sè -tines by the uninformed. This city, though situated at some distince from the sea, had nevertheless three 'ports; the principal of which, although the most distant, named Piraus, now Porto-Leone, had a communication with the city by means of two walls forty stadia in length. Munychia and Phalerus were the two other ports. Among the mountains of Attica, Hymettus and Pentelicus, near Athens are the most known; that for the honey which it afforded, and this for its marble.--We know how much the mysteries of Ceres distinguished the city of Eleusis, the name of which is now pronounced Lessina. The isle of Salamis, which takes the name of Colouri from a place that it contains, leaves but a narrow passage to the cove which the sea forms before this city.-Near the opposite shore, Marathon preserves the same name, which a victory of the Athenians over the Persians has rendered immortal.-Among the events of the Peloponnesian war, a particular circumstance of a garrison being there established, that proved very gall: ing to the Athenians, may create a curiosity concerning the posivion of Decelia, on the route from Athens to Chalcis in Eubœa.-Attica, extremely contracted be. tween two seas, terminates at the promontory of Sunium; where the columns still standing, of a temple of Miner. va, have caused it to be called Cabo Colonni.

Euboea. The island of Eubra is comprised in our present division, as covering Baotia and Attica; and on. ly separated by a channel, so narrow in one place as to permit it to be connected with the continent by a bridge. -Chalcis was the principal city of this great island, and one of the three that in the judgment of the king of Ma. cedon, would enable their possessor to enslave Greece. This citi derives its present name of Egripo, or Egri. . vo, (as the modern Greeks pronounce it) from the $E u=$ rifus, or the strait on which it is seated; and where, un.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

the Corinthiac gulf, occupies the northern side of the Peloponnesus from the isthmus; comprehending the districts of Corinth and Sicyon, which have their particular names of Corinthia and Sicyonia.-It is remarkable that it was under the name of Achaians that the Greeks contended for their liberties against the Roman power: whence it happened that, under the general name of Achaia, conquered Greece became a province of the Roman empire; and the name of Gracia does not appear among the provinces enumerated in the Notice of the Empire.-The $I_{s t h}$ mus which affords entrance to the Peloponnesus, is now called Hexa-Mili; its breadth being estimated at six modern Greek miles, which are shorter than the Roman. The Isthmus was destined to the celebration of games called Isthmian, which, in a place contracted by two seas, were dedicated to Nep-tune.-Corinthus, a rich and powerful city, whose situation on the opening of the isthmus might make one of the shackles of Greece in the opinion of Philip, owed its re-establishment to Cæsar, after having been erased to the foundations in the war of the Romans against the :Achean league; and a wretched hamlet on its site still recalls it to memory, in the name of Corito. This city had two ports; Lechaum, on the Corinthiac gulf, and Cenchrea, on the Saronic; besides a citadel on the pike of a mountain, which, by reason of its situation, was named Acro-Corinthus.-Sicyon, from its having been governed by kings, in a remote age, has taken the name of Basilico.-Agium was the place where the states of Achaia were held; and which is thought to have been replaced by Vostitza, on the borders of the gulf.

Argolis. - The country of Argolis derives its name from the city of Argos, one of the most renowned in Greece, and still exists in the name of Argo. Its little river, which from the most ancient king of the counstly was named Inachus, loses itself in a morass near the nea.-Mycena, having become, after Argos, the residence of kings, was that of Agamemnon.-Tyrius had been the dwelling of other princes; and its sequestered situation is found expressed in the name of Vathia, which thè place now bears. It is deeply bosomed in mount tains; and the entrance to it is through a narrow gorge; which affords a bed for a torrent.- $\mathcal{N e m e a}$, on the confines of Coirinthia, must also be mentioned, on account of the celebrity it acquired from the destruction of the $\mathcal{N e m e a n}$ lion in the neighbouring forèst by Hercules, and the institution of the Nemean games by that hero in commemoration of that event, according to some. On the shore of the Argolic gulf, we discover in a pool called Molini the lake Lerna, which its Hydra, also killed by Hercules, has made famous.-Efidaurus, on the Saronic gulf, which a particular adoration rendered to Esculapius distinguished, preserves its name under the form of Pidavra.-Egina is directly opposite; not far flom the continent of Argolis; and we see in history that the inhabitants of this isle were powerful in their marine.

Laconia. Laconia succeeds Argolis: its nàme únder the Greek empire took the form Tzacona; and it is erroneously that in modern maps the name of Sconid appears in the centre of Argolis.

It is well known how much the laws and the martial valour of the Spartans distinguished their pation in Greece. It is known also that the names of Lacedamon and Sharta were common to the same city. : The river Eurotas envelops it so as to form a peninsula; and the place which this city occupied is called Paleo-Chori, or the Old Town. The New town, under the name of Misitra, at some distance towards the west, is sometimes erroneously confounded with Sparta. About midway up the Laconic gulf, Gythium served as the port to the city of Sparta; and is now known by the name of ColoKythia, which it has communicated to the gulf.-The worship of Apollo gave some lustre to Amycla; not far from Sparta, towards the south.-On the coast of the Argolic gulf the most remarkable place is Ekidaurus, with the surname of Limera, the site of which is now called Malvasia.Vecchia, as being in the vicinity of Napoli of Malvasia, a strong place on an insulated rock.The promontory of Malea, which terminates this coast, retains the name of Malio, although otherwise called Sant'-Angelo. Cythera, now called Cerigo, an isle consecrated peculiarly to Venus, lies off this promontory.The Tanarium Promontorium, which is the land of the Peloponnesus the most adranced towards the south, is now named Metapan, from the Greek word metớion, which signifies a front. It is formed by a great mountain, whose name was Taygetus, and which was prolong. ed towards the north till it joined the mountains of Ar. cadia. It is inhabited by a particular nation, who derive their name Maïnote from a castle called Maina, situated on the western acclivity; but it does not appear that they ever extended their name over all Laconia, as expressed. in the modern maps. Several places, for the most part

- maritime, having been detached from the Lacedemoni.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
east.-Its southern part contiguous to Messenia, was distinguished by the name of Trithylia; and in this"canton was a place of the name of Pylus, which disputed with that of Messenia the honour of having belonged to old Nestor; antiquity itself being not decided on this ar-tiele.-Olymfia, whose name is distinguished by the most celebrated games performed in Greece, was seated on the left bank of the Alhheu's, at some distance from its mouth; while Pisa was opposite on the other. The reader perhaps would not imagine that we are still uncertain of the identity of a position so celebrated as Olyminia; and that it is only by a mere presumption, that what we find under the name of Rofeo, by alteration fiom Alfeo, represents it.-Elis, which gave its name to this part of the Peloponnesus, and which was invested with the prerogative of presiding at the the Olymaic games, was situated in the most spacious canton of the country, on a river of the same name with the Peneus of Thessaly, though much inferior to it in magnitude. It is thought a place named Gastonni occupies the site of this city.-There is still another place named Pylus, further advanced in the country than Elis. But on the sea from which Elis was distant, Cyllene, now a place uninhabited under the name of Chiarenza, was a port of the Elians.-A promontory named Chelonites, now Cabo Torneso, is the most advanced point of the Peloponnesus towards the west, and which a channel of the sea separates from Zacinthus, or the isle of Zante.-Two shoals rather than isles, to the south of Zante, are the Strophades, which the poets have peopled with harpies, and whose modern name is Strivali.

Arcadia. There remains to be described a country which, under the name of Arcadia, having no communication with the sea, was contiguous, in some part of its limits, to every other state in the Peloponnesus. The nature of the country, environed by mountains, and fit for the faeding of cattle, had attached its inhabitants to a pastoral life: and the shepherds of Arcadia, and of mount Manalus in particular, are celebrated by the poets. - To those who entered this country on the side of Argolis, Muntinea was the first city that presented itself; and it is illustrated by a victory gained over the Lacedemonians, which cost Epaminondas his life. : It-is thought that this city is succeeded by that of Trapoliz-za.-In appróaching the frontier of Achaia, and of mount C"yllene, where-it is pretended that Mercury was born, Pheneos discovers itself in the name of Phonia.Megatopolis, or the great city, constructed by the advice of Epaminondas, as a barrier to Arcadia on the confines of Laconia, and on a river named Helissan, which joins the Alpheus, corresponds. in these circumstances with the modern position of Leonardi.
íreta et ctcladae insulae.
Candia and the Cyclades.
Creta. The island of Crete, which nöthing could render more illustrious in antiquity than havingex given birth to Jupiter, retains its name under the form of Icri(i, as the Turks pronounce it. The application of the name of the capital, which is Candia, to the island itself appears to have arisen from the Venetians.

This island extends in length from west to east, forming two promontories; on one side C'riu-Metônon, which signifies the ram's front, now simply Crio; the other Samonium, vulgarly Salamone. Another promontory, which advances towards the north, and is called Spada, was heretofore named Cimarus. Among the mountains which reign throughout the island, Ida; where it is pretended that Jupiter was nursed in his infancy; elevates itself in the centre of the country.-Cnossus, or Gnossius, Gortyna, and Cydonia, were the three principal cities of Crete. The first, at some distance from the northern shore, and which is said to have been the residence of Minos, has left no vestiges that are known. Candia, less remote towards the east than was Cnossus, is a new city; and which had its commencement by,being a post of the Saracens in the ninth century. The ruins of Gortyna are better known in receding from Candia towards the south, on a little river named Lethaus, at no great distance from the ports which this city has upon the southern coast. Subterranean passages in its environs seem to represent a dædalus or labyrinth, which one is curious to find in this country.

Cyclade Insule. It is said that the isles called Cyclades, from the Greek term Kuclos, owe the name to their encircling Delos; but it may more plausibly be ascribed to the circumstance of their being collected in, the same part of the $\boldsymbol{A g}$ gean Sea, adjacent to Greece. It is proper to add, moreover, that the name of Archi'pelago, by which we now call this sea, is no other than an alteration of that of Egiopelago, arcording to the form of the Greek, very far from being an expression of pre-eminence in relation to other seas.-After having doubled the Malean promontory of the Peloponnesus, the first isle that presents itself, and a considerable one among the Cyclades, is Melos, or Milo: Cimolus is adjacent, and has taken the name of Argentiera, though that -

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Stanpalia, may be classed among the Crclades, as the remotest towards the east

The sflorades, which are beyond, belong to Asia, and Jdo not enter into our present division.-But we must not omit an isle separated from the rest by the intervention of Eubœa, Scyros, which the banishment of Theseus, and the temporary dwelling of Achilles, ser. ved to illustrate, and which preserves the name of Ski-ro.-We defer speaking of Lemnos, as being much more remote, and in the parallel of Troy, but which will become an article in treating of the next continent.

CHAPTER II.

A S I A.

SECTION FIRST.

> ASIA PROPRIA, NOW ASIA MINOR.

IT must be premised that antiquity knew no distinction of country under the name of $\boldsymbol{A}$ sia Minor; though there be found sometimes in the ancient writers, Asra on this side of Mount Taurus and the river Halys; distinguished from that which is beyond. But to comprise what we propose under the present title, we must advance eastward to the Euthrates, follow the shore of the Euxine northward to Colchis, and the shore of the interior sea or Mediterranean to the limits of Syria.the frequent revolutions that the countries of Asin have experienced, attended with occasional contractions and expansions of their limits, render it impossible to treat of those limits with precision.

Two grand diaceses, or departments, under the emperors of the east, in the fourth century, divided this Asia, by the names of Asiana and Pontica, under the two metropolitan sees of Efhesus and Casarèa of Cappadocia. But this division has no affinity with any distribution in the ages of antiquity; nor does it preserve any traces at present. Asiana occupied all the shore of the Mediterranean, Pontica that of the Black sea; and a line drawn obliquely from the Propontis made the separation.

Endeavouring to apply method to the distribution of the divers countries which compose Asia Minor, we find them disposed in such a manner as to be divisable into three classes: one towards the north, along the Euxine, one towards the south, along the Mediterrane$a n$, separated from the precedent by a middle class, which extended from the Æyean Sea to the Eufihrates. Each of these classes, or assemblages, is composed of four principal countries. Under the first or northern, are ranged Mysia, Bithynia, Paphliagonia, and Pontus; in the second or intermediate, Lydia, Phrygia, Gallatia, and Cathadocia. The third or southern consists of Caria, Lycia, Pamphylia, and Cilicia. Consequently the following detail will be divided into three ${ }^{\text {p }}$ heads, each bearing the title of the countries comprised therein. And some portions of territory which dot appear in this arrangement, shall be made known by their connexion with some individual province: thus $I_{o-}$ nia will appear with Lydia; Lycaonia with Phrygia; Pisidia with Pamfhylia; and Armenia Minor with Caffıadocia.

MrSIA, BITHYNIA, PAPHLAGONIA, PONTUS.*
Mysia. Mysia is adjacent to the Profontis on the north, and to the EEgean Sea on the west: it is bounded

* The civil divisions of Asia Minor of the present day correspond so illy, and are so few comparatively with those of antiquity, that we must be contented with stating in the way of note, that this country is now divided into three provinces of the Turkish empire. One called Natolia, or rather Anato. LIA, which occupies the zestern part, extending over its whole width; while the other two, called Amasia, on the Black sea,

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

- do not, as is ordinarily supposed, represent the positions of Abydus and Sestus; the one in Asia, the other in Europe. Abydos, which is not precisely opposite to Sestos, exhibits now but a heap of ruins, in a point named Na gara. The width of the strait a little above, and nearér to Sestus, is not more than 575 toises. It was in this place, the most contracted, that Xerxes laid a bridge for the passage of his immense army: and as this bridge had seven stadia of length, according to the testimony of Herodotus, it follows that these stadia are the shortest of the three measures under the same denomina-tion.-On the farther -side of a narrow channel, which separates a spacious insulated land, was Cyzicus, which held a rank among the principal cities of Asia, sustained a siege against all the forces of Mithridates. It. had the dignity of a metropolis in the province that has been mentioned under the name of Hellesiontus; and ruins of it still preserve its name. But its channel, which numerous bridges covered heretofore, is now filled up with rubbish.-Among many adjacent isles Proconnesus, the only one which shall be mentioned here, owes its present name of Marmora to the marble which distinguished it in antiquity; and this name is also communicated to the Propontis; it being commonly called the Sea of Marmora.-In our progress we find the Rhyndacus: and as this terminates Mysia on the side of Bithynia, we must return to Troy-Before the Alexandria - of Troas lies the small isle of Tenedos, which still re: tains its name - The coast of the continent, tending towards the east, conducts into a gulf to Adramytium, whose name is more purely preserved in Adramittit than under the vulgar form of Landemitre. This coast, and, that which succeeds towards the south, were occupied after the ruin of Troy, by Eolian Greeks; and the name of $\notin$ olus' was given to a part of Mysia, extending hence to Lydia and the river Hermus.-At the mouth of the Caicus is recognized the position of Elaea, which was the port of Pergamus, and now called Ialea. Pergamus was the capital of a kingdom, which the Romans aggrandized considerably in favour of the king Fumenes, after the defeat of Antiochus the Great, king of Syria; and this city, which, with its kingdom, was bequeathed to them by Attalus, -its last king, subsists in the name of Bergamo.-A promontory named Cana, now Coloni, very near the eastern point of Lesbos, is accompanied with little islands called Arginussa; which merit notice as they became the scene of a great naval victory of the Athenians over the Lacedemonians.Lesbos, whose oblique position between the north and east, covers all the space between the promontories Lec'tum and Cana, is one of the largest islands in the $\mathbb{C}$ gean Sea. Its present name of Mytilin is from Mytilene, 2. Which is described in antiquity as a delightful abode, and distinguished by the cultivation of literature. This city, which subsists under the name of Mytilini, is ennobled by the birth of Sappho, whose fame has survived her poems.-Methymna, which yielded to Mytilene alone, existed in a place whose modern name is Porto-Petera.-The small islands enclosed between this coast and the shore of 巴olis, and which, from the epithet of Hecatus given to Apollo, were called Hecaton-nesi, are now Musco-nisi, or the Isles of Mice. • But from the promontory of Lesbos, the most advanced in the Egean

SECT. 1.

Sea, and to which the name of Sigrium is continued in Sigri, we shall take a view of Lemnos, which, as being nearer to Asia than to any land in Europe, can no where be better described than in this place. Of two cities which it possessed, Myprina and Hepheestia, the first is Palio-castro, or the Old Castle, on a point turned towards the north-west, which is remarked by the ancients to receive the shadow of Mount Athos at the time of the winter solstice.

What we have hitherto seen of Mysia regards only the part bordering on the sea: it is proper also to be acquainted with some principal places in the interior coun-try.-Scehsis was a considerable city in Troas; and from which it is remarkable that the writings of Aristotle came to light again, much damaged by having been long buried in the earth. It is to Strabo that we are indebted for this anecdote, and also for information concerning the succeeding fortune of these writings.-The country which envelops the bottom of the Adramyttian gulf was called Cilicia, and portioned between two cities, Thebe and Lyrnessus, of whose present state and situation we. have no knowledge.

Bitifnia. This country was named Bebrycia, be. fore a people who are said to have issued from Thrace gave it the name of Biihynia. There is, moreover, observed a distinction between the Thyni any Bithyni, al. 'though both were reputed of Thracian origin. .Depart. ing from the Rhyndacus, we shall extend Bithynia to the river Parthenius; observing that there was a time when -the dependencies of Pontus, extending to Heraclea,confined Bithynia within narrower bounds; and aremarking also, that under the lower empire Bithynia was no long-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

of exile appropriated to persons of that rank.-Chalcedon was called the City of the Blind, in derision of its Greek founders, for overlooking the more advantageou's situation of Byzantium. A council against the Eutychian heresy in the middle of the fifth century has illustrated Chälcedon, which has taken under the Turks the name of Kadi-keui, or the burgh of the Kadi.—It is here that the Propontis begins to contract itself to form the Bosphorus, which becomes still narrower at Chrysofolis, the modern Scutari, clirectly opposite the point that Byzantium occụpied. It must be observed, that this Bosphorus has its old and new castles, as well as the strait of the Dardanelles. And at some distance within its aperture, called by the Turks Bogas; where the new castles now stand, is the site of a temple consecrated to Jupiter Urius, or the Dispenser of favourable winds; and which. is now named Ioron.-The powerful maritime Greek city of Heraclea with the surname of Pontica, is evidently that subsisting under the name of Erekli. The gulf at the head of which this city is situated is co.vered by a point of land, in the figure of a peninsula, called Acherusia; and it was pretended that Hercules, who gave the name to this city, dragged Cerberus from hell through a cavern in this promontory. The nation of Mariandyni, who occupied the country, were not defini. tively distinguished fiom the Bithyni. Under the lower empire, this part of Bithynia adjacent to Paphlagonia composed a separate province named Honorias.-In this canton, Bithynium, which bore also the name of Cliaudio. folis, was the metropolis of Honorius, and was disbo. noured by the birth of Antinoüs, so well known as the favourite of Adrian. Its position seems to be that of the modern town of Bastan.

Paphlagonia. It extends from the river Parthenius, which preserves the name of Partheni, to the river Ha lys before mentioned. Adjacent to the Euxine on the north, it is contiguous on the south to Galatia. Till the time of the Trojan war this country was occupied by the Heneti, who are pretended to have afterwards passed into Italy, in confounding their name with that of the $V e$ neti.

To enter into a detail of this country, we must first recount its maritime citiẹs. Amastris, situated aḍvantageously in a peninsula, bore the name of the niece of the last king of Persia of the name of Darius, whom a Greek, tyrant of Heraclea-Pontica, had married; the term tyrant being peculiarly applied in antiquity to an usurper of the sovereignty of a free, state.-An ancient city called Sesamus, to which this princess subjected many other cities in its environs, also assumed her name, which it still preserves under the form of Amasreh.But the most celebrated of the cities adjacent to the sea was Sinope, naturally strong by its situation in a narrow isthmus of a peninsula, which afforded it two ports. Inconsiderable however in remote antiquity, this city owed its aggrandizement to a Milesian colony, before it fell under the domination of the kings of Pontus, who made it their ordinary residence. It preserves its name under the form of Sinub.

In the interior of Paphlagonia there is found no position which will better represent Germanicopolis than that of Kastamoni, which was seized from its native prince by Mahommed II.-Pomficiofiolis had mines of Sandarac or orpiment, the foliations of which were deemed poisonous.- There is an ambiguity concerning the limits of $\mathbf{P}_{\circ}$ phlagonia and Galatia. Gangra was the metropolis of the former province under the lower em:pire; yet the local position of this city, and the circumstance of its having been the residence of a Galatian prince, as king Dejoratus, seem to favour the claim of Galatia during the ages of antiquity.

Pontus. . Pontus was a dismemberment from Caf. nadocia, as a separate satrapy under the kings of Persia, till it' was erected into a kingdom about 300 yearrs befóre the Christian æra. The name of Leuco-Syri, or White Syrians, which was given to the Cappadocians, extended to a people who inhabited Pontus: and it is plainly seèn that the term Pontus distinguishes the maritime people from those who dwelt in the Mediterranean country.This great space, extending to Colchis, formed under the Roman empire two provinces: the one encroaching on Paphlagonia on the side of Sinohe, was distinguished 'by the term I'rima, and afterwards by the name of He lenopiontus, from Helen, mother of Constantine; the other was called Pontus Polemoniacus, from the name of Polenion, which had been that of a race of kings; the last of which made a formal cession of his state to Nero.

Leaving the mouths of the Halys, the shore of the sea conducts to $A m i s u s$, a Greek city, but which, subjected in the sequel to the kings of Pontus, was aggrandized by Mithridates with a quarter called from the surname he bore, Eupiatoria, that is Kind Father; and Samsoun, as it is now called, preserves the ancient site. Thè sea here forms a kind of gulf, which from the name of Ami. sus was called Amiseus Sinus;-and Asia, being consider.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
dwelling attributed to the Amazons.' This country is inhabited by a people almost savage, named Djanik.-Polemcnium may have owed this name to the first Polemon, whio was established king of this country by Marc Antony. This city, adjacent to the promontory of Phadisana, appears to derive therefrom its modern name of Vatista, where the river Sidenus meets the sea, after having given the name of Sidena to the district which it traverses.-Ce. ras $\hat{s}$ is a city existing under the name of Keresoun: if we may credit an historian, it was from Cerasus that Lucullus, in his war with Mithridates, brought intọ Europe a fruit tree hitherto unknown, which was thence called cerasum, or cherry.—Trahezâs, a very celebrated Greek city, apparently owed its name to the regular geometrical figure of that denomination which its walle assumed, on a point of land projected in the sea. It was the residence of a prince of the race of Comnenes, when it fell, in the reign of Mahommed II, under the domination of the Turks, who, according to their pronunciation in such cases, call it Tarembezoun or Trebisond.The river named Bathys, or the Deep, which appears also under the name of Acamfis, now Batheun, separates Pontus from Colchis.

Advancing from Trebisond into the interior country, a place given on a Roman way under the name of Byla, may correspond with that which from its mines the Turks call Gumish-kaneh, or the House of Silver.-The name of Tehe.., in this canton, discloses that of Teches, from which the ten thousand Greeks had the first view of the sea in their menorable retreat.-A chain of mountains, by. which the Euphrates seems constrained to take a southern course, were named Scydissèsf; and described as rugged and inaccessible. For the same quality of extreme asperity they are now distinguished by the name of Aggidag, or the Bitter Mountain.-Different names distinguish the people in the vicinity of the sea. The Mosynaci, who imprinted spots on their skins, derived their name from the form of their habitations, which were towers built of wood. There is mention, in Xenophon's retreat, of the Dryla as adjacent to Trebisond. These nations received the general name of Chalybes, from being occupied in the forging of iron. They are mentioned by Strabo under the name of Chaldai; and all this country, distributed into deep vallies and precipitate mountains, is still called Keldir. The character of the people corresponded with the face of the country as above described; which was composed of Hehta-cometa, or seyen communities.

$$
L Y D I A, P H R Y G I A, G A L A T I A, C A P P A D O C I A
$$

Ifydia et Ionia. We now treat of what fills the intermediate space between the northern part which has preceded, and the southern which is to follow. On this space, which should conduct us from the shores of the Egean Sea to the banks of the Euhhrates, Lydia is the first country, in proceeding thus from west to east. It is bounded by Mysia on the north, P/irygia on the east, and Caria on the south. The name of Mronia was also common to it: but leaving equivocal distinctions, we may affirm that the $L y d i$ and Maones were the same nation. The borders of the sea having been occupied by Ionian colonies, about 900 years before the Christian mera, took the name of Ionia, whose maritime situation will necessarily precede in our detail the interior of $L y$. dia.

Elhesus, the most illustrious city of Asia, was found. ed by a son of Codrus, king of Athens; was adorned with a superb temple, constructed by common contribution of the 'Asiatic cities; and was the residence of a Roman proconsul, whose julisdiction respected a province of great extent, under the name of $\mathcal{A} s i a$. It is now a mass of ruins, under the name of Aiosoluc, which is an alteration of Agio-Theologos, or Saint Theologian; an epithet which the modern Greeks have given to St. John, founder of the church of this city. Its position is at some distance from the sea, and from the mouth of the river Caystrus, called by the Turks Kitchik Meinder, or the little Meander.-Smyrna, which did not enter in: to the association of the Ionic cities till the establishment had been some time formed, took'its name from an Amazon. This city, which disputed with several others the honour of giving birth to Homer, is well known to be the greatest emporium of commerce in that part of the Ottoman empire, it preserves its name in the form of 100 mir, which the Turks have thus altered to avoid the combination of the two initial consonants, the pronunciation of which, from' their organs being inveterate in contrary habits, they find difficult to compass.-P/locra, founded by Athenians, was the remotest of the Ionic citics towards AOLis. We know that Phocaa was the parent of Marseilles, by an emigration of its inhabitants from the oppression of one of the generals of Cyrus, named Harpagus. The name of Fochia remains to its ancient site, although a new town of the same name is a little distant from it, towards the gulf of Smyrna.-Cuma, or Cyme, 1 which follows, was the most powerful of the Æolic colonies, at the head of a gulf called Cumaus Sinus; and there are vestiges of this city in a place called Nemourt

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Ionic union, we should speak of Miletus, if this city were not rather comprised within the limits of Caria: and M'yus, above the mouth of the Meander, was of the same foundation. But we must now quit this famous colony to survey the interior of Lydia.

Sardes was the capital of a kingdom which extended to the river Halys, when Cyrus conquered it from Crœsus; and under the kings of Persia it became the residence of the Satraps of Asia. It was seated at the foot of Mount Tmolus, now called by the Turks Bouzdag, or the Cold Mountain. The river that watered this territory was named Pactolus, which in the time of Strabo roll: ed no more sands of gold; whence it was idly supposed formerly proceeded the treasures of Crœsus. Sardes is said to be represented by a small place named Sart, which preserves some vestiges of antiquity.-Hyrcanians transported under the kings of Persia from the borders of the Caspian Sea into the plain north of the Hermus, had given the name of Hyrcania to a city, which that now named Marmora is supposed to have replaced.Mugnésia, which wàs surnamed Syhilia, was situated at the foot of mount Sytilus, on the left of the Hermus. It is near this city that Antiochus the Great was defeated by Scipio Asiaticus; and Magnisa, is it is now called, having been the residence of the Uttoman Sultans, is still a considerable place.-Thyatria, towards the frontier of Mysia, and which received a Macedonian colony, is now called Ak-hisar, or the White Castle.-In the plain which the Caystrus traverses, another city, under the modern name of Tireh, appears to have been the Mo'ropolis of Lydid.-ln ascending the Meander to the limits of Lydia, Trifolis appears to have been situated in a place where this river receives another that comes out of Phrygia.-Philadelthia, which owed this name to a brother of Eumenes, king of Pergamus, was situated immediately under the extremity of a branch of Tmolus; but was constructed with little solidity in its edifices, as being extremely subject to earthquakes. These phenomena were most dreadful in their effects in the seventeenth year of the Christian æra; for then twelve of the principal cities of Asia, particularly this and Sardes were nearly destroyed. A great tract of country, which from My sia extended in Phrygia, being at all times most exposed to these disasters, was called Catakecaumene, or the Burnt Country. It must be said to the honour of Philadelphia, that when all the country had sunk under the Ottoman yoke, it still resisted, and yielded only to the efforts of Bajazet I, or llderim. The Turks call it Alah-Shehr, or the Beautiful City*; probably by reason of its situation.

Phrygia et Lycaonia. Succeeding to Lydia, towards the east, Phrysia is one of the principal countries in what is called Asia Minor. The Phryges were of Thracian origin, according to Strabo; and their first es. tablishments, from the time that Gordius and Midas reigned over this nation, were towards the sources of the Sangar, which divided their territory from Bithynia, according to the report of the same author. It is to this part; although at first but of small extent compared with [^6]its subsequent expansion, that the name of the Greater Phrygia is given by distinction from a Phrygia Minor, which encroached on Mysia towards the Hellestiont, and was thus denomina ed from Phrygians who occupied this country after the destruction of Troy. The testimony of Strabo is explicit; and if the Trojans are called Phrygians by Virgil, they became so by usurpation; and that accidental event will not justify us in obliterating the distinction between Mysia and Phrygia, as provinces. But by a dismemberment which the kingdom of Bithynia suffered on the part of the Romans, and to the advantage of the kings of Pergamus, this part of the territory, which was Phrygian, assumed under these kings the name of Efictetus, or Plrygia by acquisition. The territory which Phrygia possessed towards the south, and contiguous to $\dot{P}$ isidia and $L$ ycia, appears to have been called Paroreias, denoting it in the Greek to be in the vicinity of mountains.-In the subdivision of provinces that took place in the time of Constantine, we distinguish rwo Phrygias; one surnamed Pacatiana, the other Salutaris; and Laodicea appears to have been metropolis in the $\operatorname{fr} s$ t, and Synnada in the second.

' It is singular that, on entering upon the detail of the principal cities of this country, we cannot begin with those that belonged to its first occupants. The Galatians having diffused themselves in Phrygia; the canton where the Phrygians originally settled, decisively makes a part of Galatia, which forms a distinct province among those that divide the continent.-A city which commerce had rendered sufficiently flourishing to yield this advantage only to Ephesus, was Afumea, surnamed Cibotus, or the Coffer, and situated at the confluence of the little river

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
beginning towards the close of the eleventh century. The country which they oppressed, called Karaman, in its present state of a Beglerbeglic of the Ottoman empire, extends from the limits of Anadoli to those of a country distinguished by the name of Roum; which we shall describe in treating of Cappadocia.-A vast plain which extends upon the limits of Galatia, is so dry and scarce of water, that Strabo remarks this necessary element to be sold in a place called Soatra, or Sabatra. The Tatta Palus, a salt pool, mentioned by the same author, in this plain, , is called Tuzla; a term, in the language of the Turks, signifying the quality of its waters.

Galatia. It is adjacent towards the north to Bithynia and Pafihlagonia. The Sangar and the Halys traverse the contiguous extremities of these provinces. We see in history, that about two hundred and seventy yeats before the Christian æra, a handful of Gauls, detached from a great emigration, led by Brennus, passed into Asia by crossing the Hellestiont. After having laid under contribution all the country on this side of mount Taurus, these Gauls cantoned themselves in a part of Phrygia, extending to the confines of Cafinadocia. And, as there had been previous establishments formed by the Greeks, with whom the strangers had mingled, the conquered country obtained the name also of Gallo.Gracia. However, they had so well preserved the distinc. tion, that their language appeared to St. Jerome, about six hundred years after their migration, the same with that spoken at his time in Treves*. This nation was [^7]composed of three people; the Tolisto-boii, confining on Phrygia, called Efictetus; the Trocmi, on the side of Cappadocia; and the Tectosages, occupying the interme. diate territory. Among many cotemporary princes, call: ed Tetrarchs, who ruled in Galatia, Dejotarus, favoured by Pompey', and not less so by Cæsar; usurped the gorernment of the whole, and assumed the title of King. But a kingdom that Amyntas, a creature of Antony, possessed, and which beyond Galatia, extended in Lycaonia and Pisidia, was re-united to the empire by Augustus, after the battle of Actium.- As to the occurrences' of later times, Galatia was not divided into two provinces before the reign of Theodosius.

$\delta^{\prime}$ Ancyra, among the Tectosuges, is the first city of Gàlatia. It received many favours from Augustus;: and. Angoura, as it is now called, still preserves a magnificent inscription, reciting the principal circumstances of the life of that prince. It is in these environs that Bajazet was vanquished, and made prisoner by Timur. This city is distinguished by a much esteemed manufacture of camclots of goats'-hair which numerous herds of these animals furnish in this canton, inhabited by Túrkmans, and were not originally Gauls, but Germans, who having conquered a part of Gaul, were thus denominated to distinguish them from other Goths; as the Arabs of Mauretania are called Maures; and the English, Britons. He also considers the evidence of St. Jerome as decisive with regard to their Germanic origin; for it is well known that, in the time of this father, the German was the popular language at Treves, as it now is. Their leaders too were called Lomnorius and Lotharius, names in themselves pure ly Gothic, though disguised under Roman terminations.
, named Tchourgoud-ili.-Pessinus, which appears to have been near the Sangar, in the country occupied by the Tolistoboïans, was a sanctuary of the worship which the Phrygians rendered to the mother of the sorls, or Cybele, whose simulacrum, or idol, was transported from this city to Rome during the second Punic War. Augustus elevated Pessinus to the dignity of metropolis in second Galatia, surnamed Salutaris.-Gordium is another place of consideration, in quality of the ancient residence of the kings of this country; and its situation on the Sangar admits not of the doubt which sorne of the learned have suggested concerning it.' It had declined into a very small place, called Gordiu-come, when it was aggrandized under the name of Juliopolis, in the reign of Augustus; and the injury that the walls of this city received from the course of the Sangar, was repaired by. Justinian. But we reluctantly confess the deficiency of actual information concerning this and the preceding position.-Amorium was a considerable city whenit was taken and sacked by the Khalif Matosem, in the year 223 of the Hegira, and in the 837 h of the Cbristian æra; $\therefore$ n event that did not however preclude the mention of Amora by the Arabian geographers many ages after.-In following the track of a Roman way which from Ancyra conducts into (ilicia, a place is found under the name of Gorbaga, which indicates Gorbeils, the residence of a prince whom Dejotarus put to death. This way leads to Tavium, otherwise Tavia, which was the principal city of the Trocmians, the remotest of the Galatian people; and a place now called Tchoroum represents it -The whole north side of Galaw timis covered with a chain of mountains; among which

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

domain to the Eufhrates. An union with the Armenian nation caused the part adjacent to the river to assume the name of Armenia Minor, but in a manner indeter. minate, and much more contracted at first than in postefior times, when by the division of Cappadocia into four or five provinces, the name of $\mathcal{A r m e n i a}$ was extended to two of them, as will be shown in speaking of the metropolitan cities.

Mazaca, capital of Cappadocia, in a particular canton called Cilicia, took the name of Casarea under Tibe:ius, without losing its former denomination. It is surnamed Ad Argaum, being situated at the fort of Mount Argaus, from whose summit, it is said, both the Euxine and Mediterranean Seas may be seen. Some,difference is thought to be distinguished between the site of the ancient city of Casarea, and the modern one of Kaisarieh. The river Halys on the other 'side of Mount Argaus, cannot be far distant, since the devastation brought on the territory of Cæsarea by the inundations of this river, occasioned a remission of the customary tribute.—Mocissus must be noticed, being known by this name at the time of its re-edification by Justinian, who made it the metropolis of the third Caftnadocia, giving it the name of Justinianotiolis, which it has not retained: for this place is found under the name of Moucious, at some distance from the passage of the Halys.-In the environs of a place named Bour, the vestiges of an ancient castle appear to be the fortress of $\mathcal{N}$ ora, or Neroassus; where Eumenes, who had been secretary to Ale xander, sustained a siege against the forces of Antigonus - A branch of the river Halys issues from one of the gorges of Taurus, and the Sarus rushes thyough another, before entering Cilicia. At the sources' of these rivers the mountain prolongs one of its chains towards the north, called Anti-Taurus, by opposition to the more dominant ridge that encompasses a particular country called Cataonia.-Two principal cities in this country were Tyana and Comona. 'The former was ele: vated to the dignity of metropolis in the second Catifidacia; and was remarkable for producing a celebrated pre. tendèr, named Apollonius. The other was distinguished by a college devoted to the worship of Bellona or Diana, the pontiff of which was a sovereign prince, who only. yielded.in clignity to the kings of Cappadocia. The Sarus issuing from Anti-Taurus passed through this city; which the position of a place named El Bostan, or the Gardens appears to represent. There is no positive knowledge of the site of Tyana; and it may be proper to add, that this is the city which appears under the name of $D_{2 n} n$ in the'march of the younger Cyrus.-Podandus preserves its name in Podando. This place was much decried for the rudeness of its situation; it being buried among the mountains, which here form a defile that affords a diff. cult passage from Cataonia into Cilicia.... Cucusuis: the gloomy place of exile of St. John Chrysostom, situated. likewise in one of the gorges of Taurus, is named Coc. son: and through these defiles lay the roter of the crusades towards Syria.-It requires more actual know: ledge of the country than we possess, to indicate the pow sitions of Ariathia, the residence of many kingane The principal Roman camp in Melitene, one of the greatest prefectures of this country, took the form of a city ufin Ler Trajan, with the same name; and in the division of the lesser Armenia into two provinces, Naelitene became metropolis of the second. Situated between the rivers Euphrates and Melas, it subsists in the name of Malaria. -We must now pass to Sebaste, which being under Mithridates but a-castle named Cabira, became a city under Pompey. The name which it still keeps, and which in Greek hās the same signification with Augús$t a$ in Latin, was given to it, in honour of Augustus, by the queen dowager of Polemon, king of Pontus. The river Halys flows in its vicinity; and Mount Paryadres, is not far distant towards the north. Sivas, as it is now called was the metropolis of the first Armenia; and was cruelly treated by Timur, who erased its ramparts, which a Seljukid Sultan had erected., It is now but an incon. siderable place, although the residence of a Beglerbeg, whose government extends over the country distinguished from . $\mathrm{K}^{a^{2}{ }^{a m a n} \text {. and Anadoli by the name of }}$ Roum. This denomination, which was extended to the whole Greek empire by the Arabian Khalifs, is numi confined to this territory, which formed its eastern fron-tier.-In the vicinity of Sebaste there is mention made of an alnost inexpugnable fortress, situated on a steep rock among deep valleys, and where Mithridates had de-. posited his principal treasures. Its name, which was Nowus, is retained by the Armenians in the form of He -sen-Now; but the Turks call it Kadj-hisar.-Nicopolis in Armenid Minor constructed by Pompey, 'after having forced Mithridates to retire to the Acilisene on the banks of the Euphrates, cannot be referred to any other position than that of a city, whose modern name of Divriki is the same with Trthrice in the Byzantians, although Tephrice and Nicopolis be found separately mentioned thought extraordinary that the actual state of a city, once so illustrious, should be unknown; for it is an erroneous opinion that a place named Palatsa represents it. It may be added, to the honour of Miletus, that Thales who laid the foundations of philosophy amongt the Greeks,' to whom the sciences owed their nurture, was one of its ci-tizens.-Crossing a narrow space of country which separates the Iassus Sinus from another which succeeds, we find Halicarnassus, a city of Greek foundation, which became the residence of the kings of Caria; and which was ornamented with a superb tomb, erected by Artemisia to king Mausolus, her husband. The birth of Herodotus, the most ancient of the Greek historians, as that of the famous philologist and antiquary Dionysius, and the defence made by Halicarnassus. when besieged-by Alexander, are circumstances which contribute to the fame' of this city. On the spot that it occupies is a cas: tle named Budroun, which appears to have been erected by the knights of Malta, whose possessions extended on the "oasts of the continent, as well as to the adjacent isles.-Near a long-projected promontory named Triopium, now Cape Crio, was the city of Cnidus, distinguished heretofore for the devotion rendered to Venus, and now exhibiting but a mass of ruins.-This canton of Caria, having been occupied by Dorians; was named $D_{0}$. ris; and the sea there forms a gulf which was called Doridis Sinus. Its contiguity to Rhodes admitted of the establishment of a ferry.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

All that is known of Alabanda, one of the principal cities in the interior of Caria, is, that it was not far dis: tant from the - Meander:-The site of Ahhrodisias is found in a place named Gheira; and that of Stratonicea in Eski-Shehr, or the Old Town. The first had the rank of metropolis, in the province of Caria; the second aggrandized under the kings of Syria, owed its name to Stratonice, wife to Antiochus Soter.-Mylasa, a consid-' crable city, where Jupiter was honoured with a particular worship by the Carians, subsists under the samename, although the quarries in its vicinity have catused ${ }^{\circ}$ it also to be called Marmora. The city is situated at some distance from the sea; and its port, named Physcuis, retains the name of Physco.

But this article of Caria cannot be concluded without some notice of the adjacent isles of the 死gean Sea. The name of Sporades is applied to them in genersl; to signify that they are dispersed. Pathmos, Leros, and Calymna, preserve their names; with a small alteration in the last, which is pionounced Calmine. It is well known how much the circumstance of the banishment of St. John, the anostle of the churches of Asia, has illustrated the first of these isles, but little remarkable in itself.-Cos, a considerable isle off the Ceramic - gulf, had the glory of producing Hippocrates and Apelles, two men who held the first rank in their respective faculties. It preserves its name in the form of Stan-Co, where the prèposition of place is recognised; but; by a depravation singularly gross, it is called Lango by' Eu. ropeans. -The isle of Rhodes has a well-earned celebrity: the Rhodians signalized themselves particularly in the marine; and the services rendered by them to the Romans, in the war against the last king of Syria, pro: cured them extensive possessions on the continent. Lin-. dus, Camirus, and Ialysus, had preceded in this isle the foundation of a city named Rhodus, which remounts no higher than the Pelopionnesian war, or about four hundred years before, the Christian æra.' It was in vain that Demetrius, surnamed Poliorcetes, or the Taker of Cities, held it besieged for a year. Having successfully resisted Mohammed, II., it yield at length to the efforts of Soliman, II., in 1522. The colossilistatue of Apollo 'er'ected by the Rhodians at the entrance of their port has also contributed to their renown. It may be added, that Lindo and Camiro are still names known in the isle of Rhodes;--The little isle of Carhathus, now Scarpanto, lying in the mid channel between Rhodes and Crete, had given to this channel the name of Carlathium Mare.

Lycia. Contained between two gulfs, Lycia is bordered by the sea on three sides; and Mountains which extend their branches in various directions through the country, cover it on the other side. It is recorded of the Lysii, that having ports favourable for navigation, they had preferred the establishment of a good adminis. tration to the example of their neighbours of Pamphylia and Cilicia, who were addicted to piracy.

At the head of the gulf which confines Lycia on the side of Caria, Talmissus, which was famed for very skilful magicians, takes a position similar to that which is given to a modern city named Macri.-Zanthus, the greatest city of Lycia, was situated upon a river of the same name, at some distance from the sea; and it is evident that the modern name of Eksenide, in the same position, is only an alteration of the primitive form.-Near the sea, Patara (or as it is now pronounced, Patera,) was in possession of an oracle: between which and that of De. los it was pretended that Apollo equally divided his pre.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

The Cestrus conducts at some distance from the sea to Perga, which took the rank of Metropolis in the province of Pamphylia, and which appéars to be concealed under the Turkish denomination of Kara-hisar, or the - Black Castle, in a district call Tekieh.-Ranging along the coast we find Side, which seems to have taken precedence of Perga; for, when Pamhhylia. was divided into two provinces; it became metropolis of the first. A port covered with many little isles and called Candeloro, appears to correspond with this position..e-Beyond the river Melas, or the Black, the limits of Pamphylia are extremely equivocal: Coracesium being attributed to Cilicia; and in another time, Sydra, which is more remote; being given to Pamphylia.. On this shore there exists a place named Alanieh, seated on a rock that overlooks the sea, as Poracesium is described in antiquity; and although this place owes its present state to a Seljukide Sultan, it may be esteemed more ancient, and the same as the Castle Ubaldo of the marine atlases.

Advancing towards the interior country, we find Termessus, on the intermediate limits of Pamphylia and Pi sidia, situated before the defiles that gave entrance to the country of Mylas, which was mentioned in cencluding the article of Lycia. It was the centre of the little territory of Cabalia; bounded by Lycia and Pamphylia, and inhabited by the Solimi. This position appears to correspond with that of a place at the foot of mountains, whose name of Estenaz may be derived from. a Greek word signifying defiles.-In the interior of Pisidia, now yamed Hamid, Premna, a strong place where the Romans established a colony, appears to preserve its name in that of Kebrinaz; which has an ancient castle on a high mount.-Between this place and Sagalessus, was Sandalium, a fortress that no invader ever insulted.-The greatest city of Pisidia was Selga, of Lacedemonian foundation, and which had become so powerful as to be able to arm.twenty thousand men. It appears to e ascribed to Pamphylia, in a posterịor age; but the site which it occupied is now unknown.

Isauria was a country adjacent to Pisidia; and the Isaurians were distinguished from the Pisirians by the violence and rapine which they exercised on their neighbours. Servilius, who was charged with the conduct of the war in this country, and who acquired from its success the name of Isauricus, destroyed their capio: tal called Isauria; which Amyntas, of whom Gálatia has given us occasion to speak, re-established, after having dislodged a partisan who in this country held Derbe and Lystra: The name of Darb properly denotes a gate; and this place may be represented by that called Alahdag, at the passage of a high mountain. Among the places that are knowr at this day in Isauria, Ber Shehri, on a lake, is the principal; and above this, a position near another lake preserves in the name of Kèrali, that of Ceratis:-We shall see that the name of Isauria has become proper to a part of Cilicia.

Cilicia. Overlooked by the ridge of Taurus on the northern side, Cilicia bordets the sea on the south, to the limits of Syria. The Cilices are first mentioned at a tirne when the-weakness of the kings of Syria, and the divisions in their house, permitted this nation to exercise piracy with impunity; a practice which could not but be agreeable to the Ptolemies, enemies to the Seleucides, and which was not at first an object directly interesting to the Romans. But the predatory power, which extended to the maritime places as well as on the seas, having grown to such a height as to brave the Romans on the shores of Italy, Servilius Isauricus was sent to destroy the pirates. He, however, merely began the work, which Pompey finished by a naval victory under Coracesium, and the consequent capture of this city.

A part of Cilicia, extremely rude and mountainous, was distinguished by the name of Trachea, which expresses in Greek its topical character of ruggedness; and this is the first that presents itself after Pamphylia. A conformity of the aspect of the country with that of $I_{s} \dot{a} u r i a \dot{a}$, just described caused this name to pass by continuity into this part of Cilicia, which appears thus denominated in the notices of the eastern empire. Among the Turks it is called Itch-il, whichsignifies an interior country.-On the coast, Selines occurs at the mouth of a river of the same name; and which, for having been the place where the emperor Trajan died, assumed the name of Trajanonolis; but it has since retaken its primitive denomination in the form of Selenti.-At the foot of a steep mountain near the sea, and named Cragus, as that in Lycia, an Antiochia has taken the diminutive form of Antiocheta.-As to the inland positions, Homonada, on the confines of Isauria, in a situation very proper for a strong fortress, retains, under the name of Ermenak, a castle hewn out of a rock, and less disfigured by time or violence than most others of the same anti-quity.-We could wish to ascertain, with equal precision the situation of Olba, in the country named Cetis; as

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
lems it became the frontier of the two empires, and received new fortifications from the Khalif, Haroun AlRashid. It exists under the name of Tarsous, but as subordinate to Adana, and even comprised in the modèrn district of this city.-Adana preserves its name and position on the river Sarus, or Seihoun, as it is now called. This river, after opening to itself a passage through Mount Taurus, and forming thereby the famous defile known under the name of Pyla Cilicia, or the gates of Cilicia, renders itself into the sea where the shore retires so as to form two points called Sari Caftita or the Heads of Sarus.-Ascending the same river, we find Artazarbus, which also bore the name of Cresarea, particularly distinguished in this country; and on the division of Cilicia into two provinces, under the younger Theodosius, this city was elevated to the rank of metropolis in the second Cilicia; Tarsus preserving that dignity in the first-Germanicia is recognized in the posiion of Marash; for we know that this city, now the chief place of a great government, is also called Banicia,' by alteration of the ancient name; and detaching it from Cilicia, it has also been comprised in a province of Syria, called Euphratesien.-The country that, we have just been viewing, and its environs, correspond with that which, in the time of the crusades, was called the kingdons of Lren, from the naine of many Armenian princes; the first of whom arrived at the regal dignity towards the close of the twelfth century,-Returning towards the sen, Issus, the famous scene of a great victory of Alexander over Darius, and which gives the name of Issicus Sinus to a gulf of the Mediterranean that penetrates deepest into the continent, retains its name under the form of Aïasse; and the river Pinarus, which is in the neighbourhood, is now named Deli-sou. -Licoholis, appears to owe this name to a famous victory also; although its position, distant from the sea, does not represent the field of battle: a place named Ke -nisat-asound, or the Black Church, now occupies this site, which retained its ancient defences when the Khalif Haroun Al-Rashid fortified it.-The torrent named Carsus is found in the name of Mahersi, or Ma-kersi; and the traveller has only to cross it to find himself enclosed between Mount Amanus and the sea. It is here that Cilicia terminates; this passage being called Syria Pyla, or the Gates of Syria. It concludes also our de: scription of this part of Asia; which; as well from the extent of the subject, as from the importance and celebrity of the objects that are contained in it, could not be 'treated with more brevity.

SECTION SECOND.

COLCHIS, IBERIA, ALBANIA, ET ARMENIA.*
GURIA, MINGREL, IMERITI, GEORGIA, AND ARMENIqं, OR DIAR-BEKR BY THE ARABS.
Colchis. This country, which the fuble of the Golden Fleece, and the expedition of Jason and the Argonauts, have rendered famous in remote antiquity, borders the head of the Euxine Sea: being bounded on the east by Jberia, and covered by Caucasus towards the north. In the time of the Lower Empire the same country was [^8]called Lazica; and the name of Colchi appears to have been replaced by that of the $L a z i$, which anteriorly was only proper to a particular nation, comprised in the limits of, what is now named Guria, on the southern bank of the Faz. That which is now known under the name of Miegrel, or Odisci, on the Black Sea, from the mouth of the $P$ hasis ascending towards the north, is only a patt of Colchis, as is that more inland towards the frontier of Georgia, 'and called Meriti.-Colchis is watered by a great number of rivers, whereof mention is made in the ancient .monuments; but which are of too small im. portance to obtain notice here.

Toenter upon some detail of positions, we must first speak of a city of Greek foundation, as having existed -under the name of Phasis, at the mouth of the river of the same name-On this river too, at some distance from the sea, $\mathbb{E} a$ had been known to the Argonauts. But the principal city of Colchis, and the native place of Medea, was Cyta, now Cotatis, on the Rheon, a little above its junction with the Phasis.-There is no mens tion of Archaónolis till the reign of Justinian; yet"as the principal place of the $L a z i$, and which defended itself against the Persians, it may be interesting to remark, that its position accords with that which in Mingrel is distinguished as an asylum of the princes of the country, under the name of Ruki.-On the shore of the sea, Dioscurias, also named Sebastopolis, was in the earliest age the port most frequented in Colchis by distant as well ás neighbouring nations, speaking different languages; a circumstance that still distinguishes Iskuriah, whose name is only a depravation of the ancient deno-l mination.-The last place of the country was Pityd $\boldsymbol{L}_{\delta}$, the $d_{4}$

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

great river called Cyrus, issuing from the frontier. of Armenia, traverses all this country to the limits of Albania; after having received the Araxes, it discharges itself into the Castian Sea by two mouths, which retain the name of Kur. Iberia was not subjected to the Medes or Persians; nor could it have been well known in the west before the Roman arms, under the cond ${ }_{c t}$ of Pompey, penetrated through Albania, to the Caspian Sea; or till the affairs of Armenia occasioned discord with the kings of this country.

In a narrow pass at the entrance of the country, where the Cyrus receives another river named Aragus, were two cities al no great distance from each other;' Harmozica on the greater river, and Seumara on the' less; and it may be presumed that these places were in the neighbourhood of Alkalzike, the capital of a government on this frontier of the Turkish empire.-We should be glad to discover the position of Zalissa, which is mentioned by Ptolemy as the capital of Iberia.-On the frontier of Colchis, a place called Ideessa had borne the name of Phrixus, which, according to Greek fables, was antecedent to the arrival of the Argonauts in the country.-In the remotest part of Iberia, towards the north is a narrow passage through the mountains, called Pyla Caucasia, which was closed with a gate, and defended by a fortress named Cumania: and the bed of a torrent traversed this defile. A vast country, consisting of plains, stretches from these mountains as far as the Palus Maotis; and it was to shut the entrance of Iberia against the Sarmatian nations assembled in these plains, that this passage was fortified. Under the lower empire these nations, among whom we distinguish the $S a$ - 'CHAP. II. " ASIA. COLCHIS, & C.
bivi, are called Huns. In the time of Justinian, the for-- tress was in the possession of a Hunnic prince, 'and it is -found cited in an Armenian manuscript under the name of Hounnora-Kert.

Albania. Albania extends from Iberia eastward along the Castian Sea to the Cyrus, which appears to separate it from Media'Atrofatena; and its limits remonnt this river to a stream, which it receives towards the frontier'of Iberia, and whose name of Alazon it yet retains.-The country was divided among many nations, which Pompey found united under a king. The people inhabiting Albania, less inclined to agriculture than those of Iberia, were occopied principally in the feeding of cattle. There is mention in antiquity of the Legis, or Lega, as a Scythian people of Caucasus, near the sea, and conti--guous to Albania.

According to Pliny the principal city of Albania was * Cabalaca; which name is found in that of Kablas-var, on a river named Samura: and as this river is the greatest in the centre of the country; it may represent.the Albanus fluvius of Ptolemy. A maritime city, under the name of Albana, might be represented by Niasabad if a position more northern than the river, according to Ptolemy, did not suit better with that of Derbend.-If a maritime city be sought for distant towards the south, to correspond with that of Getara in Ptolemy, Baku will be found to agree in the local circumstances, being a place remarkable for the springs of naphtha or bitumen in its environs. - The object most remarkable in Albania is a defile between a promontory of Caucasus and the sea; the passage of which is closed by the interposition of a city, named by the Persians Der-bend; by the Turks, ${ }^{\text {, Demir-capi, or the Gate of Iron; and by the }}$ Arabs, Bab-al-Abuab, or the Gate of Gates. This situ-- ation suits the application of the name of Albania Pyla, or the Gates of Albania. `Adjacent as they are to the Caspian Sea, the name of Casfic Pyle would appear more proper to these than to the gates of Iberia, before mentioned, to which the Romans, nevertheless, who during the war in Armenia, under Corbulo, had prepared maps of the country, applied this name of Castian. But a defile conducting, according to Strabo, from Albania into Iberia, and which must be the Albanix Pyla that we see in Ptolemy; at a distance from the sea, is a , topical circumstance at this day well known; there being a similar passage through the Daghestan into the Kaketi of Georgia, and named in the country TupıKaragan.

Armenia. Armenia extends from the Euphrates eastward to the place where the Kur and Aras unite their streams; not far from their mouth. It is contiguous on the north to the three other countries assembled in this section, and which fill all the interval between the Euxine and Caspian Seas. Towards the south it is bounded by $M e$ sohiotamia, Assyria, and Media. It is a country much ${ }^{\text {d }}$ diversified with mountains and plains. The Euphrates and Tigris have here their sources; and the Aras traverses the principal part of the country from west to east.-The fables published by the Greeks concerning the origin of this nation, and the name of the country, 'merit not the' least consideration. Armenia appears to have been successively subjected to the great monar-s chies of the East: 'to that of the Medes, after the Assy-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
mountains inhabited by the Tzani, whose name was Sanni, according to the most ancient notice of this na-tion.-The situation of Ispira on this river indicates that of Hishiratis, which Strabo speaks of as containing mines of gold.

We now revert to the course of the Aras. It re-' ceives on the left shore a river which comes from an* ancient city, whose present name of Anisi refers to that of Abnicum of the Byzantine historians. As to the name of the river, which is Harpasou, it scarcely differs from the Harhasus that we find in Xenophon, immediately after the passage of the Phasis, which we have remarked tc be the Aras.-Descending the Aras a little, we encounter Armauria, or Armavir, as the Armenians pronounce it; which, in their tradition, is an ancient roy. al city. But it is still lower, and in a bend of the river, that the Armenian city most distinguished in history existed under the name of Artaxata, which it received from king Artaxias. This city is no longer in being, but its site is known.-If the tradition of the country is to be credited, another royal city, to which the king Valarsaces, brother to the second of the Parthian Arsacides, had given the name of Valarsafut, existed in the place wherc the patriarchal church of Eksmiazin is now found. The population of these places has been exhausted to supply Erivan, now the predominant city in their neighbourhood.-Naksivan is a city distinguished in Armenia, by the opinion of its being constructed soon after the deluge; and we find Naxuana in Ptolemy. The country here extends in plains more than in * any other part; and the Aras, towards the end of its course, separates it from Mrdia Atronatene.

We proceed to describe the parts which extend to Mesopotamia and Assyria. To the Euinhrates which has its origin near Arzroum, is added another branch, whose sources called in the country Bing-gheul, or the Thousand Fountains, form a river which appears to have been that named Lycus. The river, of which the union of these two streams makes the commencement, is particularly called Frat. But there is still another Euhirates, which having its fountains more remote, becomes more considerable than the preceding at its junction. This Eufhrates is that which, precisely under this name the ten thousand passed in returning; and the same that Corbulo, charged with the conduct of the war in Armenia under Nero, makes issue from a district called Caranites, according to the report of Pliny. Ptolemny recognises a twofold Euphrates, concerning which modern literati manifest an embarrassment which a further knowledge of the country will remove. The mountain whence the second Euhhrates issues, is called Abus, or Abas:-Moxoëne, forms a particular canton among many which Dioclesian acquired by cession of the king of Persia, and which is recognised in the name of Moush.-The river which traverses it appears to be the Teleboas, which the ten thousand met with between the sources of Tigris and their passage of the Euphra-tes.-The space comprised between the two Euphrates, rérains its name of Acilisene in that of Ekilis.-Between the Euphrates and Mount Taurus is a great country, whose name of Sofhene is preserved in that of Zoph. A river named Arsanias, now Arsen crosses this country, to discharge itself into the Euphrates, after having passed Arsamosata, a considerable place, whose name is preserved under the form of Simsat, or Shimshat. A little below, and at a place of the same name with the Elegia, or Ilija, by Alyz-roum, the Euphrates pierces the chain of Mount Taurus; and this place is now called the Pass of Nushar. A fortress of this country above Simshat, called Kar-birt, is Charnote in the Byzantine au-thors.-Anzita, which gives the name to a canton, appears to be the same with a place called Ansga; and the fortress known by the name of Ardis seems to indicate the position of Artagi-certa, the same probably with Ar: tagera, mentioned particularly on the occasion of a mortal wound which Caius, one of the nephews of Augustus, received there.-On approaching Amid, we. find Argana under the ancient name. Amida was not known, at least under this name, till the fourth century. From changes that took place about that time in the distribution of provinces, effacing even the primitive limits of countries, it happened that Amida was made the metropolis of a province of Mesopotamia. Constantius, putting it into a state to cover this frontier of the empire, gave it the name of Constantia, which it has not retain. ed: for that of Amid has remained; and its walls, constructed with black stones, have caused it to be called Kara-Amid; although it is more commonly denominated Diar-Bekir, the name of its district.-But we must not omit to remark that mention is made of a royal city Sophene by Strabo, under the name of Carcathio-certa; and the city of this name was on the Tigris, according, to Pliny; whence arises a strong presumption that it is Amid which is thus spoken of under a former name, which expresses in its termination a place of defence. And this having been a barrier to the Greek empire,

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

the Tigris, since its distance from Nisibis in Mespotamia is but thirty-seven miles. A very considerable ri. ver, named Nicehhorius, flowed under its ramparts; and when we see the Greeks in Xenophon, after having cleared the Carducian mountains, and before arriving at the fountain of the Tigris, passing a river, which in the country was named Centrilcs, there can be no doubt that this river has something common in its course with that which has the Greek name of Nicephorius. It appears'at present under the name of Khabour; and a city named Sered, towards the lower part of its course, may represent Tigranocerta.-This southern part of Armenia would terminate the description of the country, if it were not judged expedient to comprise within these limits the great lake which has the name of $\operatorname{Arsissa}$ in Ptolemy. It was on its northern side embellished with citics which were better known to the Byzantine writers than they had been before; viz, Chaliat or Aklat, Arzes or Argish, Perkri, and the city under the name of Artemi. $t a$ in Ptolemy, which appears to be that of Van. If Ar. menian history be worthy of credit, this city owed its foundation to Semiramis, and it should in consequence. have borne the name of Semiramocerta; as among the Armenians Vani signifies a strong hold. Although it be common to call this lake by the modern name of the city, there may be also remarked an analogy between the name which Ptolemy furnishes and that of Arzes, or Argish. This canton of Armenia is called Vaspurakan, a name that appears to be employed by the Byzantian writers.

SECTION THIRD.

SYRIA, WHICH NAME IS RETAINED.
Among the countries of Asia, that which we proceed to describe is among the most worthy to be known. The Syrian nation was not bounded by the limits which comprise Syria, but extended beyond the Eufihrates into Mesofotamia; and we have also remarked, in treating of Cafinadocia, that the people who occupied it, as far as the Euxine, were reputed of Syrian origin. The country still known by the name of Syria did not claim the same limits with the nation just mentioned. It extended along the sea from the frontier of Cilicia, and, comprehending Palestine, touched the limits of Egynt. Mount Taurus covers it towards the north; and to the course of the ( Eufhrates, on the side of the east, succeeds an indefit nite canton of the desert Arabia; which, turning to the a soutb, stretches into Arabia Petraa.-In the dismemberment which the empire of Alexander suffered after the death of this conqueror, Seleucus Nicator, having become the most powerful of princes among whom this iempire was portioned, possessed the great division of it, - extending from the FEgean Sea to India. But the insurrection of the Parthians, which happened under Antio${ }_{\uparrow}$ chus II, grandson of Seleucus, deprived the successors of that prince of the eastern provinces; and Antiochus III, in the war that he had with the Romans, lost that part of Asia which was situated beyond Mount Taurus with regard to Syria. Great divisions in the family of the Selencides having at length extremely enfeebled this power, Tigranes, king of Armenia, took possession of Syria, and, when constrained by Pompey to confine himself"within his proper limits, his conquest became a province of the Roman empire. A situation bordering upon the Parthian empire, and also upon the-second empire of the Persians, must have made the defence of this province an object of the greatest importance. . Syria constituted by much the greatest part of that Diocese (for so the great departments established before the end of the fourth century were named) called Oriens; comprising Palestine, a district of Mesopotamia, the province of Cilicia, and the isle of Cyprus.-By a division of primitive provinces, there appear five in the limits of Syria, 1 viz, two Syrias, Prima and Secunda or Salutaris; two Phœnicias, one properly so called, and the other named $L i$. bani, by the extension of the anterior limits of Phanice; and finally, the Eufthratensis.-In the sacred.writings: Syria is called Aram. •The Arabs now give it the name of Sham, which in their language signifies the left, its ${ }^{\text {A }}$ situation being such on facing the east.-To enter into a detail of the country, we shall depart from the sea at the limits of Cilicia, and ascending the Orontes to Damascus, thence visit the parts watered by the Euphrates. Phonicia, with which the isle of Cyprus will naturally connect itself, will conclude this section: for whatever relates to the remainder of Syria, extending from CœleSyria to Arabia Petræa, which was called the Promised Land, or Palestine, will be fully discussed under that head, when treating of the Sacred Geography.

The first position that occurs is Alexandria, surnam: ed Cata Isson, or near lssus, at the head of the bay called Issicus, well known to be that of Alexandretta, or, as the Syrians call it, Scanderona.-Antiochia, the re-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
the sea, near the mouth of the Orontes, was also a work of Seleucus Nicator; and, from its situation at the foot of a mountain named Pierius, was surnamed Pieria: but it was more distinguished for giving the name of Seleucis to a part of'Syria, extended on the Orontess inascending. The site of this city is known under the altered name of Suveidia. : On the opposite side of the Orontes is mount Casius, from whose summit it was said, by an extravagant hyperbole, that both the morning's dawn, and the evening's twilight might at the same time be seen.-Afiamea, situated between the Orontes and a lake, holding a place among the principal cities of this country, assumed.the rank of metropolis of the. Second Syria. . It was constructed by Seleucus Nicator, who entertained his elephants there, the number of which was said to amount to five hundred. This position hàs been erroneously taken for that` of Hamah; for the name of Apamea is still extant in Farnieli, attended with identical circumstances of situation.-Continning to ascend the Orontes, we find Efifihania, or the Illustrious in Greek, in Hamah; it having reassumed its primitive Syrian name of Hamah, in conformity to the practice of many cities whose names had been changed by the conqueror. We may be allowed to remark here, that Abulfeda, the author of a body of Oriental Geography, reigned in this city, with the title of sultan, in the fourteenth century.-Emesa, which had a famous temple of Elagabalus, or the Sun, retains its name in the form of Hems, at no great distance from the Orontes

Hid Amalthea, and her flurid son

- Young Bacchus, from his stepdame Rhea's eyes.
on'the right.-Laodicea, surnamed Libani; by distinction from another Laodicea of Syria, on the sea, occupied the position of a place called Ioushiah.-We now come to Damascus, whose name is pronounced Demesk in the country. This city, which does not yield in celebrity to any in Asia, was the metropolis of the Phovicia of Libanus. The charms of its situation in a fertile and irriguous valley, famous among the Orientals under the name of Goutah Demesk (the orchard of Damascus) are documents of the high antiquity of this city, as they have always occasioned it to revive after-calamities that had nearly annihilated it at different periods. A river, nàmed by the Greeks Chrysorrioas, or the Current of Gold, otherwise Bardine, whence the modern name of Baradi is derived, divides in many channels, which stream through the city as well as in the environs.Above Damascus, Abila, surnamed Lysania, or of Lysdnias, a governor of that name, is now called Nebi Abel, or the town of the Prophet Abel, after the immediate son of the parent of humankind.-At the bottom of an adjacent valley, Heliofolis preserves, under its primitive name Baalbek, a magnificent temple dedicated to the divinity to which it owed its denomination, both in the Syriac and Greek. The valley is enclosed between * two parallel ridges, which are Libanus and Anti-Libanus; the first having its exterior declivity towards the sea, while the second regards Damascus. And the name of Aulon, given to this valley, denotes a hollow in the Greek. It is now named el Bekah; and this district, extending to the sources of the Orontes, was called $C_{x}$ $\overline{\bar{e}}$. Syria, or the concave Syria, from its local character.

We proceed now to survey the course of the Euphrates, beginning with that country which is distinguished by the name of Comagene, on the declivity of Taurus and Amanus, forming the northern extremity of Syria. Comagene was governed by kings, who were thought to have been of the race of the Seleucides, before it was united to the empire under Vespasian. It is found afterwards confounded with the Euphratesian province, of which it made a part; being mentioned in: the Oriental Geography under the name of KamashiSamosata is its capital, situated advantageously on the Euphrates, at the apex of a great parabola, by which this rivet, which hitherto appears to direct its course tothe Mediterranean, turns suddenly towards the east and south. This city is still known by the name of Semisat. -Remounting the Euphrates, the strong places of Borsalium and Claudius appear under the names of Bersel and Cloudieh._Pendenissus, which an expedition of Ci . cero (during his government of Cilicia) seems to recommend to notice, appears to be a place known under the name of Behesni.—Syco-basilisses, situated upon a Roman way, should be the same with Sochos, mentiouned in the march of Darius to meet Alexander at Issus. -Zeugma conjunctio, or the bridge, was the principal passage of the river, as its name evinces; and an ancient fortress by which it was commanded, is called Roum. Cala, or the Roman Castle; to which we may!add, that, on the opposite shore there is a place named ${ }^{\text {Zegmé. }}$ _The most considerable city in this part of Sjria, and which became the metropolis of the Eufhratesian province, was Hieronolis, or the Sacred City, so called by the Macedonians, from its being the seat of the worship

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

which Alexander entered Mesopotamia,* and inclined 'towards the Tigris to fight Darius on the plains of 'Assyria, is named el Der in the country.-Lower down the river the position of a castle named Horur, or Go: rur, is remarkable for having the advantage of indicating a place which Pompey, in reducing Syria, decided as a boundary of the Roman empire under the name of Oruros according to Pliny.-We shall conclude this article with a/notice of the famous city of Palmyra, which gives the name of Palmyrene to a vast plain that is united the Desert Arabia. The foundation of this city is attributed to Solomon, by Josephus the historian; and the name of Tadamora, which he applies to it, remains in that of Tadmor, a Syrian name, whose signification seems tō have suggested the Greek denomination of Palmyra. This city, by its central posicion between two great empires, and by holding the same relative situation to the two seas, by which it maintained a great commerce be. tween these divisions of the ancient hemisphere, rose to great opulence and renown. The great power of Odenatus and Zenobia, under the reign of Galienus and Aurelian, is well known; and the remains of lofty edifices interspersed among the cabins of a few Arabs, manifest the former magnificence, and the present wretchedness, of Palmyra.

Phoenice et Cyprus. Every one knows how much

[^9]the Phonicians distinguished themselves by navigation, from which their. commerce derived its extension and aggrandizement. Confined to a margin of land between the sea' and mountains, they could only acquire power by the means which they employed, and which were exerted with such success as to enable them to form establishments, not only un the shores of their own sea, but also on those of the Western Ocean. The Arts owed both their birth and their perfection to them. It was a Phœnician who introduced into Greece, the knowledge of letters, and their use; and artists brought from Tyre, presided over the construction of the temple with which Solomon embellished his capital city.-In the desćription of this maritime part of Syria, we shall take our depar-ture from Laodicea, which was a Phceniciań city before it became a Greek one by renovation under Seleucus Nicator. It then took the name of Laodiça; which, distinguished by its maritime situation, was surnamed ad Mare; and its name has scarcely suffered any alteration in the present form of Ladikieh. Although Phœnicia be sometimes mentiened in a manner that would prolong its extent as far as the limits of Egypt, we deem it expedient here to stop at Tyre, that we may not take from Palæstine what it would have a right to reclaim, when we come to the consideration of it in turn.

- Immediately succeeding to Laodicea, Gabala exists iti Gebileh.-Aradus is a rock two hundred paces in the sea, less than a mile in circuit, but which, nevertheless; contained a populous city, and powerful among those of Phœnicia. Its name in the present form is Ruad. Antaradus, situated opposite on the shore of the continent, is now named Tortosa.-Retiring from the sea we must mention Raphanex, whose name is recognised in that of Rafineh. Un a mountain in its environs, a fortress named Masiat was the residence of the Ishmaelite prince of the Assassins, celebrated in the time of the crusades. -Ahhaca, a city infamous for prostitution, was destroyed by Constantine.-Berytus, among the number of the principal cities of Phœnicia (the termination being abscinded) is called Berut. The mountains of this part of Phœnicia are those which the Druses occupy, who are said to be descended from the crusards who took refuge here after the the loss of Palestine.- We arrive now at Sidon, which was distinguished by a degree of power and opulence beyond the competition of any other city in Phœnicia, Tyre excepted. By use it is called Seide, although a place at some distance from the sea, towards the mountain, preserves precisely the name of Sidon.-Between this city and Tyre Sarehta preserves its name in Sarfond.-There were two cities of the name of Tyre; Pale Tyrus, or the Antient; and Tyrus, placed on an isle; but the time of the transmigration is not well known. The ruins of the first furnished Alexander with materials for constructing a mole or causey, which joined the continent to the insulated city, and which time has rather consolidated than impaired. Tyre, which yielded to Sidon in antiquity, at least equalled it in renown; and the famous purple dye contributed to the, maintenance of its wealth. Its name in the oriental languages is Sur. The Franks, who rendered themselves masters of this city, lost it again towards the end of the thirteenth century; and it is now buried in its ruins.

The Isle of Cyinus extends in length from a pro-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
venth, by the transmigration of its inhabitants, yet the name of Constanza remains to the site which it occupied., Pedaus, or Pedia, the most considerable of the rivers of this island, had its mouth here. ', The place which has since become the principal in the island, and not far distant from the former capital, is Famagouste, or rather Amogoste, as the Cyprian Greeks pronounce $i t$, and derives this name from a sandy cape adjacent called Amochostos.-There were two citics of the name of Pafhos: the more ancient, which had received Ventis when issuing from the foam of the sea; and a new one which has prevailed, preserving its name under the form of Bafo, or Bafa.-We have three cities to cite in this interval between Salamis and Paphos: Citium, the native place of Zeno, author of the Stoic philosophy, and which is how called Chiti; Amathûs, a Phœnician rather than a Greek city, but where Venus was not less honoured than'at Paphos, and whose site is called Linmeson Antica: and lastly Curium, which is thought to have occupied the position of a place now named Piscopiai_We think that we discover Idalium, as inell by the pleasantness of its situation, as by the analogous name of Dalin.

SECTION FOURTH.

MESOPOTAMIA,

AL GEZIRA.
The name of Mesopotamia is known to denote a country between rivers; and in the books of the Penta. teuch this is called Aram-Naharaim, or Syria of the Ri. vers. It is also known that these rivers are the Euthrates and the 7igris, which embrace this country.in its whole length, and contractit by their approximation in the lower or southern part, which is contiguous to Babylon. From this situation it has acquired the name of al-Gezira among the Arabs, who have no specific term to distinguish a peninsula from c.n island.' We cannot forbear remarking here, that it is through ignorance that-this country is called Diarbek in the maps. For not only should this name be written Diar-Bekr, but it should also be restrained to the northern extremity, which Armenia claims in antiquity. This part corresponds with the oriental geographers call Diar Modzar on the side of the Euphrates, and Diar-Rabiah on the banks of the Tigris.-On the north there reigns a mountainous chain, which from the passage of the Euphrates through Mount Taurus extends to the borders of the Tigris. This is the Mount Masius of antiquity, and now known among the Turks by the plural appellation of Karadgia Daglar, or the Black Mountains. A river called Chaboras, which preserves the name of al-Kabour, and augmented by another river, to which the Macedonians of Syria have given'the name of Mygdonius, proceeds` to join the Euphrates under a fortress which we shall mention hereafter. The lower part of the country, dis. tant from the rivers, being less cultivated and more" sterile than the upper, coild be only occupied by Arabs called Scenites, or inhabiting tents.

The thstrict of Mesopotamia, which is only separated from Syria by the course of the Euphrates, bore the name of Osroene, which it owed to Osroés, or, accord: ing to the chronicles of the country, Orrhoés; who, pro4:
fiting by the feebleness of the Seleucides, caused by their divisions, acquired a principality about a hundred and twenty years before the Christian æra. In the time of the unsuccessful expedition of Crassus against the Parthians, we find in this country a prince, whose name of Abgar passed successively to many others. , The Euphrates appearing to the prudence of Augustus as the boundary that nature had prescribed to the empire, the Osröene princes had to adjust their interest between the Roman power and that of the Parthians; and Trajan, in the conquest that he made of Mesopotamia, forbore to despoil the prince Abgar. But Caracalla did not conduct himself with equal moderation. However, it cannot be decided that the Osröene was distinguished as a province of the empire before the time of the first suc + cessors of Constantine.-The capital of the country re: ceived from the Macedonian conquerors the name of Edessa: and an abundant fountain which the city enclosed, called in Greek Calli-rhoe, communicated this name to the city itself. In p.osterior times it is called Roha, or, with the article of the Arabs, Orrhoa, and by abbreviation Orba. This name may be derived from the Greek term signifying a fountain; or according to another opinion, it may refer to the-founder of this city, whose name is said to have been Orrhoi:" but however this be, it is by corruption that it is commonly called Orfa. A little river, which by its sudden inundations annoys this city, was called Scirtus, or the Vaulter; and the Syrians preserve this signification of the name of Daïsan.-Zeugma, or the Bridge, which afforded entrance to the Osröene, and which has been mentioned under the article of Syria, was son the onposite side cem

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

cipal of which the Khalif Haroun Al-Rashid erected a castle, which became his favourite residence.

We pass, without meeting with any object to arrest our attention, to. the Chaboras, or al-Khabour.. Its junction with the Euphrates forms' an angle which affords to Circesium a situation naturally advantageous, to which Dioćlesian added fortifications, making it a "barrier of the empire; and Kerkisia, as it is pronounced, preserves the same situation. Some of the learned are of opinion that this is the position mentioned in the Scriptures under the name of Carchemis, on'the Euphrates. -Resaina, which was a colony formed under Septimius Sevęrus, received from Theodosius the name of Theo-dosionolis.-Below Kerkisia, the modern name of ZoxaSultan, indicating the monument of some prince, plainIy alludes to the younger Gordian, who. perished by the* conspiracy of Philip, and whose sepulchre was a tumu: lus of earth, thrown up by a Roman soldier on the spot. - Anatho, on a holm farther down, and whose name subsists in that of Anah, is the residence of the most considerable prince among the Arabs, who nevertheless recognises the supremacy of the sultan of the Turks.'The Euphrates is thence seen to describe great circuits; and among "these involutions, out of a number of posi tions we must cite the insulated cities of. $\mathcal{N e}$ 有arda and Pombeditita, where the Jews had celebrated schools. Haditba and Juba are their modern uames. $-I s$ was another remarkable place, near a river of the same name, affording the bitumen wherewith the walls of Babylon were cemented, according to Herodotus.-The place which appears best to accord with the field of Cunaxa, where Cyrus lost his life in fighting, with his brother Artaxerxes, is Mnemon, immediately preceding a canal ot communication between the Euphrates and Tigris. This canal is what in the march of Julian is called Niaceprac$t a$, of the Syriac Maïfarekin, denoting a derivation by the means of a canal. It is now dry, and is found to have been paved. . What is beyond this seems without the bounds of Mesopotamia, which on this confine eveh is called Media.

We must now remount the Tigris to complete the contour of Mesopotamia. At the height of a place called Opis, on the Babyionian side of the Tigris, extending to the Euphrates, a rampart, thought to have been erected by Semiramis, separated the two countries.Bertha, or Vitra above, is described as a very strong fortress, and said to have been constructed by order of Alexander. There is no position more agreeable to this description than that of Tecrit; which in the seventh century was chosen for the residence of a Jacobite primate, in whom the immediate government of many churches was confided, with the title of Maphrien. This place having been tiken and destroyed by Timur, or Témir-leng, in 1393, is now but a village.-Hatra in the desert, at a distance from the Tigris, is a place celebrated in history for having resisted the attacks of Triajan and of Severus in person, as well as those of Artaxerxes, under whom, in the third century, the Persians carried off from the Parthians the empire of the east. An Arabian prince occupied this place; which, althou'gh 'ruined is known by the name of Hatder.-The Roman army on its route towards Nisibis, after the unsuccess: ful expedition of Julian, encountered a castle held by .
the Persians, aid named $U z$, which appear's to some to be the $U z$ of Chaldea, that the father of Abraham quitted to settle in Charran.-Among the principal places of Mesopotamia is Singara, transposed by Ptolemy in assigning it a place on the bank of the Tigris. After Trajan hat' made the conquest of this place, its situation on the common limits of two empires subjected it alternately to them both.' Its modern name is Sinjar, which it communicates to a ridge of mountains in its vicinity. There is some difficulty in acceding to the opinion which refers the name of this city to that of Sinear, which we find in the scriptures appropriated to the plain country that was chosen for the site of Balel. Positive geography finds a hundred leagues of interval between Babylon and Singara.

We pass now to $\mathcal{N}$ isibis, which of all the places of Mesopotamia was the most important; and its name Nisbin, in the plural, properly denotes posts, or military stations. . Under the Macedonian prirces of Syria, the district which is now distingushed by the name DiarRabiah in al.Gezira, was called'Mygdonia, 'ftom a coun--try in Macedon, and Nisibis was named Intiochia Mygdonia. This place is seen afterwards serving as a barrier to the Roman empire against the enterprises of the Parthians. But it was at length ceded to Sapor, king of Persia, by one of the conditions of the treaty which succeeded the disgrace of the Roman army in the ex: pedition of Julian. Nisibin is now a place entirely open, and redused to a hamlet. By a great number of brooks whicl: descend from the neighbouring mountains, there is here formed a tiver, which in antiquity was called Mygdonius Fliivius', and is now named Hermas, or Nahr

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
water on three sides, it is called in the language of the people who inhabit it, Gezirat-el-Arab, the Island or Pe ninsula of Arabia.-There are distinguished two races in Arabia, as well by lineage as by modes of life.' The first and more ancient are reputed to owe their origin to Jectan, or Kahtan, son of Eber; they are called juiure Arabs, ínhabit cities, and have been governed by kings. A posteror generation of Mostarabes, or mixed Arabs; who are not stationary, or occupied by agriculture, but erratic and pastoral, recognise for their author Ismael, the son of Abraham - It has been remarked that none of the great Asiatic powers have subjugated a nation whose liberty seems defended by the nature of their country, destitute of water, and for the most part uncultivated; and an expedition undertaken into Arabia by Augustus, had nearly occasioned the destruction of a Roman army, without any advantage resulting from it. --It is'sufficiently known that this continent is divided into three regions distinguished from each other by the several epithets of Petraa, the Hanfy, and the Desert Araóia. What appertains to each it is our present pury pose to show.

Aŕabia Petrata. From the ${ }^{\text {co }}$ nfines of Judxa, Arabia Petrace extends towards the south to the Arabic Gulf; ' which embraces it by two smaller gulfs that te:minate the greater, under the names of Heroofiolites on the west, and. Elanites on the east. The limits of Lgynt terminate it towards the west. The part confining on Judaa is particularly distinguished under the name of Idumea, formed from that of Edom, which was given to Esau, the son of Jacob. And the posterity of this patriarch possessed a part of Arabia Petraa, when the people of Israel, respecting the limits of a nation sprung from a common ancestor, made a great circuit through the desert, turned south to the Elanite Gulf, and then remounting northward, entered by the country of Moab. But the posterity of Ismael, who derived their name from Nabaioth, his eldest son, becoming very numerous, the name of Nabathai prevailed in Arabia Petræa; which in the time of Augustus was governed by a king seated at Petra, whence the country drew its name; Having been conquered by Trajan, it was joined to Paílestine; and afterwards formed a particular province called the Third Palestine, and otherwise Salutaris, of which the metropolis was the ancient residence of its kings. The modern name of this city is Krac, which is also common to many other places whose natural ssituation is very strong. Baldwin I, king of, Jerusalem, becoming master of this place, gave it the name of Mount Royal. This prince suffered much in traver: ${ }_{4}$ sing the mountains south of Judæa, which have caused this part of Idumæa to be called Gebalene, from the term Gebel, or Gebal, which in Arabic denotes a mountain. On this route, and beyond the mountains, he; found a city, whose name Sezuma has re-established Sodom under this form in the opinion of some.

ARABIA.

The cities known to antiquity in Arabia Petrea, are those of which we have no modern information. . We must, however, except Flana, or Ailath, as it appears in the Bible, and which gives to one of the arms which the Arabic Gulf forms at its extremity, the name of Si nus $\boldsymbol{E l}$ lanites. . This place, which is now ruined, has no ccultivated land in its environs, though it preserves the name of Ailah.-Asiongaber, whence the fleets of Solomon took their departure for ()phir, was an open port, at the head of the inost eastern creek of the Elanite Gulf; and this position is called Berenice by Ptolemy. The Arabic name of Minet ed-dahab, signifying the Port of Gold, had reference to the. riches that were there debarked on the return from Ophir. This place is now called Calaat-el-Acaba, which signifies the Castle of the Descent; while the Elanite Gulf is named Bahr-el-Aca- $\boldsymbol{j}$ ba-The point called Ras-Makommed, which separates this gulf from the Heroopolite, or that of Suez, was called Posidium, in common with many other promontories, which derived this name from the Greek of Neptune. Ptolemy names it Phara, and notes an inland city of this name; to which relates the desert of Pharan, in the Scriptures. There is nothing remaining of this city but the ruins of a monastery, called Deir-Faran.-The mount of Sinai, to which that of Horeb is contiguous, is called by the Arabs Gebel-Tour; ând a place called Tor, which is the port of Mount Sinai, was formerly distinguished for its palm trees, under the name of Phanicon.-The Nabatheans prevailing in Arabia Petræa, extended themselves far towards the Desert, and thus confounded the limits of their primitive seats and the Hanhy Arabia; so that these limits cannot, with accuracy, be decided. It may be said, however, that the first claims not only the country between the gulfs, as has been reported, but also that adjacent to the eastern shore of the Elanite gulf.-Madian, called-by Ptolemy Modiuna, and whose name relates to one of the children that Abraham had of Keutrali, caused the Madianites to be so called; and we find the dwellings of a

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

- that anciently appropriated to it signifies.-A point far projected in the sea, in the manner of a peninsula, which was called Chersonesus extremia, is, now called Ras-Edom, or the Reci Head.-We then arrive at Charmotas, a port with a spacious basin, although extremely contracted at the entrance: and its modern name of alSharm signifies the slit or aperture.-Receding still farther from the sea, the name of Iatrch, appropriated to Medina before it was called Medinet-al-Nabi, or the City of the Prophet, is the same with Iatrithia.-The name of Mecca appears evidently in that of Maco-raba the second member whereof is used to designate a great or principal city; and the house revered at Mecca is among the Arabs of an antiquity anterior to the origin of the Mahommedan worship; for they attribute the foundation of it to Abraham.-We cannot forbear remarking that a river whose course appears considerable in Ptolemy, under the name of Betius, is in reality only composed of two little streams, now called Bardilloi. Arabia has scarcely a river that does not perish in the sandy plains, or expand in moors and fens.-The city of Badeo, with the epithet of Regia, or Royal, retains the name of Badea in its maritime position; and a point of land which forms the southern boundary of the creek, at the head of which is seated Giddah, the port of Mecca, is still called Ras-bad.-At lenzth, arriving at the strait by which the Arabic Gulf communicates with the Erythrean Sea, we discover in a port named Ghela, that which is mentioned in antiquity under the name of Ocelis. This flith was called Dira, or Dira, which in Greek expresses a passage straitened in the njanner of a throat Its modern name of Bab-el-Mandeb signifies in the Arabic language the Port of Mourning or Affliction, from apprehensions of the risk of venturing beyond, in the expanse of a vast ocean.

The southern part of Arabia, which remains to be reviewed, bounded on the east by the Arabic Gulf, and on the south by the Erythrean Sea, is that which particularly merits the epithet of Hanhy. The name of lémen, whereby it is actually known, is a term in the Arabic, as in many other oriental languages, to express the Right: and turning towards the rising Sun, according to the aspect affected by the Asiatics, such will be the re: lative position of a southern country. It may be added that in this term of lemen is also comprised an idea of felicity.-Among the several people included in this country, and specially reputed Jectanides, or 'children of. Jectan, the Sabai are the most distinguished; and sometimes comprise others under their name. Another name, that of the Homerita, thought to be derived from Himiar, the name of a sovereign, and which signifies the Red King, appears latterly confounded with that of the Sabeans.-Sabatha, as the principal city of the Sabeans, can be no other than Sanaa, which is known in Iémen as holding anciently the first rank.-The Minai, who formed a people sufficiently conspicuous to give to , their country the name of Minaa; had for their capital Carana, whose name is preserved in that of Almakarana, which is a strong fortress.-Safihar, the name of another city among those of the first class, differs only in its initial letter from that of Dafar.-Tamala is found in the name of al-Demlou, which belongs to one of the strongest places, by nature of its situation.-The royal city of the Homerites was called Mariaba, or, as we read in Arabic, Mareb; which name expresses in this language the pre-eminence of the city. The Arabs make it the residence of Beltris the queen of Saba, who visited Solomon. There subsist vestiges of this city, which was destroyed by a sudden inundation caused by the bursting of a dyke whereby the collected waters in its environs were restrained. It confined on a country whose modern name of Hadramaüt is only the altered pronunciation of Chatramotita, among whom the city named Catabanum is now found in the fortress of the same country, under the name of Shibam.-Beyond this is another country, whose name of Seger, or Sehger, comes from Sochor, cited by Ptolemy, although misplaced by him, as are many well-known positions. This is the canton which, affording the incense, admits with signal propriety the name of Thurifera Regio, otherwise and more specially that of Libanophoros, because the most valuable kind of the drug is distinguished by its whiteness; Liban being the Arabic term for this quality. Hence, among traders; incensè is called Oliban, with the article of the Portuguese language, which is current in the ports of the oriental seas, as the Franc language is in those of the Mediterranean. When we read, in the account of the expedition of the Romans in Arabia, that; from the territory of Mariaba to the country of incense was only a journey of three days, Hadramaiut must be understood; which, nearer than Seger, had also its particular odour.-On the route that the Romans held in their retreat, as well as in advancing into the country, there is mention of Anagrana; as a considerable city, which afterwards became the centre of Christianity in

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

$$
\mathbf{A R A B I A}
$$

.'f & sE'́ct. $V$.
city named Hasec, near which there is a tomb named Cabal Houd, and said to be that of Eber, father of Jectan. .-The identity of an island mentioned under the name of Serafics, cannot be better assigned than to that which lies beyond, and whose modern name is Maceira. As we, read in a particular description of the shores of the Ery-, threan Sa, that the Syagros Promontorium is the most. eastern point of this continent, it can be no other than Ras-al-Hhad, although the information of Ptolemy appears not to authorize this opinion. We shall stop here, as the retrogression of the coast towards the entrance of the Persian gulf will enter more properly into a de- ${ }^{i}$ *tail of what concerns the Desert Arabia.

Arabia Deserta. To the Region of Incense succeeds a country named Mahrah, whose aspect is sufficiently deformed by nature to merit the distinction of the Sterile Arabia. For between the country of Oman, whereof' we shall presently speak, and the environs of Mecca, a continued desert extending across the continent, furnishes no particular objects in geography; the ancients appearing even to be unacquainted with the country in this part. But, adhering to the coast, we find Moscha hortus represented by Mascat, which was for some time in the power of the Portuguese. And this position follows the Syagrosic promontory; instead of preceding it as in Ptolemy. Also the Omanium Empo$u m$, or Omana, which this geographer places in the interior of the continent, is actually a maritime position, which has given the name of Oman to the country in its environs. That of Vodona, also noted by Ptolemy, is evidently the same with Vadana, the residence of an Emir in the country of Oman. Knowing only as Arabia Deserta what extends on the south side of the Euphrates between Syria and Babylon, the writers of antiquity have comprised this shore of the Persian gulf in Arabia Felix; and truly some places are recognised on it that do not disgrace this distinction.-The point of land which straitens the entrance of this $g^{u_{l f}}$ is covered with mountains, which were named Sabo, or Assabo with the Arabic article, and to which a port named Lima now communicates its name. Maca was that of a people on this land, and Maceta, the name of the promontory which terminates it, is now called Moçandon. The inhabitants of this coast are mentioned under the name of Ichthyothagi, because they subsisted chiefly upon fish.

The most considerable object furnished by the Gulf of Persia on the Arabian coast, is the isle of Tylos; the pearl fishery on whose coast has rendered it famous in antiquity: and the same circumstance still contributes: to its renoun, under the name of Bahtrain, which in Arabic signifies two seas.-At the bottom of a little gulf making a creek of the greater, Gerra was a city enriched by commerce of the perfumes brought from the Sa bean country, sent up the Euphrates to Thapsacus, and across the desert to Petra. This city, for the construction of whose houses and ramparts stones of salt were used, appears to be represented by that now named el-Katif.-Iérnama, a country which according to modern geography is remarkable, makes no figure in antiquity; one cannot even conjecture what might have represented it.-A place named Cariatain, in the route of the pilgrims passing from Bussora or Basra to Mecca, appears under the name of Cariatha in Ptoleny.-The Romans, in their Arabian expedition, before arriving at Nagran, traversed a country named Ararena, which, though arid and barren, was governed by a king.-The tribe of BeniTemin, which occupies a part of the desert, may find its name in that of the Themi, among many other names furnished by Ptolemy.

We shall conclude this section with'some general remarks. The Arabs who live under tents are called Scenita, after a Greek term, which signifies precisely this species of habitation. In calling them Bédouins, we use an Arabic word, denoting a people habituated to live in plains without a fixed habitation, and properly expressed by the Latin term Camhestres. The first mention that we find of the Saraceni in Pliny and in Ptolemy, far from affording an idea of a gheat nation, seems to indicate but a single tribe among those who divided the country of Arabia Petrea, as well as that of the desert. Procopius, under Justinian, speaks of the Roman Saracens and the Persian Saracens, and we see this name diffused over the space extending between the Arabic and Persian gulfs. In the opinion of some of the learned, this denomination is derived from an Arabic term,' designating men addicted to rapine; and as we see them without scruple adopting this mode of life, we may believe that they would not blush to be distinguished by the name. That of Hagareni, which we: find in the historians of the Lower empire, is founded on their origin in Ishmael, son of Hagar, and seems to have, been used to perpetuate a remembrance of this origin.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

modern travellers, Zarb. This river appears nearly equal to the Tigris, into which it falls a little above a position whose name of Ghilon was anciently Aloni.Farther down, another river named Zabuis Minor, and called by the Macedonians Cafirus, or the Boar, is also received by the Tigris, and now called by the, Turks Altunsou, which in their language signifies the River of Gold.-Assyria is sometimes named Aturia, although this name was proper only to a particular canton of the country in the environs of Nineveh.-There is also mention of the name of Adiabene, as having supplanted that of Assyria, notwithstanding that it was distinguished as.belonging only to a particular country which Assyria comprehended.-Corduene was one of those countries towards the northern mountains; and it was annexed to the empire under Dioclesian, with many other cantons, as Moxo`ne, Arzan`ne, and Zabdicène. These, in consequence of the failure of Julian's expedition, his successor was obliged to restore to the king of Persia. And Adiabène, conquered by Trajan many years before from the Parthians, relapsed almost as soon under the power of its former possessors.

Nineveh,or, according to the oriental formule, Nineve, constructed by Ninus subsequently to Babylon, and on a more spacious plan, if ,we may credit Strabo, was destroyed by the Medes leagued with the Babylonians against the Assyrian Empire. But this city being mentioned as the residence of many Assyrian kings posterior to this empire, it must be supposed while in a second state of existence. It may be doubted whether it ever fell under the dominion of the Persians: for though near the Tigris in their return, the ten thousand, between the $\mathbf{Z a b}^{3}$ and the mountains of the Carducians, met with the two desolated Median cities of Larissa and Mestila, yet there is no mention of Nineveh. .We must therefore conclude it to have been seated in the concavity of a sudden flexure described by the Tigris. ${ }^{\text {and }}$ consequently' without the line of their course. Howe-r ver, there is mention made of Ninus, as existing in anage less remote; and we are even assured of its site by, vestiges on'the Tigris, opposite-the position of Mosul, retaining the name of Nino, independently of a particular place which the memory of the prophet Jonah renders venerable to the people of the country.-Arbe-; la, whose name has a plural signification, is represented; as the principal city of Adiabene, and is`still in existence. under the name of Erbil.: The final victory of Alexander over Darius has rendered this place famous; 'though the actual field of battle was at Gaugamela, nearer to the Tigris, and on the opposite'side of the Zab to Are: hela.-The Bumadus, which Alexander met with after having passed the Tigris, is now known by the name of Hazir-sou, which is communicated by a place situated at the confluence of this river and the Zab. It is said of Gaugamela, the name whereof signifies the Habilation of the Camel, that in this place Darius Hystaspes had affected to entertain the camel that carried his personal camp equipage in his Scythian expedition.-At some distance. from the little Zab, towards the mountains, we discover in the modern name of Kerkouk the position of a place which, appearing under that of Dea metrias in Strabo, may be the Corcura of Ptolemy. We have already remarked that it is not extraordinary to * find two names fer the same place in these countries:
one given by the Macedonian conquerors; the other-na-: tive and original, and which has commonly prevailed. This position is singularly identified by the mention that Strabo makes of the springs of naphtha, and the fires. emitted by a hill in the environs of Demetrias: for these phænomena are observed near Kerkouk: the burning hill itself retaining the name of Korkour, which is scarcely an alteration of Cercura.-Farther on, the city named Siazuros, in the account of an expedition of He raclius in this country is easily recognised in Sherzour, the capital of a particular government' on this frontier of the Turkish empire.-In re-approaching the Tigris, the Garamai, who were a people of Assyria, according to Ptolemy, are found under the name of Garm: and the principal city on the bank of the river, formerly named Carcha, preserves the naire of Kark, though the place is commonly called Eski-Bagdad, or Old Bagdad, the metropolitan see of Garm. Tracing the retreat of the Roman army in the expedition of Julian, we find Carchá ań intermediate situation between Sumere and Dura.-Sumere is still called Samera; and in the ninth century it became considerable by the residence of several Khalifs, under whosé dominion it is found distin... guished by the Arabic name of Seramen-rai, alluding to the specious and alluring aspect of this dwelling.-Dura is distinguished by the name of the sepulchre of a revered personage preceding the local denomination; as Imam Mohammed Dour.-There is mention of OAis, as being near the entrance of a river in the Tigris, whose name is Physcus in Xenophon, appears under the name of Torna in the march of Heracleus, and of Odorneh in the modern geography. There is every

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Chalonitis.-To conclude what concerns Assyria, a position given by the name of Albana is known to be that of Holuan, near the mountains which form the boundary of -Media.

SECTION SEVENTH.

BABYLONIA,

IRAK.
From the limits which it has seemed expedient to give to Mesopotamia and Assyria, Babylonia extends both on the Euphrates and Tigris to the Persian Gulf, by which it is terminated towards the south; confining with Arabia. Deserta on the west, and with Susiana on the east. The name of Chaldea, which is more precisely appro-, priated to the part nearest to the gulf, is sometimes employed as a designation of the entire country; arid the greatest part of it being comprehended between the pivers, has given occasion to extend to it the name of Mesofotamia. It is this country which the Arabs namre properly Irak; and it is by the extension that this name has taken, in penetrating into ancient Media, that the part contiguqus to Babylonia is called Irak Arabi.

The proximity of the rivers towards the confines of , $M_{\text {esopot }}{ }^{a m_{i}} \mathrm{a}$, in a country whose super fices is extremely uniform, had given occasion to the opening of many canals, that convey the waters of the Euphrates towards the Tigris; and which still appear, according to the accounts of travellers, though without water. The first we have to speak of had its issue near a city named Sitia jiora: and this must be believed the Nar-raga of Pliny, since he cites it as being adjacent to Hinhara, which appears to be the same city as that just mentioned. The canal named Nahr-Sares is known to be that called NarSarsar. But the greatest was the Nar-Malcha, Fluvius Regum, or the River of Kings, which joined the Tigris near Seleucia. Repaired by Trajan in his expedition against the Parthians, it had again become dry, when Julián returned the waters of the Euphrates into it, but which no longer flow.-Adhering to the course of this river, we find it enveloping by several implications, a city whose name of Peri-Saboras, in an expedition of Julian, is after the oriental form of Firuz Sapor. But it is more commonly known by the name of Anbar; and. the first khalif of the house of Abbas, in the eighth century, made it his residence.-It mày be observed that the name of Anbar, which in Arabic signifies properly a magazine of provisions, has great affinity with that of Ancobaritis, which we find in' Ptolemy as projer to"a particular canton of this country.-At the same height, but nearer to the Tigris, is the position which Sitace ought to take, a city considerable enough to have communicated the name of Sitacene to the circumjacent country. As we learn from Xenophon that the Greeks met with this city before they passed the Tigris, it must be erroneously placed in Ptolemy far beyond that river. Vestiges of it form a small eminence called Karkuf, ' which some travellers have mistaken' for the remains of Babylon.-Bagdad, not far from this, is a city of Islam. ism, and of later date, placed at first by al-Mansor, the second of the Abbassides, on the right bank of the Tigris, in a place called by the Turks Kushlar-Kalasi; or the Castle of Birds; and afterwards transferred to the opposite side of the river, where it now flourishes. . Dignified under the Khalifat with the title of. Medinet-asSalam, or the City of Peace, it is cited by the writers of the Lower Empire in the name of Irenopolis, which in Greek has the same signification.-It was a little lower, in the territory of a place named Coche, on the right bank of the Tigris, that Seleucus Nicator, having in view the depopulation of Babylon, founded a city to be, under the name of Seleucia, the capital of the east. The same motive with respect to Seleucia, induced the Parthian monarchs to erect on the other side of the river, almost opposite to the ancient site of Coche, a new city, under the name of Ctesifinon, which became their ordinary residence. Hence what we find denominated in the oriental geography al-Modain, or the Two Cities, represents Seleucia and Ctesiphon; and in this last the ruins of an ancient edifice are called Takt-Kesra, or the Throne of Chosroés.-Babylon, the most ancient city in the world, founded by Belus, who is thought to have been the same as Nimrod, embellished by Semiramis, and long after by Nabuchodonosor, was bisected by the course of the Euphrates from north to south. Its extent formed an equilateral square, whose sides subtended the four Cardinal Points of the Great Circlé. The men suration attributed to its circumference, and on which the ancients are not agreed, as three hundred and sixty or four hündred and eighty stadia, has given occasion to estimate it rather as a region of country, than the possi ble extent of a city, for want of proper distinction in the length of the stadium employed therein. It will appear on the result of a valuation founded on the greatest pro* babilities, that the extent of Babylon, which was never

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

where it expands in a pool, which may be the remains of the great lake said to have been excavated for the purpose of preserving Babylon from inundations, when the snow' melts on the mountains which cover the sources of the Euphrates. The tomb of Hosein, son of Ali, of the family of Mohammed, may have caused the change of name in this place.-Another canal, derived from the same bank of the Euphrates, but below Babylon, and whose aperture Alexander caused to be repaired, was named Pallacopa. It is now absorbed in a morass called Rahemah, at the extremity of which a city bore the name of Alexandria. This city was known by the name of Hira, when it became the residence of the Arabian princes ${ }^{\text {w }}$ who served the Persians and Parthians against the Romans; and called in history by the general name of Alamundari, after the name al-Mondar, common to many of these princes at the fall of their dynasty in the first age of the Mohammedan. A similar cause to that which operated on the name of Vologesia, has induced the mutation of this also. The body of Ali, who had been assassinated in Kufa (a place but arfew miles distant, and long since abandoned,) was interred in Hira. which, from the sepulchre of this khalif, carne to be called Meshed-Ali.

In returning to the Euphrates, Borsifina, or, according to Ptolemy, Barsita, was a city distinguished by a particular sect of the Chaldeans, whose name denotes rather the persons and ministers of a religious faith, than the inhabitants of any particular district of country. It is remarkable on this subject, to find near the Euphrates a city named Semavat, or Celestial: and a principal arm of the river, called Wadi-Ússema, or the River of Heaven.-Below the former position; Sura, where the Jews had a school which rivalled that of Neharda, sub. sists under the same name.-Thence we shall follow the Euphrates to its junction with the Tigris. In the angle formed by this confluence was a city to which are referred two several names, as to many others in these oriental countries: Ahamea, in Ptolemy; Digba, in Pliny: and if Ptolemy, by a position whose name he writes Didigua, appears to give two different cities, it is only by a similar error to that wherein he falls in distinguishing Chalybon from Berœa in Syria. This position is occupied by a fortress, whose name of Korna expresses in Arabic a point resembling a horn.-What the Tigris. furnishes to observation below Ctesiphon, regards a river named Gyndes.* It descends, according to Herodotus, from the mountains of Mantiene, or Matiane, in the northern part of Media, and is received into the Tigris. Cyrus, finding it on his passage, divided it into inree hundred and sixty channels. The Gyndes, reduced to nothing by the number of drains which it suffered from. Cyrus, has at length re-assumed its course to the Ti gris; and its entrance into this river is called Foum-el-. Saleh, or the Mouth of Peace, in the Arabic language. The name given to it by the Turks in the places whence it issues, is Kara-Sou, or the Black River.-A position named Aracca, on this eastern side of the Tigris, attracts

[^10]the attention of the learned, by reason of the affinity in its name with that of Erech, mentioned in the Old Testament among the cities constructed by Nimrod.-But we must not omit remarking, that there was a time when the Euphrates had its own mouth separately from that of the Tigris; and it was in existence 'when the fleet of Alexander ascended from the sea towards Babylon. . The term of the navigation of the sea from the river Indus was a place named Diridotis, otherwise $T e_{\text {- }}$ $\dot{r e d o n}$, at the head of the Persian Gulf, which receives the Tigris and Euphrates. Accompanying a modern traveller in the route of Basra, towards the west, there will be found the ancient bed of the river, now dry. The Orciepni, inhabiting a city named Orchö̈, caused the diminution of the Euphrates, by deriving it through their lands, which could not otherwise be watered. This city was one of the principal of Chaldea, and the centre of a considerable sect of those doctors to whom the name of Chaldeans is applied. It is believed that its sitúation is found in the place now named Drahemia and Dgiam. Ali, on a canal, which, issuing fiom the Tigris a little above the position of Basra, conducts to this city, whose foundation; under the khalifat of Omar, caused the de. population of the circumjacent places; and it is thus that a great intermediate deposit of merchandise, whose name of Aholigi is scarcely discernible in the modern form of Oboleh, a little below the aperture of the canal just mentioned, has transferred this advantage to Basra: -The lower part of the course of the Tigris from the ${ }^{i}$ junction of the Euphrates, was called Pasitigris; and this is what is now named Shatul-Arab, or the River of the Arabs. We see that, in the time of Alexander, this

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
mania. Its name in Scripture is Paras, which is nearly the same with that of Fars, according to its modern form, as the permutation in the initial of $P$ to $F$ is frequent in this country, where Ishahan, for example, is pronounced Isfahan. Elam, son of Shem, is the parent of this nation, according to the holy text. It remained in obscurity till the time of Cyrus, who extended his dominion over the most considerable part of Asia that was known, from the river Indus to the Egean Sea; sub. jecting to the patrimony of his ancestors as well the kingdom of Babylon, as whatever the domination of the Medes had comprehended westward to the river Halys; and annexing to it also the kingdom of Lydia beyond that river. This empire, to which Cambyses, son of Cyrus, added Egypt, subsisted not much more than two ages, when it was conquered by Alexander, after whose 1 death the eastern provinces fell to the lot of Seleucus Nicator; and his successors in Syria lost these provinces to the Parthians. But, under the dominion of these last; Persia had its particular kings; and in an enumeration which we have of the provinces of their empire, neither Persia, nor the adjacent country of Carmania are found comprised. The Persian princes were nevertheless in a state of dependence till the third century. A Persian, who took the name of Artaxerxes, shook off the yoke of the Parthians, and transferred their power. to the Persians, who enjoyed it about four hundred years, till the invasion of the Arabs, under the first khalifs, successors of Mohamme 1 . The ancient renown of Persia, which a second dynasty renewed, has main. tained the name of this empire, as a general term in. geography, applied to all that country which from, the. limits of the Turkish domination extends eastward to Hindoostan. Susiana and Persis, or Persia Proher, complete the general term of Peksia; and witlr the former province which first presents itself, we enter upon the detail of particular objects.

Susiana. Susiana, whose name is now Khozestan, participates the situation of Persia, as being contained within the limits of Media and the Persian Gulf It confines'with Babylon in the neighbourhood of the Tigris; and the river Oroates, which is also found under the name of Pasitigris, and called Tab in the modern geography, separates it from Persia Proher on the borders of the gulf. -The name of Elymais takes a great extent in Susiana, being as well applied to the northern and mountainous division, as to the maritime part, which is flat and moorish. But the first is more agreeable to the situation of the Elymai, who are mentioned as having a prince independent both of the Macedonians of rSyria, and the Parthians:-Another country of Susiana, and which comprised the capital, according to Herodotes, was named Cissia. The middle of the country is traversed by the river Euleus, which is Ulai in Daniel; and which, taking also the name of Choasfies, pierces, before arriving at Susa the capital, a mountain, whose name of Koh-asp signifies in Persian the Mountain of the Horse. We read that the kings of Persia drink no other water than that of this river. Its true source, above its issue from the Koh-asp, is in the Koh-zerdeh, or the Yellow Mountain, from whose opposite side springs the Zeindehrud, or the river of Ispahan. After having directed its course very obliquely towards the Pasitigris, with $\therefore$ which this river has an artificial communication, it turns suddenly, and discharges itself into the Per ${ }_{\text {si }}$ an Gulf by many mouths, taking from a modern place on its banks the name of Karun.-Susa, from whose name is formed that of the province, appears also under the plural form of Susan, which in the language of the country signifies Lilies. It was the winter dwelling of the Persian kings, the great heats of the summer rendering Ecbatana themore agreeable residence during this season. It is now commonly called Tuster, or with more conformity to its original name, Suster. A city now in ruins, but heretofore considerable, and whose vulgar name of Ahwaz was extended by the Arabs to all the Khozestan, would appear to preserve in that of Hus (by which it is known to the Syrians) some analogy to the name of Chusii, or Cisti, mentioned as a people of Susiana, as well as of the particular canton called Cissia.-The mountains which covered the country on the north, were occupied by people who acknowledged no superior; for, to the Elymeans must be joined the Cossai, who, by a situation confining on Media; are sometimes comprehended in it.The Uxii were placed on the frontiers of Persia; and Alexander, to open himself a way, was obliged, notwithstanding the asperity of the places, to reduce this nation. Their name may be perceived in the modern denomination of Asciac, particularly appropriated to this canton, which concludes what we have to say concerning Susiana. We may add, however, that the whole extent of this mountainous; region is now named Loutristan, and that the people inhabiting it are called Lour and Baktiari.

Persis. We enter now upon the description of Persis, or Persia properly so called, which is separated from great augmentations in the fourth century of the same æra, yet its situation is too advantageous for us to believe that such had been formerly neglected. In seeking then to give it a place in antiquity, it may be remarked that the name of Corra, applied to a Persian city by Ptolemy, is the same with that of the river which passes through this, or Correm-dere: the last member of it being only the general designation of a current of water. It is to be observed that this does not fall into the Persian Gulf, as we"see in some maps; but, like the united Araxes and Medus, expands itself in a moor, whose waters are salt.-Pasargada was the ancient royal city of the Persians. A particular people who took the name of it, were distinguished for comprehending the tribe or family of the Achæmenides, the most illustrious of the nation, and from whom Cyrus was descended. Cyrus had there his tomb; and a city which preserves the name of Pasa, or Fasa, with the surname of Kuri, according to the Persians, shows us the position of Pasargades, or Pasagardas; for the name is also thus written.-The mountains which cover the north of this country were occupied hy the Parataceni; and it is remarked that a neighbouring canton to Ispahan is named Perhaûer. That which is called Hetzardara, or the Thousand Mountains, may answer to the Parchoatras, which, according to Ptolemy, separates Persia from Media.-The name of $\mathcal{A}_{\text {shadana }}$, among the cities which he gives to Persia, has too much affinity with that of Ispahan to permit any doubt of its identity: though it may be observed of this city, which the great Shah Abbas made his capital, that it is beyond the mountains which constitute the modern limits of Fars.-Pliny speaks of a city under the name of Ecbatana, as a place occupied by the Magi: a circumstance that attracts our attention to a place called Gnerden, where the Ghebres, or ancient Parsis, preserving the worship of fire, have a priest of superior dignity charged with the office of preserving a pyre perpetually burning on an "adjacent" mountain. It is remarked that Elburz, the name of the mountain, is common to many other places consecrated to this object of superstition.-In the name of Iezed, on tha frontier of the Kerman, may be recognised that of Isaticha, though placed in Carmania by Ptolemy.There remains something to be said of the maritime part of Persia. A royal résidence, under the name of Faoce, at some distance from the sea, is indicated by the name of Taûg. in the oriental geography-The li-i mits betiveen Persia and Carmania, on the coast of the Gulf, werc fixed by Nearchus, admiral of Alexander's fleet, to be opposite to a neighbouring isle, whose name of Catàa is recognised under the modern form of Keish, or Caïs. This isle, though of no great extent, was remarbable for being a great emporium, before this advantage was transferred to Ormus.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SEOTION NINTH.

CARMANIA ET GEDROSIA,

 KERMAN, ANDMEKRAN:Carmania. Carmania, succeeding Persia towards the east, preserves in its extent the same parallels of latitude. Ptolemy, encroaching on Gedrosia, exaggerates the dimensions of Carmania far beyond the limits assigned to it in the relation of Nearchus; who, coasting these countries, fixes as a term of division a promontory named Cärhella, which is indubitably Cape Jask; and recognising moreover for the first place in Carmania, coming from the mouths of the Indus; that which;, under the name of Badis, he indicates as adjacent.-The objects that antiquity offers to observation in Carmania, are for the most part limited to the sea-coast. Harmozia, now represented by Gomron, or Bender Abbassi, was an ancient position on the continent, before the retreat of its inhabitants to a little island in the vicinity, which happened on the invasion of the country by the Moguls, in the thirteenth century. - This isle, called Gerun; is mentioned in antiquity under the name of Ogyris, and is said to have contained the tomb of king Erythras, who is pretended to have given his name in the Erythrsan Sea. The people that this desert isle received, communicated to it the name of their primitive dwelling; and, notwithstanding that an insulated ground, of small extent, covered with salt, destitute of fresh water, was but a dreary habitation; we know that, by its advantageous situation for a mart of Indian commerce, it became the once flourishing state of Ormus.-The greatest island of the Persian Gulf, near Ormus, and separated from the continent only by a narrow channel, is Kismis, otherwise called Vroct; and it preserves in the last of these names that of Oaracta, which we find attributed to it by the ancients.-The isles that appear under the names of Tyrus and Aradus are, one Ormus, and the other Arek.-In the interior country, where modern geography finds many cities, we can only indicate Carmania as referring to antiquity, and in those

SECT. IX.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
that we discover Rambacia, which Alexander found in his route before passing a defile of mountains, which would appear the Parsici Montes of Ptołemy.-The nation of Orila find their name in that of Haûr, and the Arabita in Araba.-A canton named Sangada, contiguous to the mouth of the Indus, is that-of the Sanganes; known by their inhospitable treatment of strangers who have the misfortune to fall into their hands.-

> SECTION TENTH. MEDIA; $I R_{A K} K \mathcal{A} A M I, A N D \dot{A} D E R B I G I A N$.

Media is separated on the north from Armenia by the Araxes, and then bounded by the southern shore of the Castian Sea. Persis and Susiana are the countries contiguous to it on the south; Assyria on the west, and Aria on the east. A part of this country is mountainous, especially that on the side of Assyria, whence arose the distinction by the $A_{r} a_{b} i_{c}$ name of al-Gebel, or the mountain. And a ridge that reigns to the south of the Caspian Sea, bounds à vast plain, a great part of which, being covered with salt, is uncultivated and desert. The name of Irak, with the surname Ajami, that is to say, Persian Irak, to distinguish it from the Irak Arabi, which is Babylonia, extends at present over a great part of ancient Media. We know that there was a time when the Medes, having shaken off the Assyrian yoke, ruled over that part-of Asia which extended towards the west as far as the river Halys; but we know very little of the commencement of their monarchy.

MEDIA.

Atropátena: . The part of Media contiguous to Armenia was distinguished by the name of Alropatena, fiom that of Atropates, satrap of this particular profince, who, in the dissensions which reigned among the Macedonian generals after the death of Alexander, rendered himself independent, and took the title of king, which his successors enjoyed for many ages. The name. now given to this country is Aderbigian, from the Persian term Ader signifying fire; according to the tradition that Zerdust, or Zorouster, lighted a pyre or temple of fire in a city named Urmiah, of this his native country. -We find also in an Arăbiạn geográpher the name of Atrib-kan, in which it is easy to recognise Allopatena.-The capital is named Gaza, or Gazaca, and its position is that of Tebriz, or, as it is more commonly pronounced, Tauris: which nevertheless among the Armenians bears the name of Ganzak. In the account of the expedition of Heraclius against the Persians, there is mention, under the name of Thebarmai, of a city which there is reason to take for Urmiah though its orthography be not conformable to that of places in the ancient geography. Between Tebriz and this city, a great salt-watet lake which is named Sfiau$t a$ in $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{t}} \mathrm{rabo}$, is Capoton in the Aimenian geography. Huiakou-Khán, grandson to Genghiz, and who abolished the khalifat in the thirteenth century, amassed the spoils of a part of Asia in a fortress insulated by this lake; and he caused to be erected, at the neighbouring city of Maraga, an obsérvatory, from which Nasir-uddin, a distinguished astronomer among the orientals, was appointed to tiake observations.

Great Media. A lake given by Ptoleny, in the name of Marcianes, can be found only in the above, because the country affords no other. And if we read it Matianes, we shall find it communicating this name to a neighbouring province which is Matiana in Strabo, and Mantinea in Herodotus. Ptolemy derives from this lake a stream, which conducts into thể river Amardus, that has its mouth in the Caspian Sea; but the lake of Capotan, though it receives rivers, renders none; and the Amardus can only be the Kezil-Ozein, that pierces the chain of mountains which we have described as to. vering the southern shore of this sea. It takes its name from the Amardi, or Mardi, who in the defiles of almost inaccessible mountains maintained a barbarous independencè: and this canton is well known, as having served for the dwelling of the Assassins who were exterminàted by Hulakou. This ulterior country, fas regards, Atropatena, is distinguished in antiquity by the qualification of the Great Media.-It is known that the capital in this country, as of the whole Median empire, was E $\dot{c}$ b̆atana, constructed by Dejoces, who was elevated to the regal dignity over a people who, before his time, had no re. gular or decided form of government. The l'ersian monarchs, and those of the Parthians, made this city their retreat during the heats of summer, which were excessive both at Susa and Ctesiphon. It is agreed withal to refer to Hamadan the site of Ecbatanes; this name being used also in the plural.-The name of Orontes, given to a great mountain in the neighbourhood of this city, is to be developed in the name of Eruend, which, as well as that of Eluend, it now Dears.On the route which leads from Bagdad to Hamadan, a

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SECT. VI $\mathbf{I}_{\boldsymbol{\alpha}}$ trance to the country towards the south, that environs the sea of the same name,) are indubitally known.The Tapuri inhabiting this country, have given it the name of 'Tabaristan, though it is otherwise called Ma. zanderan. Its principal city Zadra-Carta, has not entirely lost this name in that of Sari.- The Gela oned their name to Ghilan, a low and niry district, äccording to the proper signification of this name. Among the cities of this country, Kurab appears to be an alteration of the the name of Cyropolus, a position which Ptolemy places on this shore. The Mardus, of which we have spoken, is called Ipserud towards its mouth. - But leaving the Caspian Gates on the left, to advance towards the extremity of Media, we enter a canton at the font of the mountains celebrated under the name of Choara for the amenity of its situation; and it is silll named Kâul..Demegan, the principal city of a country named now Comis, and heretofore Comisene, is cited under the name of Hecaton-fylos, which, referring to the time of the Greek domination in these provinces, signifies the Hundred Gates; a figurative expression, alluding to the numerous routes which diverge from it to the circumjacent country: and when it is found in Ptolemy that this extremity of Media was that called Parthia, having"He-caton-hylos for its capital, it must be understood of the time when a people, hitherto but inconsiderable, had extended their limits far and wide by the prevailing fortune of their arms.-Here are recognised two parti. ticular cantons, Articene and Tabiene, one by the name of Ardistan, the other by the name of two neighbouring cimes, to which that of Tabas is common.

SECTION ELEVENTH.

ARIA, BACTRIANA, ET SOGDIANA,

Khorasan, and usbec tartarr.
Aria vel ariana. The name of this country is properly that of a particular province; and it is by extension of its limits, to comprehend several adjacent cantons, that Ariana appears a name' distinguished from Aria in antiquity. • This extension was carried by Strabo as far as the mouths of the Indus; and its limits are described in such a manner as to embrace the frontier of Carmania as far as Gedrosia. But, without descending thus to the sea, it may be said that the country, which represents the ancient Ariana, is that which the Persians call Khorasan, beçause of its relãtive situation towards the rising sun: and the name of Choro-mithrena, in which is recognised that of Mithras, the deity of the sun, according to the ancient Persians, would correspond with the situation of the same country, if Ptolemy did not apply it to a district of Media less remote than Khorasan.

Aria had a principal city of the same name; and when we read that Artacoana, among the nation of the Arii, was the royal residence; the same city is to be understood, under a particular and distinctive denomination, which extended to all the country in its dependence. There is also mention of a river called Arius; and it may be remarked that Heri-rud, or the river Heri, passes by Herat, the capital of the country, and the most considerable city of Khorasan.—Susia, on the route of Alexander, immediately before he arrived at Artacoana, preserves its name in Zeuzan:-But the river Arius, and a lake called Aria Palus, are subjects of difficulty. There is no otherlake known in all this country than that of Zere, so called from a city whose name is found to be Zaris in Ctesias. There is mention also of a city named Alexandria in Aria, and which is placed by Ptolemy near this lake. To judge of its position, it must be remarked that Alexander, who from Artacoana entered the country of the Zaranges (of whom we shall presently speak.) must have found his passage between the western extremity of lake Zere and the neighbouring mountains. Now it is probable that a route indicated from the, capital of the Zaranges towards this extremity, led to a place of some consideration; and a town of that description named Corra, is thus situated. But wherefore is not this Alexandria reputed to appertain to Aria, since it was situated on the Aria Palus? We have seen then Alexander pass from Aria into an adjacent country, whose principal city, named Prohhthasia, preserves in the name of Zarang that of the Zarangai, otherwise Dranga, who inhabited this country.-The Etymander, known at present by the name of Hindmend, traverses this country, 'to convey into lake Zere what remains of its waters, after numerous derivations; and does not descend northward to the sea, as Ptolemy would represent, who seems indeed to have been indifferently instructed in the chorography of Aria and its dependencies.-The Ariaspta, whom succours afforded to Cyrus had caused to be distinguished with the surname of Euergeta, or Benefactors, are still recognised by the name of Der:-gasp.-A mong the provinces of the Parthian empire is Anabon, which following Aria, and preceding the Drañgiane, has a great city, whose name of Phra, or rather

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Hyrcania: - The limits of Hyrcania are not easily determined. To assume as a term the mouth of a river named Sideris, where the sea commonly called Caspian begins to take, according to Pliny, the name of Mare Hyrcanum, is to circumscribe it within the angle which this sea forms between the east and the south. This river of Sideris has not lost its name so totally as not to be found again in that of Ester, of which the name of Ester-Abad, or the city Ester, is formed: and, in the oriental pronunciation, Sider and Ester are confounded.

Zadracarta, mentioned in treating of Media, is qualified as the royal city of Hyrcania, in the history of Alexander's expedition; and the position of Saramane, given to Hyrcania by Ptolemy, is found by the name of Siarman on this Southern shore. But we know that different times prescribe different limits to countries. According to the recital which we owe to Polibyus of the expedition of Antiochus III, king of Syria, against the Parthian's', Syringis, which, by the circumstances of this narrative is very remote and beyond the mountains, is the principal city of Hyrcanin; and that which Ptolemy gives under the same name of Hyrcania, appears to be this city. Now the actually existent capital of this country being Jorjan, according to our pronunciation, is more "correctly Corcan; in which we may perceive what, according to the orthography of the ancient writers, is Hurcan, or Hyrcania.-In the description of the provinces of the empire of the Párthians, the country of Hyrcania succeeds immediately to Astabena, having a city where it is said-that the first Arsaces, founder of this empire, was proclaimed king. The name of this city is read Asaac: and one may perceive therein the resemblance with that of $Z \cdot \hat{\mathbf{u}}: h$ on this frontier. . The Dahestan, which is contıguous, evidently owes this name* to the nation of Dahr, which Arsaces governed - The Barcanii mentioned in the armies of the kings of Persia, retain their name in that of Balkan, which a mountain and a gulf adjacent still bear.-Afiavaretica was the name of an inland province, which retains that of Abi-* - verd, or Baverd.-It was of an adjacent canton named Parthiene that the name of Parthian, once so illustrious, was formed. This canton, under the kings of Persia, and the Macedonian princes of Syria, was subordinate to Hyrcania, and of little consideration. But the conquests of the Parthians extended the name of l'arthia to that part of Media situated beyond the Caspian Gates.-Parthaunisa, as it appears in the description already cited of this part of the empire of the Parthians, or Nisaa, was the principal city of Parthiene, and the place of sepulture for their kings. Nesa is still the name of this city; which, beyond the hills of Sahar, or the Sarithi of Ptolemy, has before it vast plains, proper for the Parthian nomades, or shepherds, as they were characterized.' And it was thence that the Turkish sultan, ancestor of the Otto-nan family, departed for the banks of the Euphra-tes.-Let us add that a river which flows in the environs of Nesü, falls into the Caspian Sea, under the name of Ochus in antiquity.

SECT. XI.
ARIA, &C.
. We have yet to speak of a province which was com${ }_{\star}$ prised in the empire of the Parthians. Margiana, adjacent to Bactriana, lay east of Parthiene, and north of Aria: It o:ved its name to the river Margus, which issues from the mountains between Bactriana and Aria; and like the
'Arius, to which its course is parallel, is absorbed a little below the capital on the borders of the desert; by which a great part of this country is enveloped; the Persizins preserving its name in Marg-ab. The fertility of a particular canton determined Antiochus, son of Seleucuș Nicator, to inclose it with a rampart of fifteen hundred stadia, as appears by Strabo. But probabty these stadia are of the shortest scale, as that seems to have been especially used in the eastern countries.-The prince whom we have just mentioned made a new and very considerable city of a situation which Alexander had judged proper for an Alexandria, altering its name at the same time to that of Antiochia. This is known to the oriental geography by the name of Marou; with the surname of Shahi-gian, as who.should say, the soul or. affection of the sovereign; the great calamities which it has suffered from those revolutions to which Asiatic states have ever been extremely subject, having not totally annihilated it. The name of Marou is common to another city, which is Marou- ?rund, or Marou of the River: and this river is the Merg-ab.—Maruca is a position to report here; because we recognise the Marucai in the canton named Marushak, adjacent to Marou, though placed by Ptolemy in Bactriana; where we shall have occasion to remark a still more eccentric transposition by this geographer,

Bactriana. Bactriana extends along the southem bank of the Oxus, which separates it from Sogdiana. The mountains, which are a continuation of the Paropamisus, covering the north of India, bound Bactriana towards the south.-This country is said to be of such high antiquity as to have been conquered'by Ninus. It

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

tan is still the name of the country between the mountains and the Gihon, or ()xus:-A city under the name Aornce, which appears commun to màny. places strong by situation, can be no better assigned than to Talekań, having a castle on a mountain called Nokr-koh, or the Mountain of Silver, which was besieged by, Genghizkkan: Aind this concludes. what we have to say concerning Bactriana.-it must nevertheless be-added, that if Ptole:ny here places Maracanda, which actually belongs to Sogdiana, it is that the latitude of this city does not amount to the height whereto he advances Sogdiana, but is included in the space which he assigns by a proportionate exaggeration of this country immediately contiguous.

Sogdiana. This country extends along the iight or northern side of the river $O x u s$, or, in the oriental geography, Gihon, whose course divides two great regions, Iran and Toüran; the one embracing the Persian provinces in general, the other extending over the countries of ancient Scythia. The country, called by us Trans-Oxiane coricsponds with that winch the orientals also express by the name of Mader:cnnabr, or beyond the river. The name of Sogdiana subsists in that of al. Sogd, proper to a valley which, for its exuberant fertility, is one of the four cantons distinguished by the name of Ferdons, or Paradise.-This valley is watered by a river which the historians of Alexander call Polyitme$t u s$, or the most precious: and it is by the numerous drains derived from this river that the adjacent lands are fertilized, while the parent stream is thereby so much reduced that it wants power to attain the Oxus. $\because$ Maracanda preserves its name in Samarkand, in the valley of SECT, XI. $\quad$. ARIA, \&c.

Sogd, on this river. We read in the omental geographers that this city, which Timur, or Temir-leng, thade the capital of his empire, has a vast exterior space envio roned by a wall, to protect it against the sudden incursions of the enemy, to which it is extremely exposed, from the character of the neighbouring nations. The same is reported of Bukard, which only yields to Samarkand in this country: but to which there cannot be assigned a corréspondent position among those mentioned in antiquity. We, however, recognise some of these. Oxiana cannot be better applied than to Termed, becarse it is the great passage of the Oxus; between the country of Balk and Maûerennahr:- $\boldsymbol{\lambda}$ considera: ble river named Wash is recerved into the Gihon: and the nan: of Bascatis, in Ptoleniy', appears to have affinity with it; though he makes it one of the rivers which contribute to form the Jaxartes. - There wàs an Alexan. dria in this canton: and the sumame of Oxiana, which distinguishes its individuality, according to Ptolemy, authorises the presumption of its being upon the Oxus: and; in the Arabian geography of Edrisi, Alexandria is a city of this countly, without an indication of its situa. tion. If we plắce it above Oxiana or, Termed, as. in Ptolemy, it may have occupied a position which, before the domination of Timur, the princes who governed what is called the eirpire of Zagatiil had chosen for their residence, under the name of Sali-Ser uï-A place which is only distinguished by the appellitive Peira, or the Rock, and which was besieged by Alexander, corresponds with that named in the country itself Shadman; but by the Turks Hisarek, which in their-language denotes a fortress. Vautaca is thought to be discovered in Nek-shab; as in Nur, or Nour, is supposed the canton called Naura, where a defile was guarded by another rock, or Petra.-The situation and the name of Kaous refer to Gaba, which is mentioned as one of the first places to: which the exploits. of Alexander have given celebrity in this country. - Another more remarkable, was a city, constructed by. Cyrus, on the hither bank of "'the Jaxartes, in his expedition against the Massagetes, named Cyreschata; a name which in its termination expresses a position the most remote. It was destroyed by Alexander, to súbstitute a city of his' own name, distinguished by the surname of Ulimáa, corresponding in Latin with the precedent term in Greek. There is no position which so evidently represents these cities as that of Cogend, which. presents itselfa before entering the country of Fergana on this bank of the Sihon, or Jaxartes.

The country traversed by the Oxus in the latter part of its; course, belonged to the Chorasmii; and is well known by its modern name of Kharasm; or Khoaresm. under the second empire of the Persians, we find it occüpied by a-Scythian nation, called Euthalites by the Greeks of the Lower Empire; and whose name of Haiatelah in Abulfeda extends over all the Mấr-ennahr, which is ordinarily attributed to the Tartars called Uz= beks.-He name of 'Gorso is observed to be that of the capital of the Euthalites: and the city:known at present in 'Kharasm undei the name of Urghenz, is , the same with Coŕcáng in the ofriental geographers:-According to the ancients, both the Oxus and Jaxartes have their 'mouthsin the C'aspian'Sea. However', we know by actual

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SECTION TWELFTH:

SCYTHIA ASIATICA, ET SERICA,

 PART OF TARTARTANDTIET, & &Scythin Asiatica. This stythia, according to the knowledge that the ancients had of.it, was but a small part of that which common usage comprehends under . the .general name of Tartary.* Scythia is divided by. Ptolemy into. Scythia intra Imaüm, and Scythia extra. Imaïm.-The mountain of Imaïs is connected with Päropamisus by the chain which covers the north of Itridia; and in the Indian goography ,we fond the name of Imeia Pambadam, wherein is a remarkable affinity with that of the two mountains above mentioned, In the prolongation of this chain to the east, between Scythia and India, it takes the name of Emodus; and it is reasonable io suppose that the observations of mociern geographers have given a precision to the natural features and local circumstances of this country, which cannot be expected from Piolemy. But it is evident - that I'maüs, to divide Scythia, must detach a brańch. which extends far towards the north.-We find no name more considerable in Scythia then that of Massageta,
: This name of Tartary is of recent date; that of Tatar, as it should'be written, only appearing towards the close of the twelfth century; and even limited to a single horde or tribe, whose submission to that of the Moguls commanded by Gen. ghiz Kahn; "was the first achievement of this conqueror:- an - event that did not hinder the name of the vonquished people from prevailing over the other to such an amount, as to become a gencral indication for almost half the continent of Asia.

SECT. XII.
scythia asiatici, & $&$.
which may be interpreted the Great Getes, by the signification of the initial syljables: The primitive and principal dwelling of the Massagetes was beyond the Jixartes or Araxes, according to Herodetus; andin the vicinity of the moor which the same river forms, according to Strabo. And if. we find this name in other countries, as in those of the Alans and the "Huns, of a different race; the diffusion of it "was owing to the celebrity that it acquaired in Scythia." The proper name of Geté has remained to a vast country, extending to Seri-ca.-Southward. of these, the Sacre formed a great nation of Nomades, who had no cities, but inhabited caverns and forests, and who repelled Cyrus in Inrattack. upon them.-A country which immediately succeeds Sogdiana towards the éast, preserves the name of Sakita The Comede inhabited the mountains that cover this country on the northern side. and whence the Jaxartes takes its source. - A position under the name of Turris Lafidea attracts attention to à fortress on a steep rock, named Aatas.-Towards the common limits of the two Scythias, the station-appainted for the reception of the merchants whom commerce attracted to the country of the Seris, may be represented by that named Souc, if-it have any relation to the same word in the Arabic language, signifying a fair or market. We may add, that the passage of a mountain gives entrance into The country of Kashgar; as Casia Regio is: placed by Ptolemy in the farther Scythia, in the same parallel with the above mentioned position, and inmedfately sueceeding it - The position of Ascou, farther north than Kashgar, corresponds otherwise as̀ well as in the circumstance of being a principal place, with that named

SECT. XII.
Auxacia, in Ptolemy--íwe slaall speak of $I_{s s e d o n, ~ o f ~}^{\text {of }}$ this Scythia, in treating of Serica.-As to the Abii, a Scythian people, described as the most just among men, i it is as difficult $t \mathrm{y}$ find them morally as geographically; and Strabo gives this people to Europe, whom other writers place in Asia The $\boldsymbol{A}_{1}$ imashi, who have but one eye, are in the same category, referred to one and the other division of the world; and the G'rizhi, or Gifons, who guarded the gold that the Arimastians endeavoured to seize, may, together with the two former, be consigned to the regions of romance. The vigrititivi of Hero. dotus should be, from the manner in, which he speaks of them, rather a society of Bramins or Lamas, than' a particular nation.

Serica: Serica appears to be a continuation of the same country with Scyithia, without a separation marked by any local circumstance. The name of the people, or Seres, is cited in many writers of antiquity; but it is to Ptolemy alone that we one any detail of the country, as well as of the anterior part of Scythia. "And among all the regions which the geography of Ptolemy comprehends, it is not withoul sone surprise țhat we remark $#$ Serica to be the most correctly treated, although one of the objects the most femcte in it. But this country was on the route by which a great trade was mantained with the frontier of China; and he might have gaived information of its chorography by the same way. An ancient denomination, and truly Scythian, is that of Gete, which exterids over Seriza. However, there is another-known; the name of Eygur, more special and appropriate, which refers to those of Ithassurr, given, to this nation; and Ithagurus, a mountain of the country. It must be added,

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

held separate courses towards the north. This river, on the frontier of China, is represented with conformity to these circumstances, as a doubie stream under the name of Etziné. Now the reigning city in all áges, on this frontier, hd̀ving been Kan-tcheou, and these, natural features corresponding withal, it must uncoubtedly represent the capital of Serica: "This city, whose name appears under the form of Camp:tion, in Marco-Polo, commanded, as he expresses $i t$, the country of Tangut: and if this, country make at present a part of the Chinese province of Shefi-si, it must be observed that in Kan-tçheou resides a. particular guvernor;' independent of the viceroy of the province. It was heretofore the residence of princes of a powerful nation, mentioned in Chinese history under the name of Hoei-hé; and the sciences were there cultivated. A remarkable circumstance in its position is; having the latitude well, ascertained by observation, in our days, to a fraction of a degree, the same with that of Sera in Ptolemy; who appears to have been accurately informed of some particular parallels in the east.

We see, in Ptolemy, Serica confining upon a counntry of the Sine, between the east and south: a circum, stance that requires expianation, to prevent à confusion with a country of the same name, which will appear in this work, annexed to the article of India, without de viating from the order that Ptolemy bas observed in the arrangement of the same objects. 'History, which must often illustrate geography, will show us who were the Sina contiguous with Serica, far distant from the Sind beyond the Ganges. Shen-si, bordepite on Serica, come prised, about eight hundied years before the Christ

SECT. IX.
SCYTHIA ASIATICA, &C.
æra, a kingdom called".Tsin; and it must be believed that it is by. comparison with this kingdom of Tsin, that, in Chinese books the country to the west, and of greater extent, is called Ta-Tsin, or the Great Tsin. For, besides that the. Chinese do not designate their country by this name, it is well known that their pride will not suffer it to be compared with any other. The name of Tsin, comprised in Shen-si, was preserved by the western people whom commerce brought. ačross. Serica. Moreover, the situation which we discover here to be that of Serica, by an immediate succession of anterior regions, and by a rigorous application of places reported in this country to those locally correspondent, is not that which it has been made to take: the northen part of China having been hitherto thought to represent it, while the position of Sera has been transported to Pekin, three hundred leagues distant from that which actually belongs to it.-Antiquity publishes extraordinary things concerning the Seres: such as two hundred years of life, an unalterable love of justice, aversion from war, and no taste for the arts. But though this last circumstance may enter into the character of a Scythian nation, we are not to form the same judgment of those which precede.

The ancients appear to have had a false idea of silk; the name of which having an evident analogy to that of Serica, it may not be improper to enter into a brief disquisition of the subject here. The ancients describe it to be a kind of white wool growing on the leaves of a tree, from which it was disengaged for carding by means of a suffusion of water. This seems to be a plat ${ }^{\overline{1}}$ sible error, the description resembling what appears in a Chinese memoir concerning Eygur; that in this coun: try:is a tree producing a species of fruit, from which is drawn a thread very white and very fine.* However this may be, there is mention of "the silk-worm, under the name of Ser, in a writer of the second century; though this worm was reputed Indian, because it was from India that silk was immediately brought into the west.

SECTION THIRTEENTH.

INDIA ET SIN I,

T'HE TWO PENINSULAS,AND COCHIN CHINA.
India is the most extensive part of ancient Asia, as it is one of the most celebrated. Sciences and polity are found among the Indians from the earliest time in which the country was known. The enterprises of Cy rus, and of Darius son of Hystaspes, on India, preceded by an expedition of Semiramis, and by that attributed to Dionysius or Bacchus, have afforded to the west no particular knowledge of this country. Nor did Europe acquire any geographical acquaintance with India till the invasion of it by Alexander. It was under Seleucus Ni.cator, who, in the dismemberment of the empire of this conqueror, saw all the east under his dominion, that this continent was explored to the Ganges, and the bounds which the sea prescribed to it on the south were ascertained by navigators. But. navigation and commerce, more favourable still than war to the extention of the -İ not cotton here the subject of disquisition?

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Alèxander, in his expedition for India, departed from the Alexandria founded at the descent of the Paropamise, when advancing towards Bactriana, as we have shown above. The oriental geographers agree that this Alexandria is Kandahar, a place'often disputed between Persia and India. But the analogy of which they speak. in this denomination cannot be acquiesced in, since the name of Kandahar seems to come from the ancient Pet: sian term Kohund, or, by abbreviation, Kond or Kand, denoting a fortiess.-After a river named Conhes, which may be that in the environs of Kandahar; the Coas, or • the Cohes, which Alexander met with, is known by its actual name of 'Cou.-The nation of $\mathcal{A s p i i}$, and a river under the name of Euasfila, which is not mentioned elsewhere, are beyond; then follow the Gurai, and the river Guraus - The $\ddot{\text { Assaceni, who succeeded, are found }}$ by the knowledge acquired of a particular canton and city named Ash-nagur, the last' member of the name being a term in the Indian language common to principal cities. Now this canton being beyond that which has been for some time known under the name of Ca bul, and even beyond the city of Devava more recently' known, it must be the region given between the river. Choas and the nation of the Assaceni. This interval is intersected both by the river of Cabul, called Behat or of Spices, otherwise Hezare, or the Thousandth, and by that which passes by Devava. Actual information of* Ash-nagur places this city at the confluence- of the Behat and the Sind: and this is the first indication that we. have of the Indus, whose source must thus be in the north-west angle of India, in the province named Kaka.
ner.*-There is found in Ptolemy, between the Coas and the Indus, a river named Suastus, communicating. to a canton the name of Suastene; and although there be no other mention of it in antiquity, modern geography knows a river and a canton named Suvat, which is evidently the same. It must be observed, at the same time, that the information thus acquired places the region and the river of Suvat beyond the sind, which we have met with. On the other hand the position of $B a$ risadis, which in the march of Alexander preceded the passage of the Indus, and which the return of Timur. from his expedition in India makes known by the name Berudgee, would intimate that the river called Indus is not the Sind hitherto, but the Tchenav, which.issues from Kashmir, and at whose confluence with the preceding Indus the city of Attock is situated.-The advantage of the situation of Attock, and some analogy in this: denomination, which seems preceded by an article in the oriental manner, concur to represent Taxila, the most considerable city in this part of India-On the Suvat, at its entrance into the Sind, the name of Renes has a manifest affinity with that of Aornos, the famous

* In the country called Souhad by Rennel, who, though he differs from M. D'Anville in many of his names, agrees exactly with him in the latitude and longitude of the sources of the Sind, and in the direction of the mountains which cover them. But the disagreement may be easily reconciled, by observing the great diversity of popular names for the same objects in Hindoostan, occasioned by the frequent revolutions and conquests which this unhappy country has suffered.

Z 2
rock in the submission of which Alexander thought his glory interested. Modern geography indicates another place of similar situation, under the name of Tche hin-kot, below Attock, in the angle formed by the cou= fluence of the Cou with the Sind. As it is said in his. tory that Embolima was a city in the vicinity of Aornos, and as the position of this city in Ptolemy appears in'whe neighbourhood of the Coas and Indus, and tower than Taxila, Tchehin-kot rather than Renas should represent Aornos. But when we read in Strabo that Aornos is towards the sources of the Indus, we shall be more inclined to apply to it the position of Renas.-It is deened necessary to explain also the circumstances that regard Castira, placed in Kashmir. It is given as a principal city, communicating its name to a country; but placed according to Ptolemy more towards the centre of India than Kashmir. An evident analogy in the names is a presumption of identity; and it can hardly be believed that the knowledge of this country, so celebrated in $\mathrm{In}_{\mathrm{r}}$ dia for the amenity of its aspect, was unknown to the ancients. And yet, in the detail of the marches of Aléx $\dot{x}-$ ander, we see nothing resembling what distinguishes the situation of this region, encompassed by mountains. -On this side of the Indus, Nysa was a city whichmerited to be known to Alexander. Its foundation is attiributed to Dionysius or Bacchus, in his expedition from: India, and Indian traditions mention $\mathcal{N} y s a d a-b u r a m$; that is to say, the city of Nysa and of a hero who issued from.it. Ptolemy gives the position of it under the name of $\mathcal{N a g a}$ ra; adding that its name is also Dionysioholis Nagar, or, Nagur, is known to be an Indian term for a city of the first rank; and modern geography recognises this espe.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SECT. XIIT.
ârived at the Indus. These circumstances seem the more worthy to be reported here, as the knowledge.resulting from them is not supplied by any modern memoir that has hitherto appeared.-We are not sufficiently acquainted with the shores of the Hydaspes to a ascer-. tain what positions hold the place of Bucefhalq. and $\mathcal{N i}$ caa, cities founded by Alexander in memory of his horse, and of the victory won from Porus. . Butrá com= mon distance given in the ançient itinerary measure of India with regard to Laitcôr, fixes these cities upoñ the same radius, on opposite sides of the rivels. And the city which is here assumed as a central point, shóuld we written Lahora, instead of Tahora, as it appears in the document called the Theodosian Table.—Sangala, be: tween the Hydreötes and the Hyphasis, after having retarded the piogress of Alexander in suffering a siege, was totally subverted by that conqueror. Sangala is found! in Ptolemy with the name of Euinymedia also: ,but we would fain read it Euthydemia, after a Greek who dịirected a successful insurrection in Bactriana against the Sele $\bar{u}_{\bar{q}}$ cidæ, and pushed his conquest deeply into India, where heve-established a city under his own name, On the furthershore of the Hyphasis Alexander evected. Altars as a monumental term of his progress eastward. A little beyond-these is a position merixing-notice, under the name of Serinda. This name is cited as national in the ,history of Julian; for, we find there both the Indi and the Ser-Indi: and it was from Serinda that silk was brought to Justinian. In the modern name of this places, which is Serhend, there ought to be remarked the name proper to Serica, combined, with that which in the oriental'geography is used to denote India.- The course of the Acesines conducted Alexander into the canton occupied by the powerful nation of the Malli, to which that of the Oxydraca was contiguous. It can scarcely be doubted that Mol-tan, or Multan, a considerable city, represents the capital"of the first:; and it is thought that a fragment of the name of the second is discovered-in the form of Outché, on the Indus, above the confluence of the Acesines. But to an Alexandria founder on the point of this confluence, modern observation affords nothing applicable.

It remains that we pursue the course of the Indus to its issue in the sea. The royal city of the Sog"di, which Alexander met with in descending this river, and which was renovated by him, can be no other than Bukor, which has served for the residence of the kings of this country. Limited to a holm, the towns, or suburbs rather, Sukor and Louhri, accompany it on opposite shores.-The name of Sindo-mana, composed of that of the river itself, is applicable to the position of a city. which immediately succeeds the preceding.-A stream emanating from the Indus to rejoin it below, incloses a spacious island named Prasiane, or the Verdant.-We are instructed that Minagara, the principal city of the country, and situated on this river, is the-sadme with alMansora, which, as appears by the oriental geography, bore the name of Minheare; before it fell under the Mohammedan power, in the khalifat of al-Manssor, the second of the Abbassides.-The Indus, in approaching the sed, divides itself into two arms; and at the angle of this division, a city named Patala gave the name of $P a$ tulene to the island which these branches describe. This situation corresponds with that of Tatta-nagar, and the name of latta is sometimes extended to the pro－ vince：but it must be said that this province is more fre－ quently denoted in the name of Sind，borrowed from that of the river．And this name of bind is moreover continued from the mouths of the Indu＇s towards the west in Gedrosia，comprising the territories of the Ara－ bita and Orita＇hefore nientioned－The Barbaricum $\mathrm{Os}_{8}$－ tium is the prifcip．l mouth，and that which is on the right in descending；and the Emhorium：of the same name corresponds with the position of Debil，or Divl－ Sindi，－That of Xylenoholis，or the City of－IVood；the construction of which is attributed to Alexander，who ．visited the left branch as well as the right，is applied to the porrt of Laheri，only on the single presumption of local conformity The part of India which we have hi－ therto traversed，being that wherein history requires the most illustration from geography；we have endeavoured to detail in a manner that will be found sufficient to fix the principal objects of historic circumstances．As to the name of Indo－Scythia，given to all the countíy to－ wards the lower part of the Indus；there is reason to be－ lieve that the dominion established in India by the Greeks of Bactriana，was destroyed by an eruption of the Scythians of the countries of Gete，who thus impart－ ed to the name of their own nation：and we observe in Cherefeddin＇s account of the expedition of Timur，the remains．of a numerous people of the name of Geté，sub－ sisting in the centre of India．

The Ganges，although of more considerable magni．． tude than the Indus，turnishes not so great a number of positions known to antiquity．．Its sources，＇and the up－ per part of its course，to the point where it changes from

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page bar made his capital in the sixteenth century; Metho: ra on the Gemné in Matura, which a celebrated pagoda or Indian temple distinguishes; and Sambalaca on the Ganges, in Sanbal.' The name of Scandrabatis in Ptolemy differs little from that of Scanderbad in the country, as proper to a city which in distant ages was a capital.—Descending the Gạnges', we see in 'Ptolemy a position between the arms by which this vast river disemDogues its waters; named Gange Regia. But if the.general want of precision observed on the part of Ptolemy permit us to ascribe to this a city corresponding more in moral than in local circumstances, it would be thät of Raji-mohol, near the first division of the river into two principal arms. The name of this city distinguished. it as a legal residence, while the vestiges of antiquity in its environs are evidences of its faded splendor. - As to the mouths of this river, the Magnum Ostium of Ptolemy can only correspond with the spacious entrance most frequented by Europeans, which conducts towards a place well known under the name of Hougly.

To thăt which hitherto constitutes the north of India, succeeds the southern part, on this side of the Ganges. And this subject will lead us back to take our departure from near the mouths of the Indus. In the bottom of the gulf which receives this river, called Canthi Sinuo, now the Gulf of Sineli, the name of a river which is Pa dar is intimately analogous to that of Orbadari, given to a city in Ptolemy.—Up this river, we discover in the city of Asmer, a position named Gagasmira.-The maritime country of Soret is that which we find to have been named Syrastene. -Islands on one side of the gulf preserve in their names of Barseti, or Balseti, that of Ba-: race.-What Ptolemy calls Larice, corresponds with Guzerat; and the name of Lar is found applied to the peninsula which comprehends a great part of this coun-try.-Among the positions recognised therein, that of Baleocuri-regia is particularly interesting. The sovereign which this name designates, is celebrated as equally potent and węl respected among the Indian princes, in the oriental writings; where the title which distinguishes him, rather than a proper name, is read Balahara. Cambay, at the bottom of a gulf, was the

[^11]SECT. XIII.
INDIA ETSINF.

* port to the place of his residence; as this town is still to Amed-abad, the capital of Guzerat.-Ozene, another royal city, appears in the name of Ugen; and Mandiade$m i$ in that of Mandoủ, which is a considerable fortress. - Returning towards the coast, wé find Barygaza to have been, in relation to Indian commerce, what Cambay has since been, and what Surat is at present. This city is well known to be Barokia, or Berug, as the Persians çall it.-In a situation conformable to that of Su . rat, that is to say, at some distance from the'sea, the Wiyer Nerbedah, which passes it, is found in Ptolemy under the name of Namadus'-What is now called the Gulf of Cambay, was named Barygazenus Sinus.

We penetrate now into that part of India which, b́eing projected between two seas, is considered as a peninsula. The author of a description of the coasts of the Erythrean Sea, informs us that what extends beyond

- "Barygaza towards the south, is called in the country Dachanabades; because Dachan, among the Indians, signifies 'the south: and the last member of the word evidently refers to a Persian term, which it is common to see employed "at the end of proper names of cities in 'India as well as in Persia. The denomination denoting the sonth, may be observed to subsist in that of Decan,
- or, according to the Indian pronunciation Daken. The intelligence of this country will appear limited to maritime places.-Antiquity speaks of pirates who still subsist under the name of Angrias; and whose principal retreat is a place named Vizindruk, in a small island near the coast. Muziris, mentioned as a place much frequented, appears to have been this position; oppósite "to which is a place named Giria.-The country adjacent 'to this coast was called Limyrica, and obeyed another prince than Baleocur; and whose residence, named Carura, at a distance, from the sea, may be iepresented by a city in a similar situation, called Kauri.—Nelcynda was approached by means of a river whose name of Baris is found in that of Bardez, appropriated to a district bordering on one of the canals which environ the isle of Goa; and by which a river called Ganges, as an appellative term, communicates with the sea. This place was 'among the dependencier: of a prince'called Pandion, whose government extended hence to the southern extremity of the peninsula. Vessels of a single piece of wood brought to this port the pepper of a'canton named Cottonara, which is easily recognised in Canara.-A port under the name of Elancon may belong to that which is cited as a kingdom on this coast under the name of Eli, in Marco-Polo, and distinguished by and

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

thones，or men in a position opposite to those in the known hemisphere．Ptolemy，better informed；añd re－ ducing 「Taprobana to an island；with some＇particulars remarkably correspondent in＇actual＇circumstances， makes this island nevertheless about five times＂möre spacious than it really is．Strabo speuks of it as though it lay off the hither coast of India，looking towards the continent of Africa．The name of Salice，which we learn from Ptolemy to be the native devomination for this island，is preserved in that of Selen－dive，com－ pounded of the proper name of selen，and the appella－ tive for an island in the Indian language；and it is appa－ rent that the name of Ceilan，or Ceylon，according to the European usage，is only an alteration in orthogra－ phy．－－The river called Ganges，which falls into the sea on the eastern coast，is evidently that which is recogni－ sed for the most considerable，under the name of Mowil Ganga．－－The name of Malea，attributed to the moun－ tains of the island by Ptolemy，is the generic term of Malei，used in the maritime part of the neighboring continent．－The vestiges which the islanders call Shin－ gulais，and report to be those of a great and magnificent city，under the name of Anarodgurro，represent Anuro－ grammum，which Ptolemy distinguishes as a royal city． －The posllion of Maagrammum，with the title of capi－ tal，corresponds with that of the present residence of the sovereign，and known by the name of Candi．－There is mention in Piny of another royal city，whose name of Palcesimundum is remarkable，forasmuch as the name of Simundi is given to Taprobana by some authors of anti－ quity．Here resided a king，from whom the emperor Claudius received an embassy：and from an extensive lake adjacent to this city, as well as from other circumstances in its situation, it is believed to be represented by that which in the north of the island is named Jafna-patam.-The islands which Ptolemy places off Taprobana, to the number of thirteen hundied and seventy, can be no other than the Mal-dives, although known to be much moie numerous.

We must now resume the coast of the continent, and remount to the Ganges; departing from the promontory which we have seen to be Cagliamere.-Nigama, which Ptolemy distinguishes as a capital, is Negapatam.-Chaberis, a city and river, appear obviously in Caveripatam, on one of the mouths of that river which communicates to this city its name of Caveri.* The denomination which in the usage of Europeans is Coromandel, being actually Sora-Mandalam, indicates what in Ptolemy is called Paralia Soretanum, or the maritime country of Sora Arcot, the principal city in what is called the Car. natic, is the same with Arcati, a royal city of Ptolemy; and as he adds to it the name of Sora, it is proper to remalk that, among the Indians, the title of the sovereign of the cointry is Soren.-Maliarpina is represented by Meliapur, a city heretofore powerful; although the im. portance of this place, possessed by the Portuguest under the name of St. Thomas, is now superseded by the adjacent establishment of the English at Madras. - The [^12]names of the river Mesolus, and of the country Mesolia, in Ptolemy, seem, to be preserved in that of Masulipatam, of which the last member is a generic term for a city in this part of India. We are inclined to believe that Palura is represe by Sipeler, which a celebrated pagoda distinguishes. Polemy places in its environs a point which made a landmark in steering towards the Golden Chersonese, but which it is singular enough to see farther south than Cape Comorin.-Resuming our course northward, we find Cocala in Sicacola.-Calinga, and the nation of (alingre, who extended as far as. the mouths of the Ganges, ate recognised in the name of Calinga-patam.--On the arm of another river with which canals of the Ganges are known to communicate, and which bears the same name of Ganga, as an appellative term, another position called Palura corresponds with that of Balasor; with which we shall conclude the detail of what we deem most remarkable in this extre. mity of the hither India.

Beyond the Ganges it must be premiscd, that tolPto; lemy the ancient geography is indebted for the principal circumstánces which will be found susceptible of illus: tration by the modern.- A river which immediately succeds the eastern issue of the Ganges, under the name of Catabeda, can be no other than that of Shatigan. -The places of Sada and Berabonna, which precede ä point formed by the bending of the coast towards the east, are remarkable for affinity in name with those of Sedoa and Barabon: and this point called Temala is evidently that of Negrais, insulated by arms of a river of the same name.-Sabara, which succeeds, and which gives the name to a gulf formed by a reflection of the

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
between $Z a b a$ and Thagora, is the great cape of the Malay territory, between Saban, or Saber, and Tingoran. A position much anterior to the great promontory, and named Perimula, must consequently be applied to Pera or Perac, on the Strait of Malacca; the entrance of which might have given occasion to Ptolemy to imagine a gulf called Perimulicus. We are indebted to him for indicating the name of Malay in that of Mleu-colon, applied to a particular point.-The Magnus Sinus, which by a sudden elevation of the coast towards the north in Ptolemy, as in the actual geography, succeeds immediately, is, with the fullest evidence of which the subject is susceptible, the Gulf of Siam.-The great river which Ptolemy leads to the western shore of this gulf, under the name of Daona, is that from which the city of Tanaserim, or Colony of Tana, borrows its name; and which is known to terminate its course not in the gulf of Siam, but in that of Bengal.-But another considerable river, formed by the union of two streams, having its mouth in the bottom of the Magnus Sinus. can only be the Menan of the country of Siam, and whose name is appella. tive in this country for a river of the first magnitude, as Ganges and Sind are elsewhere.-Reflecting on the particular circumstance of the combination of two rivers concurring with that of the name of Seri, appearing at its entrance in one of the earliest maps of the modern geography, we may conclude it to be the Serus of antiquity. It is a little beyond the mouth of this river that Ptolemy establishes the confines of India without the Ganges, with a country which we think merits a separate treatise.

But before entering upon this subject, we must re-INDIAETSINE.
mark that the isles that we have left in a tract of sea, which, under the name Gangeticus Sinus, is infallibly the Gulf of Bengal. To answer to Bazucata (whose inhabitan's were naked, placed opposite the coast which tends to the south towards Cape Temala or Negraïs, modern geography recog̣nises Chedu: é, inhabited by savages of the nation of Mogos, wherewith the kingdom of Aracan, on the continent is peopled.-Falther on, the Bona Fortuna Insule which some navigator who had the fortune to escape the cruelty of the Anthropophagi who inhabit them might have thus named, can be no other than the great Andaman._Of the same description of Savages were those who inhabited the little isles of Maniole, which being placed adjacent to the precedent towards the south, correspond precisely with those of which the principal is named Chique Andaman.- $\underline{B} \alpha$ russia, Sinda, Sabadiba, also attributed to cannibals, succeeded in the same order that is observed in the isles of Nicobar, assembled into many clusters, which are divided by spacious channels. The last of these, which are described as near an ultimate land named Jabadii Insula, must be Pulo-Wai, opposite the head of Sumatra. It may be remarked that the Malay term of Pulo has succeeded that of Div, or Dib, employed in' the name , $f$ Sabadiba: and that the notice of their number, which is three, is found to be correct.-Ptolemy had indeed an idea that the Jabadii Insula contained a'greater space than the precedent isles; for he finds in it two degrees of the meridian on the same parallel, instead of limiting himself to a single degree of latitude and longitude, as in each article of these isles. And this distinction shows an evident relation to the manner in which Sumatra pres sents itselfin the sequence; of the isles included in the Gulf of Bengal. The site of the capital, which is the western point, corresponds witb that occupied by Ashem: and though this capital is called Argenta by Ptolemy, he nevertheless specifies the opulence in gold which distinguisbes Sumotra, but whose southern extremity remained unknown to this geographer.

Sin-re. We have seen the India beyond the Ganges terminated at the head of the Magnus Sinus, or the Gulf of Siam, by limits which, separate it from the country of the Sina. It is evident in modern geography, that these limits are the same that separate Siam from Came boja. Wie know that this country, and Cochin-China which is contiguous, occupy a great tract of land which the sea envelops on three sides, from the east to the west by the south. The exterior limits of the farther India were the barriers of the world, when Ptolemy passed them, and described a remoter country, till then unknown by name. But he amplifies its longitude a whole hemisphere, to arrive at a term, which is known much less remote. Counting from the meridian of the Eortunate Isles as, we do, he advances to 148 degrees, or more, the eastern arm of the Ganges; which, by astronomical observations of our days made on the western arm of that river, is fixed at about 10 g degrees: hence it results, that by a proportionate reduction, the $180^{\circ}$ of Ptolemy only hold the place of $130^{\circ}$. And the ulterior part respecting the Ganges must suffer a still greater diminution, because the observations made at Siam only add ten degrees and a half to the longitude from the mouth of the Ganges, in a space where Ptolemy employs more than twenty, degrees. If it then be remark-give to the sea which involves this country, is a derivation from the same name. This name of Sin has followed the progress of navigation and commerce, beyond the true limits of the ancient country of Sin; having been extended by the Portuguese, who preceded the other western nations in these remote longitudes, and became common among those which have followed. And that the country of Sina ought not to be transported to China, as it appears in all the maps which have preceded those of M. D'Anville, is an article in ancient geography which may justify the foregoing discussion.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

The capital of the Sines is named Thyna by Ptolemy; and according to the Latin version, which is regarded as a text, Sire. Its position appears at a distance from the sea, at the mouth of a river named Cotiaris, having communication on the left with another river, whose name was Senus. This then can be no other than the great river of Camboja; which, eighty leagues above its. mouth, divides into two branches. The principal, or that of the right corresponding with the Cotiaris, and which is called the Japanese river, conducts to a city of which the Arabian geographers speak as being celebrated for its commerce, under the name of Loukin; and this position appears to answer to that of Thine, in Ptolemy. But the city of the Sines, named Sin by the Arabian geographers, and the Chinese nemoirs Tehen-tehen, is a position more remote than Loukin, and is found distinguished bv the name of Sin-hoa, as having been the most flourishing city of Cochin-China before its port was destroyed by alluvions of sand. The name of Thoan hoa, which its district bears, seems, together with the other circumstances reported, to favour the application of the name of Thince to this city also. Thine is mentioned diversely in'many authors of antiquity.-In Ptolemy, two promontories succeed on the eastern shore of the Magnus Sinus; Notium, or the southern, and Sati-' rorum, or that of the satyrs. Opposite this last are little isles of the same name, which the Arabian geographers;', as well as Ptolemy, people with a species of animals furnished with tails, as satyrs are represented. Apes of a stature almost human, in the little isles named Pulo Condor, situated in the distance-opposite the mouth of the river Camboja, may have caused them to be so called. But that a single point of position for three little isles in Ptolemy should be transposed to the islands of Japan in the maps, is an error too gross to be passed unnoticed. Can it be conceived that Ptolemy carried his observation thus far, when so limited was his intelligence of this extremity of the ancient world, that he.represents; as succeeding the promontory of the satyrs, a prolongation of the coast, which, turning to the, west, proceeds to join the western coast of Africa, and thus makes the Erythrean Sea a basin that has no communication with theOcean? Were it here proper to examine the state of geography in different ages, it would appear that this error existed more than a thousand years àfter Ptolemy, although the maritime commerce was maintained under the Moslem princes. But it is sufficient to have shown how much the limits of ancient Asia should be contracted.

SECT:XIII. INDIAETNINE.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
writings is Misraim，which it owes to one of the sons of Cham：and it retains the name of Missir or Mesr under the Turks．There－appears on doubt that the náme of Copt；which distinguishes the remains of the original na： ＇tion from＇the Arabs；who are in great numbers in the country，and from the Turks，who rule it，is in the form of Kypt（which is the proper modification of it）no other than the root of the Gireek name $\overline{E g}$ gytur．

To this introduction we shall add what concerns the distinction of the severat regions of $\mathbb{E}$ gypt；capitally di： vided into Superior and Ilferior．This－last partition is comprehended within the two principal branches of the Nile from its division to its mothth；and the triangular Ggure of a Gieek letter which it resembles̃，has ocea－ sioned it to be called the Delta：But it must be added that＂the country of 质gutitus Infirior surpasses both on－ the east and west the natural limits of the Delta，and is now called Bahri，and Rif；both which terms signify in the Airabic a district boridering on the sea．As țo $\boldsymbol{E}$ gythtus Supherior，we find it separated from the ptecedent by a particular province，whose name of Hepta－nomis de－ notes it to have been composed of the union of seven districts or prefectures，which in Egypt are called Nomes，of which more than fifty are distinguished in the detail which antiquity furnishes of this country；and whereof thirty are as old as the reign of Sesostris．The distinction of this provincestill subsists in the name of Vostani，which expresses in Arabic an intermediate space，as relating to Bahri on one side，or Said，or the superior country on the other．Towands the cata ract which formed the boundary of 座gypt and ancient压hiopia，a territory oved to the famous Thebes its proper denomination of．Thebais：such was the＇ancient division of ．Egypt．But，in the multiplication of the provinces of the empire，what lower 厌gypt possessed， beyond the arm of the Nile，which discharges itself be－ low the modern position of Damiat，composed in the fourth century a province under the name of Augustam－ nica；and the name of Egy／tus remained distinctive of the rest．Under Justinian，we see the Augustamnic di－ vided into two；first and second；this maritime，and that inlànd．Corresponding with the ancient Augustamnica， is the modern district of Sharkie，so called from the Arabic term Shark，denoting the east，to distinguish it from another district，situated beyond a catial of the ri－ ver，and named＇Garlie，frome the term Garh，signifying the west．The Hehta－inomzs took under Arcadius，son． of the great Theodosius，the name of Arcudia：Finally we see the Thebaïd in a posterior age divided into two， Anterior and Suferior，according to the terms which we find employed to distinguish the se parts．－To treat of fegypt in detail，we deem it expedient to depart from the shore of the sea，as less remote，and ascend the Nile towaids Æthiopia． －Egyptus lnfẹrior－Thiṣ division extends along the sea，according to the limits assigned to it by Hero－ dotus，from a gulf to which a place：called Plinthine comminicates the name of Pliuchinetes，as far as Mount Casius，adjacent to the Srrbonic． Bug－On the point of what is now called the Gulf of Arabş，「unosixis is indi－ cated in Abousir．－To soine other obscure places suc－ ceeds the site of Alexanaria．A ling and narrow isle named Pharos，was there j ，ined to the continent by a B• $\mathbf{b}$ dyke or causey, which, from its definite length was named Hefta-Stadium. It separated the two ports of the city, which was bounded by lake Mareötis on the other side. The advantage of ihis situation, on a shore to which nature has given no other port, determined Alexànder to found a city on the site of a more ancient place named Rhacotis, und which continued to distinguish the quarter of the city from which the causey ves protracted. Another quarter of grêater extent, named Briuchion, on the principal of the two ports, comprised several palaces which the Ptolemies inhabited. The power to which Alexandria arrived, in becoming the great mapt 'for exchange between"- the East and West, is well known. And this advantage principally arose from its local circumstances. "To satisfy a curiosity which the reader may have to be better acquainted with a:city of the first rank in the ancient world, he is referred to an appropriate treatise on Egypt, by M. D'Anville, con. taining, with a topographical plan minutely exact, a description much more čircumstantial than can be admitted here. It will be seen that an accumulation of earth formed about. the Hohtastadium is the site of the modern city; and that an inclosure which must have been posterior to the age of antiquity, contains scarcely any thing but ruins.-The lake Marrölis, which does ${ }_{>}$not press upon the city so closely as it-did heretofore, preserves its name in the form of Birk Mariout.-At a little dis. tance' from Alexandria, and on the same shore, a place whose name of $\mathcal{N i}$ cofiolis commemorated an advantage obtained by Augustus over Antony, is now changed into Kasr Kiasera, or the Castle of the Cæsars.-Farther on, Canópus, a'place condemned for the licentious morals

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

aries give to a great city that has taken the name Foun:-The Milesians, ascending the Nile, had founded a city named $\mathcal{N a u c r a t i s . - S a i s ~ i s ~ m e n t i o n e d ~ a s ~ t h e ~ c a p i - ~}$ tal of this part of the inferior Egypt, where a place still bëars the name of Sa.- Taua retain's the same name. - , Nicii having the first rank in a Nome called Prosopiités, discovers itself in the name of Nikios.-The isle ProsoAitis, forined by two canals, had a city which, under the name of Alarbéchis; was consecrated to Vinús; and atiother where the Athenians sustained a-long siege from the Persians, andiwhose name of Byblos appears in that of Babel.- At the su rinit of the Delta the Nile divides into three channels, there being an intermediate one be: tween the two principal branches. To this canal is joined, among other derivations, one issuing from the river arlittle below the position of Sebennyiuis, which subsists in the mame of Scmenud. The continuation of these: canâls, re-united in a great lake, which from the city of Butus on its southern shore was called Buticus, takes at 'the aperture of this lake its, issue in the sea, under a place named Paralus, or Berelos: and this issue is the Sebennytichim Ostium.- This maritime cart being ex. tremèly fenny, was called Elearchia; and in this fastness an Rgyptian prince maintained himself against the Peisian forces, in the reign of Artaxeryes the Long-hand-ed.-Vestiges of a city called Tekebi in the Coptic books, ${ }^{\circ}$ seem to be the same with Pachnaminnis; and Onuthis is represented by a place named Banub.-Busiris and $X<\ddot{z} s$ were cities of note on the river a little above Semennud: the first is known in the name of Busir;' and the second, situated in an isle, could not have been far distant. - To the Sebennytic mouth succeeds

SECT. I.
EGYPTUS.
the Phatniticum Ostium, and this, which in the time of antiquity yielded in magnitude only to the Canopic and Pelusiac mouths, is now one of the principal emissions of the river a little below Damiat. - The name of Tami: athis, mentioned in an age which immediately precedes the termination of the object of ancient geography, appears a modification of Damiat.-The three eastern. mouths, including the Pelusiac, are received before their communication with the sea, into a egreat lagune or pool, whose name is not mentioned byany aneient writer; but which the places Manzale and Tennis now cause to be designated b́y their names. - The Mendesium Ostiun, now called Dibe, and by the Franks Pesschiera, derivedits name from 'Mer'des; and this city, as well, as' that of Thmuis, according to the concurring testimony of the learned, owe their respective denominations to the goat whic $_{h}$ was there adored. The position of Ashmun-Tanah may represent the first, and abundant vestiges of the second appear to preserve the name of it in the form of Tmaié - Panchhysis mưst also be mentioned, in a-situ: ation ajacent to the lake; circumstance that justifies therapplication also of the name Diosholis's to its And of cities appearing: under two names, the one Eyptian, the other Greek; there are several examples througha out 庣gyt. The place now most considerable oñ this margin of the lake, is Manzale.-Tanis, a royal. city, whose name appears Zoan in the Scriptures, preserves, though abandoned to a few shepherds, vestiges in the name of San, not far from-that aperture of the lake named Taniticum Ostium, but now' called Eummé-farreg: gé.-Tennesüs, of which there is not mention till an age posterior to the first antiquity, is an insular position in the lake itself, arid now called Tennis. That of Sethron on the lake, towards the Pelusiac channel, manifests the position of Sethrum, other'wise' called ‘Heracleofolis Parva.

Pelusium, the bulwark and the key of ancient elgypt, is now known by its ruins in the Arabic name of Tineh, which supplies in signification its ancient đenomination, whereby the miry situation of this city was expressed. -Upon the coast, Mount Casius: of no great elevation, projects a promontory named Cape del Kas, or the Chisel; !and the adjacent place named Casium 'is "called. Ca-tieh-The Pálüs Sirbonis, which is in the vicinity, and where Typhon the murderer of Osiris is said to have: perished, has taken the name of Schaket Barloil, from the first king of Jerusalem of that name, 'who died on his return from an expedition in $\mathbb{E}$ g'ypt, at a placé call-ed-el-Arish, the ancient R Rinocorura; whither this frontier extended, having encroached on the former limits of the Philistine country-Ostracine, which had a position less remofe, is indicated by a fragment of its name in a point called Straki. - "The'entrance of a ravine into the Sirbonian Pool, receiving the pluvial watérs of mány torrents, which cone from the desert comprised in the extent of Arabia Petiza, is the Torrens $\notin E_{g}^{4} y / t i$ of the 'Scriptures; which; according to Saint Jerome', passes between Rhinocorura and Pelusium. This canton, cover. ed with deep and moving sands, and called by the Arabs a for this reason al-Giofar, has in all ages rendered the approach to $K$ sypt in this quartet, extremely difficult to: an enemy.. s.

Re-approaching the Nile, we recognise, in the interval of the Pelusiac and Tanitic channel, the position of

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
jection, was the site of Heroöpolis.-Thaubastum, which, by the means afforded us of ascertaining both one and the other position, is found to be very near, retains its name in the form of Habaseh, towards the head of the lake Sheib' before mentioned.

To finish the survey of Lower Egypt; we must turn towards the Nile. It is remarkable to find the Vicus Judcorum in the modern denomination of Tel-el-Iudieh, or the Hill of the Jewry; and to recognise there the site of a temple in which the Jews, offending against the law which denied their nation any other sanctuary thán that of Jerusalem, practised their worship during two hundred and forty-three years; to the reign of Vespr. sian.-A mong the places of the first rank was. Helionio. lis; so called from its primitive and Coptic denomination of On, which signifies the Sun. It was afterwards called by the Arabs Air-Shems, or the Fountain of the Sun, and it still preserves vestiges in a place named Ma-tarea, or Cool Water.-Babylon was an habítation formed by the Persians, which may with probability be referred to the time of the conquest of Egypt by Cambyses: : A quarter retaining the name of Baboul, or Ba . bilon, in the city commonly called Old Cairo; which overlooks the Nile at some distance above the Delta, shows its true position: and in the same'place was also distinguished a pyre or pile, consecrated to the worship of fire, according to the religion of the Persians. . It is immediately below, that the $K$ halitz, which traverses $C a-$ iro, issues from the Nile. This canal, in an Arabian au-. thor who has written professedly on Egypt, bears the name of Adrian: and we know that this emperor was also called Trajan by adoption.

Heptanomis，postea Arcádia．Memphis is the first object that attracts our notice in this division of Egypt． It owed its foundation to a king＇in the first ages of ${ }^{\prime}$厌号pt named．Uchoreus，was a city predominant over all in．Egypt，before Alexandia was elevated to this ad－ vantage；and was situated on the western shore of the ： Nile，fifteen miles above the Delta．These indications are the only means afforded，us of ascertaining．its posi． tion．And by the knowledge of the combination and re． ciprocal use made of the itirerary measures proper to antiquity，those which we hàve Just cited are reconciled， as is fully shown in a work by M．D＇Anville，referred to above，in which 厌gypt is described mučh morě̌ cî̀rcum． stantially than the concise nature of this will．permit． The lapse of time had so impaired this great city＂when Strabo wrote，that he saw its palaces in ruins．It existed nevertheless about six hundred．years after；for，on the in＇． vasion of $\mathbb{x}$ gypt by the Arabs，itappears under the name－ of the country itself or Mesr．But vestiges of it；whick according to Abulfeda，were apparent－in the fifteenth century，are nó longer in being．－Divers canals derived from the Nile，separating Memphis from the anclent sepulchres and pyramids，furnished the Greeks ${ }^{\text {w }}$ with the idea of their infernal rivers Acheron，Cocytus，and Lethe． －On the bank of the Nile opposite to Memphis，a place which it is pretended was named＇，Troja by the Trojan＇s
 the analogous name of Tora．

The valley in which the Nile flows is contracted in this place by the mountain that reigns on the edstern side，under the name of Arabicus Mons；while it opens

C c

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

situation of the latter is not known; ánd we shall defer speaking of the greater till we treat of the Thebais, as being about the same height - On the right of the Nile, where the valley is closely contuacted by a mountain, Ahhröditopolis appears to correspond with a place now called Atfieh; and the name of Ibrit, which is given to its district, is only an alteration or that of its principal burg.-Remarkable grottos, hollowed in the mountain for- temples, near a place called Béni hassan may. have appertained to that of Sheos-Artemidos - Ihere remains on this side to be mentioned Antinoë,' which being primitively but an obscure place named - Besa', became a city whose vestiges manifest the magnificence of the Emperor Adrian, in perpetuating the memory of an infamous favourite. The, denomination of this city is now altered to Ensené; and a levered sepúlchre has also caused it to be calléd Shek-Abaclé.

届gyptus Superior, vél. Thebais. After having passed Cusu, now Cussie, in the Thebais, we find Lyconolis, or Lycôn, the City of Wolves; which, a lituerdistant from the Nile on the left, is still a place of consideration, under the name of Siut, or Osiot: A little beyond, vestiges of Hyjhselis are recognized in a place named Sciotb: Abotis subșists in Aboutig; and the ruins of Afollinis Minor Civitas are in a place named'Sedafé. On the other side, Selinon is found in the name of Silin; and Aintaopolis, so called from Antæus, who governed Libya"ând Æthiopia under Osiris, retains vestiges in a place named Kauil-Kubbara.-Ascending the river, we find the Egyptian denomination of Chemmis remaining in Ekmim, that of Panopolis or City of Pan, given to it by the Greeks, not having been adopted in the usage of the country.-Repassing the Nile, we observe Ahhroditofiolis, consecrated to Venus, and Crocodilopolis, to the Crocodile, in the ruins of tivo places named Itfu and Adribé.-Ptolemais, constructed under the dynasty of the Ptolemies, 'after'the manner of the Greek citics, became one of the most powerful in Upper Egypt, with the suruame of Herimii; the signification whereof is not known. It preserves vestiges in an inconsicleràblẹ pláce. named Menshié -̈Girgé, which, a little above it, is now. the principal cily of Said, doess not appear to häe ex: isted more than three hundred years; and the place which a city named $T h i s$ occupied in the earliest age, and in whose district Ptolemuis wâs founded, is unknown.Abydus, the residence of Memñòn, which was only inferior to the great Theैbes, is buried in its rưins, as its modern náme of Madfuné expresses; and its situation in being distant from the Nile is conformable to the testimony of antiquity concerning it.-Precisely on this parallel is thè Oasis: Magna. We know that those insulated spots of fertility in' the midst of a sandy main were call. ed Oases. This was a place of 'exile during thè Lower Fmpire: and it is characteristic of the imagination of the Greeks to have called it the Isle of the Blessed. The Oasis Magna is laid down in Mr. Bruce's map on the $\overline{2} 6 \mathrm{~h}$ degree of north latitude, under the name of ef Wah and-Shek Haled; and the Parva. Oasis: about half $a^{4}$ degree north of the greater, on the same meridian by the name of Gawah Garbieh.-At the summit of a sudden Hexure in the course of the Nile, Diosto iolis Parva was situated, in a place now called How:-Chenoboscion on the other side corresponds with the position named Case, Essaid, or the Castle of the Fisherman. - Towards the bottomi of the other replication of the river, on the left bank, Tentyra, heretofore anong- the most considerable cities, retains aburdañt-remains in the name of Dendera; and neaily opposite, Canopolis, or the New City; is representẹd by a plàcè now:named Kené. Cot tos, or according to its présent, formi Kypt, situated on a canal communicating with the Nile, became a great mart of commerce, by means of a road two hundrëd and fiftyseven'milès in length, made by Ptolemy Philadelphus; across the desert, to the port of Berenice, in the, Arabie" Gulf, where the commodities of India wete debarked*. This advantage, transported some centuriěs after, under the khalifs, to a place named Kous, on the same side of the river, caused this place; but inconsider blle bereto* fore under the name of, Afolinopolis Paria, to becoine the most powerful city of Said. -It is presumed that ${ }^{\text {a }}$

* The intermediaté pọsitions', ànd which hàve long since been overwhelmed by the sands, are-thus expressed in the Antonine utinerary:

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
name of Asphynis:-Latoholis, so 'called from the fish that was there adored, bears now the name of. Asna, which signifies illustrious.-Ruins of Apolinodnolis Mas$n a$ are recognised in a place named Edfu.- Fieracónto: .lis, a city consecrated io the hawk, was placed in, its vicinity; and, on the other side, Elcthyia, or the City of Lucina; had an altar on which human victims were im-molated.-The place of Silsilis is remarkable for the circumstance that, corresponding with what is named Gebel Silsili, or the Mount of the Chain, the shotés of the river are so contracted between two mountains às to? have induced the popular belief that there was a chain: extended fiom one to the other.-The position of $\mathrm{Om}^{2}$ $b o s$ is found in the name of Koum-Ombo, or the hith of Ombọ̆. At length we reach" Syene, "whose namè in its modern form, having the article prefixed, is "Assaun.-' The isle of Elephantine is : but half a Stadium distant from it; and the cataract is seven stadia above the isle. Of two cataracts this is the least; the greater being in Nubia. It is occasioned by the intervention of a $10^{\circ} \mathrm{ck}$, composed of two members, the first of easy declivity, and the second, though-more sudden, does not precipitate the water with such vehemence as to render the de. scent.impracticable to small boats. -Philoe is another isle, but above the cataract; and which, small as it is; af. forded quarters, together with Syene and Elephantine, to the cohorts that guarded this frontier of the Roman Empire:- It should here be mentioned, that the Basanites $M o n s$, distant from the Nile on the right, is remarkable for quarıies of hard and black stone, called Bâram, which furnished the 压gyptians. with ornamental vases; and household utensils.

SECT. I.
EGYPTUS.

We now return to survey the shore of the Arabic Gulf." At the extremity of its western horn, the position of $\boldsymbol{A r s i n o e}, \dot{\dot{w}}$ hich is also inentioned under the name of Cleonatris, corresponds with that of Suez.-Southward of that, on the same shore, is Ctysma, whose mo: detn name of Kolzum the Arabs have exiended to the whole gulf. F promontory turned in the figure of a scythe, was called for this reason Drehanum.-The My$0 \dot{s}$-hormos, or Port of the Mouse otherwise called $\dot{A}$ ifhrodites, or of Venus, is covered with little isles; bearing also the name of Ahhrodites: and their modern Arabic name of Sufangeuel-baniri, or the Sponge of the sea, has an evident andlogy' in its signification to the etymon of the Greek name. A nd the name of Suhh, applied to theArabic Gulf in the Scriptures is an appellative denoting àquatic plants.-The port which at preseut maintains the greatest correspondence with the country of Upper Ægypt, and called Coseïr, represents that named Philo: teras in antiquity.-The Smaragdus Mons appears to bé but little distant from the sea; being that called by the Arabs Maaden Uzzumurud, or the Mine of Emerals.A point; under the nanie of Lepita Extrema, is, judged to correspond with that called by the Arabs Ras-al-enf, or the Top of the Nose.-At the entrance of a gulf which immediately succeeds this point, was Beirenice, the port whereof the position of Coptos has given us occasion to speak: and the circumstance of its being laid down by the ancient geographers in the same latitude with'Syene, serves to ascertain its position. All this coast is inhabited by icthyofhagus Arabs, who had become save. age by contracting alliances with troglodytes, or dweller's. in caverns.

- SECTION SECOND.

ÆTHIOPIA,

NEBIA, ABYSSINIA, &C.

By asceending the Nile from the frontien rof $\not \subset g y p t$, 'we shall'penetrate into the heart of EXthiontia If recurrence be had to the several versions of the Scriptures, and to the testimonies of Josephus and St. Jerom, it will be found that the nane of Chuz, from the son of Chám, appertains to this counfry. That of India is ilso applied to it in several passages of the ancient writers. Ptolemy contracts it on the side of the west, because he indicates", under the name'ol Libyd Interior, that which, from 'a concatenation of local circuinstances, is judged more proper to be included in the present article. The same distinction in the face of the country, between the lands adjacent to the Nile and those which are distant from it, as' hās been remarked of $\notin g y p t$, prevails in the country immediately succeeding, under the modern name of $\dot{N} u$ bian; and this to.ncal character has continued as far as Abyssinia.-Aniong many places on the banks of the Nile we recognise $\rho_{\text {remis }}$ in the name of Ibrim, as the Turks pronounce it, who extended their dominion thus far. In Ptolemy, this place is distinguished by the adjunct of harva from another of the same name much more remote, which is now unk rown.- The great cata: ract, through a mountain called Genadel, is a little above Ibrim. "Thesc borders of the Nile were occupied by the Blemmyes, whose figures must have been extraordinary; as we read in some ancient authors, that men brought from

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

from Ialac to ascend by the Nile 'to this city; whose name inathe Arabian geography of Edıisi, is. Nualia, and common also to the country, as Meroe was in antiquity. . 尼yptians banished by Psammitichus, and called Sebridar, or Strangers, obeyed a queen in possession of the kingdom of Meroé.-Farther on, at some distance east of the course of the Tacazzé, was Auxume, a royal ci$y$; which has preserved, with the name of Axum, some remains of those edifices that decorated the 厌gyptian cities. It was in a place not far from this capital that Frumentius, sent from Ale xandria by St. Athanasius to teach the Aby ssinians the Christian faith, established his residence which from him is called Fremona.- The route to Auxume from. Adulis, near the Arabic Gulf, conducted by a city named Coloe ewhich may be Dobarua, the residence of an Abyssinian prince called Bahr-Nagash, or the King of the Maritime Country.

The Nile receives above the Astaboras, as we have said, on the same side, a, river named $A$ staflus. The tes. timonies of the best informed, authors, of antiquity are definitive on this subject. This river then can be no other than the Abawi of the Abyssinians; the sources of which, since their discovery in the beginning of the last centu: ry, hare been mistaken for those of the Nile, the great desideratum of allaniquity, and concerning which opinions were strangely divided. Ptolemy makes the Astàfus issue from. a morass or lake named Coluë,. which we recognise by this circumstance to be the Bahr Dambea; into which the Ahawi pours its rivulet.* It is well known that, this river. which forms the limits of Abyssinia on entering those of Nubia, meets another river coming from the interior parts of Africa; which, under the name of.Bahr-el-abiad, or the White River, represents indubitably, what the ancients called Nilus, distinctively from that known to them by the name of Astapus. This topic it became necessary to discuss, for the refutation of the erroneous opinions hitherto received thereon. Besides, although the Nile of Ptolemy, issuing from two lakes at the foot of the Mountains of the Moon, may yet.appear ;in geography, it is not deemed expedient at present to place these objects in the southern hemisphere. Coloë, which he places under the line, is actually more northward by: twelve degrees. And it may bę observed that, if the Nile came from beyond the equator, the periodical rains which, in the tornid zone, follow the course of the sun on each side of the équinoctial line, would cause an inundation of that 'iver in more than one season.' Con. sulting the Arabian geographers, we find that they add a third lake to the two lakes of Ptolemy; from which, be sides the Nile of $\mathbb{E}$ gypt, as they express it, issues another river. called the Nile of Negroes: But it is not ne. cessary to account for the inundation of another river, by supposing a division of the waters of the Nile; seeing that a cause equal and simultaneous produces the periman visited with so much triumph. They will probably'remark also, that the name of D'Anville is not once mentioned throughout the-whole of his work. Did Mr. B. deem the opinion of this famous géographer unworthy of refutation, or was he"unaco quainteu with his writings?

[^13]SECT.II.
NTHIOPIA.
odical intumescence of all rivers rising in the same climate: We learn however, that at the time of the increase, a canal named Bahr-él-azurek, or the Blue Rivér, affords a communication between' the Nile and a'river of a countíy"knówn'by the name of Bournou. Ptolemy, inforned of more circumstances of the interior parts of Africa than'any other ancient geographer, has given ús this' inver under the name of Gir; deriving its origin from what is called"Vallis"Garamantica; and it is thought that this, name.is 'perceived in. the Gorham of modern'geo-graphy.-A lake placed between this river and the Nile, and called Nuba Palus; is found in that whereon a town is seated, naméd Kaugha:- If the name of the Nuba be found often repeated, it is in the environs of the Nubian pool that they should be more particularly placed.-We sée in Ptolemy a derivation from the Gir towatds the moor or pool named Chelonides or of Tortoises: and the - Arabian geography makes mention of a river, which, after passing the city of Koukou, the residence of a prince, flows for a journey of many days to the south; and at length loses itself in fens.-Gira Metratiolis should be the capital of the kingdom traversed by this river, which terminates its-course in alake, like many other rivers in this country which have not power to reach the"sea.

Having thus surveyed the interior country, we return to examine what remains of the coast; the contour of which will conduct us to the most remote boundary of . the aṇcient geography towards the south. The land ad. jacent to the Arabic Gulf was called Troglodytice, because the inhabitants of it dwelt in caverns when Piolemy Philadelphus subjected them. This coast was named Habesh, or'as we'call it, 'Abyssinia._The position of

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Ras-Aheliaz. ©The learned have mistaken Matzua; of which we shall presently speak, for this Piolemais. A remárkable circumstance concerning. its gulf, is, the mention that is made of a derivation from the river $A_{s}$ taborás into it.-Adulis is described in antiquity as a place, the most 'frequented on this coast; -and from a proximity of parallel to that of the royal city of-Auxumitess,' we see that the latitude given to it by Ptolemy is much too low. : The place of this name was at some distance from the botiom of a spacious inlet, the shore of which is namod Arkiko, having on thë right the, Iittle isle of Matzüa. Adulis was distinguished by a magnificent Greek inscription which the third of the Ptolemies, or Euergetes, placed on a throne of marble, to perpetuate the nemory of a successful expedition in these countries.-Among many provinces, the conquest whereof is thus recorded, we find that of Semen, encom, passed by the high'mountains.which cover the coast; and this name of Semen still remains.-Opposite the above inlet, is the greatest island in the Arabic Gulf; 'and which, named heretofore Orine; or the mountainous, is now called Dahlak.-A port more remote, as-well as a city called Saba, is recognised in the name of Assab, which may have taken this form by prefixing the Arabic-article, as in the name of $\boldsymbol{A}_{s}$ sabinus, which the - 7 rọglodytes give to their Jupiter - The last place on the gulf was a Bérenice, distinguished from others by the surnạne Efïdires, as adjacent to a passage straightened like a throát, wheréby this gulf communicates with the Erythrean sea. -About this height is the country called Cinnamonfera. The cinnamon, whose name is now applied to an aromatic laurel of India; without a certainty of its being the same plant, is a shrub, the branches of which bear a bark that among the ancients was highly esteemed, and of great value. The Troglodytes, crossing the gulf on rafts; carried to Ocelis in Arabia, the harvest which they made of cinnamon. They also traded with it to another port named Mosylon, beyond the strait.

What remains to be reviewed is on the authorities of Ptolemy, and of the author of a description of the shores of the Erythrean Sea, without the contribution of any J other document of antiquity.-A gulf named Avalites succeeds to the Arabic gulf; and its port which we now call Ze la, corresponds with the Emhorium of the Aivalites, with whom a Nubian nation was associated.-After many other ports, among which the entrance of a river namẹd Soûl appears to indicate. Masylon, comes'thě $\therefore$ great promontory called Aromata by Ptolemy, or, Aromátum in the genitive plural, the most eastern land of the continent of Africa, and of which modern name is Guardafui.-A promontory to the south of that, and forming a chersonese or peninsuld, as we recognisé in Cape Orfui, is remarkable by the name of Zingis in Ptolemy. For we there, recognise the name of Zendge; that the Arabs have extended as far as Sesareh, whichis Sofala withal:' a circumstance which carries the de: nomination of Zendge farther back than the use of this name that in modërn geography is expressed Zanguebar. - The land which stretches along , this part of the sea wás called Barbaria, or otherwise Azania, which name it still preserves in the form of Ajan.-A pointchanging the direction of the coast, and which the Portuguese name das Baxas, or Shoals, represents the promontory called Noti Cornu, or the Southern Horn.-The Maghumi Litus; or the Great Shore, may be rèpresented by Magadaxo; and some other ancient place on this coast, by Brava.-The sea causing the retrocession of the coast of Africa in this part, forms what was called Barbaricus Sinus. - Thé last city to be reported on this coast is Rapta, with the qualification of metroholis: It owed its name to the circumstance of smáll vessels navigating the coast whose planks were-connected with sutures: this term having the same signification in the Arabic lan: guage as in the Greek. Ptolemy, who in his Prolegomena on a particular occasion examines the distance between the promontory of Aromata and Rapta, fixes the difference of latitude ât thirteen degrees; and from the height that we give to Cape Guardifui, Rapta must take its position, at farthest, in the second degree of 'southern latitude. It was on a river which was also called Rafi'tus. Now, at this height precisely, we know a river which, divided into several streams in its approach to the sea, in: closes màny àdjacent towns, as Paté,-Siô, Ampaza, Lamo, \&c. We owe, to the author of the Peirinlus of the Erythrean Sea, a circumstance worthy of remark, which is, that all this country by a very ancient tenure, is a de: pendence on Arabia, and on onề of its princes in parti. cular; and that of Muza, a maritime city of Arabia already mentioned-in its place, employed in this country collectors of the revenue. Hence we find that the estab. lishinent of the Arabs on this coast was long previous to Islamiŝm; the propagation of which, it might be ima. gined, brought them thither. From this circumstance is drawn an inference leading to the discovery of Ohlirr, whither the fleets of Solomon resorted for gold, and

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

ion that some authors of antiquity seem to have of the Antichthones, so called as having their feet opposite to ours in the temperate zone of the northern hemisphere, might have given Ptolemy an idea of such a population in a corresponding zone. But the author of the PeriAlus, $O \dot{f}$, the Erythrean Sea appears inclined to believe that,' beyond what he described of the African coast, this ocean penetrates into the west to join the Atlantic; ac. knowledging it, however to be oñly an hypothesis. And it may be inferred from Ptolemy that the relation of voy. ages round Africa by the south, had little credit in antiquity.

SECTION THIRD.
LIBYA,

BARCA.
The name of Libya among the Greeks extended to all Africa: but, strictly speaking, it was comprised in what. succeeded to $\notin g y p t$ towards the west,' as far as a gulf of the Mediterranean, called the Great Syrtis. The Ptolemies or some prince of their house, possessed this country; and under the Eastern E'mpire, Libya was annexed to the 压gyptian government: We distinguish two provinces in it, Marmurica and Cyrenicu; the first confining on "Egypt, the second extending towards the Syrtis. The nation of Marmarida had given their name to the Marmaric province: and there is moreover mention of the. Adyrmachida, as being contiguous to $\nVdash g y p t$.

Following the coast, we see only places too obscure to merit notice, ill we arrive at Paratonium. This was a place regarded by the Polemies as a head advanced to cover their frontier: and at-Baretoun, as the same namie is now pronounced, is held by the sultan of the Turks as a dependency of his dominion in 厄gypt. - Afits, which immediately succeeds, was an 府gyptian Burgh, as appears by the worship that was there established: and all this part composed, according to Piolemy, a nome or district called Libycus. -The intand position called Mareotis ${ }^{5}$ can be no other than that indicated in the modern geography by the name of Si=wah - Ammon or Hammon; the Jupiter, of $E$ gyptr and represented with the head of a ram, as at Thebes, had his temple in a canton more remote, environed by the sands of Libya. This'place is described by the-writers of antiquity as comprising' dif* ferent quarters in a triple inclosure; and the A mmonians having been governéd by kings, according to Herodotus had their dwelling in, one of these quarters. What we find in modern geography under the name of Santrieh, must represent it, as the nature of the country admis no other object to embirrass the choice.

We must now return to the shore of the Méliterra:nean. The place named Catabathmue Magnûs; or the Great Descent, now in the language of the Arabs Akabetoossolom, is remarkable in some ancient authors for - making the separation between-Asid and Africa. This -place is also takeñ for boundary of Marmarica, ascribing. to Cyrenica what immediately succeeds, according to the extent which the princes who reignied at Cyrene might hàve given to their dominion. Five principal cirties distinguished the Cyrenaic province by the name of Pentafolis.-Conformable to the method of Ptọlemy,

Darnis is the first city to be cited in Cyrenaica; and Derne is still its name.-Lacedæmonians coming from Thera, ${ }^{-3}{ }^{3} n^{\prime}$ island in the $\hat{e}$ 代gean, founded Cyrene, which retains little else than ruins with the name of Curin. The last of the Ptolemies who reigned there; sumamed Apion, bequeathed his kingdom to the Romans, who, formed a single province of this acquisition, and the island of Crete. The city was situated within sight of the sea, having Aflollonia for its port; and as this'pört is now named Marza-Suea, or Sosush. it is probable that this is the city mentioned by the name of Sozusa, dur: ing the Lower Empire. The most advanced point óf Libya, Phycû́s Promontorium, is now called Rds-alSëm, añ among mariners Cape Rasat.-Ptolemais, which is sómetimes confounded with Barce, retains nevertheless its particular position, at a distance from the sea, in the altered name of. Tolometa; and the name of Barca is àlso well known-Teuchira, which under the Egyptian princes had the name of Arsinoe, is found in its primitive denomination on the same shore.-Adriäné; which follows, corresponds with the position of lien-gazi. Berenice is known by the name of Bernic:rbut it appears by a particular testimony that Ben-gazi and Bernic' are only, different names for the same place. The same city was denominated Hestheris, and ancient fables place there the garden, of the Hesperides. - The shore of the Great Syrtis terminates this country. In the bosom of the desert continent, some poitions of land, such as the Ammon and ()ases of $\nVdash g y p t$, having wells of water, and groves of palms and date-trees, are not without habitations. Ausila, which is one of these, retains the same name:-From among many obscure nations in Libya out fixed dwellings, the circumstance might have given occasion to an ar:bbiguity in this name, and that of $\mathcal{N} \circ$ mades, both terms being of Greek origin. A líand abundantly fertile by nature, wasleft without culture; for in the words of Strabo, the inhabitants abandoned their fields to savage beasts, to exhaust themselves by predatory warfare. The dominion which the Carthagenians established in this country, must have operated a change in the national character of the natives; and the author above cited reports of Massinissa, whose attachment to the Romans in the second Punic War had rendered him powerful, that he contributed much to the civilization of the Numidian nation. But Numidia being distinguished from Africa. Profier, we now proceed to the detail of the latter.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

According to Ptolemy, at the bottom of the Great Syrtis, the Philanorum Ara, or Philenian Altars (which were monuments consecrated to the memory of two Carthagenian brothers of the name of Philænus; who were there exposed to death, to extend thither the dependencies of their country) were regarded as the point of separation between 'Cyrene and Africa Propria on the west: But M. D'Anville restrains the eastern limits of ; Africa Proftria to the bottom of the Smaller. Syrtis, from which it presents a coast, first to the east, and then to the north, till it confines upon $\mathcal{N u m a d i a}$ on the west. .' With this discrimination, the scrupulous reader will be , in no danger of making an unqualified extension of this. canton upon the confines of Libya, if our notices commence from the borders of Cyrene on the Giéat Syriz. —Under , the Ptolemies, the limits of the Ćyienaic province wete protracted to a tower named Kuforantes; and in this interval Macomades Syrtis is a place in ruins called. Sort.-Strabo speaks of a great Lake disemboguing into the Syrtis; and this lake which is salt, is at its entrance named Succa.-A promontory named heretofore Cehhale, or the Heads', and now Canan, or Cape Mezzata, terminates the Syrtis.-Farther on, the Cimynhs has its source under a hill distant from the sea but 200: stadia, and named by Herodotus Charitum, or the Graces; and this little river, we are informed, is called in the country, Wadi-guaham. - -We must recede to some distance from the coast, to speak of a city which has made some noise in the world; by the rumour of its being petrified. This error has arisen from some shepherds of the country, who having seen statues and bas-reliefs in marble, reported them to be men, animals; and fruits,' of stone. This place being called Gherzé, is made knawn by the name of Gerisa in Ptolemy:-We distingúish ${ }^{\text {ºn }}$, this district, a province of the Wéstern Empire, under the name of Trinolis, which the circumstance of three principal cities had given to the country. Leftis, the first and most considerable of these, with the surname of Magna, by distinction from another beyond the limits of the. Tripolitane, owed its foundation to the Phénicians; 'and its, ruins are known by the name of Lehida. Oea, the second of these cities, has taken the name of Tripoli, on absorbing the population of the other two: Sabrata, the third, is mentioned by an Arabian geographer - who describes this coast; as a tower cálled Sabart. This is the Tripoli Vecchio of the Mediterranean navigators. -It may be said that Pisida, and its port, which are not far distant, have formed by alteration the modern name of Fissato. -Immediately on this side of the Little Syrtis, Meninx, otherwise called Lotohhagitis, and afterwards Girba, is a little isle, wcll known under the name of, Zerhi, 'which is only separated from the continent by a channel sufficiently narrow to be covered by a bridge. Another city, bearing the same name of Meninx, is probably that now called Zadaïca.' The tree called Lotus, famous for the meat and drink afforded by a species of mast which it produced, occasioned not-only the inhabitantș of this isle, but likewise several other people, spread between the two Syrtes, to be called Lotonhagi.

It is expedient now to quit the coast, and take notice of what is worthy of remark in a country lying between. this maritime region and one more interior.-Phazania is this country; and it, preserves its name in Fezzan, through which is a route conducting from Tripoli into Nigritia.-Cydamus is Ghedemés; where are still remains of antiquity; and the remaining traces of ancient ways indicate the communication-that this city had with the places on the coast. "The'Roman arms, under Augustus, penetrated through'this-country to that of the Garamantes.-Among many names of cities which ap-. peared in the triumph of the younger Balbus, that of ${ }^{\text {w }}$ Tabidium, called by Ptolemy ,Thabudis, is found in Tibe• dou, 'on the route just mentioned.-There is, in this. canton, the diry bed of a torrent, called IVad-el Mezze-" ran, or Mezjerad, by equivocal pronunciation; and this torrent, which sinks in the sand after a short course, is! reported by the name of Bagradas, in Ptolemy, but confounded with a river of the same name, that has its is. sue in Africa Proper, under the modern denomination of Mejerda.-The great nation of Garamantes owed its ${ }^{*}$

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

zine of provisions, which was resorted to by sea. There was a city of the same name with that of the country; and the Arabian geography makes known'its position under the name of B'eghni. - Among the ''maritime ci- $\therefore$ ties, the first that presents itself in the order we have adopted, is Macomedes, distinguished by the surname of Minores from another of the same name, which we have already seen at the bottom of the great Syrtis; this being what is now called el-Mahrés.- The town of Thena preservẹs thé name Taineh; and Skafes, which is now the most frequented port on this coast, appears to have replaced Tahhrura. This name, which seems derived from the Greek term Tafihros, signifying atiench, may relate to that which the second Scipio caused to be 'drawn to Theñ, according to Pliny, to fix the limits of the country conceded to the kings of Numidia.-At no' great distance from the shore, the little isle of Cercina, separated from a smaller isle by a narrow canal, retains its name in the form-of Kerkeni.-Though there be no mention of Caputuada till the reign of Justinian, we may say that the point called Capoudia indicates it.-At some distance from the sea, a place named el-Jem, in which, among many remains of antiquity there is seen an amphitheatre, answers to the position of Tysdrus.- $\Lambda$ pen:insula, on, which a prince, who is said to have descended from Mohammed by Fatima, constructed in the tenth century a fortress under the name of Mahdia, and which the Franks name Africa, appears to have been the site of the Turris'Hannibalis, whence that famous Carthagenian departed when he retired to Asia.-In this part of Africa, conquered by the Arabs in the first áge of Islamism, the positionof Kairwan distant from the sea,

SECT.IV.
AFRICA PROPRIA, & C.
and which Ucba, who made this conquest, chose for the residence of the governors of the country, under the authority of the Khalifs, is taken by conjecture for the Vi : cus Augusti.-Continuing to follow the coast, we discern the name of 'Tahsus, which a victory obtained by Cæ̈sar has rendered memorable, in that of a place called Dem. sas-By a similar indication, the position of Lemta shows that of Lehtis, which; notwithstanding the qualification of:Minor, in :contradistinction to that in the Tripolitane, was far from being-inconsiderable.-Hadrumetum, whose name is also written without the aspiration; appears in the first rank among the cities of Byzacium." Its present condition is unknown;-but a neighbouring place, mentioned in a subsequent age under the name of C'abar Susis, is existent in Susa: and Horrea C"aliá is well known'in the vulgar denomination of Erklia.From this position the maritime country takes the name of Zeugitana, without our knowing whether under this name it extended as farinland as to correspond with the limits of the department that was afierwards named Pro-consularis.-In this passage to another province, where the strand of the continent appears driven in by the sea, there is remarked at some' distance from the shore a place which, under the name of Grasse, now Jerads, was a palace furnished with delicious gardens in the time of the Vandalic kings. We know that, compelled to cede entire Spain to the Visigoths, the Vandals in. vaded Africa, which they possessed for near a century immediately preceding the reign of Justinian, who re. conquered it.-On the coast, Hammamet indicates in this name the Aqué Calida of this canton.- There is known a Neafiolis in Nabel; also a Curubis' in Gurbés, and Clyftea in Akalibia; the position of which is follow' ed immediately by the Hermaum Promontorium, which we had occasion to cite before.-At the bottom of the gulf which this promontory bounds on oneside, a creek, of which the narrow entrance is called the Goulette, penetrates as far as Tunetum, Tunis which, since the entire, ruin of Carthage, has become the capital city.A point which bends in the figure of a crescent moon, called Cape Carthage, is that of a peninsula which made the site of the famous city of this name. But it is not now, as heretofore, a land almost insulated: for the sea, retired from its ancient shore has, left uncovered an extensive beach between the point just mentioned and that named Porto Ferino, near a promontory which 'terminates'the opposite side of the gulf. An isthmus of twenty-five stadia, or three miles in breadth, which joined the peninsula to the main, is no longer to be distinguished from it; and what is still called el Marza, or the Port, is at a considerable distance from the sea. The circuit of three hundred and sixty stadia given to this peninsula, must be of the shortest measure, to be commensurate with the twenty-four miles assigned by another authority to the vast inclosure comprehending the city with its ports. It had a citadel, named Byrsa, on an eminence; and an interior port, excavated by human labour, as its name of Côthón denoted. Founded by the Tyrians, the name Carthada, which they gave it, signifies in the Phœnician language the new city. 'And this name in the Greek writers is not, as in the Latins, Carthago, but Carchedon. Destroyed by the younger Scipio one hundred and forty-six years before the Christian

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
lagune that was adjacent.: 'The alteration of its name into that of Ben-zert, as we find in the Arabian geography, preserves some affinity with its ancient denomination; which the practice of seamen in calling it Biserte, has totally extinguished.- The last place to be mentioned on this coast is Tabraca, of which the little isle of Tabarca preserves the name-We know of no other river that may be the Rubricaius of Ptolemy, than that which falls into the sea opposite this isle: It is also the Tusca, which according to Pliny bounds Africa on the side of Numidia, and is now the Wad-el-Berber: . As. cending it to some distance, we recognise in the name of Vegja; a considerable city which by Sallust is named Vacca, and by others Vaga.

The interior country remains now to be inspected. $\overline{6}$ Ascending by the Bagradas, we find Tuburbo under the same name; and Tucaborum, in Tucaber.-Another I'uburbo, distinguished by the surname of Majus, whose position is south of Tunis, and widely distant from the preceding, it appears also in the form of Tubernok.In the name of $\mathrm{Wad}-\mathrm{el}-\mathrm{Bul}$, which a river received by the Bagradas bears, that of Bulla, surnamed Regia, is evident.-It is only by being near Tagaste, a Numidian city, and the native place of St. Augustine, that the position of Madaurus, the city of Apuleius, is judged.-That which is now called Urbs, and otherwise Kef, where are remains of antiquity, is Sicca Venera; although an English traveller, Dr. Shaw, to whose information we owe much topographical intelligence of this country, makes a distinction between these names, as appropriate to two several positions.-We find the name of Tucca, with ancient vestiges, in a place named Tugga; but which cannot be the same with 7'ucca Terebinthina of the Roman Itinerary.-It must here be said, that the positions given by Ptolemy, appear in such disorder, that we haye no other means of assigning suitable places to them than by following the traces of Roman ways, which abound more in this part of Africa than in any othẹ country of the ancient Itineraries. These means are, nevertheless, not without difficulty - Zama, memorable for the victory of Scipio over Hannibal, is given as immedicte to another place on one of thése ways; though there is reáson, from other circumstances, to form a doubt of its true position.-One is astonished to find that of Musti, which by, a similar problem, has a place assigned to it in the centre of Africa, appear in the Ecclesiastical Notices as an Episcopal see of Numidia, rather than of the proconsular province.-Sufetula, a considerable city, to judge of it by the concourse of many ways, is found in Sbaitla. -Septimunicia is mentioned as being at the foot of a great mountain named Burgaon, which appears to be a continuation of $U_{s}$ saletus, retaining the name of Uselet. -What re mains of the province of Africa is that part of Byzacium, which stretches towards the, south. To arrive at it we.must traverse arid and desert places, as history testifies in speaking of the forced march effected by Marius to surprise Catha; a great city, which, from its difficulty of access, was judged by Jugurtha a proper deposit for reserved treasure. The position of this city is known, and its name is pronounced Cafsâ.-Thale is like wise spoken of with circumstances which, in relation to the preceding, appear to suit the position of Telefite, in the Roman ltinerary. - We are indebted to the English traveller for the recognisance of a long and narrow. lake, divided in two by a ford, and which rèpresents, under the African names of Faroun and el-Loudeah; the Paludes called Tritonis ānd Libya in antiquity. The first of these communicated the epithet of Tritonia, to. Minerva; who, it is pretended, first revealed herself in these places. What are found on this mere, under the names of 'Toser: and-Nefta, indicate the positions of Tisurus and $\mathcal{N e h t e}$ - A milhtary post on -this frontier, called Turris Tamalleni,-is discovered in the name of, Tamelem; and the country is that now called Beledul. . Gérid. or the Region of Grasshoppers:

Númidia. This name cxtended primitively to all the country comprised between Africa Proper, and the more ancient boundary of Mauretania, whích was à river named Molochath; or Maiva, now Mulvia, whose mouth is opposite. Cape Gata, on the southern shore of Spain ; and this space is now occupied by the kingdom of Al-gier.-Two people participated this extensive country: the Massyli, on the side of Africa; and the Masasyli, towards Mauretania: in a promontory far advanced in the sea, heretofore named Tretum, now Sebdaruz, or the Séven Capes, by'the people of the couptry, and by mariners Bergaronie, made the term of separation between them. - They obeyed two princés celebrated in history; the first being subjects of Masinissa, the second of Syphax. The attachment of Masinissa to the Romans. required on their part not only a rê-establishment in the kingdom of which he had been despoiled by Sy. phax, but also that he should be guaranteed in possession of that of his enemy, by an event that united all Numi. dia under one prince. This kingdom, in the same state under Jugurtha, and the same also under'Juba, was van.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

AFRICA PROPRIA, & C.
SECT.IV.
which Tibilis had in its vicinity.-The places Tagaste and Tebeste, on the frontier of Africa, are found in, Ta jelt and Tebess.-Two other places distant from Constantina towards the south, called Lambese and-Lamas. be, give evidently the positions of Lambasa and Lamas. $b a$ : and Bagaï, on the flank of Gebel Auras, retains the same name.-The Áurasius Mons, though at first'ap: péaring difficult of access, ocčupies a great space of even and cultivated lands. This frontier affords entrance to a vast country distinguished by the name of Gatulia, which confines also on Mauretania.-A river named Zab, which communicates its pame to the country that it traverses, is mentioned by the name of $Z a b a$, in the times of the Lower Empire. The Savus, or Sa. ous, which Ptolemy-places iṇ the Mauretania Cæsarien; sis, where such a river does not exist, should be'referred to this, as the modern denomination sufficiently evinces. If Ptolemy conducts'a river of this name to the sea, it should bé remembered that he also continues the courses of a Bagradas and a Cyniths thither; which totally perish in the interior country, as does the Zab under discussion.- We shall conclude our report of Numidia with the notice of a principal city in this 'can-' ton Zab, named Pescara; which evidently' indicates that of Vescerita, or Vescether.

Mauretania. It is thus, and not Mauritania, that this'name appears in most monuments of antiquity, whether medals or lapidary inscriptions; and it may be ad. ded, that the national name is Maurasii, according to the Greek writers. The country over which Bocchus, who delivered Jugurtha to the Romans, reigned, was limited, as we have said in speaking of the primitive state of Numidia, by the river Molochath; whose name, being otherwise Malva, has given occasion to some modern authors, misled by Ptolemy, to distinguish two rivers for one. We are not precisely informed what occasioned the amplification of ancient Mauretania: it is known, however, that it was Juba (by the favour of Augustus put in possession of the states of the two Maurish princes, Bogud and Bocchus) who constructed the city of Casarea, which gave the name of Casariensis to 'that part of Maüretania which was taken from Numidia. Now if it be supposed that Mauretania was a concession to the kingdom of Juba, prior to the aggrandisement made of his paternal domain, we shall find in these circumstances what gave occasion to the extension of the name.- This kingdom was reduced into a province under Claudius, and divided into two: Casariensis, or that territory which had belonged to Numidia; and Tingita$n a$, or the original Mauretania, which extended to the ocean.

To enter into a detail of maritime positions, in regular order, we must take our departure from the mouth of the river Ampsagas. Igilgilis preserves the name of Jigel, or Jijeli, which, in the pronunciation of seamen, is Gigeri, and which is conmonly so pronounced in speaking of the capture of this place by the Fiench, in 1664. - The river Audus is that which the sea receives nèar Bujeiah-The transposition of some letters does not conceal from observation in the name of Tedles, the ancient one of Salda. - Let us add, by the way, that Tubusufitus, apart from the shore, corresponds with a place called Burg, in the canton of Kuko, which is covered by shct.'xv.
a great "and precipitous mountain, named Ferrarious Mons, now Jurjura.-Farther on, a river, whose namé is Ser, or Isser with the article, refers to the SerbetesThe initial syllable common to the names Rusazus, $R u$ sithisir, Rusucurru, and màny others, seems to denote, in the Punic language, a cape, or point of land, as Ras, in the Arabic: In this series of places there is no mention of Algier; this city being of later. date than the time which makes the term of antiquity. Its name, purely Arabic, is formed of al-Gazair, the denomination of a little isle which covers its port, and which is joined to the continent by a mole. In the name of Rusu-curru, the part which is peculiar and distinctive from many other namès, is. preserved in that of 'Hur, as indicated iby an Arabian geographer.-Ruins at Sersel would appear to be those of Casarea; but, in the Roman Itinerayy, this city is more remote towards Cartenna, well known in the modern form of Tenez. Icosium consequently had the place which Sersel now occupies; and a port, mentioned by an Arabian geographer under the name of Vacur, should be that of Casarea; which, before it was embellished and elevated to the rank of capital under king Juba, was named Iol. . This city was extremely injured by the barbarian revolters, when the count Theodosius, father to the emperor of that name, was charged with the command in Africa-It may be said, in general terms, that all this coast was filled with Roman colonies; the detail of which would contribute to dilate this work beyond the limits of an epitome. After Cartenna, which succeeds Cæsarea, is the mouth of the river Chi:nalath, the most considerable of this country; and of which, the modern name of Shelifi is not without some

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
the name of ${ }^{\prime}$ Sitef. - Traversing the mountains towards the south, a plain country contiguous to the Zab, is observed to contain a salt fen, called el-Shot, which is the Saline Nubonenses. Tubuna is recognised in Tubnah; and"Desena in Deusen, distant from the Zab. A castle; named Auzea in Tacitus and in the Roman Itinerary, may be assigned to the position of a fortress called Burg; a term which seems to be-used as appellative for such places in Barbary, and other countries of the Levant.The name of Castrum Audiense, in' the Notice of the ${ }^{\prime}$ Empire, appears to conduct towards the beginning of the course of the Audus.--Malliana keeps the name of Meliana.-Succubar was seated on the acclivity of a mountain, whose modern name is 'Zuchari--Fundus Mazucanus is found in Mazuna: and it appears from the account of an historian, that the Count Theodosius, de-: parting from 'Tigavas in this canton, crossed the An'corarius Mons to attack the Mazices. Thus this mountáin answers to that named Waneseris; and the position given under the name of Midroe, appears to be the same ${ }^{\text {b }}$ with that of Medianum Castellum, which'nas the ultimate point of a Roman expedition in this country.The nation we have just named was a powerful one; and we find the Mazices in Libya; and in the environs of the Oases.--Mina preserves'its name purely; and the Gadum Castra is recognised in Tagadeont.-- The position of Kegia, denoting a royal dwelling, is found by the direction of a Roman way to be Tlemsen, where the Arab princes of the house of Beni-Merin also established their residence.-Through the weakness of the Numidian nation of $\mathbf{M d s}_{\mathrm{s}}$ sylians, this country was conquered by the Getulians, who peopled all the border as far as the

SECT.'IV.
AFRICA PROPRIA, &

Syrtes. One must read Procopius's War of the Vandals, to have an idea of the rude and savage life of the Getulians. These are the people properly called Bereheres, who have given the name to Barbary; preserving themselves distinct' from the Arabs, whom the progress of Islamism, and the dominion of the khalifs, have spread over these westein countries of Africa.

We pass now to Tingitana. What had been Mauretania Proper was thus called from the name of its principal city, in the same manner that we have seen the other Maurētania distinguished. It occupied the space between the river Molochath and the Western Ocean. At the time of the division of the Roman empire into east and west, Tingztana is seen arranged among the provinces of Spain; and, exclusively of the other provinces of Africa, comprised in the Dicecesis of Italy, under the designation of Heshania Transfretana, or Spain beyond the Strait; an union that seems to have been inducéd by proximity. The expulsion of the Vandals from Spain, put the Goths also in possession of the province of Tin'gitana; the commandant of which, under the last king of the Visigoths, in vengeance of a private injury, introduced the Maures into that kingdom about the beginning of the eighth century. The western situation of this extremity of Africa, procured it from the Arabs the name of Garb; from an appellative in their language. The province of Tingitana corresponds nearly with the kingdom of Fez . - Upon entering into particulars, we perceive scarcely any other than'maritime positions'to recount. Rusadir is the first that presents itself, followed by a promontory of the same name; as the cape called Tres-forcas immediately succeeds Melilla.二Parietina may be represented by Velez de Gomera. $-T$ Tania Longa, which by this name denotes a narrow tongue of land, is Targa.-The position of Iagath, in Ptolemy, is the same with Tetewen, or, as it is more cómmonly pronounced, Tetuan.-It is agreed that the mount Aby$\dot{t a}$, the column of Hercules that is opposite to Calfe in Europe, answers to an elevated point, forming a peninsula, of which a place named Ceuta closes the isthmus. There is mention of this place under the name of Setttum, or Seftita; but not before. the sixth century, and the reign of Justinian.-Mounts called Sehtem Fratres, spoken'of much earlier by several authors, ought to be distinguished from those, since they precede Abyla both in Ptolemy and in the Antonine Itinerary, which follow a contrary order to that observed here. Thus, what the Arabs have called Gebel Mousa, must be the Seven Brothers.-The name of Tingis subsists in that of Tina ja; which, altered by usage, is Tangier. But the posi. tion of the ancient city was on the right, or opposite side of the creek to the modern, and also more inland.Beyond this is the point which separates the strait from the shore of the Western Ocean; and the name of Spar. tel, which mariners give it, with the Italian pronunciation, seems owing to the partition which it makes of the two seas. The name of $\operatorname{Amph} l u s i a$, which it bore among the Greeks as being abundant in vines, has the same signification with that of Cotes, in the Punic or Phoeni. cian language; and this canton of Africa is still noted for the beauty and flavour of the grapes that it produces. -On the shore of the ocean, Zilis, having assumed the Arabic article to its' name; is now Azzilia.-Lixus, or

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

rable city. The Roman arms penetrated beyond this position, in the war undertaken in Mauretania, under the reign of Claudius; for Suetonius Paulinus passed mount Allas, and found a river named Ger; a circumstance that determines this passage to have been through that principal branch of Atlas, called Ziz. Two places which are immediately beyond, one named Ger-silbin, the other Helel, preserve manifestly the ancient names Cilaba and Alele. Though far distant from Phazania, Pliny transports them thither; and by their true situation, the coniquest of them should be ascribed to the commander above-mentioned rather than to Balbụs.

SECTION FIETH.

LIBYA, VEL AFRICA INTERIOR.
What remains to be delineated of the interior parts of Africa, may be announced under this title, as we find it in Ptolemy. To the Getulia immediately contiguous to Numidia and the Mauretanias, succeeds a vast space divested of all local circumstance, and exhibited in the chart under the title of Deseria Libya Interioris. Melano.Gatuli, Black Getulians, occupied it in antiquity; and confined on a country called Nigritia, which owes its name less to the Negro race in general, than to the river which traverses this part of Africa. The ancients knew this river under the name of Niger, which, contrary to the opinion they commonly had of it, directs its course from west to east, as Herodotus indeed seems to intimate. For he relates that the Nasamones,' sent by, an Ammonian king to discover the sources of the Nile, had found on iheir route, between the west and south, a great river flowing towards the east.' But it is with this river, as'with that before mentioned under the name of Ger; enfeebled by frequent derivations, it perishes in the, earth. $\therefore$ The Arabian geographer points out lakes called Fresh Seas; where it is presumed the Niger diffuses what remains of its waters at its eastern extremity. A principal city named Nigira by Ptolemy (that which became the residence of the Fatanites, who, in the first ages of Islamiṣm, erected a kingdom called Ghand in this part of Africa) ought to be preferred to 'Fombut or Tombouctou, whose foundation by a Barbary prince remounts but to the commencement of the thirteenth century.

SECT. V.
LIBYA;-VEL AFRICAINTERIOR.

In the less remote and maritime part, 'the Autololes are mentioned as angreat nation; from wom the Roman frontier of Mauretañia suffered molestation. . Getulians, distinguished by the designation of Dara, have left their name to Daràh, separated from Morocco by a branch of Moụnt Atlas. As-to the Pharusii or Perorsi, we can only cite their names, there being a diversity of opinions concerning their situation.-On the shore of the ocean Ptolemy offers in succession to Sala, a cletail of numerous positions, which it would be dlifficult and-but little interesting to seek for in those actually existing. : What he indicates successively under the names of Atlas Minor 'and'Atlas Major,-appear àpplicable to two piomontories; the first of which may be Cape Cantin, as he fixes that under the same parallel, or within a few minutes of it; and he is observed to be precisely accurate in his la: titude of the Fretum, or Strait. - This cape must be the Soloe of the author, whoever he may be, of the meinoir entitlèd the Periflus of Hanno. For with a fleet of sixty vessels, after two-days' sail from the strait (a reckoning which finds them about the latitude of Salee), standing westward, they made the promontory in question conformable to the topical disposition of the coast. If the conclusion that may be formed of the circum: stances of this relation be not absolutely the same with what is here given, 'this report of circumstances is at least a proof that we have not neglected to consult it. The ítlas Major of Piulony having $26 \frac{1}{2}$ degrees of latitude, becomes of consequence Cape Bojadore; and ias the Portuguese charts prepared from the reports of na. vigators who opened the passage to India, after exploring this coast, the shore that follows Bojadore is called Ter. ra: Alta, whether from the circumstance of its rising immediately from'the' margin of the sea, or from the mountainous aspect of the interior country.-In the interval of these two promontories a port named Rusufis may bé represented by Azafi; and Mysocoras which succeeds, by Mogador.-Arother remarkable place on this coast, 'and which the Portuguese havenamed Santa Cruz, commanded by a castle called Tamara, should Tamusiga. -Cape Ger,' which terminates a considerable gulf, at the bottom whereof is Santa Cruz, may correspond with the promontory distinguished by the name of Hercules, to whom is attributed an expedition in this coun-try.-The Fortunata Insula are ranged under the same meridian, but in too low a latitude in Ptolemy: and as they are actually more northern than the greater promontory of Atlas, should, have preceded it in the order

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
mist be to this river; seeing that two days of a southern course from the strait, and one of an eastern, are given to arrive at the isle named Cerne. . In this- circuit may be recognised Cape Blancá: and the isle of Arguin, which the Maures call Ghir, is probably Cerne. . 'But a rigorous application of distances cannot be admitted in this case; since the distance between this isle and'the strait is not estimated in the Periplus as more consider'able than that which is evidently shorter, between Carthage and the strait-We must go farther to find the Daradus, a great river which Ptolemy brings from a mountain named C'afhas; of which it may be said, that we have some intimation of the name Caffaba, towards the beginning, of the Senegal- river; which is, not the. Niger; as was formerly believed.-The great promontory which succeeds, under the name of Arsenarium, is evidently Cape-Verd; and the circumstance of the Ryssadiumi being placed, adjacent by Ptolemy, and a little retired -withal, indicates this to be the point of . Almadia on the south side of the cape.-Ptolemy furnishes in these regions objects for which we are indebted to him alone. He knew the riyer Gambia undér the nameof Stachir, succeeding thése promontoriés. . The Hes. fieru-Ceras, or the Western-Horm, is a Cape beyond this river; whence the coast, which' hitherto tends" south. ward looking to the east, turns suddenly eastward to make a full face to the south; as is known by actual ob'servation.

We are now very near the ultimate point to which ancient geography can' be extended on the western coas of Africa. The want of agreement and precision in the Jittle that the authors of antiquity furnish in the aotice of objects so remote with respect to them, would render the discussion of them superfluous, without inaking. the subject of it more interesting.. It may however be briefly observed, that there is mention of a Sinus Hesfiericus, or Western Gulf; of the Insula Hesperidum; of an isle Gorganis, or Gorgades Insula; of a mountain named Thobn-ochema, or the Car of the Gods; añd lastly is said to baye been the term"of the yoyge of the Carthagenian fleet of Häno. But elsewhere, in the Perintus that beirs his name, it appears that this commander did not retum to Carthage, in he had circumnavigated the continent of Afica. This incongruity confessedly renders the navigation of Hanno suspicions: and female narineits called'Gorilles, and rivers of fire falling into the sea, xaccording to this perinlusy prove that the relation is not to be credited in all that it reports. But if we give attention to the disposition of this coast, now too well known to admit conjecture, we shall find, after the Western Horn', aurve in, the shore, which incloses a greăt number of islands: and, in proceeding, we discover no other mountain than that of Sierra leone, to which succeeds a poiñt of land named Cape St. Anne, separated indeed from the continent by a narrow channel, but in, suct a manner as escaped the observation of the first návigators among the moderns.-Concerning the situation of the Hesterii Athiohes, or Western Ethiopians, it may be remarked, that the Maures being in possession of oll that the desert comprehends, and us far as the Senegal, it is from this river the population of the Negro races may be said to commence, which are suffciently distinct from all other Afilican people.

After having thus terminated the ibird and last part of the ancient world, by tracing the shore of the Atlantic Ocean, there might appear something yet wanting; were we to observe a total silence concerning the famous island of the same name with this octan. But who will believe it can be referted to the new-world, or continent of America, and beliere at the same time that the people who inhabited it, came, in an age much anterior to the time of history, to make conquests in Europe and Asia, which on this occasion had no other means of repelling the invaders than what were found in the re: sistance and valour of the Athenians? Who does not rather see, in the narrative of Plato on this event,* an Athenian. willing to flatter his countrymen; and, in what he publishes of the policy of the Atlantides, a philosopher uccupied with speculations more magnifi"cent than pracliçable?': As this island'appears no more,t. it has been said that a continent, to iwhich was athibimed greater extent than to Africa and Asia united, was sub. merged in twenty-four hours: a catastrophe thàt is said to have rendered dangerous the narigation of the Atlantic Oceany, though it is no longer"so. That there existed an'unknown continent, might well have made an hypothesis in the speculations of some of the learned

[^14]
©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PART II.

SACRED GEOGRAPHY.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

INTRODUCTION.

promise can be made of such a difference, than that which may be seen in the table and map of this country. There is less dispute as to the location of the Land and Garden of Eden, and the identity of the Euphrates.

In pasising from our view of the Land of ESyfit to that of the Promised Land, we have not availed ourselves of the usual privilege of mental ærostation, but, on the path of Moses and the Israclites, have made our exody: thinking it best to assemble the objects that are spoken of in the renowned Exodus of the Jews, with a summary account of its incidents, in one table.

We have judged it impracticable to reduce the geo. graphy of Canaan, after the conquest of Joshua, to the comparative table of corresponding ancient and modern names, for a reason too evident to repeat, that this country abounded, beyond almost any other in times of antiquity; with geographical and historical notices; *whereas, at the present day, it has become almost desolate, and some of the most fruitful tracts formerly are now barren wastes.

The same motive that actuated me to give a preliminary sketch of the origin and migrations of Parent Na. tions to Paŕt I., prompts me in like manner to insert here, a tabular view of the three first Patriarchal ages, with annotations to each, to give light and interest to the Sacred geography. The contezt between these tables must be looked for in Japhet, Shem, and Kidm, in passing from the first to the seconcl; in Haran, Abraham, and $\mathcal{N}$ uhor, in passing from the second to the third, and through Jacob to the twelve tribes.

We have adopted a chronological order in the suc.

INTRODUCTION.

cession, both of the.Patriarchal and Geographical tables, as nearly as the successive evolution of their objects would admit of. According to this method, we have been under the necessity of giving more than one table of the same tract of country when its revolutions have so changed its civil divisions as to render them quite as foreign from each other, at different periods, asthough the identity of territory itself had been changed. Of this, Canaan farnishes a striking instance.

THEFIRST AGE OF THE WORLD,

The Antediluvian Patriarchs.

1. Cain, born Anno Mundi the second.".
a. Enoch, son of Cain.
b. Irad, son of Enoch.
c. Mehujarel, son of Irad.
d. Methusael, son of Mehujael.
e. Lamech, son of Methusael. He had by Adan,

- Jabal; the inventor of tents and keeping of cattle; and
-Jubal, the inventor of music. Also, by Zillah,
-Tubal-Cain, the inventor of working in metals; and
-Naamah, supposed to be Venus.

2. Abel, had no-offspring.
3. Seth, born A. M 130, died 1042, aged 912.
a. Enos, son of Seth, boin 235, died 1140, aged 905.
b. Cainan, son of Enos, born 325, died 1235, aged 910.
c. Mahalaleel, son of Cainan, horn 395, died 1290, aged 895
d Jared, son of Mahalaleel, born 460, died 14.22, aged 962 $e$ Enoch, son of Jared, born 622, was translated to heavern
f. Methuselah, son of Enoch, born 687, died 1656, aged 969
g. Lamech, son of Methuselah, b. 864, died 1651, aged 777 $h$ Noah,'son of Lamech, born 1056, aged 600 at the Flood.
—Japhet, his first son, born 1556, aged 100 at the Flood
-Shem, his second son, born 1558, aged 98 at the Flood
-Ham, his third son, born 1560, aged 96 at the Flood.
[^15]
INTRODUCTION.

Annotations.

Adam the first man, and Eve the first woman, formed by the immediate power of God, on the sixth day of the creation, ${ }^{*}$ in a state of purity and happiness: they fell into guilt and misery by transgressing the divine command; were banished from their blissful residence in the garden of Eden; sentenced to suffering and death; yet favoured with the promise of a Saviour. (Gen. chaf. 3.) Adam died, Anno Mundi 930 ; having seen eight generations. Eve died Anno Mundi 940.

Cain, the first man born of a woman, followed hus. bandry, murdered his brother Abel, and went to live in the land of Nod, where he built the first city, and named it after his son, Enoch. His posterity were called the

[^16]
©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page number of every species of animals, who were preserved in the ark.

THE SECOND AGE OF THE WORLD.

The Postdiluvian Patriarchs till the call of Abraham; including the Plantation of $\mathcal{N a t i o n s}$, and the Origin of Languages.

1. Gomer,* and sons, peopled the N. W. parts of Eu. rope, viz.
a. Ashkenaz, son of Gomer, settled France.
b. Riphat, son of Gomer, settled the British Isles, &c.
c. Togarmah, son of Gomer, settled Germany, Swe. den, &c.
2. Magog, and posterity, peopled Russia, Siberia, &cc.
3. Madai, uncertain.
4. Javan, and sons, peopled the N. E. coast of the Mediterranean, viz.
a. Elisha, son of Javan, settled Greece.
b. Tarshish, son of Javan, settled the S. of Asia Minor.
c. Kittim, son of Javan, settled Macedon.
d. Dodanim, son of Javan, settled W. coast of Asia Minor.
5. Tubal, and posterity peopled Spain.
6. Meshech, and posterity, peopled Italy.
7. Tiras, and postority, peopled Thrace.

* These tables of the patriarchal ages are taken from a compilation in Wilkinsòn's Classical Atlas. They are subject to slight deviation from accuracy, which we shall correct in its proper place. Dr. Wells makes it appear very clearly that Gomer and his three sons settled in Asia Minor on the southern coast of the Euxine; and that it was the migrations of their descendants that afterwards settled Norway, Sweden, Germany, France, and the British Isles, as we shall see in the sequel,

INTRODUCTION.

1. Elam, and posterity, peopled Persia.
2. Ashor, and posterity, peopled Assyria, and built Nineveh.
3. Arphixad, born 1658, and died 2096, peopled Caramania.
a. Salah, son of Arphaxad, born 1693, died, 2126, aged 4.33.
b. Eber, or Heber, son of Salah, born, 1723, died 2187; father of the Hebrews.
(a). Joktan, son of Eber, peopled S. E. of Asia, viz.
-Sheba, offspring of Joktan, settled Hindooistan or India.
-Orphir, offspring of Joktan, settled Molucca Isles, &c.
-Havilah, offspring of Joktan, settled Thibet, &c.
(b). Peleg, son of Eber, born 1757, when the earth was divided; died 1996.
(c): Reu, son of Peleg, born 1787, died 2026, aged 239.
(d). Serug, son of Reu, born 1819, died 2049, aged 230.
(e). Nahor, son of Serug, born 1849, d-1997, at Ur.
( $f$ ). Terah, son of Nahor, born 1878, died 2083, at Haran.
-Haran, son of Terah, born, 1948, at Ur, died 2073.
-Abraham, sōn of Terah, born 2008, at Ur; called thence 2083, died 2183.
-Nahor, son of Terah, born at Ur, and died at Ha ran.
-Sarah, half sister, and wife of Abraham, born 2018, died 2145.
4. LOD, and posterity, peopled Lydia in Asia Minor.
5. Aram and sons, peopled Syria and Mesopotamia, viz: $a \mathrm{Uz}$, son of Aram, settled the S. W. part of Syria.
b. Hul, son of Aram, settled the N. W. part of Syria.
c. Gether, son of Aram, settled the S. E. part of Syria.
d Mash, son of Aram, settled Mesopotamia.
6. Cush, and sons peopled the S. of Africa and Arabia, viz.
a. Seba, son of Cush, settled Arabia.
b. Sabtah, son of Cush, settled Ethiopia.
c. Raamah, daughter of Cush.
(a): Sheba, offspring of Raamah, settled Sofala.
d. Nimiod (Belus), son of Cush, founded Babylon.

INTRODUCTION.

2. Mizraitm, and sonis, peopled Egypt, &c. viz.
-a. Lehabim, son of Mizraim, settled Lybia.
b. Caphtorim, son of Mizraim, ancestor of the Copts.
c. Casluhim, son of Mizraim, settled between Egypt and Canaan.
(a). Phlistim, son of Casluhim, ancestor of the Philistians
3. Phut, ancestor of the Moors.
4. Canaln, ancestor of the Canaanites, viz.
a. Sidon, ancestor of the Phœnicians, dwelt at Sidon.
b. Heth, ancestor of the Hittites, dwelt at Hebron.
c. Jebusite, ancestor of the Jebusites, founded Jerusalem.
d. Amorite, ancestor of the Amorites, dwelt at Hesh. bon.
$e$. Girgasite, ancestor of the Girgasites, dwelt at Girgesa.
$f$. Hivite, ancestor of the Hivites, dwelt at Gibeon.
g. Arkite, ancestor of the Arkites, dwelt at Archa.
$h$. Sinite, ancestor of the Sinites, dwelt near the de. sert of Sin.
i. Arvadite, ancestor of the Arvadites, dwelt at Arad; and $j$. Hamathite, ancestor of the Hamathites, dwelt at Hamath.

smanmanim

Annotations.

NoAh, was 754 years old at the Confusion, and 950 at his death; which happened two years before the birth, of Abraham. His posterity began to build Babel, in the land of Shinar, 1757; which continued 53 years, till the Confusion of Tongues, 1810 from the Creation of the World; or about 2190* before Christ. The original

* See the dispersion of the Scythians by Ninus, in the epochs of the first Gothic progress, page 46, with which this period nearly corresponds.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

TNTRODUGTION.

THE THIRD AGE OF THE WORLD.
From the Call of Abraham to the Exodus; in two Sections.
SECTION I.

1. Lot, nephew of Abraham.
a.' Moab, ancestor of the' Moabites.
b. Ammon, ancestor of the Ammonites.
2.Iscah.
2. Milcat, wife óf Nahor.
1.-Ishmatla, ancestor of the Ishmaelites, 'born B. C.' 1910, died 1773.
'a.'Kedar,' son of Ishmael. (a). Hamal, son of Kedar: , \}Ancestors of Mahomet. - Nobet, Salaman, &c.
b. ${ }^{*}$ Adbeel, Mibsam, ${ }^{\text {Mishma, }} \geqslant$ Princes of the IshmaelDumah, Massa, Hadar, $\left.\mathrm{Te}_{7}\right\}$ ites. ma, \&c. sons of Ishmael.
'c. ${ }^{.}$Bashemath, daughter of Ishmael, and third wife of Esau.
3. Is a Ac, was borin 1896, died in Canaan 1716, aged 180.
a. Esau, son of Isaac, born' 1837, ancestor of the Edomites.
(a). Eliphaz, son of Esau by his first wife Adah.

- Amelek, son of Eliphaz, by Timnah.
- Teman, Omar, 'Zepho, $\}$ Other children of Eliphaz.
Gatan, Kenaz, &c. (b). Jeush,' Jaalam, Kóräh, children of Esau by his se-- cond wife Aholibamah.
(c). Reuel, son of Esau by his third wife Bashemath.
- Nahath, Zerah, Missah; $\}$ other children of Reuel. . b. Jacob, or .Israel, born 1837 in Canaan, died 1689 in Egypt.

3. ZimRan, &c. to No. 8. were Abraham's children by Keturah.
4. Joksban.
b. Sheba, $\}$ Children of Joksban.
(a). Ashurim and Letushim, descendants of Dedan.

5: Medan.
6. Midian, ancestor of the Midianites.
$\left.\begin{array}{l}\text { a. Ephah, Epher, Hanoch, } \\ \text { Abidan, and Eldaah, }\end{array}\right\}$ Children of Midian.
7. Ishbak.

8 ShuAh.

INTRODUCTION.

```
1. Tebaf.
2. Gaham.
3. Thahash.
Children of Nahor by Reumah.
4. Macah.
5. Uz, ancestor of Job
6. Buz, ancestor of Elihu, \}Children by Milcah
7. Bethuel, lived at Haran, \(\}\)
a. Laban, son of Bethuel, lived at Haran.
(a). Leah, daughter of Laban, and first wife of Jacob.
(e). Rachel, daughter of Laban, and second wife of Jacob.
b. Rebecca, daughter of Bethuel, and wife of Isaac.
```

SECTION II.

[^17]* Handmaid to Rachel.
$\dagger$ Handmaid to Leah.

Annotations.

SECTIONI.

Lor lived at Sodom till its destruction, of which he was preadmonished by angels, who brought him, his wife, and two daughters out of 'the city, and ordered them to flee with all possible precipitation to the mountains; warning them not to look back, lest they should be involved in the general destruction: His wife, disobeying this injunction, was immediately changed into a pillar of salt. Several of his children died at Sodom.

Moab and Ammon were children of Lot by his two daughters. Their posterity were giants who dwelt in the country they conquered from the gigantic Emims and Zamzummims.

Ishmael was the son of Abraham by Hagar, the handmaid of Sarah.- His posterity, the Ishmaelites or Hagarenes, settled in Arabia; and their descendants have been called Arabs or Saracens.

Isanc was the son of Abraham by his first wife $\mathrm{Sa}-$ rah. Isaac had, by his only wife Rebecca, twin sons Esau and Jacob.

Esau, also called Edom, in consequence of swearing away his birthright or right of primogeniture in favour of Jacob, was ancestor of the Edomites by his wives Adah, Aholibamah, and Bashemath or Mahalah; the two former were Canaanitish women, and the latter Ishmaelitish. The Edomites dwelt in the land of the Horims, or Horites, whose daughters they married, and by descent or conquest, possessed the country. They

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

Spirit thàt illuminated his aged father, that God would assuredly perform his gracious promise, by, bringing their posterity out of Egypt, and giving them the land off Cañaan for an inheritance. He therefóre eatrinestly re: quested they would not bury him in Goshen, but lay his body in a coffin, and deposit it in some secure place, whence they might take it on the accomplishment of his prediction's, to the Land of Promise. For the fulfilment of thîs request, his brethren bound themselves by an oath.

Moses. Subsequently to this melancholy occurrence, 'the dëscendänts öf Israel increasèd prodigiousisly both'in strength and numbers, so much that the natives, who began to fear that they would eventually cover the whole face of the kingdom, resolved to weaken them by taxes, labour, and every species of tyrannical oppression. But the first measures failing of the desired effect, thereupon a diabolical edict was promulgated, commanding that every male child of the Hebrews that wow born thereafter. should be cast into the Nile, and that none but the femalės should be phermitted to live. Under this edict Moses was born, to humble the pride of Egypt, and to lead his groaning countrymen in triumph from the house of bon"dage.

Exodus. The time having arrived for the fulfiment of the divine promise of bringing the Israelites out of Egypt; and Moses having prevailled with Phapaoh, by means of many miraculous feats, to permit the Jews to depart for the Land of Promise-they set out from Ramesis. When they arrived at Mount Sinai, in the Wilderness, God appointed them a day for the promulgation of his Decalogue. On the appointed day, Moses committed the care of his people to Aaron and Hur, and went up with Joshua into the the mountain, where he continued forty days, while God gave him the ten commandment $\dot{\varepsilon}$, on two tables of stone, called tables of covenant, together with the whole plan of the Jewish tabernacle, and mode of worship. After Moses descended from the mount, he desired his congregation to bring an offering of different materials for the holy tabernacle; and he was immediately supplied with a profusion of jewels, metals, ointments, perfumes, and every other requisite article; which he distributed to proper artificers and workmen, whom God had endowed with thepeculiar skill to contrive, and ability to execute, the various designs that had been shown to Moses on the nountain. The work was performed with such alacrity and diligence, that in less than six months the tabernacle, with all its magnificent furniture and apparatus, was set up at the foot of Mount Sinai, and the pompous worship of the Israelites was begun.-We will subjoin the results of the' mustering and numbering of the tribes of I'srael, the patriarchal chiefs of each, and the order of their encampment about the tabernacle, with a scheme. of the same.

Reubien. The tribe of Reuben was 46,500 in number; south of the tabernacle, and east of Simeon. ElizUR patriarchal chief.

Smeon. The tribe of Simeon was 59,300 in number; south of the tabernacle, apd west of Reuben. Siexujifel, patriarchal chief.

Gershon. The Gershonites were 7500 in number;

INTRODUCTION.

west of the tabernacle; carried the curtains, veils, &c. Eliasaph, patriarchal chief.

Kohath. The Kohathites were 8600 in number; south of the tabernacle; carried the Sanctuary, Ark, &c. Elisaphan, patriarchal chief.

Merari: 'The Merarites were 6200 in number; south of the tabernacle; carried the boards, bands, &c. Zuriel, patriarchal chief.

Judah. The tribe of Judah were 74,600 in number; east of the tabernacle, and soüth of Issachar. Naison, patriarchal chief.

Issachar. The tribe of Issachar was 54,400 in num. ber; east of the tabernacle, and south of Judah. Ne. THANEEL, patriarchal chief.

Zebulun. The tribe of Zebulun was 57,400 in number; east of the tabernacle, and south of Issachar. EniAH, patriarchal chief.

Manasseh. The tribe of Manasseh was 32,200 in number; west of the tabernacle, and north of Ephraim. Gamaliel, patriarchal chief.

Ephraim. The tribe of Ephraim was 40,500 in number; west of the tabernacle, and south of Manasseh. Eìshamah, patriarchal chief.

Benjamin. The tribe of Benjamin was 35,400 in number; west of the tabemacle and north of Manasseh. Abidan, patriarchal chief.

Dan. The tribe of Dan was 62,700 in number; north of the tabernacle, and west of Asher. Ahiezer patriarchal chief.

Naphtali. The tribe of Naphtali was 53,400 in

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PART II:

SACRED GEOGRAPHY.

TABLE I.

- ANTEDILUVIAN COUNTRIES.

| Ancient. | Modern. |
| :---: | :---: |
| 1.Landof Eden, | 1. Shinar, Babylonia, and Iräk successively. |
| a. Paradise, or garden of $\mathbf{E}$. den, | $a$. (On the common channel of the Euphrates, Tigris, \&ic. About sixty miles from the Persian gulf). |
|  | 2. Elam, Susiana, and Persia; successively. |
| 1a.s Enoch-city, | a. Built by Cain, in the land of Nod. |

RIVERS.

1. Pison, or Phison,
2. Gihon,
3. Hiddekel,
4. Euphrates, or Perath,
5. Tigris.
6. (Uncertain).
7. Zeindek (Gyndes).
8. Euphrates, or Great River.

Remarks. -
As the sacred history is very short in other particulars relating to the antediluvian world (that is, the state of the world before the flood) so is it in reference to its geography; all the places thereof mentioned by Moses being, either the Garden of Eden, with such places as belong to the description of its situation in the land of Eden, or the land of $\mathcal{N o d}$, and the city of Enoch built therein.

ANTEDILUVIANCOUNTRIES.

From the words of Moses it is evident that the country of Eden extended beyond the valley through which passed the channel of the united waters of the Tigris and the Euhhrates, &c. for the text says that a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was harted and became into four heads. But the ambiguity of the text in this part is such, that we cannot determine how far the land of Eden extended northwardly on the banks of the Tigris and Euthrates, or southwardly in the course of the bifurcation of their common channel, before their waters disembogued into the Persian gulf. The probability, however, is, that its limits were undefined, and that its extent may be applied to the greater part of the country watered by these two rivers, at least as far as the mountains of Armenia, corresponding with what, after the deluge, was called the land of Shinar.-There is no doubt as to the Garden of Eden or Paradise, which Moses evidently.confines to the common channel of these rivers.-The term Eden, denoting, pleasure, or delight, by its primary acceptation in the Hebrew language, has been imposed as a proper name on several places: as the Eden or Beth-Eden, mentioned by the prophet Amos, near Damascus; and a village on Mount Lebanus of the same name, besides others; and therefore mistaken for the site of the original terrestrial Paradise. Hence, too, it is rationally conceived that the Garden of Eden was

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

ERQM THE DELUGE

have the front of Eden to respect Egypt, where Moses wrote, which would give it a location in Arabia: but as the orientals, particularly the Egyptians, always held the east in the greatest veneration, on account of its being the direction of the rising sun, I would prefer to understand the front of Eden as respecting that quarter; and this would place Nod in Susiana or Persiu. Ac. cordingly the learned bishop of Soissons observes that Ptolemy, in his descríption of Susiana, places there a city called Anuchtha; and, that the final syllable in this name being only distinctive of the feminine in the Chaldee tongue, leaves Anuch, which is without difficulty the same as Enoch.

TABLE II.

FROM THE DELUGETO THECONFUSION.

Ancient.

1. Country of Ararat, a. Mount Ararat,
2. Land of Singar, Shinar,
a. Singar-city,
b. Singaras mountain,
c. Sem, or Shem-city,
d. Babel-city and tower, $e$. Erech,

Modern.
11. Present Armenia.
a. Mountains of Armenia.
2. Mesopotamia and Babylonia, now Irak.
$a$. Between the Euphrates and Tigris.
b. Supposed to have given) name to the land of Shinar.
c. Zama of Ptolemy.
d. Babylon, or Babil.
e. Aracca, of Ptolemy.

Remarks.

The short account of the antediluvian world, given in the six first chapters of Genesis, is followed by the 7th and 8 th chapters of the same book with an account of the deluge, or flood; upon the abating whereof, the sacred historian tells us that the Ark rested upon the mountain of Ararat. From this period to the confusion of tongues by which God put a stop to the building of the tower of Babel, the geographical notices are as few as those anterior to it, as just seen; and nearly in the same region of country, only contracting the eastern, and extending the northern limit. These narrow limits of geography render it easy to comprehend the expression, as applying to that period, that "the whole earth was of one language."

TO THE GONFUSION.

It is unanimously agreed hy the learned, that Ararat denotes, in sacred writ, the country called by the Greeks and other western nations Armenia: whence it follows that the mountains of Ararat are the same as the mountains of Armenia; though they might have extended much beyond the limits of Armenia or the country of Ararat, as does the immense chain of Mount Taurus of which it was, a part. According to the opinion of some, the ark rested upon that part of Mount Ararat which was called the Gordoan mountain, near the head of the Tigris.

As to the land of Shinar, it is not to be doubted that it was the valley along which the Tigris runs, probably till it falls into the Persian gulf. In the northern part of this valley, in the mountains of Armenia, we find in old writers both a city called Singara, and a mountain called Singaras; from-which it is highly probable that the adjoining valley took the name of Shinar.-It, is plain from scripture that Babel was the original of the famous city of Rabylon; nor is it to be doubted that Erech was the same with the city of Aracca, mentioned by Piolemy and other ancients: and Moses expressly says that Babel and Erech lay in the land of Shinar.

FROM THE DELUGE

Noah and his family having descended, in the course of the, Tigris from the mount and land of Ararat, entered and settled in the southern part of the land of Shinar, where they built the city of Shem. There, (according to the conjecture of Dr. Wells,) Noah,* Shem, and Jdphet, if not Ham, continued, opposing the construction of the tower of Babel, while the undertakers of it removed to some distance from the patriarchs, and pitched upon a place more suitable for their purpose, on the banks of the Euhtrates, afterwards the site of the city of Babylon, as we have said. However this be, they suffered equally with their presumptuous offspring, who would thus assail the kingdom of Heaven, and were included as principals in the dispersion that ensued; which has been recited in the Introduction, and is again repeated in the following table, with corrections from Wells.

* The author of the Sacred Mirror says, that Noah, after the Deluge, having received inestimable marks of affection from the Great Object of his adoration, descended from the mountains of Ararat, and applied himself to husbandry. After the scene of his inebriation, at the time of his vintage, the same author tells us that no further particulars are recorded of Noah2 but that he died in the 950th year of his age: so that it is uncertain where he passed the remaining two hundred years of his life after the confusion. The Orientals, however, affirm, that he was buried in Mesopotamia, where his sepulchre is still shown, in the vicinity of an edifice which is called Dair Abunab, or the monastery of our father:

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THE PLANTATION OF THE EARTH.

their work and punished their foolish vanity by their dispersion and a confusion of their language.

mennanverive

TABLE III.

OF THE PLANTATION OF THE EARTH.
C. Japhet,* or Istes of the Gentiles.

1. Gomer(1) and his three sons, viz.
a. Ashkenaz.
b. Riphat.
c. Togarmah.
2. Javan and his four sons, viz.
a. Tarshish.(2)
b. Kittim or Cittim.(3)
c. Elishah.(4)
d. Dodanim.(5)
3. Mesech or Mosoch. (6)
4. Tubal.(7)
5. Magog. (8)
6. Madai.(9)
7. Tiras.(10.)
I. Asia Minor, and the Neighbouring Isles, &c.
8. Northern parts of Asia

Minor, viz.
a. Phrygia.
b. Paphlagonia.
c. Cappadocia and Pontus, partly.
2. Southern part of Asia Minor, viz.
a. Cilicia.
b. Pamphỳlia and Pisidia-
c. AEolia.
d. Doris.
3. Cappadocia and Armenia.
4. lberia, &c.
5. Russia, partly.
6. Media.
7. Thrace.

[^18]THE PLANTATION OF THEEARTH.

1f. Land of Shem.

1. Aram.
a. Uz.
b. Hul.
c. Mash.
d. Geter.
2. Asshur.
3. Elam.
4. Arphaxad.*
5. Lud.
III. Land of Ham.
6. Cush. $\dagger$
7. Mizraim.
a. Ludim.
b. Anamim.
c. Lehabim.
d. Naphtuhim.
c. Pathrusim.
f. Casluhim. $\ddagger$
g.Caphtorim.
8. Phut.
9. Canaad.

1I. The Southof Asia.

1. Syria, Armenia, &c. viz.
a. Western part of Syria.
b. Arménia Major, partly.
c. Mesopotamia, partly.
d. Eastern part of Syria.
2. Assyria.
3. Susiana or Persia, partly.
4. Babylonia and Chaldea.
5. (Uncertain.)
III. Africa, and Arabia, &c.
6. Arabia.
7. Egypt, Ethiopia, &c. viz.
a. Ethiopia.
b. Lybia, partly.
o. Lybia, partly.
d. Marmarica.
e. Thebais.
f. 3 Near the Isthmus of
g. $\}$ Suez.
8. Mauritania.
9. Palestine.

Remarks.
The sacred historian, having informed us how the world was depopulated by the flood, proceeds to inform us next, how it was repeopled by the posterity of Nodh;
(7) The colonies of Tubal, called Iberians, or Celt-iberians, settled on the river Iberus or Ebro in Spain.
(8) The colonies of Magog settled ahout the river Tanais and the Palus Meotis
(9) The colonies of Madax were the Sarmatians in Russia.
(10) The colonies of Tiras settled about the river Tiras olNeister, on the north of the Euxine sea.

* Several colonies of the de'scendants of Arphaxad settled India; and at a subsequent period others came to the land of Canaan.
$\dagger$ Nimrod, the last son of Cush, seized upon the land of $\operatorname{Ar}$ phaxad. The descendants of the other sons of Cush sent colonies from Arabia to Ethiopia.
# The Philistines, the descendants of Casisurim, seized on a part of the land of Canaan.
which he does by acquainting us, after what method the three branches of Noah's family settled themselves at first, in three distinct tracts of the earth. From the text of the sacred historian it may be well inferred, as the learned Mr. Mede has observed, that this great division and plantation of the earth was performed in an orderly manner, and was not a confused and irregular dispersion, wherein every one went whither he listed, and seated himself as he liked best. An orderly sorting is plainly denoted by the expressions used in the sacred text, viz. "after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, in their nations." The reader is referred to the article Noan, under the second table of the Introduction, for the most probable conjecture as to the respective numbers of nations and languages at the time of their dispersion and division.

Moses tells us that it was in the days of Peleg, son of Heber, that the earth was divided among the sons of Noah; which, supposing it were at the time of his birth, as his name signifies division in the Hebrew language, would make it one hundred years after the flood. Why he begins his account of the descendants of Noah with the sons of Japhet is uncertain. Had he shown any regard therein to seniority of birth, those of Shem and Ham had both claimed the precedence.-He says that among the descendants of Japhet were divided the Isles of the Gentiles. But we are not to understand the term isles in its literal sense. In the acceptation of the old Testament, isles or islanders applied to any country or people beyond sea in relation to Egypt, where it was chiefly written. Accordingly we shall see forth-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THEPLVNTATION OF THEEARTH.

quently known to be Cahtadocia and Pontus. This location of the family of Togarmah is agreeable both to sacred and profane writers. And the name of Togarmah is discernible in that of the Trocmi, a people who, according to Strabo, dwelt in the confines of Ponius and Catitadocia, and who were also called by Cicero, Trog' mi; and in the council of Calcedon, Trogmades.-Having thus given a brief view of the plantation of the nation of Gomer, we might here dismiss that part of our subject: but for the satisfaction of the inquisitive student, we will press it a little further, and shew how the colonies of their descendants, in process of time, settled Norway, Sweden, Germany, France, and the British Isles, by way of correcting a small inaccuracy in the compilers of the first ages of the world in' Wilkinson's Atlas Clas. sica, who attribute the plantation of those countries to Gomer and his three sons direct. Explicitly to our purpose is the authority of Herodotus, who tells us that a people called Cimmerii, formerly dwelt in this very tract of the Lesser Asia, which we have assigned to Gomer: and that these people sent a colony to the shores of the Palus Mrotis on the north of the Euxine Sea, where they gave the name of Bosthorus Cimmerius to the strait which connects that lake with the Euxine. This colony of the Cimmerii becoming very numerous, in process of time, spread themselves to the north and west, over the countries above mentioned. And, to notice it by the way, this migration of the Cimmerii corresponds in many respects with the course pursued by their successors, the Scythians, who, during the lapse of many ages, overran and repeopled these very countries; having almost exterminated the aboriginal Celts or Cimmerii in their progress, as we have shown, in treating of the origin and migration of ancient nations, in the Introduction 'to Part I. As for the testimony of the ancients, Diodorus Siculus affirms that the ancient Germans, or Celts, had their original from the Cimmerians; and the Jews to this day, as Mr. Mede observes, call them Ashikenazim, as being derived from Ashkenaz. Indeed, they retain evident marks of their descent, both in the name of Cimbri, and that of Gernians; tpe former of which they communicated to the peninsula of Jutland, in that of Cimbrica Chersonesus. Moreover that they spread into Gaul or France, is proved by Camden, who quotes the testimony of Josephus, where he says that those called by the Greeks Galata, were originally called Gomerites. They also sent colonies into the British Isles, if etymology of names afford any confirmation to the testimony of ancient writers; for the Welch to this day call themselves Kumeri, and we have seen in the Introduction to Part I; that a few of the aboriginal Celts, Cimbri, or Kumeri, maintained their possessions in Wales in defiance of their enemies the Scychians, who had followed their footsteps from Asia, and almost exterminated them from every part of Europe.

As the nation of Gomer first settled in the northern parts of Asia Minor, so did that of Javan first seat itself in the southern parts of the same. This appears evident not only from the name of a country in this tract called Jonia or Ionia, which is derived from Javan, but also from the situation of the families of his four sons within this tract, as we shall now see.-His son Tarshish seated his family in the eastern part of the southern tract of Lesser Asia, nearly corresponding: with Cilicia: for T'arsus the chief town of Cilicia, bears evident marks of the name of Tarshish, to whose honour it was so called. Josephus expressly affirms that not only this city was so called from Tarshish, but also that Ci licia, or the country around it, was originally known by the name of Tarshish. Nor is it to be doubted that this was the Tarshish to which the prophet Jonas thought to flee from the face of the Lord; as also was it the Tarshish mentioned so often by the prophets on account of its trading with Tyre.-The portion west of the family of Tarshish, appertained to the family of Wittim or Cittim; which word, having a plural termination, implies the descendlants of Keth or Ceth. Ptolemy tells us of à country here called Cetis, and Homer mentions a people called Cetri. It is also remarkable that the seven. ty interhretèrs render Kittim by Ketii or Cetii exactly agreeable to the name mentioned by Homer. Josephus will have the isle of Cyfirus to have been the seat of the Cittim: but it is not to be doubted that the continent was peopled first, thoügh it is quite probable they sent colonies thither in the course of time.-Elishah settled his family in that part of this southern tract, which corresponds with $\boldsymbol{E c}$ olia, on the western coast of Asia Minor. And as the $X$ Eolians carry some marks of their origin in their name, Josephus expressly affirms that they derived both their name and descent from Eli. shah.-The family of Dodanim occupied the remainder of the western part of Asia Minor, south of Elishah, partly corresponding with a country that here occurs in

THE PLANTATIONOFTHE EARTH.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THE PLANTATION OF THEEARTH.
which name, though it wore away in other parts, has continued even to the present day, to distinguish the Hellespont, as if one would say Eliza Pontus, i. e. the sea of Elishah. In passing over to the continent of Europe, their name suffered a slight alteration in that of Hellenes: and the country they seized upon was called Hellas, a name which, in process of time, became common to all Greece. We might cite many other vestiges of this name, of which suffice it to mention the city and province of Elis in the Pelohonnesus, the city of Eleusis in Altica, and the river Elissus in the same province. Some authors even think that the C'amni Elizii, or Elysian fields, so celebrated among the Greek fables, derived their name from Elishah.-As to the colonies of the Dodanim, or Dorians, it is well known that the Startans or Lacedemonians considered themselves to be of Doric extraction. There was also a town in the province of Messene, not far from Sparta, called Dorion: and beyond the isthmus of the Pelohonnesus, there was a considerable tract called Doria, Dorica, or Doris; to say nothing about Dodona, which we have already mentioned, still more remote on the north-western coast of Greece. In a word, all the Greek nation is sometimes denoted by ancient authors under the name of Dores.-We have already remarked that the family of Kittim or Cittim, lying between that of Tarshish on the east, and Dodanim on the west, being exposed to the sea on the south, probably sent their first co!'cnies to the neighbouring island of Cytirus. But afterwards, extending their views further, and finding the lower part of Greece already inhabited by the descen-

THE PLANTATION OF THE EARTH.

dants of Elishah and Dodanim, they proceeded on, coastwise, along the western shores of Greece, till they came to the upper, or northern parts of it, where some of them planted themselves, while others passed over the Adriatic sea, and settled the opposite coasts of Italy. Hence, probably, it comes to pass that both Macedonia in Greece, and Italy, are denominated by the name of Cittim in scripture. In the book of Maccabees, it is said that Alexander, the son of Philih the Macedonian, came out of Chetteim; and there are authors who expressly say that the Romans or Latins had their extraction from the Citii or Cctii, as Eusebius, Suidas, and others, whose testimonies are produced by the learned Bochart.Whithersoever else the descendants of Tarsinish may have migrated, it is highly probable that Tartessus, a city and adjoining country, upon a river of the same name in Spain, much celebrated by the ancients for a great profusion of precious metals and other riches, was a colony of that family. For, besides the easy transition of the name, Polybius, in reciting the words of a league made between the Romans and Carthaginians, mentions a place named Tarseium, which Stephanus expressly says was a city in Spain near the pillars of Hercules. As Tartessus was celebrated among the ancients for the multitude of its riches, abounding in mines of silver, tin, read, &c. with which the inhabitants traded in the rairs of Tyre, according to the prophet Ezekiel, the Greck poets derived from it the celebrated fable of the pits of Tartarus, where the wicked were condemned to labour, and to various modes of torture. We may add, that in consequence of the immense trade carried on between the merchants of T'artessus and the Phenicians, &c. the whole. Mediterranean sea, through which it passed, was called the sea of Tarshish: and hence, ships of the same character constructed by Solomon in the red sea, to carry on his trade with Ohhir in the East Indies, for gold and silver; and other precious commodities, were called a navy of Tarshish. Finally, the seventy interfreters must have been possesscd of an opinion that this country was settled by the family of Tarshish, as they have rendered Tarshish sometimes by Carthage and sometimes by Carthaginians, by which they could only have meant those of Spain, where they had a Carthago Nova in their time; for they could not have meant the Carthage or Carthaginians in Africa, who, as is known to all, both ancient and modern, were a culony of T.yrè.

THE PLANTATION OF THE EARTH.

We will return now to Asia Minor, where we left the original settlement of the nations of Gomer and Javan; and passing a little to the east of this tract, we shall here find those of Meshech and Tubal, which we speak of in connexion, because they are so mentioned by Moses and elsewhere in scripture. The nation of Meshech, then, joined that of Gomer on the east, partly in Cafthadocia and Armenia; where the seventy interpreters rendered them by the name of Mosoch, and hence it is very probable that they were the descendants of those whom the Greeks called Moschi, in a province of these parts which they called Moschia.-To the north of Meshech, in Iberia, adjoined the first plantation of Tubal; who is affirmed by Josephus to have been the father of the Asiatic Iberians; adding that those whom

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THE PLANTATION OF THEEARTH.

were a colony originally of Meshech or Mosoch, called by the Greeks Moschi, is very probable, not only on account of the similarity of names, but of the respective situation of the Eurofrean and Asiatic Moschi to óne another.

Magog is, by the testimony of Josephus, Eustathius, St. Jerom, and Theodoret, and as Mr. Mede expresses it, by the consent of all men, placed north of Tubal, and esteemed the father of the Scythians that dwelt on the east and north-east of the Euxine sea. This situation is confirmed by the scripture itself, Ezek. 38. 2. Set thy face against Gog, in the land of Magog, the prince of Rosh Meshech and Tubal: hence we learn that the land of Magog must be near to that of Meshech and Tubal, for there was no other vacancy than on the north. And the name of Gog was preserved entire in that of Gogarene, whereby was formerly denoted a country in those parts; as we learn from Strabo and Stephanus, a name that may have easily been changed to Georgia, by which a considerable tract is known at this day in the same quarter. Indeed Pliny expressly reckons the Georgi among the nations about the Cashian sea, which name may have been a corruption of Gargareni. Of the colonies of Magog, we have only to say, that in the panegyric of Tibullus to Messala, mention is made by the poet of a people about the river Tanais called Magini; which carries a great affinity to Magog. 'Thus the Magini, in all probability were descendants of Magog, and came at length, in search of fertile settlements, to the river Tanais. Indeed the phalus. Maotis into which the Tunais runs, is supposed to have taken its name from Magog.

The Mcdes, so often mentioned in scripture with the Persians, to whom they were neighbours, have been almost universally looked upon as descendants of Madai, to whom the same opinions have assigned the country called Media, south of the Cashian sea, for the settlement of his family. And this is put beyond dispute by the scripture itself, which uniformly denotes the Medes by the name of Madai, in the Hebrew text. That Me. dia should be somewhat out of the reasonable bounds of the isles of the Gentiles, allotted to the descendants of Jafihet, can be no objection to so plain a matter of fact. - As for the colonies of Madai, M. Bochart is of opinion that the Sarmatians are to be looked upon in that relation. He conjectures that the name of Sarmatians was originally Sar-Madai, which, in the oriental languages, denotes posterity of the Medes.

Tiras, or Thiras, the last son of Jafthet, is by universal agreement, esteemed to be the father of the Thracians, so called from him by a little change in the primitive word. And the same is confirmed by the many traces of this name that were afterwards to be found attached to cities, bays, and rivers, in this country according to ancient writers. They also inform us that one of the names of Mars, the god of the Thracians, was Thuras which the seventy interpreters rendered Thiras.There is no doubt that some of the colonies of Tiras planted themselves in the country over against Thrace on the north of the Euxine sea; where there is a considerable river which entirely preserves the memory of the father of the Thracians, in the name of Tiras, now called Niester. There was also a city of the same name uponthis river.

TREPLANTATIONOETHEEARTH.

Before we take leave of the subject of Jafthet's descendants, it will be proper to notice Dr. Wells's objection to the above account of the first settlements of the families of Tiras and Maidai. He thinks that Media and Thrace were too remote from the original settlements of the rest of Jafhet's sons; ever to have been in the immediate possession of Madai and Tiras. Therefore he thinks it most probable that they settled originally in Asia Minor; and, on àccount of some similarity between the names of Tiras and Troas, Madai and Masi, that they were the ancestors of the ancient Trojans and Masians; adding that the colonies of Tiras and Madai might nevertheless have passed the Hellestont, and settled in Thrace and Macedonia: for he supposes with Mr. Mede, that that Madai, who is spoken of in scripture as the progenitor of the Medes, was some descendant of Shem. What weight these conjectures ought to have', against opinions acknowledged to be so long established and universal, we need not determine.

The plantations of the sons of Shem are next in geographical order to those of Jafhet, being in Asia, on the east and south of the nation of Gomer. Moses mentions five immediate sons of Shem, namely Elam, Ashur, Arphaxad, Lud,' and Aram: and of these he acquaints us with only the sons of $\operatorname{Arfhaxad}$ and Aram.

The portion that fell to the nation of $\mathcal{A}$ ram, lay in $\mathcal{A} r$. menia, Mesofotamia, and Syria. It is probable that $\boldsymbol{A r}$

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THE PIANTATION OF THEEARTE.

The nation of $\mathcal{A} s h u r$ lay east of the nation of $\operatorname{Aram}$, and is universally esteemed to be Assyria, so called from the father of that nation. But Assyria, as it is here understood, of which Nineveh was the capital, lay entirely east of the Tigris.

The nation of Elan was also seated beyond the $E u$ fihrates and Tigris, and south of Asshur, in Susiana and part of Persia; for the inhabitants of this tract are plainly and frequently denoted by the name of Elam, both in scripture and in heathen writers. 'Pliny and Ptolemy mention a country called Elymais on the Persian gulf; and Daniel the prophet speaks of Shushan, the chief city of Susiana, as lying in the province of Elam.

The lot assigned to Arphaxad, by the learned, was on the Tigris and Euphrates, comprehending the tower of Babel on the north, and the original site of the terrestrial Paradise on the south. It corresponded in part with the land of Shinar, Babylonia, and Chaldea. Were a citation of probabilities necessary to confirm or strengthen the best testimony, in favour of the valley of Shinar or the country of Eden being part of the first plantation of Arfhaxad, the progenitor of the Jewish nation through his son Heber, we might add, 1 st, that it was to this country Noah returned and settled after the flood, till the building of the tower therein occasioned the dispersion of mankind: 2d, that at the dispersion of mankind and confusion of languages, the primitive Hebrew tongue was preserved in the family of Arfhax$a d$, which' would reasonably imply that they still continued in the same parts with their grandsires $\mathcal{N}$ oah and Shem. 'The colonies of Arfhaxad, descended from his son Heber, in process of time, went hence to the east and the west. Jocktan, son of Heber, and his sons, settled the East-Indies, viz. Sheba settled Hindoostan or India; Havilah settled Thibet; and Ohhir settled the Molucca isles and Ceylon. Terah (a descendant of Pei leg, the son of Heber, who remained in Chaldea) migrated with his family westwards to Canaan: for thus we see it in. Genesis 11. 31. And Terah took Abram his son-and went forth with them-from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan. Upon this colony, their various branchings, and the nation with which they have connexion, it will be the province of the Sa. cred Geography to dwell more particularly, in the se. quel.

THEPLANTATIONOF THEEARTH.

Of Lud, and his descendants, Dr. Wells says there is nothing certain, but that they did not settle in the country of Lesser Asia, called Lydia.

Ham, the youngest of the three sons of Noah, had four sons, viz, Cush, Mizraim, Phut, and Canaan. Though we find Egypt twice or thrice denominated the Land of Ham, in the book of Psalms, yet Africa even was not all that fell to his descendants at the partition of the earth; as all the Land of Promise and the contiguous parts of Arabia were included-in their posses. sions, to say nothing of his grandson $\mathcal{N i m r o d}$ 's acquisition of $\mathcal{A}_{8 s y r i a}$ by conquest from the descendants of $\mathcal{A}_{s-}$ shur. There is no doubt that the personage denoted by the Greeks under the name of Jufiter Ammon, to whose. honour a temple celebrated for its oracles was erected in the part of Lybia adjoining Egypt, was no other than

Ham, who had settled in Egypt with his son Mizraim, as we shall see.-It is well known that the nation of Canaan settled in that part of $\boldsymbol{A}$ sia at the eastern extremity of the Mediterranean called Palestine, so ofien mentioned in scripture under the name of Land of Canaan, which God afterwards gave to the-Israelites, the seed of Abraham. We shall speak more fully of the Land of Canaan on a future occasion.-The nation of Cush is likewise frequently mentioned in scripture; and in such a manner as to show clearly that its first settlement was in the country adjoining Canaan on the south, that is in Arabia. That Ethiohia in Africa was not the land of Cush, is manifest from a passage in Ezekiel, 29, 13. where God makes his prophet say-I will make the land of Egytht desolate from the tower of Syrene even uns to the borders of Cush; which would plainly mean from one extremity of that land to the other. And all geográphers know that Syrene was the southern boundary of Egypt towards Ethiofia, consequently the other extremity was towards the isthmus of Suez, or Cuch in Arabia. It is nevertheless probable that Cush may have been the ancestor of the Ethionians, as the Cushites may have passed down the red sea, and crossed into Africa, and settled colonies in Ethiohia.-Of the descendants of Cush, Moses mentions Seba, Havilah, Sabtah, Sabtecha, Raamah, and two sons Sheba and Dedan; and then adds, - that Cush begat Nimrod, who began to be a mighty one uhon the earth;-all of whom settled in Arabia, except Nimrod, who invaded Assyria and founded Babylon, where the tozver of Babel had been begun. The kingdom of Nimrod, and the neighbouring countries, distin-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

thros, settled in upper Egypt, or Thebais, where Ptolemy places Patheras, an inland town not far from Thebes. And agreeably thereto the sehtuagint renders the $\mathrm{He}-$ brew Pathros by the Greek Pathyris.-The Casluhim are supposed to have settled Casiotis, the country about the borders of Egypt and Arabia, where a mountain was also called Casius, both which names retain somewhat that of Casluhim. This location is rendered still more probable, since Moses says from them sprang the Pliilistines; who, in process of time made themselves masters of the adjoining part of the land of Canaan.-The Cafhtorim'were situated near the Casluhim, and must have intermixed with them, as the Phlistines, who are expressly said to be descendants of the Casluhim, aresometimes called Cahhtorim; Deut. 2. 23. Jer. 47.4. and.Amos 2.7. The name of Cahhtorim is preserved in an old city in this part of Egypt called Contus, from which it is probable the common name of Egypt is derived: of this opinion is Mr. Mede and many of the learned.

The settlement of $P h u t$ is supposed to have been west ward of the descendant of Mizraim, that is west of Cy. renaica, and to have spread into Mauritania: for in Africu profier, below Adrumentum was a city called Putea mentioned by Pliny; and in Mauritania there was a river mentioned by Ptolemy called Phut. St. Jerom says there was a river in his own time in Mauritania called Phut, and the adjacent country Regio Phitensis.

THE EAST COUNTRIES.

TABLE IV.

THE EAST COUNTRIES,

From the time of Nimrod till the calling of Abraham thence to Canaan.
Ancient. . Modern.

1. The Kingdom of Nimrod. 1. Shinar, Assyria, Babylonia, a. Babylon,
b. Erech,
c. Accad,
cl. Calneh,
e. Nineveh, or Nineve,
$f$. Rehoboth,
-g. Halah, Calash,
h. Resen,
2. Chaldea,
a. Ur.
(a.) Haran,
3. Paras, or Persia, a. Shusham, Cutham, or Cuth, Chaldea, &c.

a. Babil.
b. Wasit, formerly Aracca.
c. Karkuf, formerly Sitace.
d. Al-Modain.
e. Nina, formerly Ninus.
f. El-Bir, formerly Birtha.
g. (East of Resen.)
$h$. Larissa, of Xenophon.
3. Part of Shinar, now Irak. a. Ur (whence Abraham was called to Haran.)
(ar) (whence Abraham was called to Canaan.)
2. Nod, Elam, or Susiana. a. Suster, formerly Susa.

Remarks.

Moses having named the other sons and grandsons of Cush, to whom nearly all Arabia was allotted at the plantation after the flood, abs above stated, sübjoins, that Cush begat Nimrod, who began to be a mighty one uhon the earth. Indeed he was so well skilled in hunting and warfare, that he became proverbial for valour and strength. The occasion of his applying himself to hunting is conjectured to be in order to destroy the wild beasts that began then to grow very numerous and to infest the nation of Cush-the deserts of Arabia being a convenient harbour for them. Having by degrees become a great master in hunting and destroying the beasts of prey, he not only ingratiated himself with his companions, and the inhabitants of the neighbouring countries, but inured them, like himself, to undergo fatigues and hardships, and to manage dexterously offensive weapons of various kinds. Being thus trained to hostilities with beasts of prey, and at length perceiving his skill and strength sufficient to act offensively even against mankind, he invaded first, the neighbouring parts of the nation of Shem, which had fallen to the family of Arhhaxad, and made himself master of the lower part of the Land of Shinar. The extraordinary fruitfulness and pleasantness of this tract, might have induced Nimrod to invade it, in preference to any other part of the nation of Shem.

THE EAST COUNTRIES.

Having conquered, the southern parts of the land of Shinar, he pitched upon the very spot where the city and tower of Babel had been begun, to rear the metropolis of his kingdom, which was therefore called Babel, and by the Greek's and Romans Babyion. Though we have spoken of this city in the foregoing part of this work, it is proper, to give a fuller account of it here. It stood, as has been said, on each side of the Euthrates, having streets running north and south parallel with the river, and others crossing these from east to west. The circumference of the Wall of this great city was 355 furlongs, that is, about forty miles; the height of it was 50 cubits, and the breadth not much less. It is said to have been built in one year, by the hands of 200,000 workmen daily employed upon it. Over the Euflhrates there was a sumptuous bridge; and at each end of the bridge there was a magnificent palace. This metropo-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THEEASTCOUNTRIES,

ned, Curtius, the historian, tells us, that it was diminished one fourth in his time: it was reduced to desolation in the time of Pliny; and in the days of St. Jerom, it was turned into a park, wherein the kings of Persia used to hunt. Ranwolf, a German physician, saw, and thus describes the site of this city in -1574 . "By a small village, called Eulego or Fulego, on the Euphrates, is the seat of the old Babylon, a day and a half's journey from Bagdat. The lands about it are so dry and desolate, that one might justly doubt the fertility of it, and the greatness of this city, if the vast ruins still to be seen, did not banish all suspicion. There are still standing some arches of a bridge on the river; which is here half a mile broad and very deep: these arches are built of bricks, and are wonderfully compacted. A quarter of a mile below the village, in a plain, are the fallen. ruins of a castle; and beyond that, are the ruins of the tower of Babel, half a German mile in circumference, which is now the receptacle of serpents and venomous creatures. All who travel over these plains, will find vast numbers of the ruins of very ancient, great, and lofty buildings, towers, arches, and such like structures, of wonderful architecture. There is only one tower, called Daniel's tower, which is still entire and inhabited; from whence may be seen all the ruins of this once vast metropelis, which sufficiently demonstrate the truth of what ancient writers have said of its 'greatness, by the' vastness of their extent."

We proceed now to speak of the other cities of the kingdom of Nimrod, mentioned with Babel as lying in the land of Shinar, which are Erech, Acchad, and Cal-

THE EASTCOUNTRIES.
neh. As to Erech, there is no question that it was the same which occurs in Ptolemy, under the name of Arec. $c a$; and which is placed by him at the last, or most southern turning of the common channel of the Euphrates and Tigris. The fields hereof are mentioned by Tibullus, on account of their springs of naththa, which is a sort of liquid bitumen.-The city of Acchad in Hebrew, is written Archad by the seventy interpreters; whence some traces of this name are thou'ght to be preserved in that of Argades, a river that runs near Sittace, the name by which this city was afterwards called, standing at some distance east of the Tigris, and giving name to Sittacene, a country between Babylon and Susa.-Calne or Chalneh, otherwise called Chalnoh or Channe, was a considerable place even in the days of Amos. It is said by Eusebius, St. Jerom, and others, to be the same with Ctesithon, standing upon the Tigris, about three miles from Seleucia, and was for some time the capital city of the Parthians. That this was the situation of Chalnelh, is confirmed from the country about Ctesithon being even by the Greeks called Chalonitis, a name plainly derived from Chalneh. And as we are expressly told by Ammianus Marcellinus, that Pacorus, a king of the Parthians, changed its name, imposing on it the Greek of Ciesinhon, we may reasonably suppose that its old name was Chalneh, and that from it the neighbouring country took the name of Chalonitis, which it retained after the city had lost its original appellation.

Thus we have seen what Moses calls " the beginning of the kingdom of Nimrod," which was "Babel, and Erech, and Archad, and Chalneh, in the land of Shinar.":

THE EAST COUNTRIRS.

But afterwards he extended his kingdom further, and " out of the land of Shinar, he went out into $\dot{A}_{\text {ssyria }}$ and built Nineveh, and the city of Rehoboth, and Calah, and Resen between Nineveh and Calah."

Ninevel is so called from Ninus the son of Nimrods, it being a compound of the Hebrew nin-nave, which signifies the dzelling of Ninus. As to the situation of this once potent city, there is a great diversity of opinions concerning it. And perhaps the true one is, that the very place where the kings and princes of the $\boldsymbol{A}_{s}$ syrians thence lived in such splendour, is no longer discernible: which verifies the prophecy of Nalum, 1.8. With an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the hlace thereof. And this is particularly taken notice of by Lucian in one of his dialogues, wherein he says " Ninus was so utterly destroyed, that there remained no footsteps of it, nor could one tell where it stood.". However, from the observation of the learned, we may infer that there were two cities of this name; one on the Euthrates and the other on the Tigris, which last is that mentioned so often in scripture. It is evem supposed that this Nineveh, in process of time, changed its place, inasmuch as Nimrod first built it upon the $\mathrm{Ti}_{-}$ gris above the mouth of the Lycus; but, being taken and destroyed by the Medes, another city arose afterwards, at no great distance from the former, below the mouth of the Lycus, out of its̀ ruins, as it were, and bore the same name. This conjecture is the more probable, as the like bas often happened to other cities. The greatness of this city even exceeded that of Babylon itself. These are the dimensions of Ninus given by Di-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THEEASTCOUNTRIES.

Nimrod, having suffered nearly the same fate with $\mathcal{N i}$ neveh, nothing can be said of them which will amount to more than conjecture. Of the name of Rehobot/s there remain no traces; but there being in these parts a city called Birtha by Ptolemy, denoting streets in the Chaldee tongue, the same as Rehoboth in the Hebrew, it is conjectured that Rehoboth and Birtha are only different names for one and the same city. And it is not to be doubted that Birtha of Ptolemy, is the same with $\dot{V}$ erta of A. Marcellinus, seated on the Tigris not far from the Lycus. There is also mention made of a city Rehoboth, on the Euphrates; but this was at too great a distance from Assyria, to have bcen built by Nimrod.As we find in Strabo, a country about the head of the river Lycus, called Calachene, it is very probable that this country took its name from Calah or Calach, which was once the capital city of it. To this city and country; it is very probable, that Salmanassar transplanted some of the ten tribes of $I_{s}$ rael, as we read in II. Kings, 17. 6. though the name is there somewhat differently spelt.-The last city built by Nimrod was Resen, which Moses tells us was between. Nineveh and Calal on the Tigris. Though there were two cities in Mesofotamia, whose names are some what similar to that of Resen, yet Larissa mentioned by Xenophon, corresponds best with it, both in point of situation and grandeur: for Moses says that Kesen was a great city; and Xenophon tells us that Larissa was a strong and great city, being eight miles in circumference, and having walls 100 feet high and 20 broad. But it is probable Xenophon made some alteration in the original name of this city, as Larissa is Greek.

THETEASTCOUNTRIES.

The sacred historian having finished his account of the kingdom of Nimrod, passes on to the history of Abraham, giving a genealogical account of his descent from Shem. After this he informs us that Terah, taking his son Abrahain with him, and Lot his grandson by Haran, and Sarah wife of $A b r a h a m, ~ l e f t ~ U r$ of the Chaldees, to go into Canaan; and that having come unto Haran, they sojourned there. It remains then, in illustrating the subjects of the above table, to say something of Chaldea, Ur, and Haran.

During the interval of several ages from the time of $\mathcal{N i m r o d}$, till the calling of $\operatorname{Abraham}$ from $U_{r}$, the name of Chaldea became distinctive of the greater part of the above country included in the kingdom of Nimrod, lying between Mesofiotamia on the north, Sutsiana on the east, the Persian gulf on the south, and Arabia Deserta on the west. Its.capital city was Babylon, on which account Isaiah the prophet called it the beauty of the Chaldees excellency. But in process of time the name of this metropolis prevailed over all the country of Chaldea in that of Babylonia. Hence Babyloniia and Chaldea are frequently used reciprocally; and sometimes they are reciprocally restrained; one within provincial limits to the other. The above boundaries are such as the Greek and Roman writers assign to Chaldea; but in the sacred writings it is sometimes taken in a larger sense, so as to include the neighbouring parts of Mesofiotainia. This is evident from the words of St. Stephen; "The God of. glory appeared to our father Abraham when he was in

THE EAST COUNTRIES.

Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran, and said unto him, get thee out of this country'‘ Then came he out of the land of the Chaldees, and dwelt in Charran." Here 'we see Chaldea and Mesohotamia are' used convertibly." Dr. Well conjectures that Chaldea was derived from Chesed, one of the sons of Nuhor, and the supposed father of astronomy at $\boldsymbol{U} r$, where he continued to reside after Terah and his family had departed.-That the city of $U r$ was famous for astronomy is evident from its name, which signifies light, in honour of that science which cultivates a knowledge of the celestial luminaries. As to the situation of $U r$, it is plain from what has been said, that it was in' the eastern part of Mesonotamia, included in the name of Chaldea, which in all probability was the part about which originated the appellation of Land of the Chaldees. This situation of $U r$ agrees both with the words of St. Stefinen, and with the writings of $A^{\prime}$. Marcellinus, who travelled this country, and mentions a city of this name lying therein, between the Tigris and the city of Nisibis.-Haran, or Charran, is conjectured to have been so called by Terah, in memory of his deceased son Haran, the father of Lot. It was situated in the west of Mesofnotamia, on a river of the same name in the Greek writers, which runs first into the Chaboras, and with it into the Eufihrates. This place is taken notice of under the name of Charree by Roman writers, on account of a great overthrow there given by the Parthians to the Roman army under the command of Crassus; who was slain in the battle. To this day the name of Haran is preserved on the same. gnot by an inconsiderable village.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

CANAAN.

Aram, an immediate son of Shem, to the north and east; and the nation of Cush one of his brothers, to the south and south-east; and the nation of Mizraim, another of his brothers, to the southrwest; his western boundary being the Mediterranean sea. - His descendants are thus reckoned by Moses, Gen. 10. 15-18; "Canaan begat Sidon his first born, and Heth, and the Jebusite, and the Amorite, and ihe Girgashite, and the, Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite, and the Arvadite, and the Zemerite, and the Hamathite,"

The Canaanitish nations took their names from these eleven sons of Canaan, from whom they were descended, respectively. Dr. Wells says it is more than probable that all these families were seated originally in the true boundaries of Canaan; but in process of timé, being dispossessed of a considerable portion of their patrimony by the Philistines, some of these were obliged to crowd closer together in the portion that remain: ed to their possession, while others were compelled to seek their asylum in the neighbouring country. Being disturbed in their southern possessions, those who flee, their country passed its northern limits; and those nations that we thus find beyond the limits of Canaan, are the Arkites, the Sinites, the Arvadites, the $Z_{\text {emarites, }}$ and the Hamathites. We are also informed that a portion of each of these nations remaining in Canaan were so confusedly mixed as to be no longer' distinguishable, and were there denoted collectively by the general appellative of Canaanites. The Kadmonites and Perizzites, sere also attributed to the common original of the $C a \cdot$. manites.

CANAAN.

Having premised thus much of the families of the Canaanites in general, it is proper now to notice the situation of each family in particular; which we shall do in the order they are mentioned by Moses. The situation then, of Sidon is evidently marked out by the famous city of that name. Though Tyre is celebrated by the poets for its antiquity, and the Tyrians themselves were wont to boast thereof, yet it is notorious that Si don was more ancient. In Isaiah, 23. 12. Tyre is expressly styled the daughter of Sidon; by which is meant that the Tyrians were a colony of the Sidonians. Though the Tyrians at length became more considerable than the Sidonians, yet it is apparent from profane as well as sacred writers that the Sidonians were, in the earlier ages of the world, much more constderable than the Tyrians. Homer never mentions Tyre, but makes frequent mention of the Sidonians, to whom 'he givès the character of being very ingenious in several arts.-The descendants of Heth are styled in scripture às children of Heth, or Hittites. As Sidon planted his family to the north of Canaan, Heth on the other hand took the southern part about Hebron, for when Sarah died at Hebron, "Abraham spoke to the sons of Heth about the purchase of a burying-place, to which they readily ágreed —and Abraham stood up and bowed himself to the people of the land." - The family of Jebusite was seated about Jerusalem, originally called Jebus. I. Chron. 11.4." And David and all Israel went to Jerusateim; which was Jebus, where the 'Jebusites wére the inha: bitants of the land." So that the Jebusites adjoined the Hittites towards the north.-The Amorites also dwelt in these hilly parts of the land of Canaan, as is asserted in Nilm. 13..29, where the men that were sent to search out the land, gave this account of it to. Moses: "The Hittites and the Jebusites, and the Antorites, dwelt in the mountains," &c. And wre are told, Gen.14.7. "That Chedorlaomer smote the Amorites that were in Hazezontamar," which was the same place with Engaddf, seated in the hilly parts of Canaan, east. ward, and towards the Jordun.-The Girgashites pro. bably seated themselves at first along the upper part of the river Jordan. For, on the east side of the sea or lake of Tiberias', in the time of Christ, we are told of a city called Gergesa.-The Hivites settled in the upper or northern parts of Canaan, adjoining the Sidonians, in Mount Lebanon.-Thus we have recounted,the settlements of those families of Canaan, which are mentioned in the sequel of the sacred history, as having continued within the original boundaries of the lot of Canaan. Though the remaining five sons. of Canaan were probably seated in the original boundaries of this lot, as we have above hinted, and that in all likelihood about the south-west corner of it, whence they were driven by the Philistines, yet-we have no distinct mention of their settlement till after their removal beyond the limits of the land of Canaan; and these we shall now speak of. The Arkiies are supposed to have settled about that part of mount Libanus, where Ptolemy and others place a city called Arce.-The Sinites likewise settled in these parts; and St. Jerom tells us of a city here called Sin, which, though in succeeding ages it was ruined by war, yet survives, in name and place. . The Sin in Egypt has

CANAAN.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

-丷.Further eastward, and southeast of Canaan, dwelt the gigantic Emims: And full east of Cantan, dwelt the gigantic Zamzuinmims or Zumims. -Lastly, on the north-east dwelt the Refhaims, who were also of the same 'gigantic race. -Thus we have seen the several peoplé that inhabited the countriè's adjöning Canãan on the south-west, south-east, east, and north-east, when Sabraham came thither. The country directly on the north, we have just shown, was possessed by several Canaanitish families, who had been dispersed by the Philistines.

It is indeed said, that when Chedorlaomer, king of Elam, with his confederates, smote the Refhaims, $Z u$ mims, Emins, and Horites, they also smote the country of the "Amalekites; but this must be understood proleptically of the Amalekites, as thëy were descendants of 'Amalek, grandson of Esau, and therefore gave name to that country long subsequent to the days of Abralam and Chedorlaomer: They consequently belong to a notice (which concludes the Sacred Geography) that will be given of the neighbouring nations of Canaan of a subsequent period, who had supplanted those last mentioned,'previous to Joshua's conquest of the Promised Land.

PRINCIPAL PLACEXS AND INCIDENTS,

Mentioned during the sojourning of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in Canaan; together with the dwellings of their immediate descendants, छ̌c.

1. Salem, or Sechem, afterwards Jerusalem, whither' :Abraham came from Haran by divine command, with his nephew Lot.
2. The Plain of Moref, where Abraham sojourtoed awhile, near Salem. This ylain is otherwise fendered the High Oak, on account of a notable oak that stood in or near it, under which many transactions took place, that are spoken of in scripture. It was a part of this flain that Jacob bought and bequeathed to Josenh as a mark of his particular favour: and in it there was a well, whereon our Saviour sat whilst he discoursed with the woman of Samaria, called Jacob's Well because he had caused it to be made.
3. Bethel, somewhat south of Sechem, near which Abraham came next to sojourn in a neighbouring Mount; till a famine occasioned his departure with Lot for Egypt, whence they shortly returned by several journeys, to the same Mount; which divided Bethet on the west from Hai or $\mathcal{A} i$ on the east. Bethel is spoken of proleptically' by Moses, in the history of Abraham, as this name was afterwards given to it by Jacob.
4. The Plain of Jordan, through which the river Jordan flowed, and of which the valley of Jericho and vale of Siddim, were parts. After parting with his uncle Abraham at the Mount between Bethel and Hai, in consequence of their substance being grown so great that they could no longer dwell together, Lot by the permission of his uncle, chose all the nlain of Jordan to abide in, and pitched his tent near Sodom.
5. The Plainof Mamré, about two miles from He. Dron, where Abraham went to abide after parting with Lot, and where he raised an altar and entertained three angels under an oak. By a degeneracy of the true dévotion, this oak in after ages became famous for the su.

SOJOURNING OE ABRAHAM, &C.
perstitiọus worship performed there; which Constantine the great, and first Christian emperor of Rome, put a stop to, by having the altar destroyed, and a church built in its place.-The city of Hebron is frequently mentioned in the sacred history; as it was a place of great renown in those days. The, name of Hebron seems to have been given to it by the Israelites, for it was first called. Kirjath-Arba, or the city of Arba. Mam$r e$, from a distinguished friend of Abraham, was also another name for Hebron, as it was of the neighbouring flain. We are told in scripture that it was built seven years before Zoar in Egypt, which was the royal city of the Pharaohs, whose antiquity was the boast of the Egyp-tians.-Hebron was situated on the ridge of mountains which run southward from Jerusalem. As it was fa: mous for Abraham's sojourning in its neighbouring plain, was it famous in after daysffor king David's keeping his court there for the first seven years of his reign, till he took Jerusalem. It was also one of the cities that were given to the Levites, and a city of refuge: and when the Christians had conquered Palestine, it was made a bishop's see, as we are told by the priters of those times.
6. Sodom, Gomorrat, Admah, Zeboim, and Bela or Zoar, the pentapolis or five cities of that part of the plain of Jordan called the vale of Siddim, afterwards destroyed for their wickedness by fire from heaven, and covered by the salt sea, with the exception of Zoar, which was saved by the intercession of Lot. The kings of these several cities, some time after Lot had come among them, threw off their subjection to Chedorlao.

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

sófovining of a'braitam, & C .

in the way thither, at a fountain or well, by an angel of the Lord; and that this well was thereforc calledBeer-lahai-roi, that is, the well of him that lives and sees me. 'This well or fountain, near which'Isaac dwelt some time, after the death of Abraham, was not far from Gerar.
11. Beersheba. Abraham was still abiding in these parts, when he made a covenant with Abimelech or the ling of Gerar; respecting a well he had dug. This well, from the mutual oath taken by the parties, was called Beersheba, or the well of the oath. Here Abraham planted a grove, and therein called on the name of the Lord, the everlasting God. In process of time there was a considerable town built here, which is spoken of by the heathen writers by the name of $\operatorname{Ber}+\dot{b} b a$ of $\operatorname{Ber}-$ zimma. The greatest length of the land of Israel or Canaan, is frèquentily denoted in scripture, by the distance from' Dan in the north to Beersheba in the south.
12. Mount Moriah. Whilst 'Abraham sojourned at Beersheba, it plea'sed God to make that signal trial of his obedience, by requiring him to go into the land or' mount of Moriah and make him a burnt sacrifice of his only son Isaac whom he loved. This was the same mount whereon Solomon built his temple; and on one part of it, namely, mount Calvary, our saviour actually offered up himself to God for the redemption of man. kind.
13. The Cave of Machpelah. At the death of Sarah, while Abraham sojourned at Mamre near Hebron, he bought the neighbouring field and cave of Macdicelah, as a burying place for his family; and he buried Squah therein. Here also Abraham,* his son Isaac, and other patriarchs were afterwards buried.

1. Beer-lahat-roi. Having finished the history of Abraham, Moses proceeds to that of Isaac: who continued to dwell, after his father's death; at Beer-lahai-roi, where, in all probability, Esau and Jacob were born. But a famine ensuing, $I_{\beta} a a c$ went to
2. Gerar, and dwelt there. Hence he.removed to
3. The Valley of Gerár, and pitching his tent, dwelt there; and digged -again the: well of Beersheba, which had been dug by his father: for the Philistines had stopped it after his death. And here. Isaac; en-
[^19]SOJOURNINGOEABRAHAM, &C.
tered into a covenant with the reigning Abimelech or Philistian king of Gerar, such as his father had entered into with a former Abimelech. We just mentioned that the city built here in succeeding times, took the name of Beersheba. Jacob having deceived his father, and thereby cheated his elder brother Esau of his birthright, was sent to his uncle Bethuel, who dwelt' at Haran in Padan-Aram or Mesofolamia; where he remained fourteen years. At the expiration of this time, he returned to his father, who then dwelt at
4. Mamre, near Hebron, where Abraham had formerly sojourned: and here he died, and was buried in the cave of Machhelah, - by his two sons. So that there are no places mentioned in the sojourning of Isaac, which have not been noticed in that of Abrakam.

1. Bethel, or the House of God; the place where Jacob, on his way from Beersheba to Haran, tarried all night, and in his sleep had a vision, in which the Almighty renewed the pronise he had made to Abraham and $I_{s a a c}$, that in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed-alluding to the Messiah or Saviour of mankind: hence Jacob called this place Bethel, that is the house of God. This name was afterwards communicated by the Israelites to the neighbouring city of $L u z$; which at a still later period was, by the priphet Hosea, called Beth-aven, that is, the house of vanity and idelatry, in consequence of Jeroboam's setting up one of his golden calves therein. This place was not far from Jerusalem, though it belonged to the kingdom of Israel after the ten tribes revolted from the house of David,

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

SOJOURNING OFABRAHAM, &C.
vid. And for the same reason, it was chosen for the ree tirement of David duriug the rebellion of his son Absa-lom.-Jacob having sent his wives and children forward across a brook called Jaḅok, he'tarried a while on the north side of it, at a place which he called
5. Peniel or Punuel, that is, the face off God; because there it pleased God to appear to him face ioface. It was on this occasion that God gave him the name of Israel. A town in this vicinity also, was named Penuel by the Is ricelites.-Jacob next came to
6. Succore, not far from the Jordan, where he built himself a house, and booths for his cattle. Hence also an adjoining city came. to be called Succoth in sacred bistory.-After some time Jacob proceeded to
7. Salem or Sechem, where he bought a "parcel of ground." And hence, by God's appointment, he went to 18. Betael, where he again had a vision of the Almighty. $\cdots$ Thence he journeyed still to the southward, to
9. Ephrath, or Bethleheh, near which Rachel died in giving birth to Benjamin: and Jacob. set a pillar upon her grave, between Salem and Bethlehem. This monument was standing in the days of Moses; though the present monument that is shown to strangers on the road from Jerusalem to Bethlehem cannot be that which was erected by Jacob, as it has the appearance of a modern and Turkish structure. Bethlehem is also rendered famous by the birth of David, and still more so by that of our Saviour Jesus Christ.-From this place Jacob or Israel.journeyed, and spread his tent beyond
10. The Tower of Epar, which, according to some of the learned, was in a field near Bethlehem. Hence he went to 11. Mamre or Mebron, unto his father, who dying shortly after, was buried by $E_{s a u}$ and Jacob, as we have mentioned above. The former then returned to Mount Scir, the place of his residence; while the latter continued at the late abode of his father, whence, some time after, he sent •his son Joseth to Dathan, twelve, miles north of Samaria, to inquire after his brothers, whohad been attending their father's flocks near Sechem: ẅhereupon they sold Joseth to Ishmaelite and Midianite merchants, then trading from Gilead to Egyht, whither they carried him along with them, and sold him to $P$ ther, captain of Pharaoh's guards.

SOJOURNING OF ABRAKAM, &C.

Before we follow the footsteps of Josehh to Egypt, to give an account of that country so far as it relates to the sacred history, we will speak in a few words, of the dwellings of the other sons of Abraham by Hagar and Keturah, with those of the sons of Lot, and of Esau the elidest son of Jacab.

Ishmael diwelt in the wilderness of Paran, whither be had been banished with his mother Hagar. Here Le took a wife out of Egypt, and became the father of twelve sons, whose posterity dwelt in various parts of Arabia; from Egypt to the Persian gulf. Some of these twelve sons of $I_{8}$ hmael are particulatly mentioned by Moses as inhabiting these parts; and plain 'marks of their names are 10 be found, in the heathen writers, among the inhabitants of this tract: Thus the descend. ants of $\mathcal{N i}$ baioth the first son of Ishmael, were the $\mathcal{N e}$.:
bathai; who are more frequently mentioned by the Greeks and Romans than the rest. But the particular situation of each is neither important nor clearly designated. . We need only observe further, that these people were, from-their father, denominated Ishmaelites; so were they called Hagarènes or Hagarites, from their grandmother, Hagar.- Under this last name they are mentioned by heathen writers, some calling them Agaai and others Agareni. But though the names of Hagarenes and Ishmaelites, may have been used promiscuously at first; yet the lapse of time seems to have raised some distinction between them, inasmuch as the psalmist denotes those that were next the Edomites to be Ishmaelites, and those next the Moabites to be Hagarenes. In fine, the Arabs to this day value themselves upon their descent from Ishmael.

During his life time Abraham made presents to his sons by Ketuŕrah, and settled them in the parts of Arabia lying east of Canaan. The principal of these sons was Midian, the father of the Midianites, who settled to the south-east of the salt sea, adjoining the Moabites. In the course of time, the Midianites seein to have extended to the red sea, where a tract was called the land of Midian, in which Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, lived.

The dwelling of the Moabites and Ammonitcs, descendants of Lot by his two sons, Moab.the elder, and Ben-Ammi the younger, father of Ammon, next demand our attention.-Moab settled himself eastward of the salt sea or Asinhaltite lake, and of the river Jordan.-- Ben-Ammi and his son Ammon, father of the Ammonites,

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

EGYPT.

TABLE VI.

Egypt or land of Mizraim, and its cities.

1. (Objects west of the Nile).
a. No or Ammon-No?
(Isle of the 70 interpreters).
b. Noph or Memphis.
2. Rahab.
a. Zoar, (royal city of Pharaoh.)
b. Sain or Sin?
3. Land of Goshen or Rameses.
a. Rameses or Raamses.
b. Pithom.
c. Sin.
d. Tahpanhes or 'Taphnas.
e. On, Aven, or Bethshemesh.
f. Succoth.
s. Etham,
h. Piahiroth,
i. Migdol,
j. Baal zephon.
4. Land of Pathros,
a. Pathros,
b. No, or Ammon-No, (city of Jupiter Ammon),
c. Syene,
(d. Nahal, or Great River), (e. Sichor, or river of Egypt).
5. Objects west of the Nile).
a. Alexandria, (Pharos, near Alexandria),
, b. (No remains).
6. The Delta.
a. San, (Tanis of the Greeks).
b. Sa, (Sais).
7. (East of the Delta to the Isthmus).
a. (Whence the Israelites departed for Canaan).
b. Heroopolis.
c. Tineh, (Pelusium).
d. Safnas, (Daphnaz Pelusiz).
e. Matarea, (Heliopolis).
$f$ f. (Places confuing on the
8. Red Sea, in the route of
h. (the Israelites journeying $i$.
$j$. from Egypt.
9. Thebais or Upper Egypt. a. Pathyris?
b. Aksor, or Luxor, (Diospolis Magna, or Thebx).
c. Asscian.
(d. The Nile).
(e. Between Egypt & Canaan).

Remarks.

We have already seen that ${ }^{\text {Egyft }}$ is generally denoted, in the Hebrew text, the Land of Mazraim, from its being first settled by Mizraim, one of the sons of Ham. It is there also sometimes styled the Land of Ham; which renders it probable that Ham settled with his som Mizraim in this country.

EGYPT.

The Egyptians were looked upon by the heathens, as he inventors of geométry, arithmetic, astronomy, phy, sic, magic, and sorcery. . Of their skill in this last, we have remarkable instances in scripture, Exod.7.11, &c. They are said to have expressed their conceptions, in the earlier ages, by the shapes, of birds, beasts, trees, ànd various fanciful figures, which species of language they termed hyeroglyfthics. . They certainly had a very hap. py talent for this sort of composition, which probably was the original of all symbolical representations of thought. And what tends to confirm this conjecture, is, that they are considered as the inventors of letters; which are but a refinement upon hyeroglyhhics. In short, it was from the Egyptians, that Pythagoras, and Democritus, learnt their philosophy; Lycurgus, Solon, and Plato, their forms of government; and Orpheus and Homer, their poetical fictions of the Gods. Hence we may form some conception of the great learning of which Moses was endowed, when St. Stethen, Acts vii. 22. says " he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians."

The space inclosed between the bifurcation of the Nile before it enters the sea, and the coast, was called by the Greeks the Delta, on account of its triangular shape. For the same reason, M. Bochart thinks that this tract is denoted in the book of Psalms, and in the prophecy of Isaiah, by the name of Rahab: for, says he, the Hebrew word Rahab is the same with the Egyptian word Rib, wherel)y to this very day this tract is called, from its resemblance to the shape of a pear, which the Egyptians call rib; and hence in the very middle of this tract there was a Nomé or district named Athribis, that is, the heart of the pear. -In this tract was the royal city Zoan, called Tanis by the Greeks, situated on the tanitic mouth of the Nile, near the sea. If this is not the city of Egytut, which is first mentioned in the sacred history, it was at least the most ancient of all the cities of Egypt, and the -first royal seat of the Pharaohs, the most ancient kings of that country. Several of the miracles which were wrought before Pharaoh, to gain his consent that the Israelites should go out of Egypt, are said to have been done in the fields of Zoan.-The next city of Egypt mentioned in scripture, is $\mathcal{N} \circ \not h h$, by the seventy interpreters rendered Memphis, situated on the west of the Nile and above the Delta. It participated with. Zoon the dignity of royal residence, and finally superceded it. Memphis* is celebrated by heathen writers; for the pyramids which were built in its neighbourhood; and the sphinx which is cut out of an entire rock. These pyramids are by the Arabs and Turks called the mountains of Pharaoh; one of which is said to have been built by that Pharaoh who perished with his army in the red sea.

EGYPT.

* Old Cairo succeeded Memphis on the opposite side of the Nile. Thevenot has observed that all the fine pieces of antiquity which remain in Egypt, are attributed to Joseph; and all that are of an opposite character to Pharaoh, who opposed the departure of the Israelites from Egypt. Thus the inhabitants have a tradition that the Granaries of Old Cairo, which are called Joseph's Granaries, are the very Granaries which that patriarch built to lay up corn in for the approaching years of famine. Also among the ruins of New or Grand Cairo, is, a beautiful Hall, called Joseph's Hall, which is supported by thirty large pillars of Theban marble a Near this castle orpalace, is a prison divided into many dungeons cut out of the rock, called Joseph's prison, under the pretence that

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

oriental name Tahtanes, denòting fleasant or beautiful, was originally derived Dafhne, used by the Greeks to signify the same.-Pibeseth is rendered by the seventy interpreters Bubastis, which stood near the pelusiac branch of the Nile, some distance south of.Pelusium. There was another city in Egypt, mentioned in Ezek. 30. 17. by the name of Pibeseth.-Still more to the south, at some distance from this eastern channel of the Nile, stood the city On, otherwise called Aven, and Bethshemesh in different parts of scripture, and Heliofolis by profane writers; all of which names have reference to the idolatry for which this city was famous, signifying the city of the Sun. •The prophet Jeremia'h distinguishes between this city and that in the land of Israel of the same name, when he says, that "Nebuchadnezzar, kịng of Babylon, shall break the images of Bethshemesh that is in the land of Egypt." It was the daughter of the priest of this city, whom Pharaoh gave in marriage to Joseth. And Josephus tells us that this city was given to the Israelites for a dwelling, upon their coming into Egypt. -Succoth, Etham, Piahiroth, Migdol, and Baal-zethon, which lay in the route of the Israelites between Rameses and the red sea, will be touched upon in the next article.

The country or land of Pathros, as it is called in Jer. 44. 1: corresponded with Thebais or upper Egypt. Pathros is also spoken of as a city by several of the prophets: and the probability is, that it stood somewhat remote from the Nile, on the wèst, over against Thebes; for Pliny mentions a Nome or district in this quarter by the name of Pathyrites, and Ptolemy a town called Pathyris or Tathiris, which are supposed to have derived their names from'Hebrew Pathros.-The city of $\mathcal{A m}$ mon, which in the British translation of the Bible is rendered No, and by the seventy interpreters Diosholis or the city of Juniter, was the'same with the famous city of Thebes: for, Ammon or Diostholis is reported to have been sery largé, and to have had no less than ore hun. dred gates; and Thebes is well known to have been surnamed Hecatomhyla on account of its hundred gates. It was also greatly beautified by its colossal statues, obelisks, temples, palaces, and other magnificent buildings. It is not unworthy of notice here, that some have suipposed there $\mathcal{w}^{*}$ as a city called $\mathcal{N o}$ or $\mathcal{A m m o n}-\mathcal{N} o$, in the times of writing the Old Testament, where Alexander the great afterwards built upon its ruins, the noble cities of 'Alex-andria.-Syene is the last city of this part of Egypt, mentioned in Scripture; and indeed, it is the most southern city of Thebais, on the confines of Ethiohia. Hence the prophè $\dot{E z e k i e l, ~ s p e a k i n g ~ o f ~ t h e ~ d e s o l a t i o n ~ t h a t ~ G o d ~}$ would bring upon all Egypt from one extremity to the other, proceeds-" Therffore, thus says the Lord; Behold, I will make the land of Egypt utterly desolate, from the tower of Syene even to the border of Cush." This city is said to have been exactly under the ropic of Cancer: so that when the sun entered that sign of the zodiac, its beams shone perpendicularly uponit, casting no length of shadow.

EGYP'T.

he here interpreted the dream of the king's butler. But says Thevenot, the finest and most curious structure to be seen in the castle, is, what they call Joseph's Well.'

PRINCIPAL PLACES AND INCIDENTS,

Mentioned in the journeying of the Israelites from Egyft to the Promised Land.

1. Rameses; whence the Israelites set forth for Canaan.
2. Succory, their first day's journey, marching eastwardly.
`3. Etham, their second day's journey, near the wilderness, whence, God having vouchsafed to guide them in future by a miraculous pillar, that had the appearance of smoke by day; and fire by night, they turn S. W. to
3. Pihahiroth, their third day's journey, to pass the
4. Red Sen (its western arm) or Weedy sea, to avoid Pharaoh's army; the water yielding to them but destroying the army.
5. Wildenness of E'fam, or Shur, into which, out of the red sea, they went three day's journeying to
6. Marah, where the water was bitter, but sweetened by a peculiar wood. Hence they went to
7. Elim, where they found 12 wells, and 70 palm-trees. From Elim, passing near the
8. Red.Sea. they encamped in the
9. Wilderness of Sin, where God first sent them manna, with which they were thereafter regularly served. Out of the wilderness of Sin, the Israelites took their journey, and encamped at 10. Dophкон, which was next to Sin. And they departed from Daphkoh, and encamped in 11. Alush, which was next to Dophkoh. And they removed froin Alush and encamped in

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

THEEXODUS, $\& \subset$ 。

20. Kadesh, in Zin, where they abode for several days; and having compassed mount Seir, or the land of Eliond for some time, left the desert, and encamped at 21. Mount Hor, in the edge of Edom, where Aarod died. Decamping hence they pitched in
22. Żalmonath, then in
23. Punon, and then in
24. Овотн, where they again despair; for which fiery serpents are sent among them: they repent and are for ${ }^{-}$ given, & & c. They then proceed to
25. Ije-bakim, on the border of Moab, whence they pass the valley or brook Zered; when, ${ }^{38}$ years having elapsed, and the offenders being nearly all dead, God charges Moses to pass the coast of Moab, and not to distress the children of Ammon, on coming among them. Accordingly they pass the river Arnon to

- 26. Dibon-Gad, among the Amorites. After making several other encampments, they pitched in the

27. Plains of Moab, by the Jordan, near Jericho; whence God commanded Moses to get into the mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, to the top of Pisgash that is over against Jericho, and take a view of the delightful country from which he was excluded on account of his improper conduct in the desert of Zin ; which he did, after appointing Joshua his successor to conduct the Israelites into, Canaan, and there died.*

- It may not be amiss here to remark, that though Moses professes to give an account of the journey of the Ispaelites; it is not to be inferred that be designed to give a detail of all the places where they made a halt for a short time, or which were not distinguished for any remarkable occurreace.
rHEEEXUDUS. &
-But before the death of Moses, and preparatory to the conquest of Canaan by Joshua; the Israplite's had subdued the country beyond or on the east of the Jordan; which Moses divided between the two tribes of Reuben and Gad, and one half of the tribe of Manasseh.

It remains now to add a few words respecting the twelve tribes, or of the descendants of Levi in particular, before we pass on to the Land of Promise. Though the twelve tribes corresponded in number, with the twelve sons of Jacob, they were not thus dis'inctly made up of their respective descendants; as those of Josefil formed two tribes (Ehhraim and Manasseh), wh ile those of Levi were not assigned as a tribe to any distinct lot of the promised Land, being otherwise disposed of by the Alinighty. Tnus the excess of a tribe in the line of Jostfil, filled the deficiency of a tribe in that of Levi." For it pleasert Gard in respect to the tabernacle, while the Israclites were coming to Canaan. Thus the priesthood of the Lerd being the appointed inheritance of the Levites, in order to free them from the common concerns of life, it was at the same time decreed that " they should be maintained of the things of the Teraple, and be partakers with the altar." However, as they must have a habitation, though they had no distinct lot among the rest of the Istaelites, there were certain cities assigned them to dwell in, which from thence were stiled Levitical Cuties. And as the division of the Land of Promise was assigned to each tribe by lot. so were these cities assigned by lot, to the branches of the Levites-Gershon, Koiath and Merari. Thus the chidren of Aaron the priest, a descendant of Kohath, had by lot out of the tibes of Judah, Simeon, and Benjumin', thirteen cities: and the rest of the Kohathites had by lot, out of the tribes of Ephraim, Ding, and the haif tribe of Manassel westward, ten cities. And the children of Gershon had by lot, out of the tribes of Issachar, Ashur, Naflitali, and the half tribe of Manasseh east of the Jordan, thirteen citics. And the children of Merarihad by lot, out of the tribe of Reuben, Gad, and Zebillung twelve cities. So that the number of Levitical cities wcre forty-eight.

THE EXODUS, & C.

The ihirteen cities which were assigned to the children of Aaran, who were Pricsts, were therefore distinguished by'the ittle of Sacerdotal cities, or the cities of the Priests. 'I'he Sacerdotal cities, being within the tribes of Judah; Simeoni and Berjamin, adheard to the house of David at the 1 evolt of the ten tribes under Jeroboam.

Of the levitical cities, six were also cities of rofuge; viz. Kiedesh in mount Nephali, Shechem in mount Ephraim, Hebron in the hilly tract of Judah, Bezer in the tribe of Reuben, Ramoth-Gllead in the tribe of Gad, and Golon in the tribe of Manasseh. Of these the three former lay on the west of Jordan, and the three latter on the cast of that river. The design of these cities of refuge was, as we learn from Josh. 20. 2. &c. "t that the slayer, who kills aly personunawares, might flee thither, for refuge from the averger of blood." . This was the oilgin of the right of asylum conferred by the Pagans uion their Temples, Altars and Sacred Groves,

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALBSTINE.

river Jordan, the Samachonite lake, and the sea of Tibe-. rias; on the north by the mountains of Antilibanus; and on the south by Edom or Idumea. Its extent, according to the most accurate maps, appears to have been 200 miles'in length, and about 80 in breadth at the widest part. It reaches from $31^{\circ} \mathrm{deg} .3 \mathrm{~min}$. to 33 deg' $20 \mathrm{~min}^{\prime \prime}$ of north latitude; and from 34 deg. 50 miñ. 'tö $27^{\prime}$ deg." 15 min . of east longitude.-It is necessary to observe, that this description is confined to the part "which is properly called the Land of Promise; the boundaries of . that part which belonged to two tribes and a half'on the other side of the Jordan, called Percea, and of the king-' doms of 'Sihon', Og, \& $\dot{c}$. are not so easily asčertained;' any'more than the conquests and acquisitions which they afterwards made under the reigns of their most prosperous monarchs.
4. The serenity of the air, the fertility of the soil; and the incomparable excellence of the fruits of Palestine, induced the Jewish lawgiver to describe it as "a land that flowed with milk' and honey; a land of brooks'and waters, of fountains that spring out of the hills and valeys; a land of wheat and barley, of vines, pomegranates, figs, &c.; a land where there is no lack or scarcity of anỷ thing." "It's richness and fecundity have been extolled even by Julian the Apostate, and many writers hàve descinted upon its natùral beauties. But in consequence of the just anger of God, the greater part of it. is now reduced into a mere desért; and seems incapable of cultivation.
5. Of the mountains so frequently celebrated in the profetic books of Holy writ, those of Lebanón, or Lira:

PALłSTINE..
nùs, were the highest and most considerable. This famous chain is computed to be about 300 miles in compass, having Mesonotamia on the east, Armenia on the north, Palestine on the south, and the Mediterranean on the west. It consists of four; ridges, which rise above each other; the first is extremely fertile in. grain and fruit; the second barren and'rocky; the third embellished with verdant plains, balsamic herbs, and odoriferous flowers; and the fourth, by reason of its surprising height, is generally covered with snow. Several inconsiderable rivers have their sources in these mountains, viz.'the Jortan, Rocham, Nahar-Rossian, and NaharCadicha; some others of less stream, rush down the heights, and form the most beautiful cascades that ever attracted the admiration of the cuiious. The western ridge is properly distinguished by the appellation of $L i$ banus, as the eastern is called Antilibanus, and the hollow between, (V̌losyria. They are at present inhabited by the Maronites and wild Arabs; and spotted with various edifices, as churches, convents, chapels, grots, \& ć, These mountains make a considerable figure in the Jew-. ish history, on account of the prodigious number of ce:dars which they afforded for the ornament of Solomon's temple and metropolis. And Sț. Jerom, speaking of Li-7 banus, says, "it is the highest hill in all the Land of Promze, as well as the most woody and thickset." Mountí Hermon, is, like Libanus, usually capped with snow; is next to it in dignity for height; and was oncefamed for an ancient temple much resorted to by the su-. perstitious heathens. It is also celebrated by the Royal Psalmist for its refreshing ${ }^{\text {dews: }}$ and St. Jerom asserts that its snow was carried to Tyre and Sidon; to be used in refreshing liquors.-Mount Tabor is justly admired for its beauty, regularity, fertility, and central situation in a large plain, at a distance from any other hill. It en-. joys the noblest prospect that can possibly be imagined, of many places famed in Scripture; such as the hills of Samaria and Engadi on the south; those of Hermon and Gilboa on the east and north-east; and mount Carmel on the south-west: Some remains of the wall and gates built by Josephus are still visible on the top; and on the eastern side are those of a strong castle, in the cincture of which are three altars in remembrance of the three tabernacles, . which St. Peter proposed to erect at the time of our Lord's' transfigưration.-Mount Carmel stands on the skirts of the sea, and is the most remarkable headland on the coast. It seems to have derived its name from its abundant fertility, and is highly venerated both by Jews and Christians, as having been the residence of the profhet Elijah.-Mount Olifet, or the mound of Olives, is situated at the distance of one mile from Jerusalem, and commands a fine view of the city, from which it-is parted by the brook Kedron, and the valley of'Jehoshahhat. It is not, in reality, a single hill, but part of a long ridge, with four sumnits, extending from north ta'south; the middlemost of which is that whence Out Saviour ascended to Heaven.-Mount CalyaRy claims our chief regard, as the scene of our RedeemER's great atonement for his sinful creatures. It s!oodanciently without the gates of the city, being, the place appointed for public executions: But .the emperor, Adrian having ordered Jerusalem to be rebuilt a little to

PALESTINY

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PAI.ESTINE.

Jezabel's untimely end; Mamre, so called from the name of its owner, and from the oak under which Abraham'entertained the three celestial visitors; Rephaim; the vale of the Titans and giants; Jehoshaphat, so called from the victory there obtained by a monarch of that name; Hinnom, anciently, defiled by many barbarous rites and supertitions; Zeborm, which received its appellation from one of the four cities that perished with Sodom, near the Dead sea; Achor, where Achan was put to death by the Israelitish host, for his sacrilege; Воснім, so denominated from the universal mourning which the Israelites made there on account of the dreadful message which they received from God for their disobedience; and the valley of Elah, famous for the defcat of Goliath and the Philistines, by David and his royal patron Saul:
7. There were likewise several noted plains in Palestive, viz. the Great plain 'hroigh which the river Jor-Sicythofolis io mount Curmil; bhaton, wnere the (iadites are supposed to have fed their numerous flocks and herds; Sephalah, which extended westward and southward of Eleutheropolis; Jericho, much celebrated for its falm-trees,balm, shrub, and rose-trees; with thoins too numerous to admit of memory.
8. Many deserts and wildernesses of this country are mentioned in the sacred history, which are not, however, to be understood of places quite barren or uninhabited; for several of them contained cities and villages. The word, therefore, commonly meant no more than a exact that bore neither corn, wine, nor oil, but was left to the spontaneous productions of nature. The most noted of these deserits were Arnon, in which the river of that name runs through the land of Gilead; $\mathrm{Z}_{\text {Iph }}$, where David sought an asylum from persecution; Cadesh, neap Cadesh-Barnea, on the south side of Judah, mentioned as the place where Moses.and Aaron were chastised for smiang the rock; Mahon, on the south of Jeslimion; Tegonh, Bezer, Gibeon, and several others.

PALEいTINE.
9. Among the woods or forests mentioned in Scripture, were those of Hareth, whither David withdrew from Saul; Ephraim, where Absalom received the just reward of his rebellion; Lebanon, where Solomon built a magnificent palace; and Betuel, whence the bears came and devoured the children who insulted the Prophet Elisha.
10. Of the seas there are commonly reckoned five, viz. the Great sea or the Mediterranean, the Dead sea, the sea of Tiberias, the Samochonite sea or lake, and the sea of Jazer. The first of these has been frequently described by travellers: the second, called by some authors the Asthaltite lake, is so impregnated with salt, that those who dive beneath its surface are immediately covered with a brine; and vast quantities of bitumen are thrown by its waves, upon the shore: the third is highly commended by Josephus for the sweetness and coolness of its water, and variety of excellent fish: the fourth is famed only for the thickness of its water, from which it is supposed to have derived its name: and the fifth is no other than a small lake in the vicinity of the city sazer.
11. The Jordan is the most considerable of the rio.

PALE TINE

vers; and indeed the only stream that merits the name; as the Arnon, Jabbok; Chireth, Sorek, Kishon, Bosor, 'tic. äre but brook's or rivulets in comparison of this. It has its source at the famous lake of Phiala, about ten miles north of that of Samochon; its course is mosily southwàrd inclining a few degrees towards the west; its' breadth has been compared to that of the' Thames at' Windsor; its depth is said to be nine feet at the very brink; its rapidity considerable; and the scenery of 'its banks varied, according to the place which it intersects. In ancient times, it overflowed about the season of the early hárvest, or soon after Easter, but it is no longer subject to this inundation. The plain on both sides from the sea of Tiberias, to the Asthialtite lake, is extremely arid and unwholesome during the heat of summer; and every where steril, except that part which lies contiguous to the river.
12. Among the most remarkable curiosities, of Pales: tine, may be justly reckoned various petrifictions in the neighbourhood of Mount Carmel, which bear the most' exact resemblance to citrons, mellons, òlives; picaches; and other vegetable productions:- Here are also found a kind of oysters, and bunches of grafes of the same consistence. 'Small round stones; resembling theas; have' been frequently seen on a spot of ground near. Rachel's' tomb; not far from Bethlehern. On the same road is a fountain, honoured 'with the name of Apostles' Fountain; and a little further is a barren, rugger, and dismal solitude, to which our Saviour retired, and was tempted by the Devild In this descent appears a steep and craggy mountain, on the summit' of which are two cha-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE

depth, and three in diameter, and is at present covered with a stone vault.-The Pools of Solomon, supposed' to have been made by order of that monarch for the sup:ply of his palaces, gardens, and even of the metropolis itself, still appear to have been a work of immense cost and labour: such also are the sealed fountains immediately opposite. These fools are three in a row, one over the other, and disposed in such manner, that the water of the uppermost may fall into the second, and from the second into the third. They are all quadrangular, and of an equal breadth, viz. about ninety paces; but in length they differ, the first being 160 paces, the second 200 paces, and the third 220 paces: they are all of a considerable depth, walled and plastered, and contain a large quantity of water. At the distance of one hundred and twenty paces, is the spring which supplies them. The aqueduct is built on a foundalion of stones, and the water runs in earthen pipes about ten inches in diameter. This work anciently extended several leagues, but at present there are only some fragments of it to be found.- The gardens of Solomon have also been long destroyed, and the ground is said to appear almost incapable of cultiva-tion.-The famous Pools of Gihon, and the Pools of Bethesda, may be ranked among the most stately ruins; the former is situated about a quarter of a mile from Bethlehem-gate westward: its length is 160 paces, and its breadth 67 paces. It is lined with a wall and plaster, and contains a considerable store of water. The other at Jerusalem, is 120 paces long, 40 broad, and 8 deep; but at present dry.-In the city of Bethlehem they pretend to show the stable and manger. where the adorable Messiah lay at the period of his nativity; and exhibit a grotto hewnout of a chalky rock, in which they affirm the blessed Virgin concealed herself and holy child from the persecution of Herod.-At Nazareth is a magnificent church under ground, said to occupy the very cave where the Virgin Mary received the angel's salutation, and where two beautiful pillars of granite are erected in commemoration of that interesting event. At a small distance are some fine remains of another churor, supposed to have been erected in the time of the empress Helena. But this is much inferior to the great ofurof built over our Saviour's sepulchre by the same empress, and called the church of the. Holy Seftalchre.__The last class of artificial curiosities worthy of notice is the sepulchral monuments, of which we select the most remarkable for the reader's gratification.

PALESTINE.

The tomb of the holy Virgin, situated near Jerusalem, in the'valley of Jehoshaphat, to which there is a descent by a magnificent flight of steps, has on the right hand side, the sepulchre of St. Anna the mother, and on the left, that of Joseph the husband, of Mary. In each division are altars for the celebration of divine worship; and the whole is cut out of the solid rock.-The monument of king Jehoshaphat is divided into several apartments; one of which contains his tomb, adorned with a stately portico and entablature. That of Absalom, two furlongs distant from Jerusalem, is about twenty cubits square, adorned below with four columns of the Ionic order, with their capitals and entablatures to each front. Frore the height of twenty to forty feet it somewhat lessens, and is quite plain, excepting a small fillet at the upper part;

PALESTINE.

and from forty feet to the top it becomes round, and tapers regularly to a point, the whole cut out of the solid rock.-A little further westward is the tomb of Zecharnia, the son of Barrachia, who is said to have been slain. by the Jews between. the temple and the altar. This structure is all cut out of the natural rock. It is eighteen feet high, as many square, and adorned with Ionic co-lumns.-But the most curious and magnificent pieces of antiquity of this kind are the royal serulchees, without the walls of Jerusalem: they are all hewn out of the solid marble, and contain several spacious and elaborate apartments. On the eastern side is the entrance leading. to a stately court, about 120 feet square, neatly wrought and polished. On the south side of it is a sumptuous. portico, embellished in front with a kind of architraves and supported by columns, and on the left of the portico is a descent into the sepulchral apartments. The first: of these apartments is a handsome room, about 24 feet square, formed with such neatness and accuracy, that it may Justly be styled a beautiful chamber, hollowed out of one piece of marble. From this room are three passages leading to other chambers of a similar fabric, but of different dimensions; in each of which are stone coffins placed in niches, that were once covered with semicircular lids, embellished with flowers, garlands, &c. but now broken in pieces. The door cases, hinges, pirvots, &c. are all of the same stone with the other parts of these rooms, and even the doors appear to have been cut out of the very pieces to which they hang. Why these grots are honoured with the appellation of coflul, ahres of the king;s, is not exactly known; but whoever

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
marchy, which they called the kingdom of Israel, in opposition to that of Judah.-The kingdom of Isracl embraced the greater part of Canaan: while that of Judah was confined to the lots of Judah and Benjamin on the western shore of the Asphaltite lake. Salmanazar having transported to Assyria, as captives, ithe inhabitants of the kingdom of Israel, (which was 134 years before Nebuchadnezar did the like for the kingdom' of Juclah, distinguished specifically as the Babylonish captivity) caused the country, thus evacuated, to be repeopled with colonies from his own dominions. Among these colonies we find some named Cutheans, but with their primitive seats we are unacquainted. These colonists adopited the religion of the country in which they were established, and they derived from Samaria, the capital of the kingdom of $I_{s r a e l}$, the name of Samaritans, which dis tinguished them from the Jews.-The pcople of the kingdom of Judah, who had been transported to Babylon by Nebuchadnezar, having obtained liberty from Cyrus to return to their native country, extended themselves as well in what had composed the kingdom of Isruel as that of Judah, and thereby gave the name of Judea to the whole country: and this was the name of the kingdom afterwards possessed by Herod.-But these distinc. tions are incompetent to a thorough knowledge of a country, which divides with some others, the greatest celebrity in history. Thus, after the return of the Jews from captivity, and during the time of the second temple, we here find four principal divisions; as Judéa, Samaria, Galilea, and Perrá. Neither the motive, however, nor the time of commencing these distinctions, is clear of ab.

PALESTINE.

scurity. The three former were on this side of the Jordan, while the denomination of the last, denotes the country beyond this river. Judea occupied the south, Galilaa the north, and Samaria filled the intermediate space: and although all the country beyond the Jordan may with the same propriety be called Peraa, according to the signification of the term, yet this distinction is more particularly applied to that part which made the portions of Reuben and Gad, extending from the torrent of Arnon northward to the mount called, Galaad, at nearly the same height with the issue of the Jordan from the Tibe. riad Sea. But of these limits we shall speak more particularly presently.-After various changes that took place under the northern barbarians, Saracens, &c. the Turks reduced this country to a firovince under the beglerbegate or bashawship of Damascus.

We shall now speak more particularly of the division of the-Land of Promise among the twelve tribes, in connection with its subsequent division into Judaa,-Samaria, Galilaa, and Peraa; noticing at the same time that portion which the Philistines maintained possession of afier the conquest of it by the Jews: and then we shall conclude this article of Sacred Geography with a brief description of the contiguous countries, the inhabitants of which either mingled with or bordered upon the Jews.

1. That portion of the Promised I and which was al. lotted to the tribes of Benjamin, Judah, Dan, and Simeon, together with that retained by the Philistines, was, after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, distinguished by the single denomination of Judea: when it had Samaria on the north; the Mediterramean or Great sea on the west, Egyft and Idumea or Edom on the south, with the river Jordan and the Dead sea on, the east.-We shall give the detail of the cities, &c. of this country after speaking of the four tribes and the Philistines who formerly possessed it.-The tribe of Benjamin occupied the north-east corner of this tract; it being a small lot. It was bounded by that of Judah on the south, Ehhraim on the north, Dan on the west, and the river Jordan on the east. It contained but few towns, yet this defect was amply compensated by the possession of Jerusalem, the metropolis of all Palestine, and of which'we shall speak at large, presently.-The tribe of Judah, was bounded on the north by that of Benjamin, on the east by the Asphaltite lake, on, the south by Idumea, and west by the tribe of Simeon. This was reckoned the largest and most populous of all the Jewish territories, and the inhabitants were the most valiant. The land was charmingly diversified with hills, and, exclusive of that part which lay contiguous to Idumea, it produced an exuberant supply of corn, oil, wine, and fruits. It was chiefly. in Judar that the Canaanites resided; and it was here likewise, that Abraham and his descendants sojourned previous to their removal into Egypt.-The lot of Dan was bounded on the north by That of Efhraim, on the wèst by the Philustines and the Mediterranean sea, on the south by the lot of Simeon, and on the east by those of Judah and Benjamin. Its greatest length, from north to south, did notexceed forty miles; and the whole tract was rather narrow; but what it, wanted in room was fully compensated by the richness of the soilz and the va-

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE.

Levi, on account of the cruel massacre: of the Schechemites; "Cursed (said the patriarch) be their anger, " for it was fierce; and their revenge, for it was inhu" man: I will disperse them in Jacob, and scatter them in " Israel."

We have seen that notwithstanding the Jews established themselves in Caiaan, the-Philistines maintained possession of a maritime country; which extended to the limits of Egytt on the south, to the tribe of Dan on the north; and to that of Simeon on the east, the Mediterranean being on the west.-These people were treated as Allophyli, or foreigners by the Jews in the time of the second temple, notwithstanding that their possession of the country was anterior to that of the ancestors of the Jewish nation: and it was their alienation from the worship of the true Gob that produced this distinction.The Philistines divided their country into five satrafies, viz: Gath, Ekron, Ashdod, Ascalon, and Gaza, situated along the Mediterranean coast, and extended from the seaport of Jamnia to the mouth of the river Bezor. The extent of their inland territories cannot be satisfactorily ascertained, but they were upon the whole confined within narrow limits.-Gath, the birth-place of the gigantic warrior Goliath, was conquered by king David, fot tified by Rehoboam, and retaken by Uzziah and Hezekiah. It was seated under the 35 th degree of east longitude, and 31 st degree, 56 min . of north latitude; six miles south of Jamnia, fourteen south of Johtia, and thirty-two west of ,Jerusalem. It recovered its liberty and pristine splendour. in the days of Amos and Micah, but afterward was demolished by Hazael, king of Syria. After that peiiod

PALESTINE.

it was a place of small consideration, till the holy war, when Fulk, king of Jerusalem, erected a castle on its ruins.-Ekron, situated about ten miles south of Gath, and thirty-four west of Jerusalem, appears to have been a place of considerable strength and importance. Upon the first division of the promised Land, it fell to the lot of Judah, but was afterwards given to the tribe of Dan.Ashdod or Azotus, was a famous port on the Mediterranean, situated about fifteen miles south of Ekron, between that city and Ascalon.- It was here the idol Dagon fell in pieces : efore the ark of God. The strength of this place was so considerable, that it is said to have sustained a siege of twenty nine years under Psammittichus king of Egypt.-Ascalon, another maritime town and satrapy, lying between $\mathcal{A} s h d o d$ and Gaza, was reckoned the strongest of any of the Phitistine coast; but was soon reduced, after the death of Joshua, by the tribe of Judah: This city was made an episcopal see from the earliest ages of christianity, and during the holy war it was adorned with several magnificent edifices; but these have been demolished by the Saracens and Turks, and $\mathcal{A s c a}$ lon is now dwindled into an inconsiderable village.-GA. $z_{\Lambda}$, the last satrapy; stood on a fine eminence, about fifteen miles south of Ascalon, four north of the river Bezor, and at a small distance from the Mediterranean. ' It was surrounded by the most beautiful valleys, supplied with abundance of water, and encompassed, at a further distance on the inland side, with cultivated hills. . The city was remarkably strong, and surrounded with walls and towers after the manner of the Philistines. . It was taken by. Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, but soon after rè-gained by the ancient inhabitants, who kept possession of it-till the time of Sampson. It passed from the Jews to the Chaldeans, Persians, and Egyptians, till it was pil-. laged by Alexander the Great: it was a second time destroyed by the Maccabees, and no further mention is made of it till St. Luke speaks of it as a ruined place. It stands about three miles distant from the esea, and still exhibits some noble monuments of antiquity, such as stately marble colonnades, finely wrought sepulchres, \&c. In the immediate vicinage of the city is a round castle, flanked with four square towers; and a little above it, are the remains of an old Roman castle, the materials of which are so firm, that the hammer will make no impression on them. The Greeks have here a handsome church, with a fine roof, supported by marble piltars of the Corinthian orcher. The castle is the residence of the sangiac. The adjacent territory is pleasant and delightful; but beyond it the ground is rather barren, quite to the river of Egypt, and inhabited by wild Arabs.

PALESTINE.

It remains now for us to complete the detail of this part of Palestine, which, as we have seen, took the name of Judea after the return of the Jews from captivity. And as such we have already given its boundaries.-But that our readers may not be disappointed at the paucity of the objects here cited, we will remark with M. D'Anville, that when we see, in the search made by Eusebius of Cesarea in Palestine, and St. Jerome, who inhabited the same country in the fourth century, bat a very few of the multitude of places mentioned in the Scriptures could be found, one is tempted to smile at the presumption of the publishers of those maps, wherein the num-

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page
of Ilia. The chief alteration in its site consisted in this -that Zion, which was the principal quarter of the mope ancient city, was not comprised within the limits of the new one. This new city was adorned with mamy noble edifices; but in the time of Helena; mother of Constantine the great, it was found in -so ruinous and forlorn a condition as raised her pity into a noble zeal for restoring it to its ancient grandeur. With this design she caused all the rubbish to be removed from mount Calvary, and ordered a magnificent church to be built there, to comprehend as many of the scenes of our Redeemer's sufferings 'as could be conveniently inclosed within ame edifice. The walls are of stone, and the roof of cedary the east includes mount Calvary, and the west, contains the holy Sepulchre. The former is covered with a handsome cupola, supported by sixteen massive columns; ormerly incrusted with marble. The centre is open at the top just over the sepulchre; and above the high altar, at the east end, is another stately dome. The nave of the church forms the choir, and in the interion aisles are the places where the most remarkable circumstances of our Saviour's passion were transacted, together with the tombs of Godfrey and Balduin, the first two Cliristian kings of Jerusalem. An ascent of twenty-two steps eads to a chapel, where that part of Calvary is shewn on which the Messiah was crucified. The altar is adomed with three crosses, and other costly embellishments, among which are forty-six silver lamps that are kent constantly burning. Contiguous to this is another small chapel fronting the body of the church. At the west on is the chapel of the sepulchre, hewn out of the solid rock, and ornamented with pillars of porphyry. The cloister around the sepulchre is divided into seyeral chapels for the use of the different Christian sects who reside there; and on the north-west are the apartments of the Latins, who had the care of the church. It may be proper to mention here an edifice erected on Mount Moriah, called Solomon's temple, though it is not easy to guess when or by whom it was built. The entrance is at the east end, under an octagon, adorned with a cupola and lantern; and towards the west is a straight aisle like that of a church, the whole surrounded with a spacious court, and walled on every side. In the midst of it is erected a Turkish mosque, remarkable neither for its structure nor magnitude, but which makes a stately figure by its advantageous situation. Dr. Pococke, who took a particular view of the edifice, has highly extolled the beauty of the prospect, as well' as the materials and workmanship. The collonnades are said to be of the Corinthian'order, with arches turned over them; being, in all probability, the porticos leading to the interior of the building: but the place is held in such veneration by the Turks, that a stranger connot approach it without danger of forfeiting his life or religion. This once rich, populous, and stately metropolis, is at present reduced to a thinly inhabited town of about three miles in circumference. It is at present under the governiment of a sangiac, whose tyranny keeps the Christian inhabitants so poor, that their chief support and trade consists in providing strangers with accommodations, and selling them beads, relics, &ec. from which they are compelled to pay considerable sums to the sangiac and his officers.-

PALESTINE.

Gophna is a place of considerable dignity north of गerysalem, on the route of Neapolis and Samaria.-Antitiettres was so called by Herod, after his father, who was'named Antipater; and thrs city is described as being seabed at the descent of a mountainous country, on the border of a plain named Saronas, terminated by the sea.- On the same shore, Anollonius is now a ruined. place named Arsuf, near the mouth of a torrent.-And on traversing this coast towards the north, we find the issue of another torrent, which has been mentioned as serving for the boundary to Ephraim's tribe, under the name of Cana, or Arcindeneti, signifying the Reedy, and translated el-Kasab by the Arabs.-On this shore a lagune, which in the country being called Moïet-el-Temsah, or the Water of the Crocodile, represents the Crocodilorum Latws mentioned in antiquity. -Tending towards the south, another torrent, which appears unknown till the time of the cruisades, is found to precede the position of Joptha, of which we have already spoken in the tribe of Dan.-At some height in the interior of the country, Lydda, which among the Greeks took the name of Diospolis, preserves, in some vestiges, the name of Lod.-South of Joppa, Jamnia, or, according to the oriental form, Iabne, not far from the sea, still preserves the name of Iebna, with the advantage of a port: and this is the Iblin which we find in the history of the holy wars. Some idea máy be acquired of the population of Judea from Strabo, who retports that this place, joined with some others in its, neiglibourhood, could arm forty thousand men.-Passing over those cities which we have already noticed in speaking of the satrupies of the Philistines, we find ourselves in

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE.

the east withal.-At the same distance, being markêd at 60 stadia, but in an opposite direction, Emmaus, where Vespasian defeated the revolted Jews, 'was calied $\mathcal{N}$ vern:folis. Turning towards Jericho, a plain adjacent to the Jordan, celebrated heretofore for its fertility, and which produced a celebrated balm, succeeds a space steril' and mountainous between Jerusalem and this city, whosse name in the Roman writers is Hierichus, and in the 'Ar-bian geographers, Eriah.-Engaddi, on the Deãd Séa, but having its territory contiguous to that of Jericho, was very fertile in palm trees.-Masada, a fortress elevated on a rock, was the last asylum which remained to the revolted Jews after the taking of Jerusalem. $-Z i f i f h$ is a canton between Hebron and the Dead Sea; to which succeeds a mountain called Carmel, the same name with another mount Carmel, more celebrated anid befter known, on the Great Sea in Galiææ.
2. The tract to the north of Judaa, having the great 'sea on the west, the Jordan on the east, and Gatilea on the north, was called Samaria after the return of the -Jews from captivity, about the time that Judaa, Galilca, and Peraa became distinctive of other parts of Palestine, as we have before romarked. Its limits correspond precisely with those which had formerly embraced the tribe of Ephraim and the half of Manasseh: for Samaria was very contracted, particularly in breadth, being bounded 'on the side of Galilea by the position of Ginca, which is still found under the name of Genim, not far north of Sebaste.-That portion which had formerly appertained to the half tribe of Manassea, was bouncled on the north by the tribe of Issachar, on the south by that of Ethrain, on the west by the great sea, and east by the Jordan. It was agreeably diversified with mountains, plains, and vallies, and contained a considerable number of stately cities.-The tribe of Ephraim occupied the south side of Samaria, and extended like that of Manasseh, from the Mediterranean to the river Jordan. The low lands were extremely rich and luxuriant; the hills afforded excellent pasture, and even the rocks were prettily in. terspersed with trees. The towns and cities were numerous, and the population considerable.

PALESTINE.

Samaria, the capital of this country, owed its foundation to one of the sinccessors of the kings of Israel. But it had been destroyed by the Jews, under one of their As. monean princès, and re-edified by a governor of Syria, when Herod, fortifying and embellished this city, gave it, in honour of Augustus, the name of Scbaste, which it preserves in its ruins.-Sichem, which was the royal city of Isracl before Samaria, took afterwards the name of $\mathcal{N e a p o l i s}$, which is altered only into the form of Nabolus, Two mountains, Garisim and Ebal, form a valley which encloses this city: and it was at the foot of the first that the Samaritans had their temple.-But the city that took the pre-eminence of others was Casarea; which, becoming the residence of the Roman governors, was called Casarea of Palestine. This place, named ante. riorly Turris Stratonis, was.chosen by Herod for the site of a magnificent city and port; to which he gave a name referring personally to Augustus, and common to many other cities. In the division of Palestine into three provinces, that whereof Ccesarea remained metropolis', was the first; and the see of Jerusalem was its suffragän, before it was elevated to the patriarchal dignity. Though we find Casarea subsisting at the time of the crusades; there is nothing of it now remaining but its name, and some vestiges of its walls and its ports. E
3. The name of Galileai, which is distinctive of the residue of Palestine to the north, rarely occurs in the Old Testament. But, from the manner in which the country is frequently mentioned afterwards, the goodness of its soil seems to give it the pre-eminence ove'r the other parts of Palestine, with the advantage of a population proportionate to a greater fecundity. It pro = duced an abundance of corn, oil, wine, and fruits of va-' rious sorts; and was, in its flourishing condition, so ful! of towns and villages, that Josephus observes, the least of them contained fifteen thousand inhabitants. -There was a distinction made between Galılaa inferior, adjacent to Samaria, and Galilaa sufterior towards the north, on the frontier of Phenicia; which last, less occupied by Jews than the lower division, was called Galilaa Gentium, the Galilee of the Gentiles, or foreign nations.A The whole of Galilæa was formerly occupied by the tribes of Aoher, Naphtali, Zebulon, and Issachar.-The. tribe of Asheir was seated on the north-west corner of this tract, having the Mediterranean on the west, Zebulon on the south, and Nafthtali on the east. Its fecundity and the excellence of its productions, fully answered the blessing which dying Jacob gave it: " that the bread of it should be fat, and that it should yield royal dainties." - Napetali possessëd a tract of country, between that

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE.

Castle Pilgrim, appears to have been that which, fyom the sycamores that abound in its environs, was named Sycominos.-A place named Hehina, now Caipha, opposite to the position of Aco, now Acre, appeared under the name of Porphyrion in a time when the strand of the sea furnished à species of shell-fish yielding the famous purple dye, but which seems now to be unknown.-The torrent of Kison sprang from the south side of Tabor, and, augmented by some brooks which traverse the plain of Esdrèlon, is received on the flank of Carmel inta a gulf which the sea forms between this mountain and the point of Acre.-The same gulf also receives the little Belus, called by the Arabs Nahr Halou, and famous in antiquity for affording a sand proper for the manufacture of glass.-Aco, or Acon, took the name of Plolemais under the Ptolemies, many of whom possessed ColeSyria. But although this new name be employed by the Greek and Roman authors, they also use the primitive denomination of Ace. No place was more disputed by the crusaders and the Mussalman princes than this of Acre till towards the end of the thirteenth century; it being then destroyed, that it might no longer serve the Franks as a key to Palestine. Being situated on a point advanced in the sea, commerce has given occasion to some habitations among its ruins.-To conclude this notice of the coast as far as Tyre, the site of Ecdinha, or Aczrb, preserves in a very small place the name of Zib; beyond which the passage of a steep mountain that overlooks the sea, was called Scala Tyriorum, or the Ladder of the Tyrians.

Advancing into the country, nearly east of Acre, we find that Sefhhoris, spoken of by Josephus as being the strongest place and most considerable city of Galilea, had taken the name of Dio Casarea in the time of St. Jerom, and was then extremely decayed. The Jews have continued to it the name of Sipphori, which in vulgar use is Sefouri.-Between this place and the Tabor, in a valley north of the plain of Esdrèlon, Nazareth is a small place, according to St. Jerom, called Nazara.The Tabor is an insulated mount in the middle of a plain; and its name takes the form of Itabyrius in the Greek writers.-But, proceeding towards Tiberias, we must incline to the right to view Bethsan, on the confines of Galilea and Samaria. This city, in the vicinity of the Jordan, is more celebrated under the name of Scythofolis, which appears to be due to the Scythians, who, according to Herodotus, had advanced as far as Palestine before they won the empire of Asia from the Medes. However, this Greek denomination of a city that was reputed the first among those of the Decapolis, and that took the rank of metropolis in the second Palestine, has in its turn been superseded by its primitive name, in the altered form of Baisan.-Tiberias received this name from Herod Antipas, in honour of Tiberius. It is supposed that the son of the great Herod, for the construction of the new city, made choice of the site of a more ancient and obscure place, called Chenereth, according to St. Jeiom, or rather Cinereth: and this name of Tiberias was communicated to the adjacent lake, which it qualified at the same time with the appellation of Sea, by a figure familiar to the orientals. In the pronunciation of the Arabs the name is Tabarieh; and that of Hammam; by which they denominate the thermæ, or mineral baths, in its neighbourhood, is the Ammaus, which the Greek writers bestow on the same place, and which is itself an alteration of the primitive Hebraic name of Chamath.-The name Genesareth, which the lake of Tiberias originally bore, was drawn from a little country distinguished for the beauties of its situation, under the name of Gennesar, and which being watered by the fountain of Cafhernaumi; should be situated towards the upper part of the lake, near the entrance of the Jordan.-The siege that Josephus sustained against Vespasian in Jotafata, has given celebrity to this place, which this historian describes as situated on a height environed with precipices.- He speaks of Jatha as another strong place in the same canton; and, it is presumed that the fortress of Sapher, which was the residence of a Turkish commandant, and overthrown by an earthquake some years since, corresponds with " his position.-A little beyond, the Lacus Samochonites of Josephus, traversed by the Jordan, is thought to be the waters of Meron in the sacred text. This lake, now called Bahr-cl-Houlei, is reducéd to an inconsiderable pool in dry seasons.-There are said to be still vestiges of $\mathcal{A} 800$, which preserve the name of this royal city of the Canaanites.-Another. place named Kadas may have been the Kedes of the trobe of Naphtali, and at the same time the Cedessus which the Tyrians possessed.-It remains ${ }_{f}$ that we remount to Pancos between two brooks. which form the Jordan, at the foot of the mount called Panium, on which Herod, in gratitude for having been put in possession of the Trachonitis by Augustus, erected a temple to that prince On

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE.

Pisgah, and was every where extremely fertile in corn, wine, fruits, and pasturage.-To the north of Reuben was fixed the tribe of Gad, having likewise the river Jordan on the west, the Ammonites on the east, and the half tribe of Manassek on the morth. This tract of country, like the former, was famed for its rich pasturage and exuberant productions.-The portion allotted to the half tribe of Manassen was bounded on the south by that of Gad, on the west by the Jordan and Samochonite lake, on the east by the hills of Bashan and Hermon, and on the north by a part of Lebanon. Its extent was almost equal to the other two.

The Arnon is discharged into the lake Asphaltites, after having passed through the neighbourhood of the principal city of the Moabites. Towards the beginning of its course, the Romans had established a military post, Castra Arnonensia, on the frontier of Arabia, in a canton ẅhich was called Arnonas.-The mounts Abarim, and the summit of $\mathcal{N e b o}$, whence Moses had a prospéct of the Promised Land, rise at some distance from the Jordan opposite to Jerico, between two plains: that on the western side being divided by the river, while the eastern plain is an extent of country which we find under the name of Campestria Moab.-At the foot of these mountains towards the Jordan, the name of Livias was given to an ancient city, to latter Augustus in the person of Livia.-Nearer to the lake Asphaltites, Herod added fortifications to the advantageous situation of Ma charus, on the summit of a steep rock,-Farther on, and southward withal, a place meriting notice for its hot springs, was called Calli-rhod which signifies in Greek the limpid fountain.-Amathus is described as an exceedingly strong fortress, overlooking the great plain, which is continued along the course of the Jordan, from the Tiberiad lake to that of Asphaltites, under the name of Aulon in antiquity, but supplanted by that of el-Gour, which signifies in the Arabic language a low, or sunken and.

Palestine.

A canton of country more retired toward the north is distinguished by the name of Galaaditis, which a mountain, whose name is Galaad, communicates to it. The name of this mountain appears sometimes to be extended to the branches projected towards Anti-I ibanus; but it is more particularly applied to the ridge that reigns on the right of the torrent of Jabok, which, issuing fromthe country of Ammon, discharges itself into the Jordan about the height of Bethsan; and is believed to be that now called Zarea.-Ramoth was in remote antiqui: ty a principal city of this country, situated near Jabok, and at a defined distance from the capital of the Ammo-nites.-But in a posterior age, another city attracts greater notice under the name of Pella, which the Greeks of Syria, by whom it was inhabited, had given it, from the circumstance of its being environed with water, as the Macedonian city of this name. We see in history that this city received the Christians whomad abandoned Jerusalem when it was menaced with ruin by the siege.-There is mention made of another city, whose name of Dium was transferred likewise from Macedon but its position is judged to be more remote, as comprehended in the province of Arabia, without the limits of Palestine, which included the former.

PALESTINE.

Batanea is another country which covers the north of Galaaditis; and its name is preserved in that of Batinia, as we find in the oriental geographers. This is the country conquered by the people of Israel, from Og king of Rashan; to whose territories was contiguous, what Sehon king of the Amorites possessed in Galaad. And there is reason to believe that of the primitive Bashan was afterwards formed the name of Batanea. Its district appears to be separated from the Tiberiad lake by a margin of land called Gaulonitis, from Golan, or Gaulon, the name of a strong fortress, distinctly indicated in the oriental geography under the name of Agheloun, or Ad-geloun.- Gamala, not far distant, was a place almost inaccessible, beíng seated upon a rock bounded by precipices, which was separated by the extremity of the Tiberiad lake from a considerable city called Tarichoe, from - the circumstance of its being the place where the fish taken in the lake were cured. - This extremity of the lake receives a stream named heretofore Hieromax, and now Yermulk, which passes under Gadara, a cunsiderable city, distinguished as the capital of Peræa by Josephus. Its name is now Kedar.-At the entrance of the Jordan into the lake, Julias received its name from Philip, tetrarch of. the Trachonitis: and with this position correspond the vestiges of a city under the name of Te . loui. We mayadd, that there is reason to believe this Julias to be the Chorozain of a remoter age.-The Yermuk is celebrated in Saracen history for a great victory obtained over the Greeks, in the time of Omar; and a city of the same name is also mentioned as adjacent to the river, and which appears to have been that known

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FRE MEMBERS

 Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

PALESTINE.
addicted to rapine, and inhabiting deep caverns ralled Trachones, occupied. These had for their chief one Zenodorus, whom Augustus deprived of his domain, called Domus Zenodori-- Ituras is not easily distinguished from the Trachonitis, and may owe its nanture to an appellative in some other language than the Greek. -The Auranitis is better known, retaining its name in that of Belad-Auran; and whose eastern limits are absorbed in the deserts of Arabia. This arid country which is only watered by the winter rains preserved in cisterns, does not appear to have been subjected till the réign of Trajan. Bostra, its principal city, was metropolis of a province formed under the name of , Arabia. It still retains the name of Bozra; and it is said to be situated on a torrent called Nahr-al-Gazal, or the River of Gazelle.
5. It now remains to give a concise account of the countries belonging to those nations that were sseateed around Palestine.-Idumea, or the land of Edom, 'constituted a part of Arabia Petræa, having Judea on the north, Egypt and a branch of the Red sea on the west, the rest of Arabia Petræa on the south, and the desert of Arabia on the east. Its extent seems to have viaried considerably at different periods; in consequence of which Josephus distinguishes it, when at the largest; by, the epithet of great, in opposition to its more narrow boundaries. The same author divides it into Upper and Lower Idumea; but the country, upon the whole, is represénted as dry, mountainous,' hot, and in sorne parts steril; and the high lands exhibit many dreadful caverns and recesses, which resemble those in the southern part of Judea: This country is at present under the dominion of the Turks, mostly waste and uncultivated; and inhabited by wild Arabs, with whom the Europeans have but little intercourse.-The nation of Amalek or the Amalekites, was seated in that part of Arabia Petræa which lay eastward of the Edomites, and extended almost as far north as the Asphaltite lake, and as far southward as the Red sea: but as the people were mostly of a wandering disposition, and lived in booths, tents, or caverns, like the Arabs, it is impossible to ascertain their limits with any degree of precision.-The Midıanites, or the land of Midian, was situated on the north of Amalek. It was hot, sandy, and in many parts desert; yet abounded with camels and other species of cattle. It appears to have contained many cities, castles, &c. as early as the time of the Exodus. The city of Midian was in all probability, rebuilt subsequent to that period, as both Eusebius and St. Jerom assert there were some remains of it to be seen in their time. - The land of Moab was likewise in Arabia Petrea, on the north of Midian, having the river Arnon on the west, the land of Gilead on the north, and the Ishmaelites on the east. It contained several considerable cities, whích the Moabites wrested from the gigantic Emims and Zamzummims, but whịch were afterwards possessed by thé Jews. The capital of the Moabites, situated on the torrent of Arnon, was called Areopolis; but its true name was $R a$. bath-Moab, by which it is still known; although it is called Raba as well as Maab, in the oriental geography. -The Ammonites were seated to the north-east of their brethren the Moabites, in Arabia Deserta; having the

PALESTINE.

PALESTINE.

Arnon on the west, the Ishmaelites on the south, the de: serts of Arabia on the east, and the hills of Bashan and Gilead on the north. Their territories, accorcling to the sacred historians, seem to have been anciently confined by the rivers Jabok and Arnon; but their frequent incursions into the neighbouring states occasioned their boundaries to be in constant fluctuation. Their principal city was called Ammon, and Rabath-Ammon, or the Great Ammon, before the name of Philadelfhia was given to it, probably from a Philadelphus king of Egypt; but fullowing the practice which we have seen common in Syria, it has resumed its primitive name in the form of Amman.-The descendants of Ishmael, the son of Abraham and Hagar, occ̄upied a part of Arabia Deserta, eastward of Moab and Midian, and bounded on the north by Ammon; but how far they extended southward and eastward it is impossible to determine. It may, however, be presumed, from an assertion of Moses, that their territory reached from Havilah, which was situated near the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates, to Shur on the isthmus of Suez. Thence they are said to have spread themselves over the greatest part of Arabia; in consequence of which Josephus styles their progenitor the founder of the Arabian nation.

ERRATA.

The reader is recommended to correct the following erratia. with his pencil.
Page 16, line 16, before noted insert not.

$$
\text { 354, } \quad 2 \text {, note, for } 46, \text { read } 37
$$

359, $\quad 5$, for 20 , read 14.
372, $\quad 5$, note, omit and.
404, 28 , for there, read therefore.
414, 6, for birthright, read paternal blessing.
414, 7, for Bethtuel, read Laban.

©

THIS PAGE IS LOCKED TO FREE MEMBERS

Purchase full membership to immediately unlock this page

APPENDIX.

[^0]:    * It will be seen in the detail that the knowledge of the ancients did not extend to the North Oape, êrroneously called Rubeas Promontorium. See the maps Terra Veteribus, Notà, and State of Nations at the Christian ®rra; $^{\text {s }}$ the latter corrects the former as to the northern geography.

[^1]:    *" Mogul seems to be the rightful appellation for this people: down to the twelfth century, when the name of Tartar began to be applied by us to almost half of Asia." Pinkerton on the Goths.'

[^2]:    * Illyricum,-in thè enlarged sense of Mr. P' extends all alohng the north side of the Adriatic to Gaul; having the Danube north; Thrace and Macedon east.

[^3]:    *' It need not be objected to this induction, that Ashur, [^4]:    - See Renacll's Herodotus.

[^5]:    * The reader will bear in mind (as the terms "first and se-cond Gothic progress" suggest) that the Goths of this first section, were the Scythx Nomades of Persia, who overran Europe as spoken of in this and the preceding pages; and that the Goths of the following second section, were the associations of their savage progeny, (with the addition of Huns and Sarmatians), who again overran Europe in the manner there detailed.

[^6]:    * Rather the divine city, according to tho common interpretation of the sacramental word Allah:

[^7]:    * Pinkerton, who has written professedly upon the migrations of the parent nations, seems to prove that these Galatians

[^8]:    * This Armenia has commonly the addition of Major, to distinguish it from Armenia Minor, which belonged to Cappa= docia, as we have seen.

[^9]:    * Three years previous to this period, Darius crossed here, after his defeat at the battle of Issus; and fifty-nine years be., 1 fore that the younger Cyrus passed in his expedition against 1 his brother, and was said to have been the first who forded the river at Thapsacus.

[^10]:    * This name of Gyndes, or, as Tacitus expresses it, Gindes, in describing a river of Aria, is the same as Zeindeh, in the Persian language denoting (as that passing by Ispahan) a river which revives after having disappeared.

[^11]:    - On the Mogul conquest, the court of Bengal was remored to Mourshedabad.

[^12]:    * Trichinipoly, on this river, manifests in its name a Greek origin; and may be ascribed to the Egyptian Greeks under the - Ptolemies, who, as Pausanias informs us, carried on an active trade with this coast of India.

[^13]:    * The readers of Mr. Bıuce's Travels will doubtless recognise the fountains of the, Abawi to be those which thatagentle-.

[^14]:    - In Timrus and Critias.
    f M. Bailly, the astronomer, endeavoured to prove that this island really existed; and he refers its situation to Nova Zem. blà: but less fanciful and more judicious authors have attacked. his conclusions with success.

[^15]:    * The better opinion seems to be, that Cain was born the first, and Abel the second year of the world. See Sacred Mirror, by the Rev. Thomas Smith, page 5.

[^16]:    * The following note from Mr. Pinkerton we presume will not be considered as any burthen to truth, on whichever side it stands, but rather, as tending to its further development. He says-"Ancient chronology has been ruined by attempting to force it to Scripture, which is surely no canon of chronology; for the Septuagint, translated from MSS., far more ancient than any we have, differs from the present Hebrew no less than 576 years before the time of Noah; and 880 years from Noah to the time of Abraham. The Greek church, certainly as well instructed as that of the Roman, dates the creation 5508 years Defore Christ. Epiphanius, Augustin, and other fathers, follow the Hebrew of their time, which agrees with the Septuagint. But ancient chronology ought only to be estimated from an. cient authors, and kept quite apart from scriptural chronology. The date of the creation, &c., can never be decided, either by Scripture or otherwise; and such speculations are futile. In other points, the authority of the learned Usher, now univer. sally allowed the best chronologer, is followed," &c.

[^17]:    1. Reuben, born before Christ 1758, had four sons.
    2. Simeon, born before Christ 1757, had six sons.
    3. Levi, born before Christ 1756, died 1619, aged 137.
    a. Gershon, son of Levi.
    b. Kohath, son of Levi, aged 133 at his death.
    (a). Amram, son of Kohath, died in Egypt, aged 137.

    - Aaron, son of Amram, born 1574, died 1451, aged 126.
    - Moses, son of Amram, born 1571, died 1451, aged 120.
    c. Merari, son of Levi.
    d. Jochebed, daughter of Levi, and wife of Amram.

    4. Judah, born before Christ 1755 ; had three sons.
    5. Issachar, had four sons.
    6. Zebulun, had three sons.
    (7). Dinah, Jacob's only daughter.

    シं (7. Joseph, born before Christ 1745, died 1635.
    a. Manasseh, son of Joseph by Asenath.
    b. Ephraim, son of Joseph by Asenath.
    8. Benjamin, born before Christ 1734, had ten sons.
    9. Dan.
    10. Naphtali, had four sons.
    11. GAD, had seven sons.
    12. Ashur, had four sons, and one daughter.

[^18]:    * The colonies of Japhet's posterity spread over part of Asia and Europe, as follows, viz.
    (1) The colonies of the nation of Gamer, called Cimmerii or Celts, passing by the north of the Euxine, where they first made settlements, and penetrated into Sweden, Germany, France, and the British Isles.
    (2) The colonies of Tarshish settled Tartessus in Spain.
    (3) The colonies of Citimm settled Cyprus and part of Macedonia and Italy.
    (4) The colonies of Elishaf settled the neighbouring islands of the Euxine sea and part of Greece.
    (5) The colonies of Dodanim settled in Messenia, Doris, and Dodona in Greece, and the island of Rhodes.
    (6) The colonics of Mosoch settled in Moscovy in Russia.

[^19]:    * At his death Abraham made Isaac his heir, having given his other children presents and-settled them in the east coun. try contiguaus to Canaan. The fate of rthe nations descended of these, branches of the patriarch's family and of those descended of his grandson.Esau, seems to have been very seriously involved with that of the Canaanites, when the Almighty promised the Land of Canaan to the seed of Abraham for an inheritance, and withal further promised to give unto his seed the dominion of a much larger tract,- namely, from the river of Egypt, unto the great river Euphrates: of course excluding from the title of seed of Abraham, all but those descended of Jacob, to whom his promises were repeated, and the title of Israe' conferred, to the exclusion of the other branches, who were only included in the title of dominion. Dr. Wells remarks that " this distinction between what God promised to give and actually did to the Israelites for a possession, and what he promised to give and actually did give to them for dominion, is of good use for the clearer understanding of the sacred kistory.",

