WHAT IS AN AMERICAN, ANYWAY?

Is it any wonder that Mr. Khrushchev doesn't understand Americans? The following editorial from the Maysville (Mo.) Record-Herald seems to us to be very timely now that the Big Boss has come and gone. We can make fun of ourselves. (But Khrushchev better not!)

He yells for the government to balance the budget and then takes the last dime he has to make the down payment on his car. . . He whips the enemy nations and then gives 'em the shirt off his back. . . He yells for speed laws that will stop fast driving, and then won't buy a car if it won't make 100 miles an hour. . . An American gets scared to death if he vote a billion dollars for education — but he's a cool cucumber when he finds out we're spending three billion dollars a year for smoking tobacco. . .

He gripes about the high prices of things he has to buy but gripes still more about the low prices of things he has to sell. . . He knows the line-up of every baseball team in the American and National Leagues — and doesn't know half the words in "The Star Spangled Banner". . .

An American will get mad at his wife for not running her home with the efficiency of a hotel, and then he'll get mad at the hotel for not operating like a home. . . He'll spend half a day looking for vitamin pills to make him live longer — then drive 90 miles an hour on slick pavement to make up for the time he lost. . .

An American is a man who will fall out with his wife over her cooking and then go on a fishing trip and swallow half-fried potatoes, burnt fish, and gritty creek water coffee made in a rusty gallon bucket — and think it is good. . .

An American will work hard on a farm so he can move into town where he can make more money so he can move back to the farm. . . When an American is in his office he talks about baseball, football or fishing — when he is out at the game or on the creek bank, he talks about business. . . He is the only fellow in the world who will pay 50 cents to park his car while he eats a 25-cent sandwich. . .

An American likes to cuss his government but gets fighting mad if a foreigner does it. . . We're the country that has more food to eat than any other country in the world and more diets to keep us from eating it. . .

We're the most ambitious people on earth, and we run from morning until night trying to keep our earning power up with our learning power. . . We're supposed to be the most civilized, Christian nation on earth, but still can't deliver payrolls without an armored car. . .

In America we have more experts on marriage than any other country in the world and more divorces. . . But we're still pretty nice folks. Calling a person "A Real American" is the best compliment we can pay him. . .

Most of the world is itching for what we have — but they'll never have it until they start searching for it the way we did.

TWO BIG MISTAKES

If we were called upon to name the most outstanding friend the United States has in the Far East millions would unhesitatingly say it is General Carlos P. Romulo, first President of the Philippines and former President of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Therefore when General Romulo pin-points what he calls the "two big American Mistakes" in This Week Magazine it bears more weight than many of the opinions expressed by our own leaders.

He says our two biggest mistakes are the childish belief that there will be a "happy ending" to Communism in China, and the second is the wishful thinking that envy on the part of Soviet Russia will someday destroy the Sino-Soviet alliance.

In thinking that Communism is alien to the Chinese General Romulo says we display our ignorance of the Orient. Chinese are used to regimentation, and they were adept at "brain-washing" many centuries before Christ was born, and long before Karl Marx was ever heard of.

He quotes from an official government edict issued in 403 B.C. which read: "all official histories shall be burned. Those who dare discuss these things shall be put to death and their corpses exhibited in a public place."

In spite of the fact the Chinese Reds have killed eighteen million political prisoners in the last ten years General Romulo says Communism is succeeding at the fastest rate of any political or economic philosophy on earth.

Are the Chinese people happy under Communism? His answer is a resounding "yes". There is wide-spread hunger, he says, but Chinese can remember when millions starved to death when the Chinese Nationalist bankrupt regime was in power.

Normal friction between Russia and China exists, he says, but there isn't the slightest indication of a split. In fact, he says, a year or so ago when the Communists threatened to invade Formosa-Nikita Khrushchev promptly notified the United States, the most powerful military power on earth, that the Soviet Union would go to war with us if we helped defend Formosa, or even Matsui Island.

And the Philippine leader says we can't laugh off what the Chinese Reds, with Russian assistance, did to the United States force in Korea. It was the west, not Communist China, that lost face in the "police action" which former President Harry S. Truman once referred to as his "sole responsibility".

What General Romulo thinks we should do is to face realities which include the outstanding fact that Communism in China is a tremendous success, and the people like it. He thinks we should also stop hoping for a split between Soviet Russia and Communist China. He doesn't rule it out as an impossibility for the distant future, but he doesn't think any of us will live long enough to see such a split take place.

The main thing he recommends for us to do about living with the success of Communism is to keep ourselves strong. Military strength is incidental, he seems to think. Economic strength is far more important, but even that is secondary to intellectual and spiritual strength.

He says this is the type of strength that has enabled the United States to lead the free world, and he expresses the hope that we can increase our spiritual strength as the years come and go.

'CONSOLE SIZE' REACTOR—Atomic Energy Director John A. McCone displays a model of what is believed to be the world's smallest atomic power reactor, the size of a five-gallon can, for the American Rocket Society in Washington. It is called the "Ship II," weighs 220 pounds, contains 6.6 pounds of uranium 235, could keep half a hundred 60-watt bulbs lit for years. "Use of such a device," said McCone, "would make possible long-lived weather satellites, worldwide television communications. . . interplanetary travel."

Colts, Giants, Browns, And Steelers Are Favored To Win In Sunday's Key League Games

By EARL WRIGHT

The Baltimore Colts, Cleveland Browns, New York Giants and Pittsburgh Steelers are favored in Sunday's key National Football League games.

The Detroit Lions (2-4-1) and Green Bay Packers (4-5) open the 10th week of the 12-week campaign Thursday in their traditional Thanksgiving Day clash. The Lions are two-point choices for the Western Division game against Detroit.

Baltimore, tied with the San Francisco Forty-Niners (each 6-3) for the Western lead, is the choice to whip the visiting Los Angeles Rams. The Browns, trailing the first-place New York Giants by a game in the Eastern race, entertain the Forty-Niners in a clash which will affect both divisions.

Browns 10-Point Favorites
The Browns (6-3) are favored by 10 points. If the oddsmakers are right about these two games, the Colts will be alone in first place, a game ahead of the Forty-Niners Sunday night.

New York (7-2) entertains the Washington Redskins (3-6) and is favored by nine points. Pittsburgh (4-4-1) upset New York and Cleveland in its last two games and is a 3 1/2 point pick to whip its third straight contender when it plays host to the Philadelphia Eagles.

(6-3). The Eagles and Browns are tied for second behind New York in the East.

Bears Over Cardinals
In Sunday's other game, the Chicago Bears (5-4) are seven-point favorites for their annual clash with the Chicago Cardinals (2-7). The Bears are only a game behind the two Western leaders and could tie for first place by winning, if the Forty-Niners and Colts lose.

If past results this season hold true, Sunday's heavy favorites could be in for rude shocks. Teams favored by seven or more points have been defeated by underdogs in eight of the 54 games played so far this season. For example, the Redskins were 10 point underdogs when they tamed the Colts, the Lions were 11 1/2 point underdogs when they downed the Rams, 17-7, and the Steelers were nine-point underdogs last Sunday when they edged the Browns 21-20.

Retire? No Sir, Says Editor, 81

NUNDA, N. Y. — (UPI) — At 81, does Water B. Sanders ever think of giving up his newspaper career? No, not at all.

Sanders is editor and publisher of the Nunda News, Livingston County Weekly which started its second century of service this fall. The paper was begun by Sanders' father more than a year before Abraham Lincoln became President.

Looking many years younger than his age, Sanders has no thoughts of leaving the job he loves. He wouldn't know what to do with himself, he says, adding:

"I love this job and I love this town — and I don't expect to retire."

At Last "Other Guy" Gets What He Deserves

By JOHN D. KENDALL
United Press International
SAN DIEGO, Calif. — (UPI) — Gripping about the other fellows?

REASSURANCE—A supermarket in Longview, Wash., gives this reassurance.

miserable driving has been a popular sport since the first horseless carriage frightened the first horse.

Almost everyone has shouted in red-faced, wild-eyed rage: "Imbecile... idiot... moron..." And so on.

The trouble is that the other driver usually doesn't hear a single descriptive word of it as he whisks by. This is frustrating. It makes for high blood pressure, among other things.

So the San Diego Traffic Safety Council now offers local drivers a chance to get it all off their chests. It has set up a wailing wall for motorists.

Just think what this did for M. Rees Harris, who wrote:

"The only people I abominate are the officious, rapid, smirking, facious, pompous, stupid, fudgy-duddy, self-styled 'law abiders,' who in their mono-manical manner persist in driving on the inside lane, somewhat slower than the speed limit, and who, in their fatuous-reeking egomania refuse to move to the outside lane, despite honking, cursing, gesticulating efforts of ulcerated, frustrated, delibated motorists like me."

Now, almost everyone must admit, Mr. Harris feels much better. Russell L. Stout of Imperial Beach, Calif., wrote:

"...The bird who can't drive unless he has his left arm out the window, either supporting the car top or hanging limp like a broken wing is my pet peeve. Of course, none of this is to be taken as a hand signal by other drivers unless he is about to make some maneuver requiring a hand signal." John F. McSorley sees red about something entirely different. Said McSorley:

"My biggest gripe is the two wheel menace known as the motorcycle or motorcyele. They seem to think that the white line in the center of the road was painted for their sake."

Others singled out for verbal lashings are: "Gutter Sneakers"—the motorist who crowds up on the right and races you across the intersection. "Killer Whales"—buses, trucks or railers that are two big. "Little Bitty Bugs"—Foreign cars that are too small.

The safety council also received a letter from a pedestrian who wondered why people drive at all and another from a fellow who griped because others griped so much.

German Style Dating Preferred

ALLEGAN, Mich. — (UPI) — A German exchange student has won support for her criticism of teen-aged dating, American style, from a Michigan girl who recently completed a year of study in Germany.
The two girls — Linda Malia of Allegan and Kirsten Tiedermann-Michaelis of Hamburg, Germany — recently compared notes on boy-girl relationships in their native countries.
Eighteen-year-old Kirsten said European teen-agers do their dating in groups because they usually walk to social functions. No matter how wealthy their family, she indicated, no teenagers of her acquaintance ever drove their parents' car, or had one of their own.
Kirsten, who is studying for a year at Allegan High School, said she was amazed to learn that nearly a third of the students at Michigan State University are married.
Linda, who attended Germany's Osnabrueck Teacher's College, said she preferred the German approach toward dating, rather than the American practice of individual couples going their own way.
According to Linda, "going

Persons 65 Or Over May Get Blue Cross

Eligible persons 65 years of age or over may apply for Blue Cross-Blue Shield from November 15 through November 28, 1959. The protection will cost $11.25 per quarter for each person. Bernard C. Harvey, Administrator of The Murray Hospital, urges all eligible persons in this age group to seriously consider this protection being offered by Blue Cross-Blue Shield. This plan is an attempt to help solve a social and economic problem which exists in every community. Both Blue Cross-Blue Shield were organized for this purpose for many people 65 years of age or over who are faced by the need of hospital-surgical care. People of this or any age group who cannot pay for the care which they need are also creating problems for the community hospitals and the convalescent which they live. Some of these problems could be avoided if people would get information on hospital-surgical plans from their hospital or doctor before purchasing. Too many people today are carrying plans which reduce benefits because of age, or which cancel when a certain age is reached or when a chronic or incurable physical condition develops. Blue Cross-Blue Shield, says Mr. Harvey, have always allowed continuation of coverage for retirement, or physical conditions. This helps to relieve, rather than to create social-economic problems. Information regarding the benefits offered may be secured by writing directly to: Enrollment Department Blue Cross-Blue Shield 3101 Bardstown Road Louisville 5, Kentucky $100,000,000 ART FIND? — Maria Hataburda, 30, and her brother, TV repairman Alfonso Folio, 40, receive telephone inquiries (upper) in Los Angeles about the discovery that 10 old paintings handed down in their family in Italy from their great-grandfather's time have been classified "old masters" and worth as much as $10,000,000. Figuring in the discovery is Charles di Renzo (lower), who stands in Los Angeles before the so-called lost masterpiece "Madalena," by Michelangelo de Caravaggio (1565-1609). General art world recognition of the "find" has yet to be won.

SHADOW OF GUILT by PATRICK QUENTIN A NEW THRILLER

CHAPTER 23 THE DIM green sign of the Red Bear showed on the corner of Second. It was just another Sunday afternoon. I walked in. The barman, a gaunt, olding man of round fifty, was polishing glasses close to a couple of guys who were arguing nastily about something. "Bourbon and water," I said. The barman came back with the drink and I said, "Is your name Mack?" "That's right." His bored eyes studied my face. "You from the cops?" "No, I said. "Thought maybe you was they just seen in here asking about that Rysor kid they're holding on a murder. "I'm his uncle," I said. "I want to know when he came in here on Sunday afternoon." The barman flicked at the bar with his towel. "Just like here, he said. "Went mister here and I remember real clear because I took over for the other barman Sunday afternoon. It was just a couple of minutes after I took over and I took over at two-thirty." Don Saxby's apartment was only a ten-minute walk away. The shots could have been fired at two. The two men at the bar were arguing even more heatedly. The barman stood in front of me watching me now with a sort of three-quarter smile. "It's tough, mister. Chuck seemed like a real nice kid." There was a crash. One of the arguing men had overturned his high stool. The barman started to sop up the spilled drink with his cloth. It was as I watched the liquor seeping into the cloth that I remembered something which until then, I'd forgotten as being of no significance. Whatsoever. When I examined Saxby's body, the shirt sleeve of his left forearm had been damp, with martini spilled from the smashed cocktail shaker. I'd actually touched the material. The cocktail shaker must certainly have been shattered when he fell. And when had I touched the shirt sleeve? Not before four-thirty at the earliest. The barman, having cleaned up the mess, moved soberly back to me. I said, "Have you ever spilled a shaker of martinis on your sleeve?" The mournful eyes blinked. "Sure. Guess so. Why?" "How long does it take to dry?" He shrugged. "Gee, mister, I never figured it out. Not long. The gin evaporating, that don't take long." I counted back. The latest moment Chuck could have been at Don Saxby's apartment was he twenty past two. Twenty past two until four-thirty. Two hours in front of me and ten minutes? Could spilled martini stay damp on a shirt sleeve for two hours and ten minutes? It seemed impossible. And if it was impossible, Saxby must have been shot some time after Chuck had arrived at the Red Bear. It was an unbreakable alibi for Chuck. I could get him released tonight. All I had to do. All I had to do! The implications of that phrase were enormous and threatening, obliterating any sense of jubilation. All I had to do to save Chuck was to betray Aia. And to betray her now would be far more catastrophic than it had been earlier. Once Chuck was proved innocent, there would be only Aia. Her case against her would be even stronger than their case against me had been. But it wasn't only that. Now that the girls were on the table, I could admit to myself what I'd shirked from admitting before. To tell about Aia would be to tell about Eve and me too. I could claim I'd just happened to be in her apartment when Aia's call came through. I could say that I'd had to dictate some letters which had been too urgent to write until Monday. But there weren't any letters to produce and the man I'd be trying to fool would be Lieutenant Trant. How dare I ever that much of a cheater to intima would it take Trant to hit on the truth? He'd find it out in five minutes. Then the sibilant gates of scandal would be burst open for me, for Eve—yes for Connie too. It was ignoble. I knew that when there were so many much more important issues at stake, this extra complication should loom so large to me, but it did not. I thought of what it would do to Eve. To be dragged through the mud as a little secretary who had plotted to steal Connelo Corlies' husband and suddenly I was filled with rage against the District Attorney and Lieutenant Trant. Hadn't it occurred to them that a man with a background like Saxby's could have any number of potential murderers who were not necessarily Rysors or Hildleys? Weren't they investigating his past? Hadn't they even consulted their own files or the newspaper files? The newspaper! One of my oldest buddies was a retired newspaperman turned author. Ted Bradley was a walking encyclopedia of the more sordid aspects of life. I'd might know something, or if he didn't, he had a genius for finding out whatever there was to find out. When I reached him on the phone, Ted was as uncharacteristically cooperative as I knew he would

"So this Saxby pulled a fast one on you, huh? Two hours in front of me and ten minutes? Oh, I'd make a couple of calls if I'd get anything in a hurry. Shall I call you at home?" "At home? Ma' and Vivian would be at sixty-fourth Street. Connie would be storming in from the lawyer. And I'd have to make a car with spilled martini." "No, I said. "If anything comes in in the next hour or so, call me at... I gave him Eve's number. Eve's was the place to make the test and it was all Eve that I should make my decision about Aia. We made the test in Eve's living room. I fixed a shaker of martini and slipped it all over my shirt sleeve. Then, realizing that the next of the damp sleeve speed up evaporation, I took the shirt off and draped it over a chair. We sat together on the studio couch, watching the shirt, waiting. The sleeve reached the degree of near-dryness in forty-five minutes. Don Saxby's first could have been a little more or a little less absorbent than mine, but only to the extent of lengthening or shortening the process by, say, fifteen minutes either way. I had touched Don's shirt at four-thirty. That meant the shots must have been fired sometime between three-thirty and four. By three-thirty, Chuck had been in The Red Bear for an hour. "Well," said Eve, "that proves it, doesn't it?" "Yes," I conceded then. "For a moment we both stood looking at the shirt. Lying on the chair with the damp sleeve sloping over the arm it had a spookily human quality, as if at some moment the sleeve might move. Eve turned to me. Her blue eyes were very grave. "If you tell, they're bound to arrest Aia, aren't they?" "Of course they are," unless by some miracle Ted Bradley can come up with something. "It would be mad to depend on that. And even if he did find something they didn't know about Don Saxby's past that isn't going to alter the evidence." She paused. "This the martini—it wouldn't help her, would it?" "It'd make it worse. Saxby still could have been killed at four, and she was there at four. We know she was. I called you at seven minutes past." She gave a bleak little shrug. "But, George, you can't really believe she did it, Aia? It doesn't seem possible." "Of course I don't think she did it. But that's no way of being sure, is it?" Police Lieutenant Trant has some unsettling news for George. "Shadow of Guilt" continues here tomorrow.

Seek To Solve Alfalfa Mystery

BATON ROUGE, La. — (AP) — Scientists at Louisiana State University's agricultural and biochemical laboratories are looking for an elusive "something" in alfalfa that isn't exactly hay.

They call it a "growth factor" — something they've known about for years, but have never isolated. It may eventually turn out to be a vitamin since experiments with alfalfa extracts have stimulated growth in livestock and poultry.

Dr. Joseph A. Lanza and Arthur Novak, biochemists, began trying to isolate it in 1952 when they discovered a species of mold grew when given vitamins in an alfalfa base. The vitamins alone did not affect the mold.

The results interested Dr. Alva B. Watts, head of Louisiana State's poultry department, who fed a concentrated alfalfa extract to these chicks gained half a pound more than those not receiving the extract.

Tom D. Sam L. Hansard tried the extract on cows and found it increased cellulose digestion.

The researchers are now trying to locate the "something" and define it in chemical terms. They plan further tests with commercial feeds before placing it on the market.

FARM BUREAU in Action

by CHITFIELD
Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

It's Farm-City Week for the fifth consecutive year in Kentucky and throughout America. We in Farm Bureau have assumed positions of leadership in this movement because we think it has proved to be the most successful exercise in good public relations for agriculture that has yet come along. More and more farmers are coming to realize that steps must be taken to get the truth to the non-farming public on such issues as subsidies, price supports, surplus and so forth.

Farm-City Week activities are doing more to contribute to this end than any other project we know of.

Let's take the subsidy question, for example. You would think reading some of the national magazines that farmers are about the only group in the country receiving government subsidies; or at best, are receiving the lion's share of subsidies.

This is pure nonsense. Farmers don't like the idea of subsidies any better than any else; and would be among the first in line to give them up, when the money groups in the economy get ready to abolish all subsidies.

As Farm Bureau President Burl St. Clair said in his annual address at the recent State Farm Bureau convention, "Farmers are 'If they Come Let's Help' when it comes to subsidies." A recent study reported by Christian Science Monitor, revealed this startling fact: In the last 50 years for each $1,000 spent on subsidies the American farmer has received only $5 of it.

Canadian Family Honored Guests

BRADFORD, Pa. — (AP) — The three members of a family from St. Catharines, Ont., Canada were surprised recently when their car was halted by city and state police as they entered Bradford.

However, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Snyder and their son David hadn't done anything wrong. It was just that the Bradford Exchange Club had singled them out for de luxe treatment as part of the city's observance of Pennsylvania Week.

The Snyders were taken to a hotel where a suite of rooms were reserved, were guests at a luncheon and a dinner and received gifts from 30 Bradford firms.

Pour into 1-qt. mold or into several individual small molds or dessert dishes. Chill until firm.

Serve as salad with lettuce and mayonnaise or additional sour cream. For dessert, serve with whipped cream topping.

Makes 4 to 5 portions.

Veal Cranberry Roll: Heat oven to 350° F., or moderate.

Wipe 1½ lbs. veal steak, pounded very thin, with damp cloth. Sprinkle with salt. Cut veal into 4 pieces.

Combine 2 c. cooked rice, ¼ c. chopped walnuts, 2 tb. chopped parsley, 2 tb. melted butter, 1 tsp. nutmeg, ½ powdered ginger.

Spread on veal, roll up and fasten with toothpicks or skewers or tie with string. Roll meat in flour, place in baking pan.

Pour 1 pt. cranberry juice cocktail over meat. Cover meat with 1 small onion, sliced.

Bake 1½ to 2 hrs. or until tender, basting frequently. Serve juice and drippings with meat. Makes 4 servings.

MID-MORNING, and it's time for a little something! In this case, it's a cup of steaming hot coffee and a well-buttered slice of a delicious homemade Cranberry Fruit Bread.

Tart-Sweet and Colorful

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

THE cranberry—tart-sweet, colorful and all-American—is bringing a vivid touch of red to fruit markets.

The bright berry, a Thanksgiving favorite, is versatile indeed. No need to limit its use to the tasty sauce that goes with turkey. Try the cranberry as an ingredient for a flavorful fruit bread or a sour cream salad or dessert.

Cranberry Juice

Cranberry juice, a nippy breakfast cocktail or pre-dinner appetizer, can come to the table as part of the main dish.

Use the juice to give rice-stuffed veal roll-ups a tangy flavor. It will also help keep the meat juicy and tender during cooking.

Cranberry Fruit Bread: Sift together 2 c. sifted all-purpose flour, 1 c. sugar, 1½ tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. baking soda, 1 tsp. salt.

Combine juice and grated rind of 1 orange, 2 tb. salad oil and enough water to make ¾ c. liquid; then stir in 1 egg, well-beaten.

Pour mixture into dry ingredients mixing just enough to dampen. Fold in 1 c. chopped nuts and 2 c. fresh cranberries coarsely chopped. Spoon into greased 9 x 5 x 3-in. loaf pan. Bake at 350° F.

Burning Wheat Straw Robs Soil of Organic Matter and Nutrients

YOU lose twice when you burn wheat straw and stubble to get rid of it after harvest, reports the Midwest division of the National Plant Food Institute.

"First, you rob the soil of valuable organic matter that can help condition your land to produce better crop yields," says a statement by the Institute. "And you also lose a substantial part of the nutrients in the straw—principally nitrogen."

Organic matter added by crop residues such as wheat stubble makes the soil a better sponge for soaking up moisture for the use of growing crops, the Institute points out.

"This organic matter mellowes the soil and makes it porous and grainy," says the statement. "It can get in more readily. Crop roots can penetrate more easily for nutrients and moisture."

When you plow under straw or work it into the soil before planting, it is wise to add fertilizer, the Institute points out.

"Here's why," it says. "The billions of soil organisms that rot the plowed-down straw and make it into soil-building humus, use up large amounts of nitrogen, phosphate and potash to grow and multiply and do their work."

"If your soil is low in these elements during this time, the organisms can use up all the nutrients. Then the new crop may starve for needed plant food."

Among the advantages of plowing down fertilizer with the straw are: 1—You take care of the needs of the organisms so the soil can be improved. 2—You help supply some of the nutrients to feed the wheat crop that follows.
