IE INFORMATION NOTICE NO. 84-46: CIRCUIT BREAKER POSITION VERIFICATION

Addressees:

All holders of a nuclear power operating license (OL) or construction permit (CP).

Purpose:

This information notice is provided to notify licensees of a recent event that may have safety significance. It is expected that recipients will review the information for applicability to their facilities. However, suggestions contained in this notice do not constitute NRC requirements and, therefore, no specific action or response is required.

Description of Circumstances:

On February 13, 1984, at the McGuire Nuclear Station, breaker no. 1EPA-10, which controls the 1A centrifugal charging pump (CCP), was racked to the DISCONNECT position so that a routine oil sample could be collected from the pump. Sampling was complete 2 hours later and the circuit breaker was supposedly returned to the CONNECT position. The assistant shift supervisor and a control room operator then independently confirmed that the breaker was in a CONNECT position by status indication lights on the control board. However, on February 20, 1984, during normal equipment rotation, it was discovered that the CCP-1A breaker had not been returned to the CONNECT position and that CCP-1A had been in an inoperable state for 7 days. This occurred because the assistant shift supervisor and a control room operator had used an invalid indication to verify that the breaker was in a CONNECT position.

Discussion:

The CCP breaker is a drawout circuit breaker, ITE Model 3 used in 4,160 volt applications. A similar model ITE 03-B is also used at McGuire in 6,900 volt applications. Drawout circuit breakers can be disconnected by moving the breakers physically away from the bus. This is done with a racking wrench that is manually connected to the breaker. The breaker moves from the CONNECT position to the TEST position, and then to the DISCONNECT position. An interlock is provided to prevent operation of the circuit breaker at any point between these three discreet positions. The interlock also functions to mechanically control the breaker tripping mechanism. That is, when the rack release lever is manually moved to the left the racking screw is released and the breaker is mechanically tripped, preventing closing of the breaker. As the breaker is moved by turning the racking screw into one of the three discreet positions, the racking release lever simultaneously arrests the racking screw and releases the trip mechanism. The rack release lever must be in the extreme counterclockwise position for breaker operation.

Control power is supplied to the circuit breaker through a separate connecting device. This device consists of a sliding contact strip with one part mounted on the back of the cubicle at the floor and the other part mounted on the circuit breaker. Contact is made between the two parts when the circuit breaker is moved to the TEST position and continues as the breaker is moved to the CONNECT position. Consequently, the status light indication observed in the control room or on the front of the breaker is not a conclusive indication of breaker position or operability.

To perform a verification of breaker position and operability, all four of the following items must be ensured:

1. Indication on the floor of the circuit breaker housing corresponds to the markings on the circuit breaker.
2. Racking release lever is fully in the CONNECT position (extreme counterclockwise position).
3. The spring motor toggle switch is in the ON position and the springs are charged.
4. The control power fuse is in place and power is available.

If you have any questions regarding this matter, please contact the Regional Administrator of the appropriate NRC regional office or this office.
