Students Rally Against Bush Scripps Stop

By A.M. BEZZERIDES
 News Editor and
 DAVID BROOKS
 Senior Staff Writer

A small but vocal contingent of UCSD students protested Vice President George Bush's campaign stop Friday at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography.

Approximately 100 students armed with drums and assorted noisemakers marched down the hill towards the entrance of the speaking area, but were quickly rerouted by UCSD campus police and San Diego police.

Revelle Senior Darryl Biniuz claimed that San Diego police officers riding on four-wheel ATVs used excessive force in attempting to clear the street through which spectators expected Bush to arrive.

"[A San Diego police officer] stuck a night club in my face," Biniuz said, adding that he was lucky when a UC police officer intervened and pulled him off to the side.

San Diego police officers grabbed Dukakis signs from supporters on the sidewalk and removed all the wooden stakes in an attempt to control and safeguard the line of spectators who were outside the entrance.

Apparently the protest, organized by the Ché Café and other co-op members, was pulled to

Bush Uses Scripps For Ecology Speech

By PETER MESSROBIAN
 Senior Staff Writer

Republican presidential candidate George Bush claimed once again that he is an "environmentalist" while speaking last Friday at Scripps Institute of Oceanography (SIO), with the Pacific Ocean behind him and a crowd of what one observer termed "rich people from La Jolla" in front of him.

"I don't see too many Scripps people here," said Dr. William Thomas, a professor emeritus at SIO who has worked for 37 years at the famed oceanographic institution.

The Bush campaign apparently chose the location for his twenty-minute speech on environmental issues strictly for its "photo opportunity" potential.

The candidate said little that related to the research and educational missions of SIO, and his promise to "lead the search for alternative fuels" flew in the face of contentions by two SIO researchers that their own searches for alternative fuels had been dealt setbacks by the Reagan/Bush administration.

Dr. Thomas had been a part of an effort to harness solar energy that was initiated by the Carter administration, but whose funding is now so minimal that the program barely exists.

Another Scripps researcher, Dr. Ralph Lewin, is currently researching oil-producing algae that may help replace the earth's dwindling reserves of petroleum, and he said recently that his budget has also been cut.

When asked his opinion of Bush's speech, Lewin would only reply that he thought "three out of the four people we have running for office are intelligent characters."

The one left over, Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle, was not mentioned at all by Bush, who also directly attacked his opponent, Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis, only once. Instead, Bush concentrated on issues such as national parks, clean air, alternative fuels, the dumping of waste into the ocean, offshore drilling, and his "thousand points of light."

Governor George Deukmejian introduced Bush by noting that "a clean, enjoyable, prosperous quality of life is important for all Californians." A small group of Dukakis partisans started to laugh when the governor noted that Bush "will be committed to protecting a healthy economy and a healthy environment in California," but were quickly drowned by applause from the overwhelmingly white, pro-Bush

Sexual Harassment: Dealing with UCSD's Problem

By DENISE DADOR
 Staff Writer

(Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part examination of sexual harassment. Part one ran on Thursday, Oct. 13.)

Efforts to create educational workshops to provide teachers and their staffs with sexual harassment information are part of UCSD's ongoing campaign to deal with the problem of sexual harassment.

Reina Juarez, a counseling psychiatrist at Psychology and Counseling Services, said professors who feel attracted to their students should seek help. "I believe in prevention," she said. "Anyone who is in a position of power over someone else needs to be aware of this."

According to Juarez, professors and their teaching assistants will learn at the training sessions the importance of maintaining proper teacher-student relationships and learn what is considered "inappropriate" behavior.

She said that through these proposed seminars, departments on campus will be able to arrange informational workshops for their staffs.

Nicholas Aguilar, director of Special Services, said that the personnel department at UCSD makes presentations to employees periodically in which campus conduct codes are reviewed.

"The act of sexual harassment is an abuse of authority," he said. "The consequences of being found guilty are potentially severe. It's a very serious matter."

Juarez said it is crucial for people in authority to be clear about their roles over subordinates. Although cases against female harassers are not commonplace, she said that both men and women get victimized. "Most victims identified are women because women are still treated as sex objects," she said.

Juarez stated that victims suffer from anxiety because they sometimes believe that they may somehow have instigated their professor's actions.

"Even if a student is being very seductive toward the person in power, it is that professor's responsibility to set the limit," she said.

According to Juarez, harassers are people who are not experiencing very much gratification in their lives. She said their personal problems tend to blur their judgment to the point at which they believe that intimate relationships with students can exist in a classroom environment.

"I encourage teachers who feel attracted to their students to talk with a friend or go for help," she added. "They can get a date somewhere else. Why do they have to go to their students?"

Juarez feels that the education profession carries an added responsibility besides just teaching academic subjects.

"Teachers are also here to educate their students about proper relationships between men and women," she said.

Juarez compared the effects of being a sexual harassment victim to that of a victim of child abuse or incest.

In many cases, victims will not see the problem, she said,

SPOTLIGHT

Meet Legislators Bates and Killea On Campus October 19

Congressman Jim Bates and Assemblywoman Lucy Killea will be speaking on campus Wednesday Oct. 19. They will address the topic of "The Importance of the Presidential Year." They also will be answering questions from the audience concerning major issues and their views.

The legislators will be speaking in the North Conference Room from 1 to 2 p.m.

The event is sponsored by the Democratic Club at UCSD and ASUCSD.

UCSD INFO

Broken Rainbow to be shown free on campus Oct. 20

The Academy Award Winning Film Broken Rainbow will be shown Thursday Oct. 20 at 7 p.m.

The documentary on the forced relocation of 10,000 Navajo Indians off of their ancestral homelands at Bug Mountain, Arizona is narrated by Martin Sheen. It will be shown in Mandeville Center, room 103 at no charge. For more information call 277-0991.

Alexander Ginzburg to speak on Soviet Human Rights

Alexander Ginzburg will be speaking Tuesday, Oct. 18 in Mandeville Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. As part of the National Issues Forum he will be addressing "The Struggle for Human Rights in the Soviet Union."

In 1979 the Soviet Union exchanged journalist Ginzburg and four fellow dissidents for two convicted spies. In doing so, the Soviets removed Ginzburg from Mordovian Camp No. 1 (one of their harshest internment camps), stripped him of his citizenship, exiled him to America and some believe that they rid themselves of one of the most outspoken advocates of human rights in the USSR.

In the Soviet Union Ginzburg and Alexander Solzhenitsyn formed the Russian Social Fund to provide aid for 700 political prisoners and their families. In the United States, Ginzburg remains a wary and insightful observer of the changing Soviet system.

Tickets to this event are being sold at the UCSD Box Office and at TicketMaster locations. General admission is $15, students, $9 and seniors, $12.

Volunteer Opportunities

Involvement Opportunities

Experience counts. Whether it's taking a patient's blood pressure at a community clinic or guiding a small child through the vast legal system, there are hundreds of challenging opportunities in San Diego schools and communities that can maximize your interests and abilities. The arts, education, the environment, health care, recreation, communication, counseling, law: Come explore the possibilities wherever your career, academic or personal interests lie. Drop by our office, second floor, Student Center, or call the Volunteer Connection at 534-1414. And if you're interested in joining our staff and helping other students gain the experience that counts, contact us as soon as possible.

Health Care

Are you pre-med? Gain hands-on experience in health care at the Beach Area Community Clinic in Mission Beach. Volunteers are needed in several departments, including the lab, health education, the women's clinic, and pediatrics. In addition, volunteers may serve in general medicine conducting simple procedures, i.e. taking patient history, vital signs, blood pressure, or as administrative aides in the chart room. Volunteers are asked to contribute four hours a week for a six-month period, with more training given to long-term volunteers.

Legal Services

Dreaming of law school? Voices for Children needs long-term volunteers to serve as special advocates representing foster children and helping them find permanent homes. Volunteers will be assigned to specific cases where they will interview parents, research files, attend court appearances, and contact social service agencies. File reviewers are also needed to prepare a summary of each child's movement through the court system. Volunteers are asked to contribute 10 to 20 hours per month.

BUSH: at Scripps

crowd, a sequence of events that occurred several times during the speech.

Bush began by noting the "spectacular setting" that surrounded him, and he described SIO as "one of the most prestigious centers for marine science research, and certainly one of the great training centers of the entire world."

He did not, however, give his opinion of UCSD, of which SIO is but one of several parts, and, in fact, one of the reporters covering the speech was not even aware of the existence of the rest of the university (besides SIO).

After a brief reference to the previous evening's debate, Bush said he "wanted to lay aside the hot rhetoric of the political campaign...and [talk about] working for a safer and cleaner environment."

"I want to lead this country, and the other nations of the world, too, to a greater understanding of the threats facing our planet, and to a greater commitment to meeting and resolving them," Bush said.

He said that enjoying the outdoors is "a part of my blood," and offered as an example his efforts to protect the ozone layer.

He then threw a backhanded jab at Dukakis by stating that environmental concerns are "international, and it is nice to have some experience in international affairs."

Bush has repeatedly assailed his opponent for lacking experience in foreign policy matters, while the vice-president has described his current job and his previous work as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations as giving him "experience in international affairs."

After telling the "scientists" in the crowd, who were apparently few in number, that he is "committed to conservation," he declared "I am an environmentalist, and I know that a better America is a cleaner America."

"The goal of a clean and healthy environment is not in conflict with the need to create jobs in a growing economy. Quite the contrary. In the long run, successful economic protection is a prerequisite to solid, sustainable economic growth," Bush said.

"Many of the major environmental problems we face...are truly international in nature, and their solution will require a president who is adept at negotiating with friend and foe alike, a president who will lead on a global scale, and who has the experience and the knowledge to do so, and frankly, I believe this is one strength I possess that my opponent may well lack," Bush said, without substantiating his assertion.

Bush repeated his claim of the previous evening that "one of the little known successes of the administration has been to eliminate the overwhelming majority of offshore lead."

The UCSD Guardian

BUSH: Environmental Record Reviewed

However, ABC's John Wooten revealed on Friday evening's "World News Tonight" that Bush had chaired a commission that opposed the regulations that led to the reduction of airborne lead.

"One of my priorities as vice-president has been to lead the search for alternative fuels...and I am proud to report that progress is out there on the horizon..." Bush said.

He also called for the reauthorization of the Clean Air Act, and he bemoaned the fact that the current Congress had adjourned before passing this act, and promised he will ensure its passage if elected president.

Bush also decried the dumping of waste into the seas. "There are threats to that ocean...and one is the dumping of barely treated sewage and sludge from sewage plants into the ocean," he said. "And on the East Coast, problems that arise from the neglect of the ocean have been especially apparent this summer. Closed beaches, horrible medical wastes washing up on the shores..."

"We should work with the states to track the disposal of medical wastes in order to prevent them from washing up on our beaches," the candidate added. After continuing on about "insidious medical wastes" at some length, Bush changed the subject to offshore drilling.

"I do believe that development of our most promising oil and gas reserves is called for because continued domestic production of oil and gas is vital to the national security of our country," Bush said.

"At the same time, I oppose drilling in those environmentally sensitive areas where the risk of damage is too great. And I've said, indeed I think I had something to do with, delaying any drilling under lease sale 91 in Northern California pending environmental concerns."

Bush neither defined "environmentally sensitive areas" nor explicitly stated whether or not he "had something to do with" delaying the drilling of that particular area in Northern California.

"We cannot, and I will not, allow California's golden shores, its most precious treasure, to be put at risk...and I know that what I've said here is not incompatible with getting our country less dependent on foreign oil. We cannot put our fate into the hands of countries halfway around the world," Bush declared.

While discoursing on the subject of national parks, and the "forty thousand Americans" that have "chipped in" to help manage them, Bush said that "herein I do have a fundamental difference with my opponent. He doesn't understand, in my view, what volunteerism can do. I talk of a 'thousand points of light,' and his people ridicule it."

As laughter interrupted him, he continued, "There they are, they don't understand. They don't understand that what makes our country great...is not the federal government standing alone, it's what American citizens do...to help make it better."

"I've tried to get through the whole day without saying the word 'liberal'—the liberals don't understand this," Bush declared, to the cheers of the partisan audience.

"Parks are for people, and we should take the greatest care to enhance and protect those parks which are near enough for people to enjoy," Bush continued, and he added that "parks near our urban centers should be our highest priority."

Bush also unveiled YES, Youth Entering Service to America, and said he'd like "to see legions of our young people volunteer to keep our parks in shape."

The candidate also talked about a recent vacation he and his wife Barbara took with a grandson to the Grand Tetons, and the decision he made then: "And so I have resolved that if I am elected President of the United States, I will undertake a program to strengthen and preserve our parks. I'll call it 'America the Beautiful,' because that's exactly what this great country of ours is, beautiful beyond all comprehension..."

He then called upon Irving Berlin's (the composer of "America the Beautiful") "pristine" vision of America, and called it the America he wanted "God to bless, too."

Atkinson said afterwards that he found the candidate's discourse "fairly substantial" and discerned a "solid commitment to the environment" in what Bush had said. He did not elaborate.

PROTESTERS

KSDT member William Gynney said that the protesters organized the "totally spur of the moment" rally after reading about Bush's campaign stop in the Guardian.

Chanting such things as "Go to Panama and don't come back" and "Bush off Campus" to drum beatings, the protesters were heard by spectators in the speech area.

Bush supporters who did not have tickets to be in the actual speech area complained that they could not hear their candidate's speech coming through the loudspeaker over protesters yelling such things as "Vote for Bush and kill for free!"

One woman complained that the UCSD student protesters were rude and they were denying her and "Bush [their] First Amendment rights" by chanting, yelling out comments and beating drums.

UCSD student Joe Finley, president of the campus group Voters for the Democratic Ticket, said that his group of Dukakis supporters and the group from the Ché were part of the same demonstration.

"The only thing my group did was organize with signs to take away from George Bush's spotlight. The Ché people were on their own," Finley said.

Dukakis press volunteer Jeff Hill said that although the student protest group had nothing to do with the official Dukakis campaign, he was "surprised and pleased at the [student] Dukakis supporters."

Regent Election Not a New Idea

Editor:
We are indebted to Elaine Brooks for her excellent and insightful opinion "Speech is Restricted for UCSD Staff" (Guardian, Oct. 10). It is refreshing to know that, at least every once in a while, someone on Staff is willing to speak out with the candor and honesty which Ms. Brooks displayed in her writing.

I would, however, like to indicate one possibly misleading comment of Ms. Brooks' when she said: "I think it apocryphal both for your [the Guardian's] effort, and for this campus that the issue [of the election of the Regents] was generated at Berkeley and not here."

In 1978 the California State Assembly Committee on Higher Education met on this campus to discuss, among other things, issues related to the development of Interdisciplinary Programs.

During the meeting, according to the former Student Assembly Co-Chair Montgomery Kroopkin, a large coalition of campus student groups concerned with the state of autonomy of the University raised the issues of the accountability of the Regents to the people of California and the possibility of election of the Regents.

A Lesson in The Real World

By MIKE MARTINEZ
Contributing Writer

This is the fourth entry in the Editor-In-A-Box saga. So far, our Ed-in-Chief John Shaw has shown a sly, cynical side, like another John who's been in the news lately — Lennon. Jeff B-Howe, offered his personal experiences with sex and love that flows. Sabrina showed she is capable of bearing children and I, for one, take her seriously. She runs one hell of a section.

Before this becomes an elongated office in-joke, let me say that I'm quite honored to have been asked for a contribution. I'm not like the others. I'm a full time staff member, on salary with UC Regents and the Guardian business office. I'm not even an editor per se.

The real editors are students, most of you barely 20 or just past it. The lofty academic standards here are enough of a burden without factoring in the twice weekly Guardian Deadline Blues. Some of you also have part-time jobs.

In spite of the obstacles, all of you should enjoy your college years. They're a time to get outrageous, a time for headlong dives with your eyes closed, a time for friendships and perhaps that first great love. Years from now you'll long for these days, which will seem in retrospect so carefree. You may even remember them as the Fun Years.

I've been through all that. I'm over 30. My life is a lot like that TV show, Thirtysomething. I've crossed that great divide into the Real World. Let me give you all the benefit of my expertise with a brief treatise on the six concepts you'll need a grasp of in the Real World.

1. Connections. Bear with this rude awakening. I graduated from San Diego St. seven years ago this December with a degree in Graphic Communication and a minor in partyology. I waltzed into the obligatory graduation bash with boundless optimism, a fistful of dreams...and more than a little arrogance.

Just what makes that little old ant think he can move that rubber tree plant?

Hell, I thought the line on my resume that said Graduate was a codocil to the Ten Commandments. It wasn't. The best and smartest way to further your career is to establish connections. This may be the biggest challenge of your life if your name isn't Quayle or Kolender.

Think of connections as a flow chart. Start with a friend, relative, or mailman. Someone you know. After that, it's who-knows-who-knows-who and the chart starts to branch out. You do a lot of bullshitting and cold call introductions, but that's how the system works. I was once interviewed by an agency owner who was the golfing buddy of a friend of a friend's neighbor. You can't always count on the want ads.

2. Cut down (or out) recreational spirits...wink, wink, nudge, nudge. Come on, you know what I mean. Smoking a joint is going to feel and look dumb at some point, so why wait for the inevitable? As for cocaine, that guy on the Atlanta Falcons would straighten you out if he were here. Those of us in the Real World stick to the Friday night six-pack.

3. Marriage. This could be considered optional, and I know many men and women who've had successful careers as professional singles. I married Sandy last year, and I'm pretty happy. You don't want to end up like my mom's uncle, who's 80 years old, lives alone in a low rent room downtown, and has no one to nag him.

4. Money. Directly related to No. 1. This includes everything that revolves around income and your standard of living. You'll learn how to budget, how to save, how to invest. You'll need to know how, when and where to buy a house. You'll decide how much of

Q & A: How do you feel about George Bush's visit to campus?

Of course he has a right to visit campus. I have a strong distaste for the man because as former head of the CIA and a high official of the Reagan Administration, he's played an integral part in the perpetuation of an unethical, uneconomical, U.S. foreign policy.

your disposable income is available for purchases of adult toys (that's easy in the early years of marriage... none!). Even tipping the humorless waitress at Denny's involves a checklist of decisions. My financial tip for the marriage planners: a big wedding mort-

5. Children. My wife and I have none, yet. We'll be ready in a few more years and we'll call it Nate — if it's a boy.

6. Youth. By this, I mean keeping yourself young. If it takes physical fitness, then by all means use it as a last resort. Being over thirty is no reason to act your age. My personal formula includes a

One last thing — don't let all your dreams become obsolete.

Quayle is Terrible

Editor:

The vice-presidential candidates' debate was most revealing. Senator Quayle admitted that he may only be an "average" intellect. Following his grandmother's counsel, he'd certainly have made a super cheerleader if he'd been born a girl. However, with a good chance of finishing up in the White House if Vice President Bush is elected President, Quayle might be a disaster.

—Howard W. Jones, Jr., M.D., The Howard and Georgette Jones Institute for Reproductive Medicine

"In Science and the Unborn, Clifford Grobstein helps us to think about some extraordinarily difficult and delicate questions. He brings to bear his superb scientific knowledge and his ethical sensitivities...he has given me a great deal to think about, and a great deal of help in doing that thinking. His book is a significant contribution to a rapidly escalating debate."

Pub Closes Amid Controversy

By TAMARA MUHONEN
Staff Writer

On March 1, 1989, the students and faculty of UCSD will say farewell to an old friend. UCSD will close the doors of the Triton Pub when the new Price Center opens. Round Table Pizza parlor will take over the Pub's role as the only place to buy alcohol on campus.

According to University Planning Committee chair Tom Tucker, relocation of the pub is an answer to "how to best meet the interests and needs of the students."

A 1983-84 student survey of 2,000 students reported a desire for an on-campus pizza parlor. The planning committee, comprised of thirteen members (eight of which are students) considered this and other factors when deciding where to place the pub.

In the end, the committee decided to keep the pub close to the bulk of other eating establishments. With the opening of a number of restaurants in the new University Center, they decided relocation of the pub to the University Center made sense. And, Tucker said, "Pizza and beer go together."

Unfortunately, what the student survey failed to relay were the sentimental ties held to the pub. During her past six years as owner and manager of the Triton Pub, Maryanne Davis has seen its popularity grow steadily.

"The Pub is a happy place," she commented. "The kids love to come here to let off steam."

A huge sign posted at the entrance of the pub says, "We aren't your mother." This attitude adds a lot to its popularity.

"There are not a lot of no-no's," Davis explained. "This is a place where students can come to relax and regroup."

The open and friendly atmosphere of the Triton Pub has drawn a large variety of customers, including athletic teams, fraternities, and students who just come to study.

"I've seen people come in on a wild, packed Friday night and set up a chess match," chuckled Davis.

Bids for the pub space in the new University Center were opened in 1987. A sub-committee for food service selection then chose the new vendor from the bids submitted. Even though the option to bid was open, the management of the Triton Pub chose to abstain.

"We're a small business," explained Davis. "The new student center is made of big, corporate chains."

"I have mixed emotions about the situation," Davis continued. "I like it here, and I think we will

After jail release under military regime, Chilean comes to UCSD.

Refugee From Chile Tutors at UCSD

By JULIE MUNRO
Features Editor

Editor's note: This is part one of a two-part series. The second part will be in the Thursday issue.

"I was in the category of questionable individual. I was interrogated for several weeks, under a lot of what you might call psychological torture, threats, intimidation."

Cecilia Ubilla-Arenas was born and raised in Chile. She went to Texas and earned a master's degree in the sixties. She then returned to Chile and worked as a teacher, but volunteered her extra time as a two-man and reporter for the Allende government. She was even interviewed by former President Allende on June 10 days before he was overthrown and killed. It was the three-year anniversary of Allende's election. "It was very impressive, he was such a wonderful man. I had bodyguards because the opposition was working on eliminating him. That was a very important moment for me," she said. All of the photos from the interview were later destroyed by the military.

She came to UCSD in 1974 as a graduate student in literature. Her decision to study abroad was not a casual one. After the military coup in September 1973, Ubilla-Arenas went underground because she was associated with the Allende government and her life. A few days before the coup, the Allende government drafted a list of which people from her area would be assassinated when the military took over, and she was on it.

"The Allende supporters who were 'wanted' by the junta, the new military authorities, were summoned over the radio... and we were given an ultimatum that we either surface in 24 hours or we would be shot whenever they found us," Ubilla-Arenas said.

She felt she had a clean case (supporting a democratic government) and wanted to stay alive, so she resurfaced to have the military junta simply fingerprint her and let her go. Some people were very happy she was released, but she knew that could not be the end of it.

At the school where she taught, a rumor had been spread that she was killed. When she showed up in the faculty coffee room, "some people almost dropped the cups from their hands, they were so surprised... some big, strong men just cried. It was a very moving moment," she said, "I thought they had been done away with and they thought I had been killed."

Ubilla-Arenas had seen many of these fellow Allende supporters during interrogations. One day, after standing in the courtyard of the garrison all morning, she and two others were told that the commander of

Triton Pub Sees Last Months

have left our mark. But, the new students who have never been to the pub will never know we were here. We will only exist in the minds of the older students as a memory of a Friday afternoon in the pub."

In the end, the bid went to Round Table Pizza Parlor. According to Jim Carruthers, director of the University Center, the location of the pub is the only thing changing.

"We're simply moving the concept of the pub to a new facility," he said.

This issue, however, has sparked controversy. Triton Pub advocate Bryant Karras commented, "I like the atmosphere at the Pub, and I'm not so sure that a pizza place will be able to recreate that same type of atmosphere."

"Throwing parties at the Pub has been a tradition for us. Because Round Table is a franchise, I don't know that the owners will be quite so open about renting it out to us," Paul Maurani, president of the UCSD Ski Club (RISC) said.

The relocation of the pub will allow the current location, in the University Center "satellite" (the old Student Center), to be rented by the 200-plus student organizations for parties, meetings, or other group functions.

According to Tucker, the possibility of maintaining two on-campus pubs was not a consideration.

"Because of the bonuses created by relocation, it would work as an injustice to the students," he said.

According to Carruthers, director of the University Center, the issue of additional liquor licensing was not a factor.

"There was no desire within the planning committee to have more than one pub," he said. "The consumption of beer and wine on campus is not all that great."

Susan Faulhaber/Guardian
Neil McConlogue, doing a handstand, said, "Why not just let Round Table sell pizza here at the pub?"

COUNCIL: Proposals Rejected

ing of the upcoming reggae fest. Both measures were defeated.

The meeting also featured a visit from a group of Soviet college students from Leningrad State University.

Finlan's proposal, the "Student Input in Campus Policies Resolution," would have urged the UCSD administration to reverse amendments to a UCSD policy document dealing with student rights.

Finlan contends the amendments have been made improperly, without regard for required student participation in the revision process.

Student members of the campus committee charged with revising the document, Finlan said, were not appointed by past A.S. Councils.

"The A.S. is more concerned with covering up mistakes than with student rights."

—Bard-Alan Finlan

"What we're talking about here," he said, "is the most important thing regarding student rights that this council could have addressed."

Many council members agreed with Finlan in principle, but opposed the resolution.

"The people who were assigned to this committee [in the past] didn't even show up," V.P. Administrative John Robison said in an impassioned speech against the resolution. "Student input has always been sought. To ask them to take away this entire policy is ridiculous."

A.S. President Maynard Dimmesdale was one of the few voices on the council supporting the resolution.

The resolution failed three to eight with six abstentions.

"The A.S. is more concerned with covering up mistakes than student rights," Finlan said later. "They are sending a very clear message to the administration that we don't care about doing our job."

The proposal by Public Relations Commissioner Tom Rhee for off-campus reggae fest advertising also generated considerable council debate.

Rhee wanted to advertise the show in the Reader, an idea strongly supported by Programming Commissioner Jonathan Judaken.

"It's not just a concert," Judaken said. "[Reggae] is a message that has got to get to the people."

Judaken stressed that preparations for the Untouchables BGIF appearance were poor, but said that preparations for a large turnout for the reggae fest have been made.

"We've actually got more security than we had for the Sun God Festival last year, when we had 4,000 people," he said.

However, off-campus advertising ran into strong opposition from Dimmesdale and others.

"I am opposed to using student funds to promote events for the outside population," Dimmesdale said. "It was also mentioned to me by Jonathan that this would be advertised through 91X... we're talking about a tremendous amount of advertising."

Judaken confirmed the 91X connection, but noted that it was at no cost to the A.S. and had therefore did not require council approval.

Funding for the ad was voted down two to twelve, with five abstentions.

"At this point in time, I think we ought to play it safe and not go for the Reader ad, Third College Senator Gayatri Gunasekaran said. "I think it's going to be fine just with us — I mean, we can party!"

the garrison had ordered that they would be given lunch. "I thought, oh no, now they are going to poison us, and so I did not want to go," she said. The three ate lunch with soldiers surrounding them and ensuring they did not speak to each other. Although the food was not poisoned, Abilla-Arenas said she "definitely thought that poisoning was one way of getting rid of people... it was a nightmare, to say the least."

One time she was released from the garrison to return to her school, but as soon as she began teaching her class, the door would open and soldiers would be there telling her she had to go. "The students were just shocked. Some of them screamed and took issue with the military and others were just very much in support (of the military)," she said.

She described one day when a soldier repeatedly slammed a huge pistol on a table demanding that she identify it. "He wanted to charge me with some idiotic dealing with arms. I was always with the media... there were no weapons," she said.

Another time, she was waiting to be interrogated when the military brought a philosophy teacher she knew into the garrison. To acknowledge each other could have jeopardized their safety, but they did look at each other. The other teacher was taken in while Ubilla-Arenas was made to wait outside for close to half an hour. "All of a sudden they come and summon me," she said, with the normal procedure of one soldier pointing the way while another followed her with a bayonet at her back. She had almost reached the foot of a staircase when she saw they were bringing the other teacher down. "They were dragging her, she was a mess, all bleeding. They had beaten her up. It was so hideous," Ubilla-Arenas said. She never knew what happened to the other teacher, but said, "She was probably killed."

"I was called for interrogation every single day for almost two weeks until I was put before the military tribunal and sentenced to be in jail," Ubilla-Arenas said. For reasons she still does not understand, she was allowed to trade the jail sentence for house arrest if she could find someone to bail her out. Finding that someone, however, was difficult, when no one wanted to help a person associated with the Allende government, because to harbor an Allende supporter was risky. Finally, the principal of the high school where she taught English and French bailed her out.

House arrest was "a very tedious kind of thing," Ubilla-Arenas said. She was fired from her job and had to check in at the garrison every day. She was frustrated because she had nothing to do, and was afraid to write anything down because of the military's searches. She had no other source of income, except help which began to arrive from her friends in Texas. They were concerned because rumors had reached them that Ubilla-Arenas had been assassinated, "which was not something far-fetched," she said.

Part two will appear in the Guardian on Thursday.

HARASS: A Campus Problem

Continued from page 1 and have trouble understanding why they are not doing well in class. Juarez acknowledged that students sometimes feel they are imagining things.

"They have a cognitive problem, much like the child abuse victim who complains of adult fondling," she said.

Many victims who seek counseling feel very powerless in their situations, but Juarez said that the road to recovery begins when victims realize that they have the power to be in control of their own lives.

"A victim feels doomed if she says no and doomed if she gives in," she said. "It's a matter of being in touch with their own assertiveness."

The psychologist explained that the victim's feeling of helplessness is a common reaction typical of a school environment.

"Students go to school to learn to be efficient, competent and able adults in control of their lives. When a person in power tries to take over, the victim experiences a feeling of helplessness," Juarez said.

Yet the problem of harassment is not only prevalent among students and teachers, but also exists among students.

A common situation is when two students who have been dating each other experience a break-up and one of them continues to pursue the other.

Juarez said that anyone who is continually coming up to another person against their will is considered a harasser.

"This is easier to solve because you're dealing with someone at your own level and this other person is not evaluating you," she said.

Juarez said that often a victim's problems can be resolved without having to press official charges. However, the decision to go ahead with filing a formal complaint rests with the student.

"I can't tell people what to do. My role is simply to clarify what the student wants and support them," she said.

A Student's Guide to Sexual Harassment, a pamphlet put out by the Student Safety Awareness Program, suggests that in order to file a formal complaint, students must contact a complaint resolution officer.

Undergraduates should contact the provosts of their college and graduate students should go to the dean at the Office of Graduate Studies.

Art and reason

When Mark and I decided to spend the weekend at his mother's house, I never imagined I would be walking into a mouse's nightmare. There were cats everywhere.

Cat plaques, cat statues, cat clocks, even a cat mat. I couldn't begin to duplicate her collection of kitty litter if I spent a year at a garage sale. Conspicuously absent, however, was a real cat. Strange, I thought, and began to fear that a weekend with cat woman could be a lot less than purr-fect.

But then she came home, and Mark introduced her. She was dressed surprisingly well—no leopard pants. In fact, you could say she was the cat's meow, but I'd rather not.

She offered me a cup of Dutch Chocolate Mint. Now that was something I could relate to. Then she brought it out in the most beautiful, distinctly unfeline china I'd ever seen. As we sipped, I found out that Mrs. Campbell has my same weakness for chocolate, loves the theater as much as I do, but, incredibly, never saw "Cats." So Mark and I are taking her next month.

Sports Trivia Quiz

Each Monday the Guardian sports section presents the B.J.'s sports trivia quiz. All UCSD students, staff, and faculty are eligible to enter, except for Guardian staff members, Jonathan Schreter, and any other former sports editors. The individual who comes up with the most correct answers each week wins two $5 coupons, redeemable at B.J.'s Chicago Pizzeria located in the La Jolla Village Square convenience center. Either mail in your entries to Sports Editor, UCSD Guardian, B-016, La Jolla, CA 92093, or drop them by the Guardian office, located just southeast of the Humanities Undergraduate Library.

Please include with the entry your name, year in school, major, the college you attend at UCSD, and your phone number. Only one entry per person, per week, please.

This week's questions:

1. What is Dodger pitcher Orel Hershiser's nickname?
2. How many games did the 1974 World Series between the Dodgers and A's go?
3. How many Dodgers on the World Series roster hit over .300 this season and who were they?
4. What team won the 1904 World Series?
5. How many teams and how many players were involved in the deal which ultimately sent Alfredo Griffin to L.A. and Bob Welch to Oakland before this season?
6. How many years has Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda been in the Dodger organization?
7. What law school did A's manager Tony Larussa graduate from in 1980?
8. In election years since 1908, how many times has the American League won the World Series?
9. What kind of plant lies behind the bleachers below the scoreboards in Oakland Coliseum?
10. Who is the only player ever to hit the ball completely out of Dodger stadium during a game and how far did he hit it?

It did not matter. With 20:09 still on the clock, Craig Gross booted the ball from deep in UCSD territory. Chris Hanssen was there to receive the pass, and shot it sailing past the goalie and into an empty goal box.

This revved up the Triton offense and excited already rowdy fans. The small, but extremely vocal crowd on hand was enjoying the fast paced action on the field.

With their adrenalin still pumping, the Tritons attacked again. Chris Waage sent the ball across the field to Carrick Brewster, who found an opening and scored the Tritons' third and last goal of the day. "They were leaving it open the whole game," said Brewster. "We just didn't get all our chances in."

Coach Derek Armstrong was pleased with the win. "They're from New York...we didn't know what to expect. It wasn't a smooth See M. SOCCER, page 15

Tritons Upset William & Mary in Women's Volleyball

By A.C. LEE
Contributing Writer

Competitive, young and willing to improve were the words Coach Doug Dannevik used to describe his national number one (Division III) ranked women's volleyball team, as they continued their quest for "the drive for five" national titles Friday by beating William & Mary.

After a grueling week of practice, the Tritons came into Friday's match against 13th ranked (Division II) William & Mary (16-1) as heavy underdogs. Overcoming their fatigue, the Tritons played a three hour marathon which they dramatically won at the end, 14-16, 15-13, 15-12, 10-15 and 15-9.

A deciding factor in Friday's game was UCSD's defense, which compiled a high 117 digs to William & Mary's 53. Another factor for UCSD was its continual rotation. "In general, our defense played really well over the three hours, but our depth of substitution was the key factor," senior Ellen Chi pointed out.

A few players who had outstanding performances were Rachel Vetter with 18 kills, Dana Simone with 24 digs, and Lauria Bertanyi who played setter throughout the entire five games. "Laurie was there every time we needed her to be solid," Dannevik said.

Dannevik said that the team made great strides with Friday's win, broke through its plateau and made improvements in their style of play.

However, the next day the Tritons played Division III La Verne and lost in straight sets, 15-13, 15-13 and 16-14. The defeat ended UCSD's 41 match winning streak against Division III teams which began way back in October of 1986.

Tuesday the Tritons will travel to face Chapman in a 7:30 p.m. game.

M. Soccer Roughs Up Nazareth

By CARIN RESNICK
Contributing Writer

It has been a tough week for New York teams playing on the west coast. First, the Los Angeles Dodgers put an earlier than expected end to the season for the New York Mets. Then, on Friday, the UCSD men's soccer team showed its hometown hospitality by trouncing its opponent, Nazareth College, of New York, 3-1.

The East versus West Coast showdown began with a bang when Mike Bradley nailed a penalty kick with only 44 seconds gone in the first half. "They weren't ready for us" he explained of his quick score that caught Nazareth by surprise.

The Tritons surged on, playing aggressively on offense. They outshot Nazareth two to one in the first half, keeping their opponents off balance. Nazareth appeared to be struggling, frustrated by the commanding play of the Tritons. Unfortunately, the Tritons failed to capitalize further on offense, and the first half ended with a 1-0 score.

Second half play was dominated by UCSD's unyielding defense. This stingy defense has shut out its opponents 12 times this season, and Friday was no exception.

UCSD outshot Nazareth again in the second half, but this time by a greater margin, 11-2.

UCSD Water Polo Clobbers Claremont-Mudd, 14-5

By CHRIS ZAHARIAS
Contributing Writer

Rebounding off a tough loss to USC here on Friday, the men's water polo squad crushed visiting Claremont-Mudd 14-4 Saturday night. The victory raised UCSD's record to 12-9, and gives the Tritons momentum for their upcoming game against sixth-ranked UC Irvine next Friday.

From the outset, it was clear that the Stags from Claremont-Mudd were not match for the Tritons powerful offense, led by sophomore Jason "Turtle" Brown (6 goals) and junior Dave "Buster" Calder (5 goals).

In the first period, UCSD wasted no time in asserting its dominance when Brown scored only 15 seconds after the sprint. This goal followed a patient passing assault around the outside.

The Tritons also controlled the defensive end of the pool, even in one-man-down situations, with Claremont-Mudd converting a mere third of their 6-5 opportunities. At the other end, however, UCSD made the best of its man-up situations, as it capitalized two-thirds of the time.

On the way to shooting 50 percent for the evening, several Triton players connected on a number of tough shots. In the second period, Calder, with one arm in the grips of a defender, managed to hurl the ball past the Claremont-Mudd goalie from no more than two meters out.

Again in the second, the Tritons got the ball with only thirty seconds remaining, but still managed to put together a flawless passing attack. Freshperson Joseph Risse capped it off by scoring on a powerful skip shot from the far left with just seven seconds left.

Another good performance was turned out by senior goalie Randy "The Franchise" Franke, who blocked many shots from the middle as well as the perimeter. The same could not be said for the Claremont goalie, however, who was aptly named "Holy Goalie" by one fan. In fact, the whole Triton team disposed of the Stags in a systematic fashion.

On the subject of upcoming games, Harper said, "We'll crush Pomona-Pitzer, so we're training through that game to get ready for UC Irvine. They'll be a good test for us."

The defeat of Claremont-Mudd came on the heels of a thorough wipeout of Washington and Lee University earlier that day, 14-3. Calder also scored five goals in that game, giving him ten on the day to help the 10th-ranked Tritons win their 11th and 12th games of the year.

The Tritons host Pomona-Pitzer at Canyonview Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.

Women's Soccer Stays Undefeated by Beating Westmont, 4-1

By DANA CHAIKEN
Contributing Writer

Although the UCSD women's soccer coach thought his team felt "a bit of pressure" going into Saturday's game against Westmont College, it only exerted pressure on the visitors' defense as the Tritons extended their record to 14-0-1 with a 4-1 victory.

Coach Brian McManus attributed the pre-game pressure to the fact that a win over NAIA Westmont (2-11) guaranteed his charges a spot in the Division III playoffs. "That was the main thing today," he explained afterward.

After a fruitless occupation of Westmont's territory throughout a majority of the first half, Stephanie Savoy tapped in a goal off a beautiful left-to-right cross by Katy Dulock to start the game's scoring at 30:09.

Barely two minutes later, the scoring continued when Westmont tallied what several players and spectators could only describe as a "ridiculous" goal.

Triton goalie Julie Freiss, having not practiced the day before because she had the flu, let her string of six consecutive shutouts literally slip between her hands. To her own disbelief, Freiss committed what McManus called "her first mistake of the year," and lost the chance to have her 13th shut-out in fifteen games as the ball dribbled between her legs into the net.

UCSD, apparently ignoring their opponent's bit of luck, "relaxed at the end of the first half," much to McManus' dislike. He did, however, approve of the effort by midfielder Sheila Takahashi, who is still recovering from an injury. McManus honored her with the compliment that "she had as good a first half as you're going to see."

He seemed to get his group of mostly juniors and freshpersons fired up again at halftime, claiming, "We were more aggressive in the second half. We didn't let them play."

His estimation proved an understatement as the Tritons completely dominated the second half, allowing virtually no Westmont player except goalie Shelley Sprague to touch the ball. UCSD fired 11 on-target shots, most of which came late in the half when Westmont finally buckled under the extreme Triton offensive pressure.

"I was confident we would score, even if we had to go to overtime. There was no way we could take that many shots and not score," asserted McManus.

Felicia Faro, after a tremendous demonstration of ballhandling, sent a cross-field pass to a waiting Heather Mauro, whose shot barely cleared a diving Sprague to end the scoring draught at 82:17.

Mauro, whom McManus wanted to substitute for just seconds earlier but wasn't acknowledged by the referee, described her eleventh goal of the season as an "end to the frustration we felt because we were outplaying them."

"It shows this team can come back. We came together well when we needed to," she added.

The Tritons continued to shell Westmont's goalie, scoring two insurance goals in the next two minutes, after Mauro's go-ahead and game-winning goal opened the gates.

Substitute forward Karin Lindsay, one of the team's spark-plugs, chipped the ball up and over the goalie off an assist by Mauro. "She stayed calm when most players would have wanted to cream it," McManus said.

Katy Dulock broke the school record for goals in a season, tallying her nineteenth on nothing less than a perfect shot. On an assist by Toni Krumme, she lifted the ball from 20 yards out on the right side into the upper left corner of the goal to finish the game's scoring.

On having her record surpassed, Mauro simply expressed, "whatever it takes to get to the playoffs."

"I think we've got a shot at winning it all. We've got to go at it. We'll just have to do it in their backyards [St. Thomas or St. Mary's, both of Minnesota]," McManus predicted about his team's chances.

For now though, McManus knows that the team "has to concentrate on the four games left and carry a good winning attitude into the playoffs."

The Tritons host Chapman College Tuesday at 2:30 on Warren Field.

PHIL'S ANALYSIS ... Oh goody. Kirk Gibson hits a home run with two outs in the ninth inning of Game One to beat the A's, 5-4. Whoopee. Big deal. Let's get serious: this World Series is a joke. It would have been one thing if the National League had given the A's a Major League team to face, but no. It gave them the Dodgers. So what if L.A. won the first game? So what if they win games two and three (they won't anyway, but the A's might decide to let them win a few just to make it exciting). It doesn't really matter, because Oaktown is gonna rock them in the Coliseum as soon as the Dodgers realize that they can't hit. At all. Oh, and another thing: I agree with Don Baylor on most points, but what he said about Jay Howell I just have to disagree with. It's not that Howell can't pitch under pressure, it's that he can't pitch at all. As a matter of fact, he sucks. It's probably pretty clear that PHIL wants you to ... take the Dodgers to finish fifth in the National League West next year and for right now...
