BGP is published by the Newark-on-Trent branch of the Campaign for Real Ale (CAMRA).

The Newark Branch of CAMRA strive to increase consumer choice of real ale by objecting to pub closures and championing high standards of customer service in the area's public houses. We support our local breweries by promoting the diversity they bring to the bar, Newark CAMRA also bring national issues such as tax and opening hours to local attention. Importantly, we are a social group of likeminded drinkers of all ages and walks of life. Anyone is welcome to attend our meetings, details of which can be found elsewhere in this issue. BGP welcomes local-interest, beer related articles and letters for publication. All material should be sent to

Chairmans Report

Welcome to the first edition of the new BGP. This is the first time in many years that we have had total control over all the editorial. Thanks again to Nigel Russell for all the time and effort needed for this. We welcome back many of our supporters who have advertised their pubs, beers and services. We also have new advertisers who find us more attractive with much reduced rates and no VAT. We are also delighted to bring our printing back to Newark.

Our main focus over the past few weeks has been the May Beer and Cider Festival. Once again, the weather was kind to us with just a shower at 10:27 on Saturday. It was a tremendous event and although the final figures are yet to be calculated we had about 2800 people attend, who drank 140 different beers, along with 47 ciders and perries. They also enjoyed the regular food suppliers with the addition of Everest providing fabulous curry. Festival goers danced and sang to the bands, did their best with the quizzes and generously contributed over £1100 to Newark MIND. We also paid our respects to "tickers" who sadly departed over the last year.

We showcased 40 new beers and Newark retains its national pre-eminence as the festival for new beers and breweries.

The fringe events also reported I increased trade during the weekend, which is good for the local economy.

We could not put on this event if it were not for the unstinting efforts of Andy Sales, Ray Kirby and Steve Westby from Nottingham branch and we give them our heartfelt gratitude.

Newark has so many active branch members that we are able to staff our festival from our own members and I would like to thank all of them. The one hundred plus volunteers should feel very proud that they have taken part in such a successful event. We also have branch members working at Peterborough, York, Nottingham and The Great British Beer Festival over the summer months. I should single out for special praise, the Festival Committee, ably led by Tracy Moran, who start organising as early as December each year.

Despite the demands of the beer festival, we managed to find the time to squeeze in a pubs survey in the north of our branch area, visiting eight pubs and making sure our What Pub information was up to date.

Coming up, we have International IPA day on August 3rd so watch out for our IPA trail held late July to early August.

Local Boy “Done Good”

An Inspirational Tale

Local film-maker Terry Abraham recently celebrated his 40th birthday in a couple of Newark’s hostelrys with his good friend, the world renowned mountaineer and beer writer, Alan Hinkes OBE. Fresh off the back of the premiere of his latest film, 'Life of a mountain, Blencathra' and shortly before his relocation to his beloved Lake District I caught up with them both in Just Beer and asked what lies behind their friendship and more importantly what led to Terry finding himself courted by the BBC for the second time in as many films (By the time this goes to press BBC4 will have shown an edited one hour version of the film)

Around five years ago Terry was made redundant from a lowly IT role at a firm based in good old Newark but it proved to be the catalyst that propelled him onto the career path he’s on today. Prior to that, he worked for many years in the pub trade as a manager and quiet campaigner, promoting the delights of real ale. During these times he’d often daydream of exploring the countryside and wandering the fells of Lakeland as well as working as a film-maker too. Little did he know that fate would step in, in the form of redundancy and lead to him becoming a well-known and award-winning broadcaster of outdoor documentaries and photography.

He regularly enjoyed revealing to people that all those years of working in pubs has contributed massively towards his work. Pubs are the hubs of the community, they're not just a place to enjoy ale but are fantastic for socialising, making new friends and learning local knowledge. So given his love for a tippie or two it won't come as a surprise that you'll often see him frequenting the delightful public houses of Cumbria whilst he researches his Lakeland documentaries.

It was while producing 'Life of a Mountain: Scafell Pike - A Year in the Life of England's Highest Peak' that he met legendary mountaineer Alan Hinkes OBE. He features in much of Terry’s work, leading to them becoming close friends and they are now working on a documentary together revealing his life story. They'll be filming UK-wide as well as visiting Norway, Sweden, Iceland and of course Nepal. It just so happens Alan is a lover of real ale too and so it's inevitable they frequently visit lots of pubs sampling ales from both small and large breweries.

Alan Hinkes OBE possibly needs very little introduction to those who love the fells and mountains as well as the odd cask beer or two. Born in Northallerton, North Yorkshire it's hardly surprising that, with the Yorkshire fells on his doorstep, a love of such things outdoors made its mark.

Alan is the only English mountaineer to have climbed all the worlds 14 mountains of an elevation of over 8000 meters, the pinnacle being summiting Mount Everest in 1996.

Alan regularly contributes features and reports for beer magazines and just so happens to appear with the 'Beer God' himself, Roger Protz in the latest issue of the Good Beer Guide. So when it came to celebrating Terry's 40th birthday recently and a relocation to his spiritual home of Cumbria, Alan revealed he was keen to enjoy the occasion with his friends and family in the pubs of Newark he'd heard so much about. I'm pleased to say he wasn't disappointed! Terry and his friend Mitch took him on a guided sightseeing tour about the town, and Alan often wished to stop and admire the visible history of the area; and also appreciate the many old maltings which sit by the River Trent! They visited several establishments including Terry's regular haunts Just Beer and The Prince Rupert. Hinkesey is keen to return, I have to say, and Terry will be the first to admit he'll likely join him!

So with glasses drained and the allotted time fast approaching to meet up with Terry's nearest and dearest in the Prince Rupert for food, I bade them both a fond farewell. I shall miss Terry, our chats over the bar about all things 'Lake District' but something that stands out prominently, having spent time in their company is, follow your dreams, you never know where they may lead. In Terry and Alan's case, to the top of the world.

Going The Distance

Mrs Sandra Neil, Newark CAMRA's vice chair has this year completed the London marathon to raise money for MIND, In her very first attempt Sandra completed the course in a very respectable 4 hrs 44 mins 16 seconds and in doing so raised over £3,000 for the national and local MIND charity. Sandra can be seen to the right having a very well earned sit down with a pint after the momentous efforts of the day. Husband Mr Rob Neil of Maypole brewery also brewed a special charity beer which was named by way of a raffle Mile By Mile, a barrel was sold at Just Beer and a second at the beer festival with the proceeds from both being donated to the MIND charity

Festival Donations

This years Newark beer and cider festival has raised a record £1,143 through donations over the three days, most of this was raised by generous visitors donating their glass deposits.

Cribbage Marathon

The game of Cribbage has never usually been seen as an endurance event, but members of the Newark CAMRA branch and some guests made it so with a 24 hr marathon to raise money for our nominated charity MIND. The event was hosted by Just Beer who generously kept an overnight vigil supplying the participants with copious amounts of tea, coffee and hydrating H₂O, the occasional pint may also have been consumed during licensed hours !! They were also treated to a fish and chip supper kindly donated by Ted from the Barnby Gate Chippy and a 7 am breakfast of bacon butties supplied by Just Beer. A barrel of "Little Weed" beer was donated by Maypole brewery for sale at the event with sales adding to the money raised by the players which as yet we do not have a total for but is hoped to be over £1,000. Newark CAMRA's Chosen Charity For 2017

Newark Mind is an independent charity working across Newark and Sherwood, touching Lincoln and Grantham providing information, support and guidance on mental health issues across these areas. Part of the national organisation, Newark Mind has been in existence since 1982, with a remit of providing services to people who have had, or are experiencing mental ill health. We not only support individuals, but also their families and close others who are affected by the situation as a whole and aim for services to be responsive, inclusive, relevant and accessible.

Our approach is that we ALL struggle with mental health at some point in our life, maybe through bereavement, trauma, and relationship breakdown or even just by having a bad day! We can help by offering support through specific groups like anxiety support, befriending, counselling, form filling, one to one supportive listening and crisis and information signposting.

As much as possible we offer our services free of charge, but we are a charity, rely on donations and volunteers so if you want more information or want to donate then contact us on: 01636 650228/

How Much Should We Be Paying For Our Pint

Maybe somewhat of a rhetorical question, however is it one that, as CAMRA members, we should actually be giving some serious consideration to?

Following the recent announcement by Cloudwater that they will cease cask production (as featured in our last issue) there has been much debate on the subject in open discussion, numerous articles and blogs. I haven't agreed with everything written but what was very apparent is the belief that cask beer has been under-priced for far too long and a point I personally agree with.

It is the scrutiny of the craft beer scene and the cries that drinkers were getting ripped off by the higher retail prices of the craft beers that has highlighted the low margins of cask, in fact most of the craft beers (with the exception of some clearly overpriced imports) actually retail at margins which should be expected in business.

Given that, is it any wonder our dedicated brewers are more and more also selling their big tasting beers in keg and can and the likes of Cloudwater make the mostly financial decision to cease cask production altogether.

It is true to say we have never been so well off with the number of breweries we have at the moment and many may see that as a sign the industry is flourishing, I see it more that we have a large amount of very dedicated geniuses up and down the country producing some wonderful beers for us at very little profit for themselves. At the end of the day these people are trying to run a business and all businesses have a certain margin they must achieve to make them viable, to have profit which they can invest in new and better equipment, to expand and to become successful, long term. We must also mention the pub landlord at this point, it is easy to think, whilst you and your mates are handing over more than a tenner a time for each round, that the landlord must be making a mint, it is in fact the case that your pub landlords see very little of what goes into the till, they are primarily collecting for the tax man and paying the bills.

CAMRA has championed cask beer successfully for many years now and as members we have and continue to enjoy discounts on these wonderful brews, however in the changing world of today are we actually being responsible in continuing to demand these discounts and expect the price of our pint to remain at the level it is.

With these thoughts could we, the champions of cask beer, actually be now aiding its demise? Hmm, a scary thought indeed, so perhaps when next you are ordering at the bar waving your CAMRA card to get your discount perhaps ask yourself who really needs that 10p or 20p more, you or the people that have made it possible to enjoy such delights.

Should we as responsible consumers be prepared to accept a rise in cask beer prices to ensure the continued well-being of our beer industry and the production of cask?

I believe it is certainly something we need to be prepared to accept or face the consequences, to continue to believe all is well would be a mistake.

Newark Branch Local Spring Tour

Boarding the coach in Castle Gate, on the wrong side of the road, we had a friendly warning from the traffic warden before being waved on our merry way to the first port of call in High Marnham. The Brownlowe Arms was a slight oddity because it says Freehouse on the sign but all the beers were from the Greene King stable. IPA, Abbot and Old Speckled Hen. There is an extensive food offering, no doubt well supported by the large, immediately adjacent caravan park. The beer turned out to be the best value of the day at just £2.90 a pint. Having found the games room, three of us tried a game of "Round the Clock" on the dartboard. I cannot tell a lie, I came third, missing the board more often than hitting it. My embarrassment was fore-shortened by the call to move on.

Our next village was Normanton on Trent with two pubs. The Square & Compass was a lovely old building with very comfortable seating a good beer offering of Lancaster Bomber, Old Speckled Hen, Timothy Taylor Mild and Theakston's Best. Good value at £3.00 a pint.

All four beers were in fine form, as were the excellent and free sausage rolls which helped to soak things up. A short walk round the corner brought us to The Crown. Recently taken over and very nicely presented inside, the beers on offer were the, newly badged, Milestone Shine On, Milestone Loxley Ale, and the generally ubiquitous Doombar, although this was its only sighting of the day and mainly due to a link between Molson Coors & Sky. Again the beer was good value at £3.00. The gents urinals were the most outrageous I have ever seen but your esteemed editor has refused to print a photo, so ask me when you see me.

We moved on a short distance to Sutton on Trent and The Nelson, an attractive, whitewashed building with a garden function room which may well be suitable for a future branch meeting (July 6th). Four beers were on offer: Maypole Gatehopper, Old Speckled Hen, Loxley Ale and Greene King London Glory. Closer to town prices at £3.30 but at last the beer was served at cellar temperature, rather than through a chilled python. After a chat with a couple of locals about the merits of smoking shelters, another short coach run led us to Carlton on Trent. I had been told that The Great Northern Inn would have a large range of good beers, so was slightly disappointed that we landed on a bad day for them. On offer was Black Sheep Bitter, The Rev. James (which turned out to be off), and a Bombardier pumpclip, turned around because it wouldn't clear. But the Black Sheep was reasonable value at £3.20 and we were treated to free roast potatoes.

Our next port of call was to The Muskham Ferry at North Muskham, with a large car park and generous riverside beer garden. Another decent choice of ales with Timothy Taylor Boltmaker, Gatehopper, London Glory and Abbott. Good value at £3.10 and we were served by a very friendly, happy barmaid, who for some reason expected us to be a rowdy load of drunks. I explained we were CAMRA members not football fans, much to the amusement of a local seated at the bar.

Our planned to be pen-ultimate pub was The Crown in Bathley, clearly a great locals pub with a very friendly landlord. Two beers available were Wainwright and Ringwood bitter. There was quite a strong food smell in the pub, but I did notice that the door to the kitchen was open, which maybe explained it.

Both beers were £3.30 and the first pint out was a little cloudy and changed without demure. Our departure crept up on me here so I had to swallow my second pint a little quicker than I would have liked, and we did leave one of our number “in the field” as he lived very close by and was ready to retire.

So, onward to our planned final pub in Norwell: The Plough, which was left till last as it didn't open until 6pm. Again there were two beers on offer, Shine On and Black Sheep, a fair price at £3.20. However, with time to spare before the coach driver had to clock-off, we added an additional final pub, going home through Caunton, in order to visit The Plough, where we had enjoyed our April Branch meeting. The Wainwright was still on good form but I didn't get as far as trying the Pedigree due to time constraints. This pub however, most certainly took the accolade for the most Hipster Landlord of the day.

All in all, a good day out in good company, all good fun apart from the darts, and one to be recommended. I believe the next trip out will be a further set of village pubs we don't often get out to, so keep your eye on Socials on the Website and Facebook.

Did You Know ?

Did you know that the UK pays nearly 40% of all beer duty in the EU but only consumes around 12% of the beer?

UK beer duty is still disproportionately high compared to other leading brewing nations in Europe. Action is needed to address this imbalance and allow brewers to invest in their businesses, and increase the variety of beers available to consumers.

In the Spring 2017 Budget: the Chancellor announced that beer duty would see an inflationary rise of 3.9% - the first rise in duty in five years. This means an additional 2p of duty per pint of beer.

This rise in duty risks a return to the dark days of the Beer Duty Escalator, in place from 2008-2012, where beer duty rose by 2% above inflation every year.

Join us at CAMRA today in our efforts by contacting your newly elected MP and ask them to back our campaign to reduce beer duty and bring us more in line with the rest of Europe

Real ale in a keg? It's possible and at CAMRA festivals

Manchester Beer & Cider Festival's John O'Donnell talks about preparing a key keg-conditioned stand for the next event

Manchester Beer & Cider Festival was founded in 2014 when the National Winter Ales Festival moved to Derby. From the outset, the festival positioned itself as a modern event where tradition and “craft” can exist side-by-side.

Manchester has a rich brewing heritage with its historic family brewers, but has also been at the forefront of the “craft” revolution’ with 45 breweries opening in the last 10 years. In its first two years, the festival lined up traditional brewers like Robinsons alongside the best of the city’s new breweries but also sought beers from brewers who many would consider the pinnacle of “craft” brewing. While many of this new breed of brewers produce all their beers, cask and keg, without filtering or pasteurising them, their more specialist beers are produced infrequently and only packaged in bottles, keg or key keg to be sold in specialist beer bars where the longer shelf life is important. Through a combination of asking nicely, calling in favours and sometimes just plain begging, we have persuaded many breweries to provide some of these beers in cask form. So popular have they proven with festival attendees, they have sometimes needed to be rationed to prevent selling out in single sessions. We would have loved to have sourced more of such beers but with our festival just after Christmas, we have been at the mercy of production schedules (and willing brewers). After two years at Manchester Velodrome, in 2016 the festival moved to the larger Manchester Central, the city’s major exhibition centre. With space to expand the number of bars, high on the agenda was to be able to offer a small range of real ales in key keg, allowing us a wider choice of beers and styles than can be achieved when they have to be packaged specially for us. The new Real Ale in a Key Keg bar will only feature a maximum of 12 beers at a time, but will Allow customers to enjoy a wider range of fermentation to produce CO₂ in the beer. Thankfully, some breweries are proud to produce key keg conditioned beer. Manchester's Runaway exclusively brews key keg-conditioned real ales. Others such as Malton's Brass Castle uses exactly the same process for producing its key-keg beers as for its award-winning cask. On the technical side, while the beer inside key-kegs can be real ale, the equipment for serving it is essentially the same as standard keg beers. The difference with a key keg is that the gas used to dispense the beer never touches the beer itself, keeping it "real". Thankfully Manchester CAMRA has been serving foreign keg beers for years and first introduced key kegs in 2015. Through this experience, we already have a stock of the equipment necessary to serve key-keg beers as their brewers intend them to be served, plus have a couple of local breweries which are happy to lend equipment. We are also fortunate to have volunteers who had already worked with key kegs on the Bieres Sans Frontieres bars at the Great British Beer Festival. The basic set up connects the key kegs to a wall of fonts (left) via a flash chiller which takes the place of CAMRA's cask cooling. Although many of the specialist styles lend themselves to colder dispense than traditional cask, we are in control of the serving temperature and can avoid the excessively low temperature of key keg in many pubs. As the gas which forces the beer from the key keg never touches the beer, normal industrial air compressors are used. It's going to be an experiment and we're sure we'll learn some things along the way. We are unlikely to predict the demand correctly. What we do know is that it will help us offer an even wider range of beer styles than ever before to the 13,000 customers we are aiming for.

The Manchester Beer & Cider Festival takes place 25th-27th January 2018 at the Manchester Central. Go to www.mancheerfest.uk for more information.
